ABSTRACT

The Institute was aimed at the approximately 90 small libraries in rural Idaho towns which are staffed and administered by locally recruited people, few of whom have any library training. A Selection Committee consisting of the Project Director and the Director of the Idaho State Library selected participants on the basis of the degree of commitment on the part of the applicant for self-improvement, the probability that the applicant would be able to utilize his learning in his library, and his potential to exercise greater influence in his community because of his attendance. Five separate workshops were held within the Institute, covering the areas of: reference services, children's services, community services, book selection, and cataloging. (AB)

INTRODUCTION

In a state with a widely dispersed population (8 people per square mile) whose professionally trained librarians are concentrated in the academic libraries and in only the ten public libraries which serve more than 10,000 population, Idaho's small public libraries face a most serious lack of trained staff. Approximately 90 small libraries in rural Idaho towns are staffed and administered by locally recruited people. Few have any library training, all are serving because of a dedicated interest to the needs of the community and few really understand the basic functions of the public library.

Continuing growth and development of rural library service is vital in Idaho to fill the vocational, academic, and recreational needs of its present and future citizens. There is great demand for leadership at the rural level and the greatest need of the small public library administrator is for a thorough grounding in the most basic of library skills.

If Idaho is to achieve maximum effectiveness of its human resources, a significant contribution must be made toward the upgrading and updating of the competencies of those who staff the small rural public libraries of the state.

With this in mind, our institute was planned to alleviate the problem by supplying intensive, concentrated learning experiences, designed to meet the needs of the participants selected. Furthermore, librarians in small libraries throughout the state had long expressed the need and desire for such a program as this.

It was determined that those people responsible for public library services in the small public libraries of Idaho would be selected. By small is meant cities and towns of less than 10,000 population, and this was expanded to include untrained librarians serving under professionally trained people in the ten (10) Idaho libraries in towns with populations of over 10,000.

Because in Idaho we have some areas in which library service is established jointly between public libraries and school districts, we accepted on alternate status people in this category. Also on alternate status were placed people in fringe towns in the adjoining states of Oregon, Nevada, Wyoming, Montana, and Utah, as their library problems are very similar to ours.

All participants were selected on the basis of the judgment of the Selection Committee as to:

- a. The degree of commitment on the part of the applicant to improve himself substantially through attending the institute.
- b. The probability that the applicant would have the opportunity to apply the greater knowledge and experience gained through attending the institute.
- c. The potential of the applicant to exercise greater influence in his community, because of attending the institute.

The Selection Committee consisted of the Project Director and the Director of the Idaho State Library.

FACULTY

It was determined that each of the separate weeks should be in charge of individual consultants, chosen for particular abilities in their respective fields. Those chosen, and accepting the challenge, are listed on the sheets which follow, with vita.

Idaho has a peculiar situation, in that our needs seem best understood by people who have lived in Idaho, and who have worked with our people, developing a particular understanding of the library situation in this state. Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Heninger, now on the staff of the University of Washington School of Librarianship, were long in Idaho; and the remaining staff now work among Idaho librarians.

With this in mind, these five were designated as the faculty, along with the institute director:

PRE-PLANNING

The proposal itself had stressed that the basic skills to be offered should be five:

- a. Reference services
- b. Children's services
- c. Cataloging
- d. Book selection
- e. Community services

In thinking through the procedure, it was determined that each subject area should run for one full week. In order to accomodate participants to the fullest, we could not do this for five consecutive calendar weeks, because it is difficult for these rural people to be away from families and libraries for that length of time. But we could set up a program in such a way that, spread throughout the summer, people might arrange to run their libraries, then be away a week or two leaving a skeleton staff or substitute. Further, individuals were given options: to come for one, two, all five or any desired combination of weeks, as need and available time might dictate.

Because of the options we had set up, the recording of weeks desired became a score sheet of constant tallying and changes, and, at times, great confusion! We had, too, typical Idaho problems, I am sure - comments such as "Oh, I find I can't come that week, as it's haying time and I'll have hands to feed - but my neighbor would sure like to come".

Ideally, with five weeks and 30 enrollees each week we could conceivably have had not only the allowable 150 "man weeks" but 150 different people. Our final tally (there were a few last-minute dropouts which we were unable to fill) was actually 147: a total of 61 people, ranging in age from 19 to 71; the average age was 48, the median 43.9. We had but one brave man.

Our final resultant tally looked like the sheets which follow, and there were many work sheet changes preceding this final one.

Of these, 13 people attended all five weeks. In addition to Idahoans, two came from Elko, Nevada; two came from Pendleton, Oregon and one from Ontario, Oregon.

Our only educational requirement was a high school education. This was important because most of our rural librarians have no more than this. Our college agreed to grant one undergraduate credit per week, hence some participants have earned five credits for the summer's work. This in itself has meant a great deal to many people. Grade reports have gone out to all, and a certificate of award was given to each participant, on completion. Because this institution requires grading, we arbitrarily gave everyone a B. This may have disappointed those expecting A's, but contrarily was a pleasant surprise to those fearing D's or F's!

During this period of pre-planning some participants' library staff members arranged their attendance so that, among their number, all weeks were covered - e.g. Mrs. A came to weeks 1 and 2, Mrs. B to 3 and 4, etc., and on return they have pooled results in staff meetings.

PUBLICITY

We first publicized our acceptance by HEW by notification from our College News Bureau to all wire services. Items appeared in all papers (and in Idaho we have more weeklies than dailies) on TV and radio. We prepared a brochure which was mailed to all libraries on our Directory of Idaho Public Libraries list. Announcement was put in our Idaho State Library's News Bulletin - which goes to adjoining states as well as to all Idaho libraries.

Our first announced deadlines were subsequently advanced two weeks, because applications were slow to come in. Reasons for this primarily were the newness of this idea - an almost frightening thing to some. (One little lady phoned me to say she was afraid she "just wasn't smart enough to do this"!) Most had never been on a college campus and felt a certain understandable trepidation. Distances are great. Everyone is isolated. The thought of coming to a strange place, of living in a dormitory - all these things undoubtedly contributed to first reluctance to apply. But we sent out dittoed follow-up FLASH! bulletins, stressing the once-in-a-lifetime importance of this program for Idaho - and the applications began to come in.

EVALUATIVE OBSERVATIONS

Because ours was actually five separate workshops, within the framework of one institute, the content of each had to be planned very carefully. A great deal of correspondence among the five chosen instructors and the director went into making sure of each week's program. And, because of the expertise of the consultants, everything went very smoothly and well. Part of the resultant cohesion in all five may have been due, too, to the fact that the thirteen enrollees attending all five weeks were a nucleus to help "indoctrinate" newcomers and hold the five groups together. And, as these people returned to their homes and libraries for the two weeks between sessions, they further publicized their gain and growing enthusiasm.

Internal relationships with our own administration were the very finest. Our Director of Special Projects was ever available and very helpful. Our Business Office arranged for weekly payments of participants and instructors. This we felt was particularly important because some participants were here only for one week - and some came from a distance on rather "short rations". Our summer school director, our registrar's office - all were accomodating in the extreme. Our campus is under great stress this summer, with an enormous building program, causing subsequent inconveniences to everyone and all must be willing to "roll with the punches". As a rapidly and literally, developing institution, our internal problems have been very frustrating, something which could not possibly have been foreseen - building, rebuilding, a campus torn up from one end to the other. Parking is hazardous and scarce, meals have been a problem as the Student Union Building is being appreciably enlarged. Summer evening library hours have been curtailed. But the many frustrations participants have accepted with grace and understanding.

Within the conduct of the institute itself, we endeavored, even though a small weekly staff, to get together at day's end to discuss the day's progress. Careful pre-planning of each day's work proved to be very important to a successful workshop. It can appear to be relaxed, but there must be thorough preparation to make it meaningful.

Each week's group of participants was asked for an evaluation of the week - and individual consultants prepared the same. These results have been included in the Appendix.

The greatest significance to all enrollees certainly was the gain of so much where nothing was before - pooling of ideas and suggestions, gathering of a strength gained by bringing people together who are in isolated areas and, to them, seemingly, without help. This is probably best expressed in the comment of one very astute little woman who said "This experience has welded us together - spread out as we are, all over the State, in seeming isolation, we are suddenly together". Sharing similar problems and ideas, as well as learning new things, was a most meaningful experience for everyone. These people have many ideas about what they've gained, and aside from now feeling more knowledgeable, they realize the value of a general education, plus the specific value of a library education. The younger-to-middle age group may, some of them, even go on to school - some to library school. They're excited, enthusiastic, and spurred on to accomplishment.

This has been a stimulating, fine group of intelligent, alert, interested, people - they may not have the backgrounds of college or of a professional library education, but their dedication to jobs and to personal improvement is inspiring. We have been impressed with how well they have done in their communities with the little they have had to work with. Now without exception these people hope to return home and implement the results of these workshops. They've gained new ideas and methods in community service, in conducting story hours, in weeding old out-moded collections, in formulating written book selection policies, in investigating pre-processing cataloging services, thinking about Friends-of-the-Library groups. Many have said "I just can't wait to use what I've learned".

Major strengths without a doubt have been in (1) the excellent individual instruction, and (2) in the fine overall friendly relationships among people with similar goals and problems. Each week about 10-15 have been staying in the dormitory and I believe this has been good - they've stayed together, and worked together. Even our local frustrations have been a strengthening influence.

Individual instructors made constant use of media and a variety of materials. In the reference services week participants became acquainted with the microfilm readers and the Recordak; we showed a variety of films, in all areas. Cataloging made use of the overhead and the opaque, and during the week of community services participants were introduced to all sorts of hardware they'd never used before - not only recording devices, record players, cassettes, but they made "quickie" dittoes and had the experience of using the dry-mount press and most for the first time discovered how picture laminating is done. These new things were very exciting for these people, and in many ways more important than constant stress on the traditional.

Enrollees had practically no derogatory comments - almost without exception they were excited and eager and full of praise for the entire instructional program. Much of this, of course, is because for most this was an entirely new experience and the information to be gained was new to them. They have no background for criticism, (and the only complaints were of creature comforts, such as too hot, too cold, such uncomfortable chairs, etc.!) Most participants had little or limited background in any of these areas and the entire program was vital to them.

Because we had some different enrollees during each workshop week, our problems of orientation were in a way unique - i.e. we could not have but one orientation period because there were some who were strange to us, each time we began a new workshop. Hence we took time each Monday morning, for introductions, registration, explanation of facilities - and, after the first week, depended to large extent on those 13 returnees, to help out as "big sisters" to the newcomers. This worked very well, and we found that everyone very soon was becoming acquainted, sharing "where shall we eat dinner?" ideas, and becoming quickly at home on campus. We also started out each week with name tags for all, which helped us all more quickly to know each other.

Visits to the State Library were made each week, by those new to the area, to the bindery, to our art gallery and to the historical museum. Many of our participants had never been to the capital city - and we felt these opportunities were important. Also, Boise is in the throes of an urban renewal program. As part of a large city-center complex, one of our buildings now under construction is the new Idaho State Library and Archives, which participants enjoyed having the opportunity to see.

There were several things of special interest going on during the summer. The Joffrey City Center Ballet was here; there were park concerts; a series of dramas in the park (free) was put on by our college drama department; the Snake River Stampede in Nampa was in progress (with Doc and Festus from "Gunsmoke!"). Participants took advantage of all these on their weekends here.

Getting together informally and socially is of great importance. We made daily provision for coffee breaks, and there was one birthday celebration. We met as a group one night each week for dinner, at an appointed place. All enjoyed this and came to anticipate the weekly event, in which we included others who could come - our state and public librarians, hosts of participants, etc. We had a party during our final week. These events add immeasurably to a rapport which is so important - and the few people unable to do these things because of going home to milk the family cow felt that they "missed out" and expressed themselves about it.

The purpose and goal of this entire summer's work has been to help these previously untrained people to improve basic skills and to develop a competence which they have never before had. We certainly have done this. Several people, going home between the sessions, have already told us that they seem to "have attained more stature" in their communities. Their towns are proud of what these people have done. Boards of trustees are glad that they arranged for the attendance of their librarians.

Our approach has been specifically with the very small library in mind - and if we had not kept this goal in view, we would have failed. It was the very small unit we were trying to reach. In other words, some few people from larger libraries may have heard some of this before - but to most enrollees it was all new, and, as one woman said, even "exhilarating". Our dates were right to accomodate the participants and the staff. For Boise State College, the dates coincided with the two summer school sessions, which accomodated their record-keeping. For the director, it made a very tight schedule, just finishing a year of full time teaching in time to start in on the institute. And now that it is over, the fall term commences!

Because we set our goal at thirty enrollees each week, the scheduling was confusing - we could have had conceivably 150 different people, but, as mentioned earlier, we settled down to 61. Ideally more towns should have been represented. We received no applications from some more remote areas of the state. Also, in this most conservative state, some areas want nothing to do with Federal aid! But, all in all, we thought that 61 people for a first-run, was very encouraging.

Daily time for study was well scheduled. We provided time for outside assignments, class discussions, breaks. The scheduling was structured, yet relaxed. Some instructors demanded more of participants than others. Just one consultant lived in the dormitory with enrollees, helped them constantly with their work, was always available. This was very helpful, important and appreciated, and established an inestimable rapport. If all consultants were willing to do this, probably every workshop would be off to a fine start.

Inclusion of a few people from other states was stimulating to Idahoans - to discover that we are not alone in our library problems. We included these out-of-staters as alternates because our first priorities were to our own state. But this could profitably be done as an inter-state proposal, with certain specifications that there must be some acceptances from other states.

The USOE was accomodating, precise in direction and efficient. We felt that the times we needed clarification on certain matters their office was most helpful. Our budget was good, and provision made for most contingencies.

Impact on our institution has been great, partly because the director has "made waves" in order to get some things accomplished - but also because we have seldom had so many "uncollegiate types" on campus, and I think the campus-at-large has been impressed with this group of fine people, dedicated to learning and self-improvement.

There are several important implications to this whole series of five workshops, gleaned from letters, from conversations with these people, etc:

(1) Many who came for only one or two weeks regret that they did not take advantage of all 5. (In this case we might have had to schedule it differently to accomodate more people.)

(2) Many who did not apply at all wish they had done so. They are hearing about it from those who were in attendance.

(3) Almost without exception participants hope that our State can do this another time - or something maybe within regions, possibly on an in-service training basis, through the aegis of our State Library. These people are eager to up-date what they have learned, and to continue their schooling.

(4) They'd like a session on personnel relationships and administrative problems; more cataloging, reference in more depth. Now they have a taste of the pie.

(5) Our brochure should have made it clear that this was not only 30 participants altogether but 30 each week.

In our state we have monthly regional bibliographic center meetings, designed to give our untrained people a chance to get together for one full day, to see new books, to go over new reference materials, to discuss problems, etc. Not always do these have 100% attendance - but now, because of the impact of this institute, I feel sure that more will attend, realizing the importance of such meetings as these. These people now will see the reasons for attending as many kinds of library gatherings as they can. Hopefully we have stressed the vital need to be as professional in attitude as possible, though we may lack professional training. The contact, I feel sure, of these people, with a professional staff, has been very important.

Many have become interested in library education, wanting to know when and how they should proceed. For the younger ones to whom this could be a reality, we may have accomplished some real recruiting for Idaho's public libraries.

CONCLUSIONS

For a first-time venture for this state, our institute has been most successful. Participants have without exception been eager, responsive, alert, and dedicated to learning things new to them. Consultation with individual instructors has corroborated my feeling that we have all had a most rewarding experience.

Were this to be repeated, it could justifiably be duplicated "as is" - but, from requests from enrollees there could be added either another week, which might deal with problems of personnel and administration, or possibly, time taken for these matters within one of the other workshop weeks. The entire plan of operation could effectively be used in states other than Idaho, as we are surely not alone in our basic library needs.

Some of our local frustrations could not possibly have been foreseen, but an institute of any kind would be more successful with extended library evening hours, for reading and study. Evening meals should be available on campus, particularly for those people who did not drive to this area, and who are living in dormitories.

Giving options for attendance, as we did, presented real confusion in making a final schedule of participants, yet accomodating enrollees in this way was important for them.

An assistant director was not written into the proposal, chiefly because it seemed, if there were to be one, this person should also be at the college, where we both might confer when necessary, or share various duties. But, in the absence of such an individual, the Director of our Idaho State Library has helped immeasurably, in selection of participants and in a continuous advisory capacity.

We have been asked to present, in this report, any suggestions which would be of help in conduct of future institutes. Time for writing the proposal and seeing it to completion is of greatest importance. Trying to do both these, in addition to a full-time teaching load, has been hectic. I firmly believe that there should be provision for both time and remuneration - before and after, as well as during - the institute, to work solely on institute matters. To observe the salary allotment for the institute director may, on the surface, seem adequate - but I have actually been involved with this for an entire year and innumerable hours have gone into this.

Further, our five instructors, though classed as "part time", were in truth full-time for their respective weeks. Much time must be spent in preparation, to do anything well - and also in subsequent evaluation. Remuneration should be given for this time involved.

If these inequities could be satisfactorily dealt with, I am sure this would be helpful to future programs of this nature.

Sometime hence a follow-up letter is planned, possibly to go out early in 1971, to see what is being done differently by these people, as a result of what has been, for all of them, a unique experience. Letters are already coming in to our administrative offices, full of appreciation and gratitude for the experience. It has been a rewarding summer for all of us, staff and participants alike.

THE BROCHURE

Library Institute BASIC LIBRARY SKILLS FOR THE LIBRARIAN OF THE SMALL PUBLIC LIBRARY

PURPOSE

In a state with a widely dispersed population where the majority of the public libraries are small, the academic libraries, Idaho State and mail order public libraries face a real and urgent need for a trained staff with the minimum skills for service. Idaho is a farming and stock raising state. College graduates are few. Most of the library institute participants are directed towards those people who without any formal library training, education, or workshop, small public libraries. Workshop is planned to upgrade skills and competencies by training participants in the basic requisite for giving effective service in predominantly rural communities.

OBJECTIVES:

The Institute will provide one week's concentrated and intensive instruction in each of the following basic areas, and on the dates given:

Reference services — June 8-12
Children's services — June 15-19

Selection of books and media
Reference books and materials
Library services to the public Library administration

ELIGIBILITY

Participants will be chosen for selection will be given to professionally trained people directly responsible for providing public library service in Idaho towns with a population of under 10,000. Next are untrained people working in the public libraries of Idaho serving over 10,000. Basis of selection will be the desire to upgrade skills, the degree of commitment on the part of the applicant to improve himself substantially, the probability that the applicant will have the opportunity to apply the greater knowledge gained through attendance; and the potential of the applicant to exercise greater influence in his community because of having attended the institute. Minimum educational requirement is a valid high school diploma.

PROGRAM

Participants may combine workshop, classroom, and self-paced learning. Institute has been so

BOISE STATE COLLEGE

1907 CAMPUS DRIVE · BOISE, IDAHO 83707

We are happy to inform you that you have been a successful applicant for our library institute this summer, for the following dates:

If you plan to accept appointment as a participant in this institute, the following two items must be mailed to us no later than April 17, 1970.

1. A letter of acceptance
2. The enclosed application for stipend form

Unless the above instructions are followed, your name will be dropped as an institute enrollee on April 24, 1970, and a replacement will be selected from our list of alternate candidates.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Yours very sincerely,

Marjorie E. Fairchild

BOISE STATE COLLEGE

1907 CAMPUS DRIVE • BOISE, IDAHO 83707

Because of intense competition for space in the 1970 Library Institute, for which you applied, we have chosen our 30 applicants, placing your name on the list of alternates.

We have asked successful candidates to let us know no later than April 17th whether or not they still plan to attend. By April 24th, if we have cancellations, we will next get in touch with alternates. This puts you on an alternate basis, and we appreciate your patience. You may be hearing from us!

Yours very sincerely,

BASIC LIBRARY SKILLS FOR THE LIBRARIAN OF
THE SMALL PUBLIC LIBRARY
Summer Institute 1970 April 21, 1970
Boise State College

To all participants:

It occurs to me that there may be several things you will wish to know, and we'll try to clarify some of these, ere you arrive.

First--you know that Boise has hot summers! - but generally cool and lovely evenings. However, because of the air conditioning in our college buildings, I do recommend that you bring a sweater, (hoping that you'll not also wish that you'd brought your "longies"!)

There are many interesting things to see and to do in this area--but of course time for "extras" will depend on the amount of work involved in your workshops.

About stipends: We hope to have this set up on a weekly basis. But in case of delays in processing checks, we suggest that you bring sufficient funds to take care of contingencies--such as any texts and board and room for possibly two weeks.

Housing is no problem, and will be available in Morrison Hall. Rooms are to be $3 a day, with $2 or possibly $2.50 a day for all three meals. Check-in time is most relaxed, any time the Sunday preceding the weekly institute session, and check-out time Friday evening or Saturday, as you prefer. If you are staying the full two weeks, you may of course stay in the dorm over the weekend. Housing payments will be arranged by the individual appointed as house mother, on a weekly basis. Saga Food Service will have charge of meals.

You should arrange to be in the Library (where classes will be held) room 218, upstairs, each scheduled Monday morning by soon after 8. Registration will be taken care of at that time.

As you know, the purpose of the workshop is not only to upgrade basic skills, but also to increase effectiveness in your own communities. We trust that this will be an inspirational, as well as an educational, experience, and we surely look forward with real anticipation, to working profitably together.

We are enclosing biographical information about our staff, also, as this may be of interest to you.

My best to each of you.

Very sincerely yours,

Marjorie E. Fairchild

SPECIAL NOTES OF IMPORTANCE TO INSTITUTE PARTICIPANTS

(Please read carefully, and follow instructions which will apply to you.)

1. To all who are coming for REFERENCE SERVICES, June 8:

Please read the enclosed reproduced sheets on reference work, taken from Winchell's Guide to Reference Books, and be sure to bring it with you.

Bring also the State Library issued pamphlet (with the yellow cover) entitled Basic Reference Collection for the Small Public Library, 1969.

We'll have extra copies of this, for those who do not have it.

There will be one text to buy, available at the college bookstore:
Katz, William. Reference services (volume 2 of two) $7.50

2. To all who are coming for CHILDREN'S SERVICES, June 15:

There will be one text to buy, at the college bookstore:
Broderick, Dorothy. An introduction to children's work in public libraries. $4.00 (If you already have a copy, bring it with you.)

Mrs. Heninger will get in touch with you directly, about other matters of importance, prior to your arrival for class.

3. To all coming for the third week, CATALOGING, July 6:

There will be no text to buy. Copies of the following three books will be available as reference texts, and if you already have them, please bring them with you:

Akers, Susan. Simple library cataloging. 5th edition. 1969.

Dewey, Melvil. Abridged decimal classification. 9th edition. 1968.

Sears list of subject headings. 9th edition. 1968.

4. To all coming for the fourth week, BOOK SELECTION, July 13:

Please bring with you the ALA Small Libraries Pamphlet #5 which the State Library has made available to you. We'll have some copies available here for those of you who do not have this.

Also bring the following if you have them:

Carter. Building library collections. Any edition.

Haines. Living with books. 1950.

Purchase of the new edition of Carter, 1969, will be required and will be available at the college bookstore, $7.50. Copies of Haines will be available for reference use.

5. To all coming for the fifth week, COMMUNITY SERVICES, August 3:

No text; no purchases.

6. In addition: Dormitory application blanks are enclosed, and you return these directly to the address indicated. All meals are served at the SUB (Student Union) and you may purchase there a $5 meal ticket, to be used any time. Weekend meals are not served, but there are many places nearby where you may eat. Bring bedding, please! This may seem a nuisance, but you cannot beat $3 a night.

We enclose a map, so that you who are unfamiliar with our campus may be able to find the necessary landmarks. We have made corrections as this is what the campus will be like in 1971.

PUBLICITY

Examples of publicity appear on the next few pages. News items appeared in chosen participants' home town papers, in notices of scheduling in our regular summer school college catalog, and announcements were made on regularly scheduled radio and TV news programs.

The first letter is a sample of what was sent to newspaper editors.

The Library
April 18, 1970

Mrs. Alice Sawyer, Editor
Valley News Times
201 South First Street
Boise, Idaho 83702

My dear Mrs. Sawyer:

We shall appreciate notice in your paper, at your early convenience, of the acceptance of Mrs. Margie Sage, Librarian of the Terrell Public Library, into our summer 1970 Library Institute.

This program has been designed for the untrained librarians of Idaho's small public libraries and is funded under Title II-B of the Higher Education Act. It will run for five weeks, each with a separate workshop. Thirty participants for each week have been accepted, from all over the state, with subject matter and instructors as follows:

June 8 - 12, Information Services. Instructors: Mrs. Helen Hefner, from the University of Washington School of Librarianship, Seattle.

June 15 - 19, Children's Services. Instructors: Mrs. Irene Hanning, also from the University of Washington School of Librarianship.

July 6 - 10, Cataloging. Instructors: Mr. Edward Lindmark, Librarian, Nez Perce County Free Library, Lewiston, Idaho.

July 13 - 17, Book Selection. Instructors: Mr. Robert Bruce, Librarian, Terrell Public Library, and Helen, Idaho.

August 3 - 7, Community Services. Instructors: Mrs. Ann Barnes, Librarian of the Curriculum Resource Center, Boise State College.

Each training session is directed by Mrs. Margorie E. Fairchild, Assistant Professor of Library Science at Boise State, and is designed to improve the basic skills and competence of the people serving our small community libraries with no previous library training.

Thank you for publicizing this for us, and I am sure Mrs. Sage will appreciate the recognition.

Yours very sincerely,

Mrs. Margorie E. Fairchild
Library Institute Director

COMMENTS FROM PARTICIPANTS *

"Director went far beyond the call of duty on every score."

"Warmth and hospitality by college and state library personnel - much appreciated."

"These courses are fulfilling a heart-felt need in Idaho. I'm sure our libraries will be reflecting this added knowledge tremendously in the next 5 years. We're really on the way!"

"Would like to be offered a course in handling personnel and library administration another year."

"Wish more of our staff could have had this."

"It has been a great learning experience for me."

"I felt that the consultant and director were very concerned and helpful in the few problems that we had."

"The class discussions were very helpful to me."

"I have greatly benefitted from this course."

"I appreciated this opportunity and hope there could be more - perhaps regionally."

"How wonderful someone realized that a lot of library workers are untrained and made it possible for us to attend this institute."

"Communication between students and faculty have been excellent."

"A most wonderful opportunity to learn our needs, from the basic to the more advanced. Now to put the knowledge to work! Thank you!"

"Mrs. Fairchild has done a marvelous job of conducting this institute."

"There should be yearly seminars to up-date staffs in these rapidly progressing times; open to varied staff members as well as the heads."

"Will follow up with much reading at home - just not enough hours during the week to read all extra reading."

"As I have not worked in children's services except in a substitute position, I had very much to learn, but feel very inspired to learn more, and perhaps do story-telling or something on this order with children. Thank you."

 Taken from Student Evaluation Sheets*

"The program has been very worthwhile, and I feel that I have been helped by taking it, and will be able to apply parts of it in my library."

"Am grateful for opportunity offered by this Institute."

"A very rewarding and helpful experience."

"The main benefit of this course is that all the ideas stressed flexibility so that we learned how to adapt new suggestions to our own situations. We are going to start a story hour, using the things we have learned here."

"Delighted that such a course could be available to assist us."

"It has been just great. I surely hope we can participate in more programs of this type."

"Being able to meet other librarians from all over the state and comparing interests and problems, and also meeting personnel from the State Library and discussing our situations with them is fabulous!"

"I feel very fortunate to be able to be a part of this institute. I have learned many things that I had never really given thought to before."

"It's been a very challenging and worthwhile week."

"The program was very effective, both individually and as a group - most informative and pleasurable."

"Continue this each summer!! Grow more demanding on students. Have each attendee write short news releases to be turned into his local paper on the week's institute."

"I will be forever grateful for both the opportunity and the learning. Perhaps as one becomes older, one really appreciates all the work necessary to have such a successful program."

OVERALL EVALUATION OF INSTITUTE

This sheet is for those of you who have come for any two or more (up to all five) weeks.

Think through very carefully a total program evaluation - such matters as how effective has this been in

- a. upgrading your skills and competencies?
- b. making you a more effective librarian, in your own local community?
- c. making you more aware of the importance of library education?

Also, would you now make greater effort to:

- a. attend the regional bibliographic center meetings in your area?
- b. attend your state library association meetings?
- c. get together whenever possible with other librarians?

Has this been a meaningful experience for you, and if so, in what ways?

If we could do something similar another time, what would you like it to be?

Was any one week of the five more helpful than others? If so, why?

Please express your overall opinions - (local frustrations of the building, remodeling, noise and confusion of a developing institution please try to overlook! We have appreciated your patience and understanding.)

OVERALL EVALUATION

(Comments from participants coming to all five weeks)

"This experience has developed an awareness of what a tremendous field of service is open to us."

"I learned that I need to improve my image as a public librarian."

"This college course has upped my standing in the public's mind."

"A wonderful sharing of knowledge to give an overall upgrading of both old and new learned skills."

"Not only was the instruction very good, but the workshop idea of sharing our experiences and problems, and finding new ways of dealing with them, was good."

"These workshops have made me more enthusiastic and aware of educating the public and serving them better."

"Instructors - terrific!! All so different, but each exciting and inspiring individuals."

"Very good. The overall institute has at different times stressed the importance of reaching all - from pre-school to the senior citizen."

"A very meaningful experience. Was helpful in giving me confidence that I was approaching my library problems in the right manner."

"A very fine Institute. A privilege to be in attendance. Most helpful to me in many ways. Many new ideas were gained and I have put some use in my library. Thank you."

"Excellent!! I've gained in more ways than I could say. The instructors have been most helpful and cooperative. The director did everything possible for physical comfort and mental stimulation. Thank goodness someone was willing to spend the time, energy and thought to see this through. Many of us feel more secure in the jobs we're attempting."

"Our gab sessions, in and out of class, have shown us how to solve little petty problems that always turn up in small operations where an instant decision or action is required. Am only sorry more of us "Para-librarians" could not have the same experience."

"Learning new ideas and ways of doing things, meeting other Librarians and becoming more knowledgeable in your chosen field is so important in doing a good job. This Institute has done all of these things and more. The Institute Director has done a tremendous job in getting a group like this together."

Librarianship Institute

Week I June 8 Reference Services

OBJECTIVES

-to help those serving the public in the small public libraries of Idaho become more effective reference librarians. Because of the limited time and the emphasis on this Institute, the introduction of reference source materials was not stressed. Instead an attempt was made to suggest types of sources and the kinds of questions to be answered by them, and information to be obtained from them.

Although for the most part those in attendance lacked formal education beyond the high school level, participants were intelligent, eager to learn, and generally had a fair grasp of problems in serving the public. Therefore the approach was elementary, practical and flexible according to their needs.

Katz, William, Introduction To Reference Work. Volume 2: Reference Services. McGraw Hill, c1969.

PROGRAM OUTLINE

Monday: 10:30-12 1:30-4:30

1. The Library: a brief outline of the history and purposes of libraries in general.
2. Public Library: emphases of the public library and its development.
3. Reference service: its beginning, development and the reasons for reference service.
4. Reference books: purposes, evaluation and selection of these.
(as a general type of material.)

Tuesday: 8-12 1-4 7-9 p.m.

1. Reference service: how much to provide; to whom; types of service.
2. Sources of information: librarian, general collection, reference collection, local resource persons, etc.
3. Tools of service: necessity of bibliographies and indexes - basic titles; bibliographic citation; brief introduction to pamphlets, pictures, records etc. as tools of reference; importance of government publications at all levels.

Wednesday: 8-12 1:30-3:30 7-9 p.m.

1. The reference question: Definition, types of questions interview technics
steps to follow in searching for material conclusion of search! follow-up.
2. Information sources, cont'd: a brief introduction to encyclopedias, dictionaries, encyclopedia supplements - their scope, aims and importance as reference sources.
3. Tour of State Library facilities: examination of reference collection with members of staff describing services available and various procedures.
Part of the purpose of this tour was to illustrate that quality of service does not have to depend on quantity of space available in the library.

Thursday: 8-12 1:30-4:30

1. Information sources, cont'd: a brief introduction to approaches used in biographical and geographical source materials and types of questions answered by them; a guide to evaluation in these areas.
2. Division into two groups with each having equal time to work on reference assignment and examine materials, and for role-playing using questions involving reference sources and various aspects of reference service and administrative policy.
3. Session of questions originated by students with suggested types of reference sources to consult coming from rest of class.

Friday: 8-12 1:30-4

1. The reference collection: discussion of facilities, policies, record-keeping, and ways to evaluate the collection.
2. Cooperation: attitudes, problems, advantages, types.
3. Interlibrary loan
4. Future developments to be expected in the reference area
5. Speaker: representative of State Library staff to discuss A-V materials and their importance in a reference collection and as reference tools, as well as implications for the future and how they might affect Idaho's small public libraries
6. Problem discussion

Various handout materials were used and are attached. The required text was Introduction to Reference Work: Vol. II by Wm. Katz with Vol. I optional for purchase. Required readings were from both volumes. All reading list materials were available in the classroom and were heavily used.

The major assignment was given Tuesday morning with the explanation that the student was not required to hand anything in but there would be discussion time Friday. In addition it was understood that the main purpose of the assignment was to encourage the student to examine reference selective aids, evaluate and verify reference sources. A special two-hour session was held Tuesday evening in the library with the instructor available to aid students in their assignment.

In addition to this question students were asked to examine reference materials generally according to evaluative points and examine the selection aids and bibliography of reference.

STRENGTHS, WEAKNESSES, ACCOMPLISHMENTS, OBSERVATIONS

1. There was difficulty in addressing the needs of all segments represented--some of those in attendance were from libraries of sufficient size to supply a considerable amount of reference service and would perhaps have benefited more from discussion of new materials in reference rather than service and types of sources.
2. An assignment involving question-solving might have been added with more of it done in class. About 3 - 4 class hours were spent on oral questions with suggested source types.
3. It was difficult to keep reference service separated from administration. A combination course maybe?
4. Role-playing was a definite strong point and seemed to reap benefits.
5. Learning how to deal with customers, to analyze their needs and where to start looking for answers was essential for those in smaller libraries (the majority). The approaches and discussions seemed fairly successful.
6. Ability to relate problems of providing adequate reference service to each other seemed helpful.
7. The major strength of this week's workshop was in showing these ladies ways of improving service to their communities in spite of the handicaps of limited money, facilities and materials under which they operate.
8. A follow-up workshop addressed to regional center personnel and dealing with special problems of providing service would be of definite value.
9. Limited college library hours caused extreme hardship in accessing materials needed for this week. The institute director and the reference services consultant took the responsibility of opening the library for extra use of participants.

May 15, 1970

To all participants coming to Reference Services, June 8:

The week of our Institute on Reference Services is fast approaching, but before you arrive in Boise it will be helpful if you can find time for the following:

1. Read the reference article by Mudge, which you have already received in the mail.
2. Read pamphlets #1, 2A (sections I-V) and 9 of the ALA Small Public Library series. Bring this set with you.
3. If you have not already done so check reference titles in your library collection against the 1969 Basic Reference Collection for the Small Public Library list issued by the State Library. (Be sure to note edition and/or publication date discrepancies.) Bring the checked list with you.

I hope too that you will bring your ideas, problems and questions, so that through discussion and mutual exchange of information we can arrive at effective methods of serving Idaho's reference needs.

See you June 8th.

Aileen Wright

P.S. We'll have extra copies of materials in (2) and (3) for those of you who may not have them.

REFERENCE SERVICES

Based on the materials now in your library collection which are useable as information sources, and your knowledge of your community, draw up a list of 10-15 reference materials you feel are essential for purchase if your library is to provide effective service to the community. Do not necessarily restrict your choices to books.

Titles may be selected from standard aids or from recent reviews. Be prepared to justify each title selected. It may be a brand new title or a new revision of an older title, but this should be a top priority list - not a dream list. It should become a working list from which you will order new titles during the next year or so. Keep in mind your budget when a decision is between materials serving similar purposes, but do not consider it a deterrent to a needed title that should be on the list.

Cite each title chosen and source of information on a 3 x 5 card. A brief annotation will be helpful for your future referral.

Some points to remember:

1. Consider other resources in the community for reference information, e.g., junior college, school, etc. (How much cooperation has been generated and will it be possible to check this list against their collections to avoid duplication of expensive works.)
2. Accessibility to interlibrary loan will be a factor to consider.
3. How many similar questions have been asked and not answered for lack of materials in a subject area?
4. To serve the community effectively you must provide incentives to non-users too. What are some of the community interests not represented in your reference collection?

LIBRARIANSHIP INSTITUTE

WEEK II CHILDREN'S SERVICES

The over-all emphasis of this week was the development of rudimentary professional skills and attitudes, among the large number of small town librarians in Idaho who bring devotion, but little training, to their jobs.

It was my aim in teaching the children's services and literature section of the Institute to encourage the development of an inviting, attractive, pleasant, out-reaching atmosphere in the libraries open to children; to propose programs to entice children to discover the joys of reading; to suggest routines that make the child feel comfortable and competent in the library, free from unnecessary restrictions and rules; to develop an awareness among participants that the library must be fully available to all people, regardless of economic or ethnic backgrounds.

The technique used to present this program was a combination of formal lectures, the showing of examples of materials and activities, the use of films to instruct participants as well as exemplify materials available for use in their communities. The course was planned with a specific structure, but with sufficient flexibility to allow members of the group to discuss ways to adapt programs to individual situations.

Specific instruction was given in (1) the general history of children's literature and libraries and the criteria for selecting quality materials; (2) the need to weed and upgrade tired collections with emphasis on carefully guided selection; (3) the techniques for selecting and building a quality collection of books, paperbacks, pamphlets and inexpensive materials; (4) ways and means to present picture book, storytelling, and film programs; (5) the importance of doing book talks for school classes; (6) ideas about various reading programs and book clubs for children; (7) the need for enlightening parents on the importance of their children's use of the library and the attractive materials and activities available.

In order to impress upon the participants the necessity to know books, if they were to be able to present them successfully to children, the instructor, prior to workshop time, selected 30 paper back titles (quality children's books) and sent five books to each participant, to be read before the Institute. During the last day of the meeting we formed discussion groups, in which six people discussed before all participants the five books they had all read.

In addition, all read the text (An Introduction to Children's Work in Public Libraries by Dorothy M. Broderick. H.W. Wilson Co., New York, 1965) during the week, examined picture books and non-fiction books, and used various book selection aids, both current and retrospective.

Lively discussions and active participation by all those at the Institute seemed to signal a successful week. The external planning done by Mrs. Fairchild was superb and everything ran smoothly. The feeling of progressive, innovative ideas and attitudes which seemed to permeate the entire group bodes well for improved, modern public library service in Idaho, in-so-far as extremely limited budgets will permit. This was a useful, successful and stimulating week.

LIBRARIANSHIP INSTITUTE

WEEK 3 CATALOGING

OBJECTIVES:

It was my intent to use the week to instruct the participants in the essentials of the cataloging skills, to give them the basic information necessary to organize their collection for more efficient use by their patrons. Simplification was to be stressed. After almost seven years in Idaho I was very aware of the fact that the librarians of our small public libraries lack the knowledge of what is basic classification, assignment of subject headings, and adequate filing. But I also knew that they do not lack the ability to learn or the desire to serve their public. I realized that most of them have only a high-school education, and one or two years of college is an added blessing and training. It was planned to follow a workshop procedure, with plenty of time for discussion and questions, rather than a lecture format.

The following schedule was used:

MONDAY:

Introduction of each participant by library, training, etc. and the completion of the necessary enrollment procedures. As a preliminary a discussion of why we have a card catalog and what we accomplish by locating books properly through the card catalog. An explanation of the use of Sears, Dewey, and the use of some manual such as Akers.

TUESDAY:

The form of the catalog card, stressing that it is more important to be consistent in spacing than counting the spaces, the different types of entries for the main entry cards. How the subject headings are assigned and the Dewey numbers determined. Starting use of typewriters that have been furnished by the college to do some practice.

WEDNESDAY:

An explanation of the various types of added entry cards and shelf list cards. Some time on the physical preparation of the books; what book cards to make, pockets to use, and placement. Stress of use of plastic jackets and identification tapes. Continued use of typewriters and showing of their own cards on the opaque projector. Special types of materials are covered: records, films, and also how to use the Cutter tables.

THURSDAY:

Demonstration of the various filing rules. The participants themselves to do as much as possible. Stress what they must not make their own rules or subject headings. Some discussion of circulation procedures.

FRIDAY:

Review of the principles and questions period. Time for some problems that they have brought and explanation as to how to handle these problems. Final summary included use and sources of printed cards.

EVALUATION:

I was able to follow my schedule and believe that the workshop procedure was the proper one to use. The real test is going to take place in participants' own libraries. I do feel that the participants know how to make their catalog cards, how to select and build Dewey numbers, and how to assign subject headings. I was very pleased with the attitude of learning: they so much want to know what to do.

STRENGTHS:

The use of the workshop technique enabled us to travel at a speed sufficient for all; we never proceeded from one assignment to another till each person was satisfied that principles were understood. The use of typewriters and the opportunity to make sample cards helped them to understand the principles. The entire class had a good relationship with each other; they all shared, they all learned.

WEAKNESSES:

(Need we mention the physical problem with the air conditioning?). There is simply no text that could have been used; all are too difficult to be called "basic". I also feel that I could have handled the class better had I had it in my own medium-sized public library with my own card catalog as a demonstration.

OBSERVATIONS:

These nice ladies really shouldn't be spending all the time that they will be in doing their own cataloging. They should be buying Wilson cards (or others available) when possible, but they do not have the money. I intend to press for some sort of subsidy through the Idaho State Library, so that they might receive funds for such cards. In addition, each regional center should see that they all have copies of Sears, Dewey, and the Public Library Catalog.

From observations and questions, participants would like this sort of workshop repeated. They have all expressed a great need for this.

LIBRARIANSHIP INSTITUTE

WEEK IV BOOK SELECTION

From considerable experience with small libraries in rural communities, I have developed a conviction that, with rare exceptions, book selection is a haphazard process. The librarian has no conception of the functions of the public library, little background in books or the use of books, very limited knowledge of the community served by the library, and no systematic plan for the library's development.

These deficiencies cannot be remedied in one week. My aim here has been to start the librarians thinking about their libraries' present state and about their ideal relation to the community. To this must be added some basic knowledge of the criteria and tools of book selection.

The attached brief outline of the course was closely followed. There were, of course, modifications brought about by the personalities that made up the class, by limitation and variation of individual experience, and by class response and questions. However, the outline proved workable.

I worked for maximum class participation in discussion. The members of the class, with possibly two exceptions, cooperated enthusiastically. It was most interesting to see that analysis of the community and its needs, and the library's ability to meet these needs led to the individual's analysis of her effectiveness as a librarian.

The course outline shows that each day's work fell into a definite pattern: (1) Discussion based on previous day's work. There were always questions, and always more ideas to advance on yesterday's topics. (2) Discussion of the work assignment. (3) Lecture on new topics leading to (4) assignment of next day's work and reading assignments. The informal lecture was interspersed with questions directed at individuals in the class.

Emphasis throughout was on class participation, and this, I think, was the chief strength of the course. This is shown by the letters I have already received from members of the class telling of application of principles formulated in the class, especially in the writing of book selection policies. Class members seemed to especially enjoy the opportunity to talk about books and to share their pleasure in books.

The weakest point in the course was my failure to have some specific materials for the librarians to take home and review at their leisure. Were I to give the course again, I would have a syllabus ready for distribution at the end of the course. There should be more time spent on the techniques of acquisitions work. We only touched on this, due to lack of time. This could be an institute in itself.

Librarians from Regions II and IV use the Reference Center resources in book selection. Those from Region III refer, to some extent, to the State Library. In Regions I and VI, the librarians are on their own. Region V was not represented.

Wednesday-

1. Questions on previous day's class work. Further discussion of criteria for book selection. Reports on Tuesday's work assignment.
2. Tools of book selection
 - A. Book-reviewing periodicals
Booklist
N. Y. Times Book Review
Publishers' Weekly
others
Saturday Review
Library Journal
 - B. Book Review Digest
Book Review Index
 - C. Wilson Standard Catalog series
 - D. Reader's Adviser
3. READING ASSIGNMENT: Carter, p. 70-89; Haines, 275-351.

Thursday-

1. Discussion of previous day's class work. Discussion of assigned reading.
2. The book budget
3. Budget stretchers
 - Paper backs
Second-hand dealers
Cooperative buying
others
McNaughton Plan and Tartan Books
Jobbers and discounts
Memorials
4. Other materials
 - pamphlets
magazines
Framed art prints
LP Records

5. WORK ASSIGNMENT: Write down the strong and weak points of your library collection. What are your priorities in building up your collection?

Friday-

1. Discussion of Thursday's work assignment
2. Binding and repairing (film)
3. Censorship (Freedom to read)
4. Rental collections

Friday-

5. Reading levels
Why buy light fiction? Why not buy it?
6. Bases for a permanent collection
Replacements
7. Brain-storming session on the course.

Librarianship Institute

Week V August 3 Community Services

OBJECTIVES AND PROGRAM:

Developing in participants an awareness of the many possibilities existing in Community Services, Public Relations, Publicity and Media was the objective of the fifth and final week of this institute.

The library can and should take a more dynamic role in today's communities by initiating, sponsoring and aiding in a variety of activities. Book discussion groups, story telling, summer reading programs, book fairs, teen-age programs, creative dramatics, speakers for clubs and organizations, services to shut-ins, nursing homes, special education classes, were a few of the topics discussed.

Members of the group were asked to make an inventory of the services they now offer or have offered within the last six months, and to evaluate the effectiveness of them. Which services not presently offered, but which could be added, and who could help with these, was discussed and noted on their lists.

The films Idaho Libraries Today and Reaching Out were shown to emphasize the services a community library can and should provide.

Many topics seemed to overlap between public relations and community services and often there was no distinct line as to which category they belonged.

The use of community service organizations to help sponsor some of the worthwhile programs seemed to be one that would provide community services as well as promote public relations. Each librarian was asked to promote a local "Friends of the Library" group. The involvement of these groups could add insight into problems, services and responsibilities encountered by the library, and places before the public a truer picture of library service and how it can affect the community. A list of needed activities with which these people might become involved was made, along with a list of various groups which might best be able to help. Getting members of the Board of Trustees involved in the activities was stressed, together with the librarian's need to be a leader in community interests.

Ways in which patrons can be "turned off" by library personnel were brought out and suggestions for overcoming these were given. Emphasis was given to the fact that libraries should be for the Patrons -- not for the Librarians.

Work with the Library Boards of Trustees and the City Fathers was discussed. Fund-raising and financing problems were brought out and some help offered on possible routes to resolution. The pros and cons of fines and over-due notices was explored.

Group discussion on various means of publicity, and excerpts from Dr. Massey's speech, "Marketing the Public Library", introduced the topic of publicity. The film, The Hottest Spot in Town was shown. Buzz sessions helped each participant develop one local event sponsored by the library using as many different media as possible for publicity. The suggestion of changing our "image" came up and some excellent thoughts were produced. Someone suggested staking out a real cow - dyed or painted purple to help attract attention to a library event. Rock-and-roll sessions for the young people, utilization of the entire yard, posters, signs, slogans were given consideration. The need for a national TV advertising campaign was felt. ALA could head up and partially fund (along with state units) professional advertising.

The final portion of the week was devoted to media. Instruction and practice in the use of 16mm projectors, tape recorders - both reel-to-reel and cassette, copy machines, ditto machine, quickie spirit masters, overhead transparencies, and super 8mm single concept films and projector. In addition, each participant mounted a picture on the dry mount press. A demonstration and tips on the use of mimeograph machines was given by a local firm.

OBSERVATIONS:

With such a conglomeration of material to cover with such a diverse group, it was difficult to meet individual needs to the extent desirable. The group was willing and enthusiastic about the material presented. Group participation was high with only one or two not responding during the week. The intelligence, dedication, and common sense of these people is remarkable and belies their lack of formal training.

More demands in the way of individual assignments could be well utilized another time. More specific help in publicity could have been used -- especially someone working in the newspaper, TV, or other advertising fields.
