ABSTRACT

GRADES OR AGES: Grade 11. SUBJECT MATTER: American history and government. ORGANIZATION AND PHYSICAL APPEARANCE: The introductory material outlines the philosophy and the scope and sequence for the whole social studies program. The main body of the guide has seven sections (colonial years, federalism and expanding democracy, civil war and reconstruction, rise of industrialization and big business, twentieth century through World War I, twentieth century from prosperity to depression, and twentieth century 1940's to the present). Each section has subsections on economic influences, domestic and foreign political factors, sociological influences, and geographical influences. The material is presented in three columns: concepts, activities, and references. The guide is mimeographed and spiral bound with a soft cover. OBJECTIVES AND ACTIVITIES: Objectives are not specified. Very detailed activities are included. INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS: Books, records, filmstrips, and transparencies are listed. There is also an extensive bibliography. STUDENT ASSESSMENT: None. (MBM)

PREFACE

This material was produced in the summer of 1968 by the Parkrose School District Social Studies Committee. The organization of the social studies content into concepts has been written by the teachers listed on the title page. Many of the activities and references in this guide were taken from the original guide developed in July, 1962, by Oren Hays and Ralph Rands. Credit was also given, in 1962, to the Oregon State Department of Education for its cooperation. It should be given again, as Max Harriger, State Social Studies Consultant, discussed with our committee the strengths and weaknesses in present-day social studies and some promising national trends to consider.

With so much information to be included now in the teaching of social sciences, the pressure to cover an increasing range of content creates a severe problem. There is also a need to broaden the coverage of social science disciplines. Knowledge and skills in economics, sociology, and political science become just as important as the concepts of history and geography. The cumulative effect of these problems requires a new look at what kind of knowledge is most durable and valuable.

The decision to involve students in the use of more than one basic textbook from the State Adoption List was made because specific facts become obsolete more rapidly than basic concepts or big ideas. Consequently, specific facts should be sampled rather than covered. Understanding of big ideas and their supporting concepts can be developed through a study of selected samplings, preferably contrasting samplings rather than a study of many samplings.

It is the hope of the committee that each teacher will receive stimulation from this guide to develop a comprehensive grasp of the content to be covered, to discover effective ways of teaching the content and to expose students to a variety of resource materials.

To the Teacher:

The units in this guide are designed to assist the classroom teacher in accomplishing the adopted scope and sequence of the social studies. They are structured so that each unit has one or more "Big Ideas" to be emphasized, supplemented by supporting concepts which lead to understanding of that "Big Idea." Information learned from the discussions, project, etc. suggested in the activity column will be of a more specific and factual nature, and have the purpose of contributing to the understanding of the concepts listed in each of the units. The teaching process then should involve leading the student from the activity to an understanding of the concept which in turn helps to emphasize the "Big Idea."

The goal of this type of unit structure is not to emphasize the memorization of factual information, but instead to encourage the understanding of general concepts which it is felt will be of more lasting value in the education process experienced by the students.

THIS WE BELIEVE:

WHAT IS SOCIAL STUDIES

Social Studies is a field of study devised to meet the needs of students in dealing with human relationships and the various aspects of man's society. It is a fusion (or correlation) of the broad fields of the social sciences: geography, economics, sociology, history, and civics. This fusion provides a background of understanding of all the above areas in the earlier years and develops a foundation for future study of any one of these areas.

WHY TEACH SOCIAL STUDIES?

Social Studies should be offered each student so as to help him develop to his greatest capacity and thus meet the needs of a changing society.

- A. Each child should be able to gain information, understanding, and positive attitudes in order to develop into a responsible member of society.
- B. Each child should be enabled to fill his role as a leader or follower in realizing his obligations and responsibilities to our system of democracy and to the world.
- C. Each child should appreciate and comprehend values of morals, high character and brotherhood.
- D. Each child should contribute to the betterment of world society through the development of critical thinking.
- E. Each child should stress his belief in the dignity, worth and needs of the individual: regardless of race, nationality or creed.
- F. Each child should enrich his life through the wise use of leisure time.

ADOPTED SCOPE AND SEQUENCE

1. Living in Our School, Home and Nation
2. Living in Neighborhoods - The study of the neighborhood as a large social group and its dependence on other members in that group. A comparison of neighborhoods around the world as related to their need for goods and services.
3. Living in a Wider Community - Comparison of the basic wants and needs of communities and how these are satisfied.
4. Living in the Pacific Northwest and Other Regions of Our World - The concepts of how man makes a living are applied to the Pacific Northwest and comparisons are made to other regions of the world. The major emphasis is upon the Pacific Northwest as a region.
5. Living in the United States and Canada
6. Living in Latin America - Includes Mexico, the Caribbean, Central America, South America. Some bridges to Europe will be suggested in connection with exploration, settlement, and cultural derivation. The cooperation between the two Americas is also emphasized.
7. Living in the Eastern Hemisphere
8. United States History - An overview of United States history with a brief resume of Oregon.
9. The World Today (World Geography) - The study follows natural climatic and environmental regions, grouping those which are similar, and integrates historical, economical, sociological, and political concepts into the study of those regions.
10. World History
11. American History and Government
12. Modern Problems

SOCIAL STUDIES SCOPE AND SEQUENCE

ELEVENTH GRADE

AMERICAN HISTORY AND GOVERNMENT

I. COLONIAL YEARS (1607-1783)

A. Economic influences

1. Mercantilism endorsed by Europe.
2. Occupational patterns begin to emerge.
3. Basis for free enterprise system was laid.
4. Attempts to enforce English economic patterns chafed English-American relations.

B. Political factors

(Domestic)

1. Parliament and the monarchy controlled the colonies.
2. Colonial governmental patterns emerge.
3. Political efforts lead toward unity within the colonies.
4. Restrictive laws created conflicts.

(Foreign)

1. French and Spanish contacts influenced colonial development.

C. Sociological

1. Mobile social classes developed.
2. Varied religious philosophies permeated colonial life.
3. Indigenous art forms reflected an adaptation of European influences.
4. Education received regional attention.

D. Geographical

1. Colonists adapted to varied geographical conditions and natural resources.
2. Frontier moved ever westward.

II. Federalism and Expanding Democracy (1783-1840's)

A. Economic influences

1. Industrial potential provided for economic independence.
2. Transportation and communication networks were spurred by innovations.
3. Tariff and banking issues created problems in growth.

B. Political factors

(Domestic)

1. Basic documents laid foundation for representative democracy.
2. Nationalism was reflected in the Era of Good Feeling.
3. Differing political philosophies contributed to growing sectionalism.

(Foreign)

1. International conflicts developed.

C. Sociological

1. Anti-slavery sentiment developed.
2. American literature reflected national self-awareness.
3. Religious activity was heightened.

D. Geographical

1. Trans-Mississippi territorial acquisitions were made.
2. Explorations and westward movement revealed natural resource potential.

III. Civil War and Reconstruction (1850's-1870's)

A. Economic influences

1. Basic economies of North and South became divergent.
2. War caused economic dislocation in the South.
3. Mining and ranching provided sources of wealth.

B. Political factors

(Domestic)

1. States' rights conflicted with federal supremacy.
2. Slave crisis necessitated compromises in the territories.
3. Reconstruction plans and problems challenged the nation.

(Foreign)

1. International contacts, other than in Europe, opened up trading opportunities and the acquisitions of territories.

C. Sociological

1. Sectional outlooks were unresolved.
2. Inadequate resolution of black and white problems produced lasting tensions.
3. Post-Civil War political morality reached low ebb.

D. Geographical

1. Populated East and West drew closer together.
2. Settlement of West emphasized farming, mining, ranching, etc.
3. Unique land forms challenged settlers.

IV. Rise of Industrialization and Big Business (1870's-1890's)

A. Economic influences

1. Business consolidated.
2. The money question generated various suggestions and programs.
3. Overseas markets developed.
4. Labor movement exerted pressures.

B. Political factors

1. Majority of reform attempts failed.
2. Republican political philosophy dominated.
3. Third parties reflected growing discontent.

C. Sociological

1. Urbanization and new patterns of living emerged.
2. Education was broadened.
3. Immigration accelerated as points of origin shifted.

D. Geographical

1. "The Frontier" ended.
2. The utilization of natural resources heightened.

V. Twentieth Century (through World War I, 1900-1920)

A. Economic influences

1. Competition for overseas markets increased.
2. "Progressive" pressure for regulation of big business accelerated.
3. Laissez-faire was challenged by governmental attempts to regulate business.

B. Political influences

1. Progressivism's demands expanded.
2. The electorate heightened its participation in government.
3. Wartime limitations were placed on democratic processes.
4. Imperialism was challenged.

C. Sociological influences

1. Immigration reached its peak.
2. The needs of the economically disadvantaged were brought to the nation's attention.
3. A war to end war was fought.

D. Geographical influences

1. War demanded abandonment of conservation practices.

VI. Twentieth Century (From Prosperity to Depression, 1920's - 1930's)

A. Economic influences

1. Production heights set in the twenties reached depths in the thirties.
2. U. S. emerged from debtor to creditor status.
3. Monetary policy experienced change.
4. Abandonment of laissez-faire was replaced by government-stimulated recovery.

B. Political influences

1. Disenchantment with world involvement increased.
2. The federal government was forced to assume an expanded role.

C. Sociological influences

1. Affluence changed to deprivation.

2. Shift occurred from self-sufficiency to governmental dependency.
3. Mechanization effected a strong impact on American values.

D. Geographical influences

1. Attempts were made to re-institute conservation practices in the 1930's.

VII. Twentieth Century (1940's to the present)

A. Economic influences

1. Growing costs of government programs were reflected in higher tax rates.
2. Continuing military production stimulated the economy.
3. Increasing scientific and technological developments required economic adjustments.

B. Political influences

1. Federal government increased its involvement in welfare programs.
2. Increased federal power meant increasing centralization.
3. A third force (neutralist bloc) grew from a bi-polarized world.
4. The U. S. assumed a leadership role in the United Nations as it sought to meet world problems.

C. Sociological influences

1. The family role in an urban setting progressively changed.
2. A growing youth "rebellion" reflected disenchantment with the "establishment".
3. Population problems proliferated.
4. Three wars disrupted life patterns.
5. A global outlook conditioned American thought.

D. Geographical influences

1. Space frontier was probed.
2. Pollution problems reached staggering proportions.

AMERICAN HISTORY AND GOVERNMENT

ELEVENTH GRADE

The course of study is predicated upon the belief that while all students will not pursue the same professional and occupational goals, they all will be, nevertheless, participating citizens of this nation. Moreover, as citizens who receive its advantages, they are and will be called upon to make contributions to their country. This course should be taught with this view. A conceptual as well as chronological approach is presented to assist in the instruction of this course.

I. COLONIAL YEARS (1607-1783)

CONCEPTS

- A. Subscribing to mercantilism, England encouraged colonies to develop along individualized paths; enforcement of English economic patterns evoked rebellious outcries in America.
(Economic concept)

ACTIVITIES

- A. Have students explain to the class how a colonial grist mill, saw mill, tannery, or slitting and rolling mill worked. Illustrate with diagrams on the blackboard.
- Have one of the better students investigate the tools developed or improved by Americans to conquer the frontier.
- Students could investigate the fur trade to determine whether England or France profited most.
- Have a panel discuss the merits of free trade versus mercantilism.
- Make a chart listing the navigation, trade, and manufacturing acts passed by the British between 1650 and 1775.
- Show how the provisions were favorable and unfavorable to the colonists.
- Debate: The colonists should have accepted some form of increased taxes to help England pay the cost of the French and Indian War.
- Each student could write an editorial depicting the feelings of a colonial editor in regard to the passage of the navigation acts or the passing of the Intolerable Act, or the Boston Tea Party, etc.
- Debate: The Americans could not have won the war without foreign aid.

I. COLONIAL YEARS (1607-1783)

CONCEPTS

- B. Salutary neglect led to growing political independence in America; British attempts to reassert control were met with opposition.
(Domestic political concept)

French and Spanish contacts influenced colonial development.
(Foreign political concept)

ACTIVITIES

Have students list at least 10 common uses of metals which made the settlers dependent on the production of the outside world.

- B. Have students make a chart listing the various colonies as self-governing, proprietary, and royal.

The class could plan and carry out the typical procedure followed in a New England town meeting.

The teacher should lecture on the wars in Europe and America prior to 1754, (i.e., King George's War, Queen Anne's War, etc.)

Each student could make two time lines showing the events that happened in Europe on one, and those events in America on the other, so that the students can see the relationship.

A student could make a report pointing out the strategic location of French forts in North America and the important battles that took place at each. A large scale map should be used in giving the report.

Two students, one a loyalist and the other a patriot, could stage an argument on the question of independence from England.

I. COLONIAL YEARS (1607-1783)

CONCEPTS

ACTIVITIES

After the class has read the Declaration, an open discussion could be held where such questions, as "What basic principles of government does the Declaration of Independence mention?" and of the 27 actions of the King that are listed and condemned, "What are the specific acts to which they refer?" can be answered.

Each student could write a paper making a comparison of changes made in the Declaration with those of a country struggling for freedom today.

A committee could investigate and report to the class the comparison of the methods of warfare of the Revolutionary War with that of World War II.

Speeches could be made for or against:

- (1) securing military assistance
- (2) raising money
- (3) the handling of military affairs

A short oral report could be given concerning the value of the Indians to the British during the war.

Have an oral report on the methods of naval warfare during the Revolutionary War.

Models could be made of guns, ships, forts, etc.

CONCEPTS

REFERENCES

ACTIVITIES

A chart could be made that would show which foreign countries contributed to the fight for independence and how much aid each gave.

In an open class discussion the topic of why the winning of American independence has been of such significance to the world.

Stage the 3 Act Play:
"Peter Zenger and the Freedom of the Press"

Write an editorial for a colonial or British paper on the issue of the Proclamation of 1763. Be sure to tell whether you are writing as an American or an Englishman.

I. COLONIAL YEARS (1607-1783)

CONCEPTS

- C. European-modeled culture was subtly becoming "Americanized". (Sociological concept)

ACTIVITIES

- C. The teacher or students could lecture briefly on the world background of civilization in America, i.e., the early civilizations, Rise of Christianity, the Feudal System, the Crusades, Renaissance, etc.

The students could begin a time line to show evidence of their knowledge of inventions, issues, progress of people, etc.

Students could make short oral reports on the lives of the early explorers.

A committee could report what made a man an aristocrat in the southern, middle, and New England colonies.

Debate: Americans are more class conscious today than in colonial times.

An interested artistic student could sketch the clothing of such people as soldiers, colonial men, women, and children of colonial times.

A student could make a short oral report on the colonial methods of punishing lawbreakers.

A student might investigate the Peter Zenger case and report his findings to the class.

A bulletin board display of pictures and cartoons could compare life in the schools of colonial times with that of today. This could be a project for two students.

I. COLONIAL YEARS (1607-1783)

CONCEPTS

ACTIVITIES

A round table discussion could be held on the subject of religious practices in the New England colonies, Middle and Southern colonies.

A mural or a series of cartoons could be used to depict the events of this period.

The students could write short biographical sketches of the important military leaders of the war and the part that each played.

A committee could report to the class on methods of propaganda used to bring neutral Americans to the cause of independence. All types of propaganda could be discussed by the class at this time.

D. Moving ever westward, the frontier presented the American with unique geographic challenges.
(Geographic concept)

D. Review the important areas of the old world by having the students locate them on a map or globe.

On an outline map of the western hemisphere students might indicate the possessions of England, Spain, Portugal, France, Holland, and Sweden.

Have a chart made that would show the chief products of the New England, Middle and Southern colonies.

Have students make a relief map of the 13 English colonies.

On an outline map of North America the students can show the British and French claims as they were about 1750. On the same map they could show the extent of the British territory in 1763.

REFERENCES

Have the student indicate on an outline map of North America the principle military campaigns of the American Revolution. Locate the ten most important battles of the war.

On a map of the United States draw the boundary lines that were set by the Treaty of Paris in 1783. Locate the important cities of today that were already settled by 1783. Show the states that existed in 1783 and the area that belonged to Spain at the end of the Revolutionary War.

II. FEDERALISM AND EXPANDING DEMOCRACY (1783-1840's)

CONCEPTS

- A. Innovations contributed to manufacturing, transportation, and communication industries as economic growth characterized the new nation.
(Economic concept)

ACTIVITIES

- A. Imagine yourself a farmer in western Massachusetts with a mortgage on your land. You had no "hard money" to pay the interest, and your creditors have hailed you into court. Write a letter to your representative in Boston urging him to work for laws to help you. What kind of laws will you ask for?

Draw a cartoon showing the troubles of American merchants after the War for Independence.

Prepare an exhibit of early U.S. coins or stamps. Give any interesting details about them that you can.

Write a report or give a talk on one or more of the following:

- a) "The Industrial Revolution in England."
What was it? How did it start?
What changes did it make in the lives of the workers? What problems did it create? What advances did it bring?
- b) "Steamboat Days on the Rivers"

11. FEDERALISM AND EXPANDING DEMOCRACY (1783-1840's)

CONCEPTS

ACTIVITIES

Draw a cartoon or write an editorial that might have been used in the struggle over the ratification of the Constitution.

Make a chart of the various "steps toward union", from the New England Confederation to the Constitution. For each step give: the date, purpose, colonies or states involved, and if possible, some of the leaders.

Find out and report on:

- (a) How many people represent your state in Congress
- (b) The names of your senators and the representatives from your district
- (c) How long they have served in Congress
- (d) The names of committees of which they are members

Report on the U.S. Mail Service. Tell about its beginnings in colonial days and how it has developed.

Visit a naturalization ceremony at a federal court. Describe it to the class. How do you think the ceremony would have made you feel if you had been an applicant for U.S. citizenship? Describe how a person may become a U.S. citizen.

CONCEPTS

ACTIVITIES

Make a list of five activities of the federal government which are not clearly mentioned in the Constitution. Opposite each, quote the part of the Constitution from which our government gets its implied power to carry out the activity.

The Bill of Rights we are studying is a group of guarantees given us by our federal government. Look up the bill of rights in your state constitution. What similarities do you find?

Report to the class on a session of Congress you may have attended, or a visit to the White House, the National Capitol, or the Supreme Court Building.

Clip from one daily newspaper all the items where there are references to activities of the federal government. Mount them and underline the references. Opposite each clipping tell whether the right of the federal government to engage in the activity described is actually enumerated in the Constitution, or is an implied power.

Dramatize a Congressional Committee discussing a new tariff bill. Make sure that the North, South, and West are all represented.

Imagine that you were in Washington, D.C. in March of 1829. Write a letter describing the inauguration of Jackson.

CONCEPTS

ACTIVITIES

"Tippecanoe and Tyler, too" was a campaign slogan of 1840. Start a collection of such slogans and add to it as you learn about the various elections.

Read any three of the following selections from Commager and Nevins, The Heritage of America; then write two or three sentences about each, telling the impression it left with you.

Commager, The Heritage of America
"Andrew Jackson is Inaugurated President" (#134)
"Liberty and Union" (#135)
"Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too" (#136)
"Mr. Webster Kills Seventeen Roman Proconsuls" (#137)
"John Quincy Adams is No More" (#138)

C. National self-assertion highlighted differences in international aspirations and produced conflicts.
(Foreign political concept)

C. A committee could dramatize the Cabinet meeting in which John Quincy Adams argued that we should issue the Monroe Doctrine ourselves.

Write a newspaper account of Andrew Jackson's raid on Florida.

Make a two-column chart showing in the first column European threats to American shipping from 1803 to 1812, and in the second column steps taken by the U.S. to combat them.

C. Make a list of five or six of the War Hawks, giving the section of the country from which each came. Explain what they wanted.

C. Butterfield, The American Past, p. 52
Encyclopedia of American History

II. FEDERALISM AND EXPANDING DEMOCRACY (1783-1840's)

CONCEPTS

- D. "Spiritual" activity heightened as Utopian societies were formed, religious movements proliferated, and slavery was challenged. (Sociological concept)

ACTIVITIES

What relation did their demands have to each area represented?

A debate could be held on: Resolved, that the U.S. should have gone to war with France instead of Great Britain in 1812.

- D. Write a report or give an oral report on Brigham Young.

Contrast in a discussion the basic differences between Charles Fourier's Brook Farm, Mass., and Robert Owen's New Harmony, Indiana.

Have a student attempt to secure research on a question such as "How did the missionaries to the Oregon Country contribute to securing that area for the nation?"

Short oral report could be given on one or both of the following: the story of the Oregon Trail or the Mormon Trek. The Donner Party serves as an additional interesting topic.

A student might make a bar graph showing the growth of population on each section from 1790-1850. Both the white and Negro populations should be shown.

Prepare a special report on one of the cooperative or communal societies such as Shaker communities at Mt. Lebanon, N. Y., Shaker town, Ky.

II. FEDERALISM AND EXPANDING DEMOCRACY (1783-1840's)

CONCEPTS

- E. Art and literature reflected an increasing spirit of national self-awareness. (Sociological concept)

ACTIVITIES

- E. Either in class or given to an able student, one or several students could note the similarities and differences between current American literature and that of a hundred years ago. One could use specific examples, for example, the novels of Cooper and the poetry of James Russell Lowell and Stephen Vincent Benet.

Read a selection from a major work of one of the following: Irving, Cooper, Bryant, Melville, Emerson, and Thoreau. Did the chosen selections reflect in any way the period in which they were written? If so, how? Did the selections show in any way what kind of man the author was? If so, how?

Does the music of Stephen Foster reflect in any way the period in which he lived? If so, how?

Pick out whom you think as the outstanding author, painter, sculptor, architect, composer, or actor of the period. Justify and give a brief biographical sketch of your choice.

Have a student ascertain why the public library is distinctively an American institution.

Describe as fully as possible what is meant by the "march of the American mind" in this period.

II. FEDERALISM AND EXPANDING DEMOCRACY (1783-1840's)

CONCEPTS

- F. Large and diverse masses were secured and initial attempts were made to survey and exploit them. (Geographical concept)

ACTIVITIES

- F. Have each student make a map of the Western Hemisphere showing the area included in the Monroe Doctrine.

Have students make a map of the U.S. showing the approximate boundaries between the sections. It could include the main agricultural and industrial products of each section.

On a chart, summarize the domestic and foreign problems that westward expansion created for the U.S. List the territories the U. S. acquired, the problems these acquisitions brought, and how these problems were solved.

The students could make a map indicating the position of the frontier from 1650 to 1880.

Suppose that you were going to move from northern New York to southern Wisconsin in 1840. What topographical differences would you have to adjust to?

Suppose you are an agent for an Oregon immigration society. Present five reasons why settlers should go to Oregon.

Indicate on a map of the U.S. the chief industrial cities in 1850. In which sections of the country were they located?

On an outline map of the U.S. show the principal industries and products of the various regions of the country in 1840.

III. CIVIL WAR AND RECONSTRUCTION (1850's-1870's)

CONCEPTS

A. Economic divergency North and South was basic to the civil conflict; defeat brought southern economic dislocation. (Economic concept)

ACTIVITIES

A. Have a student report on the difference between a paper blockade and an effective blockade.
Have a student make a chart or graph comparing the numbers of military personnel, populations, miles of railroads, industries, and ships.

Have each student write a short research paper on this question of economic effect of the war on the South. They should include the effects on agriculture, industry, slaves and white labor, the plantation system, etc.

A chart comparing the losses and the cost of the war of the North and South could be presented to the class.

Give a report on one of the industries that has become important in the South since the reconstruction period.

Write an advertisement for a business magazine of the late 1800's urging northern textile manufacturers to move South. Point out the advantages which the South can offer.

Report on new methods of agriculture that have appeared during the last hundred years. Are more or fewer people employed on the farms? Where and how are the products marketed? How do today's prices compare with those of the 1890's, for example?

Make a study of the race distribution in your own state. What fraction of the population is Negro? Is Negro population increasing or decreasing? Where is it concentrated? Are there evidences of racial discrimination?

By reference to newspaper accounts, and by interviewing older persons, obtain examples of activities directed against those suspected of German sympathies in World War I.

Make a chart showing five ways in which the Theodore Roosevelt administration tried to protect the public welfare. In each case describe the steps which were taken.

Tell the class about some of the leaders of the movement for more rights for women: Lucy Stone, Lucretia Mott, Frances E. Willard, Anna Howard Shaw, Carrie Chapman Catt, or others.

Give a talk on "Teddy Roosevelt and His Family".

Dramatize the meeting between Roosevelt and Pinchot overseas. Bring out both Roosevelt's experiences as a big game hunter and Pinchot's revelation of Taft's failures.

Write the story of "The Victory over Yellow Fever". Tell about the work of Walter Reed and other medical researchers in the fight against yellow fever.
