NOTE ON THE AVAILABILITY OF DOCUMENTS

Many documents with an EDRS number (e.g. ED 010 246) are obtainable from the ERIC DOCUMENT REPRODUCTION SERVICE (EDRS), The National Cash Register Company, 4936 Fairmont Avenue, Bethesda, Maryland 20014. For example, "EDRS Price MF-$0.50 HC-$3.52" indicates that the relevant document may be obtained from EDRS in microfiche (MF) for 50 cents, or for $3.52 in printed out hard copy (HC).

A microfiche is a sheet of 4" x 6" film containing micro-images of the pages of the document--as many as sixty pages of document per fiche--and costs just 25 cents from EDRS. (To compute the cost of microfiche announced prior to January 1, 1968, use the following scale: each multiple of 9 cents must be changed to 25 cents. For example, 9 cents becomes 25 cents, 18 cents becomes 50 cents, 27 cents becomes 75 cents, etc.) In order to read microfiche one must have access to a microfiche reader. "Hard copy" prints consist of black and white 6" x 8" pages, bound in soft covers and available at 4 cents per page.

Payment to EDRS must accompany orders totaling less than $5. Add a special handling charge of 50 cents to orders totaling less than $3. Add your applicable local state sales tax or submit tax exemption certificate.

Orders from EDRS must designate documents by the "ED" code number appearing at the upper left hand corner of the citation. Citations listing EDRS prices indicate that the documents will eventually be available from the ERIC Document Reproduction Service, even though an "ED" number is not assigned to them at the time of this publication. The "ED" number for these citations can be found in subsequent issues of Research in Education (Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, domestic, $11 a year; foreign, $13.75 a year), a monthly publication of the Office of Education, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which carries abstracts of reports and other documents from the 18 ERIC Clearinghouses.

All other documents must be obtained from the indicated original source. If it is impossible to obtain a document from the originating source, help may be obtained from the ERIC Clearinghouse on Adult Education.

ABSTRACT: The Texas Office of Opportunity has devised a program to meet the educational problems of the migrant laborer. Basic education provides reading, writing, and English instruction, citizenship and safety education, occupational orientation, and guidance and counseling programs. Homemaking education includes nutrition, child guidance and development, sanitation, home management and clothing. Occupational training for jobs such as appliance and mechanical repairing, food service, and in building and metal trades is provided. An advisory committee composed of migrants, representatives from occupational groups, and educators provide program guides. Present problems include recruiting qualified teachers, providing teaching materials and aides, solving controversies over paying of stipends, and meeting educational needs of non migrants. The program has generated much enthusiasm and created a positive home learning atmosphere for migrant children, revealed in their higher rate of school attendance. Teachers have expressed great satisfaction with their classes and a greater social consciousness of the migrant problems as well as greater community participation has developed. (pt)

ABSTRACT: A brief description is given of the Federal adult basic education program, under the Adult Education Act of 1966, at the national and state levels (including Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, and the Virgin Islands) as provided by State education agencies. Statistics for fiscal years 1965 and 1966, and estimates for fiscal year 1967, indicate annual participation and program funding. Estimates are also made of functionally inadequate and educationally disadvantaged adults (persons aged 18-64), numbers of adults in various age groups with seven years' schooling or less, from 1950 to the present (including projections for 1968 and 1970), adults in each age group who have one to four years, or no more than seven years, of completed schooling, and adult whites and nonwhites in each age group with seven years of less of formal education. ABSTRACT: Six papers read at the 1965 Annual Conference of the International Reading Association dealt with promoting literacy--evaluation of adult basic education materials, requirements of Federally-funded adult literacy programs, the planning of programs for semi-illiterate adults, preschool diagnosis and intervention to prevent illiterary, literacy activities for adults, and correction of adult socioeconomic deficiencies through literacy education. Federally-funded programs require thorough planning for publicity, staffing, preservice and inservice training, trainee recruitment, curriculum, facilities, and selection and procurement of suitable materials. Goal setting, personalized activities and skill development, and practical applications of literacy skills have proved highly interesting and useful for adult illiterates. (The document also describes a pilot project being conducted in Manhattan to identify and upgrade culturally disadvantaged children.) (1y)

ABSTRACT: Literacy programs require appropriate materials, adequate testing of achievement, and careful selection and training of teachers. Publishers are now providing comprehensive learning systems of realistic materials, including the initial teaching alphabet, words in color, and audio tapes. In order to implement an adult basic education program, North Carolina set up 24 teacher training institutes providing 16 hours of intensive instruction by specialists. University extension personnel were invited to attend and expected to provide future workshops. In Detroit, the Public School Adult Basic Education Project set up a one-year MDTA multi-occupational program for the functionally illiterate. In order to have smaller classes, team teaching was replaced by the platoon system, one for each curricular area. The linguistic approach to reading was used and worksheets in arithmetic made teaching on several levels possible. Trainees were prepared for service, metal, auto, and commercial trades and three fourths were placed. Instructional materials and tests for communication and computational skills were prepared. (Discussion followed on such topics as the need for an interdisciplinary approach to the multi-level problem, role of the community college, and federal inter-program cooperation) (This document is included in the Proceedings of the national conference on manpower training and the older worker, Washington, January 1966) (pt)

ABSTRACT: The Canada NewStart Program aims to develop, through action research, programs applicable throughout the nation, for motivating and training unemployed and underemployed adults. Pilot projects will be conducted by corporations which are to be chartered by the provinces and funded by the federal government. The areas selected for study will be among those designated by the Area Development Act as providing a potential for intensive study of problems of industrial growth or decline or mixes of farm and non-farm populations. The study will include--job opportunities, methods of recruitment and counseling, new curriculums, methods, and materials, and ways of developing behavior patterns for employment. Programs will include prevocational, vocational, and business education, and on the job training. Some experimentation with training allowances will be made. Administrative planning and support will be provided by the Technical Support Centre. Reports at the conclusion of the project should include the history of the project, models for dealing with identified problems, experimental analysis, a data bank, and cost/benefit analyses. (pt)

TERMS: *federal legislation, *adult education programs, *surveys, *public school adult education, *program administration, questionnaires, adult basic education, federal aid, state aid, program development, adult educators, expenditures, enrollment, financial support, Michigan,

ABSTRACT: The purpose of the study was to relate specific changes occurring in Michigan adult education programs to federal education legislation. A questionnaire on-- (1) general information concerning administrative aspects of program development, (2) fiscal and enrollment data in regard to federal legislative enactments, and (3) responses of administrators concerning influence of those enactments on specific aspects of their program, was submitted to administrators of 185 Michigan public school district adult education programs. The resulting data were organized according to three population stratifications-- (1) federally and non-federally funded districts, (2) legal classifications of school districts, and (3) geographic areas of three general population densities. It was found that federal legislation caused increases in expenditure of local taxes, number of administrators employed, employment of especially trained adult educators, and total number of adult education courses. Although the need is great, federal adult education legislation has not approached the potential of which it is capable in Michigan. State aid was considered more important to program promotion than federal aid in federally funded districts. Recommendations for adult education programs and researchers are cited in relation to the findings of this study.(pt)

ABSTRACT: This guide presents a variety of materials, methods, and ideas for teaching functionally illiterate adults (with less than Grade 4 reading ability). Emphasis is placed on helping adults to read independently and to attain a level of skill sufficient for everyday reading tasks. The first three chapters deal with the nature of the problem of illiteracy and marginal illiteracy, the economic, domestic, social, and psychological problems that arise when adults return to school, and general characteristics of adult learners. Chapter 4 is largely devoted to 24 basic reading systems accompanied by detailed check lists, with selected supplementary materials also discussed. The final chapter reviews the sequential development of reading skills, reading inventories and standardized tests, the motivating of students, classroom management, lesson planning, and other facets of program implementation. Education, ABSTRACT: The Council of State Directors of Adult Education, as representatives of the governmental units designated by Congress to administer Title III programs at the state and local level, make these suggestions to the USOE staff. It should re-assess training needs and redesign strategies for meeting them. It should invite top level personnel from major agencies for ABE to a national seminar to work out such matters as a policy definition of ABE, guidelines for recruitment and instruction, decisions as to which nationally-funded programs should be given priority. Follow up regional meetings should plan detailed implementation and expenditure of 309-c funds. National institutes should be held for state staff personnel in adult education, for directors of ABE in large metropolitan problem areas, and for professors of adult education. Regional, state and metro area programs for training supervisory staff and teachers should be designed. Representatives of several points of view in training methodology should be given consultative status. Maximum resources should go for training and minimal for subsistence and administration. The 309-c training experiences can strengthen training programs of universities and develop commitments of teacher training institutes not yet involved with training adult educators. The 309-c funds should meet most training needs and leave funds allocated directly to states for instruction purposes. (rt)

ABSTRACT: A five-member consultant team, during the summer of 1966, developed program for out-of-school youth which would relate work and study and provide on-the-job training with the ultimate goals of placing participants in suitable vocations and assisting their return to formal education leading to a high school diploma. This proposal outlines program goals, organizational structure (chain of authority, advisory board, staff responsibility) center population (selection, recruitment, description to be sent to agencies), teacher qualifications (personality, skills, background), staff training program (orientation, overview of staff approach), center program schedule, physical facilities, student salaries), and coordinating activities (meetings, evaluation, student involvement in decision making, advisory council, and planning).

ABSTRACT: The 1966 Washington multi-agency seminar on research utilization was opened with a summary of available studies of the problem. The current activities and objectives of the participating agencies were discussed and two case studies were presented--The Military Volunteer Rejected Project of the National Committee on Children and Youth and the Greenleigh Associates' evaluation of adult literacy teachers and teaching systems. Small group discussions on aspects of research implementation produced numerous ideas on stimulating good research proposals, improving the grant or contract negotiation procedure, facilitating interaction between sponsors and grantees or contractors, clarifying the kinds of action which might result from projects, translating research findings into action, training Washington program staffs through inservice or other means, and developing better in-

ABSTRACT: During the late nineteenth century, attempts were made in Milwaukee and elsewhere in the nation to improve relations between industrial employers and their immigrant workers. These attempts consisted largely of company-sponsored recreational and welfare activities marked by informality and paternalism. After 1900, however, came more systematic safety, health, and welfare programs by such companies as Illinois Steel, Allis-Chalmers, and International Harvester. Methods and materials for safety and health education were often designed to cope with the many languages and the alleged cultural and mental limitations of semiskilled and unskilled workers from eastern and southern Europe. In addition, labor militancy, industrial change, and the outbreak of World War I spurred the creation of English classes and intensive Americanization campaigns in industry, especially in the United States Steel Company and the Ford Motor Company. (Socioeconomic and occupational patterns and conditions among various Milwaukee ethnic groups during the decades of heaviest immigration are also documented.) ABSTRACT: A cooperative effort was made in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and Colorado, to determine the educational needs of adult agricultural workers in the intermountain migratory stream within these states. Because of mechanization, migrancy was found to be declining, except in Texas. Of the migrants, 85 percent are Mexican-Americans, with traditional Spanish, family-centered culture. They are ethnocentric, ignorant of Anglo-American ways, and timid in action. Average grade level is about 5th and not much interest is expressed in education, except for the children. Within these southwestern states, in 1960, were 25 percent of families with incomes below poverty level, including most of the Spanish-Americans, both rural and urban, and also many American Indians. Areas of educational emphasis most needed are basic education, occupational training, and acculturation. Education of the adults is a must if education for the children is to be of value. (eb)

ABSTRACT: This special issue of the ILLINOIS JOURNAL OF EDUCATION reports on the first achievements of the first three years of the Illinois statewide adult education programs, emphasizing adult basic education. Part of the program is carried out through a cooperative agreement between the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction (under Title II-B of the Economic Opportunity Act) and the Department of Public Aid. The Department of Adult Education has carried the responsibility for teacher and inservice training. Articles report on the role of the Department of Public Aid, on programs in public schools, business schools, and junior colleges, programs in home economics and civil defense, and for high school equivalency. Special projects in Decatur, Peoria, and East St. Louis are described. (sm)

ABSTRACT: The objectives of this project were to prepare and field test instructional materials for use with adults reading below the seventh grade level. Two studies were made in northern Florida in 1967 of gains in reading vocabulary and comprehension by students using traditional materials. The high dropout rate in the first study precluded useful generalizations, but the second gain study showed significant differences between the pretest and posttest scores of both groups in both skills. There was some evidence that the new materials were teaching both skills better than the usual ones. The students rated the new materials as more interesting than some traditional materials and just as interesting as the best of them. In the first of two studies on teacher acceptance, the newer materials were the ones best received by the teachers. Moreover, intensively trained adult basic education teachers and experts in the field compared the experimental edition with existing systems, and both gave it an overall rating higher than that of the five best traditional materials then available. Thus, the new materials seem effective and well accepted by both students and teachers. (The document includes 19 tables, 44 references, appendixes, and a review of the literature.) (1y)

ABSTRACT: A tabulation of the national summary of data resulting from a Demographic Survey of Adult Basic Education students conducted by the U.S. Office of Education, cooperating with state and local public school systems during the first half of 1967, covers 94,000 new enrollees of the 400,000 total enrolled during that school year. ABSTRACT: Recent developments in such technological aids as educational television, videotape, computerized instruction, microfilms, and talking typewriters, have the potential to revolutionize the American system of education, to alleviate socioeconomic ills, and to eliminate adult illiteracy. However, long-range benefits will depend greatly on basic and applied educational research, sound curriculums and administrative structures, and effective use of both teachers and advanced equipment. Therefore, educational institutions, government agencies, and manufacturers of educational "hardware" and "software" must work together to develop systems of technology geared to the genuine needs of students. (This was a report of the Subcommittee on Economic

ABSTRACT: A national survey sought to gather data on the teaching of English as a second language to children and adults. Because many state and local school officials seemed unaware of the problem and did not think of such teaching as a unique discipline, data were difficult to obtain. Of the 1,683 questionnaires mailed to administrators in colleges, schools, and other agencies, a 48 percent return yielded only 510, or 30 percent, usable forms. Data were sought on personnel in formal English instruction to students having a language other than English, policies followed in employing prospective teachers, preparation of teachers currently in the system, curriculum, number and language background of students, teaching aids available, use of commercial texts and tests, and identification of problems and needs. Appendixes

ABSTRACT: As shown in the programs described, the advantages of programed foreign language instruction for military personnel lies in eliminating or relieving the need for native or highly trained instructors, and in providing needed practice through repeated opportunities to respond in a favorable learning environment. The first course, designed to help troops gather low level tactical information, used recorder equipment, taped course material, scoring equipment, and printed course material. The programed course in Vietnamese (largely composed of queries for information, social amenities, advising terms, instructions, and commands) employed a dual-track student tape recorder, earphones, and a student microphone. These programs led to clearly increased proficiency even among relatively less able students. In programed literacy education, (a comparatively undeveloped area) the Progressive Choice Reading Method and the Diebold Group system, both of which combine programed instruction with tutorial instruction, have also shown considerable promise. ABSTRACT: As one phase of research in applied anthropology, Yaqui Indian and Mexican men in Arizona have participated for three years in experimental programed courses in basic English and arithmetic. The students had previously had an average of five years' formal schooling. A battery of standard objective tests was given to measure IQ and ability to read and comprehend English. A first series of tests was administered with specified time limits observed. A second series was given also with the time limits. Then students were allowed to complete the tests. The concession of time to work to completion changed IQ percentile ranks from 11 or 12 to 66, 77.5 and 63. Various tests of reading, vocabulary, and other skills yielded highly inconsistent evaluations of the students' abilities. A third series of tests was based on a novel experimental approach to programed learning. An adjusting schedule of reinforcement for meeting time and error criteria was put in force. This involved raising or lowering requirements for reinforcement using the student's own performance as a measure. Results indicated that both speed and accuracy can be controlled by reinforcement contingencies. (Also included are six references and 32 tables.) (author)

ABSTRACTS: To understand better the learning characteristics of culturally disadvantaged adults and to study the emotional factors commonly observed among this population which appear to inhibit participation in organized educational activities and learning, the literature in several areas of psychological research was surveyed. In this paper the researchers (1) examine the concept of Self as it pertains to the adult basic education student, (2) review Rokeach's hypothesis of the Closed Belief-Disbelief System in an effort to relate it to the emotional make-up of adult basic education students, (3) describe the "Closed" social environment which gives rise to the phenomenon of the "Closed" mind, and (4) identify some of the personality characteristics of the adult basic education student which interfere with his potential as a learner. In addition to overcoming such personality factors as alienation, avoidance, hostility toward authority, withdrawal, violent aggression, fear of schools, self-image as an illiterate, rejection of the desire to develop intellectually, mental blocks against the world, and rigid value systems, the illiterate must break out of a slough of defeat and despair if he is to achieve. (There is

ABSTRACT: The Vocational Experimental-Demonstration Project at Draper Correctional Center, an experiment to reduce recidivism through vocational training, in its first 21 months trained 173 youths in seven trades and placed 150 graduates in jobs. Details of selection, counseling, training, placement, and follow-up of inmates the use of individualized programed materials and of experiments to increase motivation in basic education classes are given in this report. Although the Project has succeeded in teaching trades, it has failed in effecting enough behavioral change to avert recidivism and persistent deviant behavior--the rate of recidivism among parolees has actually increased since the last report. In an effort to produce behavioral change two proposals are made--(1) to initiate a detailed study of each returnee, analyzing his failure and prescribing treatment, and (2) to begin a Community Sponsor program coordinated through the parole supervisor. Working with community organizations, the parole office will train men to assist the newly released inmate to adjust to society and to succeed in his new trade. The sponsor will be either a craftsman in the same trade area as the parolee or a person with a history of crime who is now doing well. The sponsor will act as a guide, friend, and behavior model to the releasee. (aj)

ABSTRACT: The Demonstration Project at Draper Correctional Center aims to show that vocational training leading to employment, intensive counseling, basic education classes, and a program of community sponsorship of releasees can decrease the rate of recidivism and effect enough behavior change in inmates to turn them into useful citizens. Training objectives are--(1) to teach a group of youthful offenders a trade (courses offered are welding, radio and TV repair, appliance repair, auto mechanics, barbering, bricklaying, and technical writing), (2) to construct programed materials, (3) to assess ways to improve training and insure placement and guidance of trainees after parole, and (4) to make training materials available to other institutions.
Supplementary classes are given in remedial reading and personal-social skills. The auto mechanics course, reviewed in detail in this report, was developed around commercial training materials including a programed text. Needs of area employers, availability of equipment, and the capabilities of trainees were considered in course planning.
A follow-up study of the college students who have been employed as subprofessionals in work-study programs is underway to determine the effect of their work at Draper on their college and careers. (Document includes comparative test profiles and statistical

ABSTRACT: Individually designed basic education programs emphasizing programed instruction to provide motivation through continuous feedback complement the vocational training given each inmate participating in the demonstration project at the Draper Correctional Center. A remedial reading program for all trainees scoring below 7th grade includes phonics training and a reading improvement program of 40 lessons in which lecture-articles, tachistoscopic exercises (the PerceptoScope), and controlled practice articles with comprehension tests are used. A program of academic games which can provide additional motivation and opportunities for intellectual group interaction is planned. In a controlled experiment, four games-- Equations, On Sets, Democracy, and Propaganda--will be used in varying combinations with other teaching methods by six groups of students whose achievements will be tested and compared.
Each game teaches one subject and is so structured that in order to win a player must be able to communicate his knowledge to other players. Aspects of the project reviewed in this report include contingency management studies, materials development, follow-up case histories, community sponsor program, inservice training, reading

ABSTRACT: Dissemination of program findings to the correctional field is a key objective of the current phase of the Experimental-Demonstration Project for vocational training of inmates at Draper Correctional Center. Leaders in corrections and manpower training will meet in four conferences, plans for which are outlined in this report.
Because 23 percent of the 186 released graduates of the program have been returned to prison, a study is underway to analyze the factors in the recidivist's inability to succeed in the free world. Questionnaires drawn up for interviews with the recidivist, parole supervisor, employer, and family are included. To provide educational skills necessary to enter vocational courses and advance in trades, all trainees are scheduled for remedial classes for eight hours each week. Individualized programed instruction is prescribed for each student on the basis of his deficiencies as interpreted from the Metropolitan Achievement Test. Also included in this report is the evaluation of the project by a manpower analyst in the Department of Labor, summaries of administration, counseling, training, statistics, and personnel activities, and two papers--"Counseling

ABSTRACT: In the Draper Manpower Development and Training Project, initiated to train institutionalized offenders in trades, 810 inmates have been tested for ability, aptitude, and educational achievement. A picture vocational preference test was devised to overcome the group's verbal disability. Of the 331 inmates accepted for training, 231 have graduated, 63 are in training, and 37 were dropped. Programed lessons in basic education and vocational skills have been developed and are available for use with other disadvantaged groups. Inservice training has enhanced the capabilities of the staff, which is complemented by college students who work for one semester.
Efforts to lower the recidivism rate include a study of recidivists, development of socialization materials, plans for a transitional program for releasees, and a community sponsorship program in which volunteers and organizations become involved in the rehabilitation of the parolee. A program to disseminate findings is underway.

ABSTRACT: The plan for expansion and development of education programs in corrective institutions is organized into five timed phases to be completed in three years.
A chart representing the program, affiliated research and agencies delineates planned activities. Phase one (15 weeks) will survey existing programs (vocational and academic facilities, student-teacher ratio, curriculum, and so on), and various agencies will help determine present and future needs. Phase two (36.5 weeks), considered the most important element of the program, will develop a recommended school program based upon standards for accreditation as an Adult Education Center. Many aspects determined in this phase will be assigned to institutions in phase three (six-nine months) as pilot projects to evaluate the feasibility for incorporation into programs.
The final phase (one year) will put all proven and acceptable pilot projects, recommendatio and suggestions into operation. Education programs of seven Florida institutions are cited and include such projects as--free college correspondence courses, vocational and academic provisions, state-funded library support, and civil defense courses.
Inmate capacity, staff positions and inmate publications are also included. (pt)

ABSTRACT: A first-year evaluation was made of seven neighborhood centers in Oakland, California, set up to provide remedial instruction in basic education and in methods of seeking and applying for employment, offered under the Economic Opportunity Act. Participants ranged widely in age, (21-76) with a great number in the advanced age group. Their educational level was typically in the upper elementary years.
Because of irregularity in attendance, testing was administered to only 37 of the participants. The Gates Reading Test was used for word recognition and paragraph reading, the California Arithmetic Test for reasoning and fundamentals, and the Oakland Public Schools Primary Word List for spelling. Modest but significant gains were made in reading. Gains in arithmetic were about twice that in reading and reflected month-for-month gains on the average. A small but significant gain was noted in spelling. Ten of the 37 participants obtained perfect scores on the spelling test, a fact which raised the question of the suitability of this test for such populations.
Staff noticed positive changes in student attitudes and self-perceptions and student reactions were favorable. (The appendix includes evaluations of the centers by teachers, counselors, and participants.) (sm)

ABSTRACT: Tuskegee Institute, supported by the U.S. Dept. of Labor's Office of Manpower and the Dept. of Health, Education, and Welfare, initiated an experimental program in rural adult education. The 12 month program sought to counsel, train, and place in jobs 180 men. These were responsible to farm families with incomes under $1200 a year, were intellectually below grade 8, unemployed, underemployed, or unemployable. Of the trainees, 91 lived on campus and 89 commuted. They were instructed in communication and number skills, given extensive personal and vocational counseling, and taught meat processing, carpentry, brickmasonry, or farm machinery repair. Of the 166 who completed training, 135 were employed at an average wage of $2.60 an hour within 4 months. Employers reported over 90 percent getting along well. Half the trainees reported that their training was sufficient for their jobs. The author recommends that trainees be grouped by learning potential and be in residence during training. He suggests detailed coordination of basic and technical skills, ABSTRACT: Classes in basic education and English for foreign-speaking persons, funded by the Economic Opportunity Act (EOA), were begun in January 1965 in adult day schools in Oakland, California, for men and AFDA mothers, who tested at less than 8th-grade level. Welfare payments were continued and cash reimbursements and child care provided for mothers. Remedial pre-vocational classes in pre-nursing, pre-housekeeping, pre-clerical, or pre-technical areas were provided. Student achievement was tested with the Stanford Achievement Test (SAT), the results simulating third to fifth-grade level. These tests may have provided an inadequate indication of student growth, in that they are tests for elementary children, they were administered at different times during the course, and there were considerable age differences among the persons tested. Teachers of adult basic education indicated that about half of the students made good to excellent progress, more in motivation and self-confidence than in skills. In the English for foreign-speaking classes, 50 to 80 percent of the work showed good to excellent progress especially in the skill area. Students rated as most important improvement in reading, amount of learning, helping their

ABSTRACT: The Aides for Adult Education workshop (February 10-May 20, 1967) was held in Cleveland, Ohio by Cleveland College and the public school system to develop better classroom communication and a more intensive learning situation for disadvantaged adult students. Twenty welfare recipients, almost all Negro women, were selected for aide training on the basis of verbal ability, reading comprehension, interpersonal attitudes, and attitudes toward educational institutions and community organization. Experienced teachers in public school adult education were chosen for the project according to successful classroom performance, interest in a training project, and a felt need for the help of an aide. Workshop activities were designed to give both aides and teachers an overview of adult basic education, curriculum materials, classroom organization, and procedure. An evaluation of classes with and without aides showed that with aides, more individual help is given, and teachers lecture more and answer questions less. The teachers themselves felt that they could effectively handle larger classes with aides. (The document includes appendixes

ABSTRACT: College training programs for specialists in literacy education are reviewed. The Syracuse University graduate program in literacy journalism, the Baylor University undergraduate curriculum in literacy studies, writing for new literates, linguistics, and the teaching of English as a foreign language, and the American University graduate program in literacy education are described. The twelve other educational institutions that have offered at least one literacy education course are listed. There is a brief summary of the work conference sponsored by the Center for Applied Linguistics at Airlie House near Washington, D.C. in 1964. (aj)

ABSTRACT: The 1967 Western Region Teacher Training Institute at California Polytechnic State College was designed to provide training for administrators and teachers of Adult Basic Education (ABE) programs in six states. The Institute focused on five broad areas--understanding the ABE student, methods of training ABE instructors, administration, program evaluation, and ABE curriculum. The Teacher Institute, subdivided into elementary education or English as a Second Language interest groups, featured lecture-discussions and small group activities in which instructional methods and materials, educational technology, guidance and counseling techniques, and methods of evaluation and measurement were studied. In the Administrative Institute, divided into nine project groups, each participant developed a project to be used in his community. Four evenings a week participants in both institutes observed and taught in ABE classes in Los Angeles. Recommendations for future workshops were--conduct separate workshops for rural and metropolitan ABE programs, provide for a more consistent method of participant selection, select staff associates from previous institute participants, and separate administrator and teacher institutes. Special approaches involved use of tape recordings of training and resource specialists, and utilization of continuous feedback. The six training sessions are outlined and discussed, and include background information, teaching practice and evaluation of the undereducated adult problems, and basic education course content. ABSTRACT: A teacher training manual developed in three adult basic education workshops sponsored by the National Association for Public School Adult Education (NAPSAE) outlines a scheme applicable both to trainees and to their disadvantaged clientele. Teacher training methods include role playing, talks by experts, demonstrations and exhibitions, field trips, films, small group discussion, work groups, and individual study. The adult basic curriculum includes reading skills, language arts, and concepts in mathematics, citizenship, family and community life, and adjustment to the working world. To cope with such problems as low student motivation and self-image, economic and cultural deprivation, fear and hostility, and values and behavior at variance with middle-class and upper-class norms, the teacher needs above average resourcefulness and human understanding, and must develop skill in selecting and using printed materials (notably the major sequential literacy systems), audiovisual aids, classroom techniques, counseling activities, and standardized tests. In working with non-English-speaking adults, oral teaching should be stressed. (The document includes a sample one-week training session, evaluation sheets and other forms, suggested activities and resources, six appendixes, and numerous references.) ABSTRACT: Evaluations were made of the effects of adjusting schedules of reinforcement to provide differential consequences for such performance factors as speed and accuracy. In one study, using programed English materials with Yaqui farm workers, errors increased when a time criterion, but no error criterion, was used. In another study, which involved college students, use of a time criterion led to significantly greater speed and lower accuracy, while the absence of the time criterion led to a decrease in speed and a significant (12 percent) rise in accuracy. Reinforcement through points achieved was a stronger incentive for the Yaqui Indians than for the students. The third study, which provided small monetary incentives for its college student subjects, was designed to assess the effects of different step sizes used in the adjustment schedules, and relative preferences for working under speed criteria or accuracy criteria. Subjects in this study clearly tended to choose the error criterion--that is, to work accurately rather than quickly. With smaller error step sizes, the preference for accuracy was greater, and the number of switches between criteria was less. When the criteria adjusted in small steps, it was easier to control both speed and accuracy. (Proposed topics for research are indicated.) (1y)

ABSTRACT: A study was made of the readability levels of curriculum materials used in the basic and the vocational education programs at the Atterbury Job Corps Center in Indiana. The Gunning Fog Index was used to measure style of difficulty as created by lengthy sentences and polysyllabic words. This is highly correlated to the level of school grade attained by the reader. Five job sheets used in the vocational courses in heating and refrigeration installation and random samplings of "Success in Language/A" and "The Money You Spend" used in the basic education program were analyzed. The job sheets tested approximately at the fifth grade level. "Success in Language/A" tested at the sixth grade level, and "The Money You Spend," at fourth grade. Corpsmen having attained fifth or sixth grade school levels of reading should be able to handle the material. (Statistical tables and a bibliography are included.) (rt)

ABSTRACT: In the Greater Chicago area a study was made of teaching materials and methods for literacy education. An annotated, selected bibliography of published materials was compiled of professional books, basal materials including publishers' series, and supplementary materials. Teachers are cautioned to assume a selective approach because no basal series was found complete enough to justify exclusive adoption. Open-ended interviews were conducted with teachers and administrators of literacy programs. Most teachers conducted some orientation, but their methods varied too much to summarize. The majority reported no adverse student reactions to class grouping. Pretesting with standardized forms was common, and many teacher-made tests were used during courses. Teachers described materials they had made or used and pupils' reactions to their techniques. Techniques used included the phonics approach to word recognition, experience charts, listening exercises, and a combined language arts approach. Over half the teachers reported personal involvement in the lives of their pupils. (rt)

ABSTRACT: In the Missouri Adult Vocational-Literacy Materials Development Project materials were devised for teaching adults to read, write, and spell at the functional (sixth grade) level. In the research phase, the needs, characteristics, literacy level, occupations, and interests of the illiterate adult were studied, and teaching materials and methods were examined. Students and teachers were interviewed and there was a national survey of literacy program directors. In the materials development phase three levels of basic and intermediate educational materials, with teachers' guides, and supplementary occupational booklets were created. A vocational theme characterized the series. The initial teaching alphabet (i.t.a.) was used, with traditional orthography printed on the facing page. During the evaluation phase, sample classes of illiterate adults used the materials in 100-hour instructional programs. These trials indicated that the materials were effective in teaching adults word and paragraph meaning, word-study skills, and spelling. The materials should be used by teachers trained in the use of i.t.a. and in teaching reading to adults. (Document includes a review of published adult literacy education materials and summaries of interviews with teachers and students, of student tests, and of the national survey. There are

ABSTRACT: To meet the needs of the undereducated whose skills approximate fourth to eighth grade reading level and those for whom learning English as a new language is the first step in job training, 20 occupationally-oriented units of instruction in reading and related skills and a section on teaching the course are outlined.
Units, planned for 20 40-hour weeks, are presented sequentially in graded order, and in each one the previous unit is reviewed as the basis of new learning. Primary emphasis is on reading, but arithmetic, speech, handwriting, the social studies, and science are presented concurrently, making each unit and each day's instruction an interrelated whole. Suggestions on teacher preparation, teaching aids, and methodology are built into the units. These are reinforced by the second part of the guide--Teaching the course-- which includes a daily schedule, a sample unit plan, suggestions for drills, exercises, testing, and using visual aids, and guides to related subjects.
Appendixes are--a Word list, Evaluating instructional material, English as a second language, Readable writing, and Simplified plan for screening prospective students.
