Identifiers-New York City, New York City Board of Education

An inservice training program was conducted by the New York City Board of Education in a school district in the South Bronx section of the city with an ethnic minority pupil population of 68 percent. The objectives were to improve intergroup relations, to help teachers to respond positively to problems posed by desegregation, and to gain parent and community support of the schools. Participants in the eleven orientation and sensitivity workshop sessions were 110 administrators, supervisors, teachers, parents, and college seniors who were prospective teachers in slum schools. Consultants and Board of Education workshop production specialists gave lectures and led small-group interaction sessions. It is felt that the results of this program were "inspiring." The document lists the staff, describes the process of selecting participants, and includes a summary of the final evaluative questionnaire. (NH)

ABSTRACT

OPERATION UPGRADE -- An in-service training program to supplement the development of a curriculum for the multi-racial schools in New York City to the end that intergroup relations may be improved.

Submitted By: Mrs. Helene M. Lloyd
Acting-Deputy Superintendent of Schools
New York City Board of Education

Grant Number: E-247, Public Law 88-352, Title IV, Section 405, Civil Rights Act of 1964

Director: Dr. William P. Dorney, Principal, P. S. 188, Bronx

Grantee: New York City Board of Education

The Project Reported Herein Was Supported by a Grant from the U. S. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE, Office of Education.

PURPOSE:

1. Sensitivity:
To dispel myths and correct misconceptions of different ethnic minority groups and to promote the positive acceptance of differences and similarities among all peoples.
2. Instruction:
To assist teachers in the acquisition of knowledge, skills and understanding necessary to respond in a positive fashion to the many problems incident to desegregation.
3. Community:
To gain the understanding and support of the parents and community leaders concerning the schools' program, to the end that the school's function might better serve the community and its children.

PROCEDURE:

1. Intensive orientation and sensitivity workshops and seminars will be conducted on Saturdays and weekdays at a selected school in the district.
2. A comprehensive program of community education and involvement will be instituted as a means of articulating our broad objectives and obtaining support for the schools' programs.

ABSTRACT - Continued

RESULTS AND CONCLUSIONS:

This phase of our program encompassed a total of 110 participants -- administrators, supervisors, teachers, parents and college seniors. This cross-section of participant personnel was a vitalizing and necessary dimension to this phase of the program. It provided the forum for dialogue and communication among a large segment of our school community who are ultimately responsible for the quality of education our children receive.

It was most appropriate that this dialogue ensue in the light of current racial tensions endemic to our local and surrounding communities. Special emphasis was placed on developing positive intergroup relations with attention to solving some of the problems faced by the professional staff in educating ethnic minority group children.

The results were inspiring in that the participants were able to make positive contributions and offer viable solutions to problems of increasing concern to educators.

The conclusions, therefore, present an optimistic picture -- when dialogue between parents and the professional staff of our school system ensues, in an atmosphere conducive to freedom of expression, then the channels for meaningful communication which open provide an opportunity for a cooperative resolution to the problems of mutual concern. Thus, it follows that attitudes and behaviors undergo close scrutiny to the end that the necessary adjustments to a viable teaching-learning situation are eventually obtained.

THE PROBLEM

The schools in District 8 of the South Bronx represent a cross-section of the schools in New York City as a whole so far as problems incident to desegregation are concerned. Those problems which tend to dilute and diminish the effectiveness of this educational sub-system might be more clearly defined and summarized in the following broad categories:

- a. Sensitivity: Lack of understanding of the differences between the value systems of different racial and class subcultures in the community.
- b. Instructions: Generally ineffective classroom techniques, practices and skills to deal realistically with the special problems of minority group children.
- c. Community: Increased demands by parents and community leaders to share in the "control" of schools; inadequate community understanding and support for the schools' programs.

These problems have been aggravated by the geographical and psychological confinement imposed upon the recent immigrant population. Although the area is experiencing a constant influx of Southern Negro and Puerto Rican families, a fair portion of the former migrant population remains, concentrating largely on the periphery. In general, the new residents move into the older residential areas of the community, thus creating enclaves of cultural and economic deprivation. With this coalescence of ethnic, racial and socio-economic groups in certain areas of the district, an increasing number of de facto segregated schools are created. The ethnic minority pupil population now constitutes 68.5% of the total school population in District 8.

With the New York City Board of Education's pursuit of forthright and creative innovations to implement and reinforce the concept of integrated quality education, Operation Upgrade is in the vanguard of addressing itself to the pressing need for positive psychological tools which administrators, supervisors, teachers and all school-related personnel require to the end that intergroup relations might be improved. The very nature of our culturally pluralistic society imposes on us the necessity of divesting ourselves of irrational prejudices, biases and misconceptions if we are to be effective in achieving warm, positive relationships with children and colleagues who are different from us in some ways, yet so similar in basic respects. Moreover, the acceptance of our value as human beings and, at the same time, the acceptance of the values of difference and similarity among us, will give us the courage to be different.

Operation Upgrade is designed to promote the ideals which will inspire and encourage teachers to help children develop into alert, functioning members of our society with the ability to think critically and make meaningful evaluations of the world in which they live. This will lead to an appreciation of all that is good in our society and a desire to improve those areas which need improvement.

GENERAL STATISTICAL INFORMATION

District 8:

- a. Number of schools: 26
(17 elementary; 5 junior high; 1 intermediate; 2 special;
1 high school)
- b. Number of teachers and supervisors: 1,694
- c. Number of pupils: 31,706
- d. Percentage of ethnic distribution -- (District-wide)
  - (1) Teachers:
Negro and Puerto Rican -- 11.5%
"Others" -- 53.6%
  - (2) Pupils:
Negro and Puerto Rican -- 68.5%
"Others" -- 31.5%
- e. Summary of ethnic distribution -- (By schools)
  - (1) Teachers:
18 schools = 0% - 10% Negro and Puerto Rican
5 schools = 11% - 20% Negro and Puerto Rican
3 schools = 21% - 35% Negro and Puerto Rican
  - (2) Pupils:
3 schools = 0% - 25% Negro and Puerto Rican
4 schools = 26% - 50% Negro and Puerto Rican
7 schools = 51% - 75% Negro and Puerto Rican
12 schools = 76% - 100% Negro and Puerto Rican

OBJECTIVES:

- 1. Sensitivity:
  - a. To dispel myths and correct misconceptions of different ethnic minority groups and to promote the positive acceptance of differences and similarities among all people.
  - b. To understand the characteristics of an impoverished community and the nature, causes, and effects of cultural deprivation.
  - c. To assist all school-related personnel in finding new, creative and meaningful ways in working with parents from different ethnic and educational backgrounds.
- 2. Instruction:
  - a. To assist teachers in the acquisition of knowledge skills and understanding necessary to respond in a positive fashion to the many problems incident to desegregation.

- b. To help guidance counselors in the acquisition of basic guidance skills needed to prepare minority group children, psychologically, for full participation in a multi-racial society.

3. Community:

- a. To gain the understanding and support of the parents and community leaders concerning the schools' program, to the end that the schools' function might better serve the community and its children.
- b. To disseminate information on the schools' programs as a bridge in the gap of communication and cooperation.
- c. To involve all segments of the community in the total life of the school.

PROCEDURES:

Type of Program:

The in-service training program as described in the proposal utilizes a variety of methods and approaches in order to provide impact and reinforcement. In addition to the services of the workshop production specialists who are licensed staff members of the New York City Board of Education, outside consultants, depending on their areas of specialty and competency, were invited to make certain contributions to our program.

The program embraced the following general features:

1. Intensive orientation and sensitivity workshops and seminars were conducted for 15 consecutive days, in the area of intergroup relations.
2. Consultants lectured and interacted with participants in large and small group settings on selected topics of vital concern.
3. Participants reflected a cross-section of all school-related personnel, including administrators, supervisors, teachers, parents, school-aides, officers of the local school board and parent organizations, and college seniors (teachers-in-training), and other district personnel.
4. The participants were subdivided into groups according to their background and experience for small group interaction.

5. A comprehensive program of community education and involvement will be instituted as a means of articulating our broad objectives and obtaining support for the schools' programs during the Spring of 1968.
6. "Arm-Chair Seminars" will be conducted for parents who fail to participate in Parent Association activities, as a means of educating the community also during the Spring of 1968.
7. Curriculum specialists are continuing to refine, collate and develop cooperatively with selected participants who will experiment in the classroom with materials such as resource and teaching units in the areas of civil rights, civil responsibilities and intergroup relations. This will involve a total of 370 teachers and 30 schools who will experiment with the materials mentioned herein.

Program Content:

The following skills were emphasized by using a variety of techniques, activities and experiences:

1. Coping with personal biases and prejudices, if any, that may tend to dilute the effectiveness of whole-some teacher-pupil-parent relationships.
2. Learning how to work and communicate with parents from various ethnic, educational and economic backgrounds.
3. Working with minority youth problems as they relate to intergroup relations.
4. Understanding the nature of poverty and the concomitant problems which might incapacitate the learner and suppress motivation.
5. Analyzing, defining and clarifying some of the sociological, psychological and educational problems in teaching Negro and Puerto Rican children.
6. Learning community needs and resources in order to create a favorable teaching-learning situation.
7. Understanding basic concepts and underlying issues in civil rights, civil liberties, civil responsibilities and intergroup relations.
8. Assessing the attitudes of pupils and parents toward the school and its faculty; the attitudes of the faculty toward the schools' children and its community

Guidelines will be developed in the Spring of 1968 to enhance the implementation of the district's programs for quality education and will encompass, among others, the following features:

1. Behavior problems and management strategies.
2. Basic guidance skills in preparing minority group children psychologically for full participation in a multi-racial society.
3. New methods and procedures for organizing the school and classroom for instructional quality.
4. Suggested practices and programs in intergroup relations.
5. Lesson plans, resource units and other supplementary resource materials in the area of civil rights, civil responsibilities and intergroup relations.
6. Suggested practices for working with parents and community agencies.
7. New techniques and "know-how" for the classroom teacher in teaching minority-group children.

Methods:

The following diversified methods and approaches were utilized for the training of the participants in order to reinforce and intensify the dynamics of this program:

- |                      |                              |
|----------------------|------------------------------|
| 1. Panels            | 7. Recordings and Films      |
| 2. Discussion Groups | 8. Home Visitations          |
| 3. Buzz Sessions     | 9. Feedback Reports          |
| 4. Role-Playing      | 10. Television               |
| 5. Lectures          | 11. Dramatic Presentations   |
| 6. Field Trips       | 12. Classroom Demonstrations |

Amp!e time was provided for participants in various activities to discuss pertinent problems and to receive counsel by our workshop production specialists regarding many problems confronting the participants' respective schools. Outside consultants were used as resource persons to assist with special problems, such as community relations experts, psychologists, lawyers, "grass roots" community leaders and educators. (See Appendix A)

The Staff:

The following persons, who are fully licensed personnel of the New York City Board of Education, were responsible for the operation of the program:

Dr. William P. Dorney, Director;
Miss Mary P. Smither, Assistant Director;
Mrs. Leonor Watson, Curriculum Specialist.

(See Appendix B for qualifications and background information.)

a. Workshop Production Specialists

These staff members (part-time) were selected from among the ranks of the former participants, based on their preparation and special insights in the area of intergroup relations, and are also licensed personnel of the New York City Board of Education. They were directly responsible for conducting small group sessions and serving as resource persons in these discussions. Their assignments included small group progress reports, contributions to the program's News Report, and suggestions for vitalizing activities and improved procedures deemed necessary for the efficacy of the program. (See Appendix B)

The Participants:

Selection Variables:

1. The selection of teachers and supervisors represented a cross-section of the following variables:
  - a. Equitable school representation within the district.
  - b. Grade level.
  - c. Subject areas (or background).
  - d. Years of experience.
  - e. Sex.
  - f. Ethnic origin.
  - g. Recommendation of subject principal.
2. The selection of parents represented a cross-section of the following variables:
  - a. Equitable representation of schools within the district where they have children in attendance.
  - b. Affiliation with Parent organizations of the district schools.
  - c. Years in the community.
  - d. Influence in the community.
3. The selection of college seniors who are future teachers represented a cross-section of the following variables:
  - a. Equitable distribution of students who are committed to teaching in District 8.
  - b. Equitable distribution of colleges and universities in the city.

- c. Ethnic distribution.
- d. Recommendation by the Deans of various colleges represented.

Applicants who were not selected for the first available openings were placed on standby as "alternates" who were pulled into the program as vacancies occurred.

EVALUATION:

Interim evaluation procedures were organized in the following manner:

1. Participants submitted informal evaluation sheets on each session.
2. Staff members evaluated sessions and activities that were programmed for the day and the level of the interaction by the participants.
3. An evaluation committee was selected to draw up an evaluation summary format which was distributed to each participant who, in turn, evaluated the total program. These findings were collated and distributed to participants and other interested parties.
(See Appendix C)
4. The staff was evaluated informally by the program director and assistant director at staff conferences.

COURSE STRUCTURE:

PHASE III -- All Grade Levels.

July 10 - 28, 1967

15 days, 9:00 A.M. -- 1:00 P.M.

DISSEMINATION:

1. Interim progress reports of this program were disseminated throughout the school system, community district, and city as follows:
  - a. Board of Education Bulletins
  - b. News media
  - c. Live and taped radio and television programs
  - d. Speakers at conferences, staff meetings, parent meetings, community meetings and local civic organizations.
  - e. Word of mouth by participants, staff and consultants
  - f. Periodic news letters and informal mimeographed reports.

2. Formalized reports were submitted to the Office of Education as required by the Equal Opportunities Program.
3. Periodic conferences were held with the investigator, Mrs. Helene M. Lloyd, the co-investigator, Mr. Stuart C. Lucey, and the staff of the project for purposes of disseminating modifications in the program.

10. Comments on reactions to entire program:
a. Very inspiring, extremely worthwhile, and most informative.
b. Rewarding experience; very educational.
c. Well organized -- excellent program.

- d. I found it to be everything I expected. . . Recommend it highly to anyone looking for facts and insight.
  - e. Most valuable in presenting new ideas.
  - f. It was good to try to have teachers and parents attempt to solve their problems together.
  - g. It helped me to better understand the parents role in the community.
  - h. The program presented the opportunity to hear, firsthand, the different view of "controversial" groups.
  - i. It increased our knowledge of the complex problems.
  - j. More effective than any program I have ever attended.
  - k. It was too brief -- should have been continued for an additional three weeks.
  - l. It acquired higher goals than any organization dealing with intergroup relations.
  - m. This program should be required for every human dealing with intergroup relations.
  - n. I came to the program with a cynical attitude, but the enthusiasm of my group leader was the greatest single force in changing my attitude and making Upgrade meaningful.
  - o. It helped me achieve a greater understanding of self and what is expected of me as a teacher.
  - p. It broadened our understanding and awareness of the parents' interest.
  - q. More effort should be exerted in getting more administrators involved.
  - r. Some of the speakers could have been more specific in terms of our overall needs.
  - s. It was good but it could have been better if the views presented had not been so one-sided.
  - t. Not enough variety of views; no representation of middle-class white parents..
  - u. Not enough emphasis on helping parents understand the problems of teachers.
  - v. The speakers were all biased.
  - w. Very informative, but not very fair. Some people asked all the questions, but many were too shy to voice their opinions.
  - x. It would have been more prosperous if these "Black Riots" had not been occurring at this specific time.
  - y. It was a waste of time.
11. How can the program be improved in order to become more effective?
- Comments: . . .
- a. More parents and teachers should be involved.
  - b. Bring in some public school students.
  - c. The session should be held in a school in the ghetto area.
  - d. The outcomes should be more specific.
  - e. Too much emphasis was placed on the liberal side, guests were too idealistic, emotional and personally involved, hence, not objective.

- f. A more balanced roster of speakers, more small group discussions, field trips.
- g. The principals should have been presented as guest speakers.
- h. A need for more parent-teacher debates.
- i. A need to hear more dissenting opinions.
- j. Should be located in school convenient to public transportation.
- k. More displays and books available.
- l. Bring in more resource people, including principals, parents and teachers.
- m. Small group sessions should be smaller.
- n. Small group sessions should be larger.
- o. A definite follow-up program should be scheduled.
- p. Bring in more representatives of active groups who are less hostile toward the schools, but effective in getting through to us.
- q. Home visitations should have been confined to the slums or other ghetto areas.
- r. Place more emphasis on the positive aspects of school-community relations.
- s. Show more democracy in conducting this program.
