ABSTRACT

This working paper presents a twelve-part paradigm for testing the level of concept attainment in language arts. Items were selected for three topics: words, words in sentences, and connected discourse. Within each topic concepts presented in the middle elementary grades were identified, and ten concepts were randomly selected for each topic. Each concept was analyzed to determine its intrinsic attributes, definition, examples, supraordinate and subordinate concepts, and its relationship to another selected concept. Twelve items, one matching each task in the schema, were developed for each concept. The items were presented in the form resulting from item-tryouts and revision. An appendix provides a key to the correct answers for these items. (Author/DI)

STATEMENT OF FOCUS

The Wisconsin Research and Development Center for Cognitive Learning focuses on contributing to a better understanding of cognitive learning by children and youth and to the improvement of related educational practices. The strategy for research and development is comprehensive. It includes basic research to generate new knowledge about the conditions and processes of learning and about the processes of instruction, and the subsequent development of research-based instructional materials, many of which are designed for use by teachers and others for use by students. These materials are tested and refined in school settings. Throughout these operations behavioral scientists, curriculum experts, academic scholars, and school people interact, insuring that the results of Center activities are based soundly on knowledge of subject matter and cognitive learning and that they are applied to the improvement of educational practice.

This Working Paper is from the Project on the Structure of Concept Attainment Abilities in Program 1 and from the Quality Verification Program. The Concept Attainment staff took primary initiative in identifying basic concepts in social studies at intermediate grade levels, while the Quality Verification Program assisted in developing tests to measure concept achievement and identifying reference tests for cognitive abilities. The tests will be used to study the relationships among cognitive abilities and learned concepts in various subject matter areas. The outcome of the Project will be a formulation of a model of structure of abilities in concept attainment in a number of subjects, including mathematics, science, and social studies, as well as language arts.

ABSTRACT

Using a 12-part paradigm for testing level of concept attainment, items were constructed for three topics in language arts--words, words in sentences, and connected discourse. Within each topic, concepts presented in the middle elementary grades were identified and 10 concepts randomly selected for each topic. Twelve items, one matching each task in the schema, were developed for each concept. The items were presented in the form resulting from item-tryouts and revision.

ITEMS TO TEST LEVEL OF ATTAINMENT OF LANGUAGE ARTS
CONCEPTS BY INTERMEDIATE-GRADE CHILDREN

Introduction

The general objectives of the Concept Attainment Abilities Project of the Wisconsin Research and Development Center for Cognitive Learning are as follows:

1. To identify basic concepts in language arts, mathematics, social studies, and science appropriate at the Fourth-Grade level.
2. To develop tests to measure achievement of these concepts.
3. To identify reference tests for cognitive abilities.
4. To study the relationships among levels of concept attainment in various subject matter areas and cognitive abilities.
5. To formulate a model of abilities in concept attainment.

The tests which were developed to measure achievement of selected language arts concepts are contained in this paper. Tests for selected concepts in social studies, mathematics, and science are contained in other Working Papers.

The nature of each item of the test was determined with respect both to content and to type of task involved. Thirty language arts concepts were selected for inclusion in the test. Three major topics were chosen within the field of language arts and associated concepts identified subsequently. Ten concepts were randomly selected from each set of concepts related to the three areas; in all 30 concepts were selected. The concepts selected for inclusion in the study are listed alphabetically within topic in Table 1. Each concept was analyzed to determine its intrinsic attributes, definition, examples, supraordinate and subordinate concepts, and its relationship to another selected concept. A detailed description of the method by which language arts concepts were selected and analyzed is given in Working Paper No. 59 (Golub, Fredrick, Nelson, & Frayer, in press).

The tasks represented in the test items were based on a paradigm for testing level of concept attainment (Frayer, Fredrick, & Klausmeier, 1969). The twelve tasks used from this paradigm were:

1. Given the name of an attribute, select the example of the attribute.
2. Given an example of an attribute, select the name of the attribute.
3. Given the name of a concept, select the example of the concept.
4. Given the name of a concept, select the nonexample of the concept.
5. Given an example of a concept, select the name of the concept.
6. Given the name of a concept, select the relevant attribute.
7. Given the name of a concept, select the irrelevant attribute.
8. Given the meaning of a concept, select the name of the concept.
9. Given the name of a concept, select the meaning of the concept.
10. Given the name of a concept, select the supraordinate concept.
11. Given the name of a concept, select the subordinate concept.
12. Given the names of two concepts, select the statement which shows the relationship between them.

The test specifications called for construction of 12 items for each concept, one of each task type. Since there were 30 concepts and 12 task types, it was anticipated that a total of 360 unique items would be constructed. However, since no subordinate concept was identified for the concepts explanation, heading of a letter, paragraph, return address, and thank you letter, there is no item number 11 for these concepts. Thus, there is a total of 355 rather than 360 items.

This Working Paper contains the items listed by concept; i.e., the twelve items, one for each task type, are presented for each concept. The answer keys for the items are presented in the Appendix.

The items as presented here are the result of initial item writing, critique, tryout on a large sample of students completing Fifth Grade, and revision based on item analysis results. It should be noted that the items are ordered by concept in this Working Paper for the convenience of the reader. In the tryout, items for several concepts were randomly ordered and tested as a unit to avert the learning effect which would possibly occur if all items for a particular concept were presented sequentially. A maximum of 72 items was given in a test sitting.

A future Technical Report will describe the procedures used in item development and statistical characteristics of the items and the 42 subscales into which these 355 items are subdivided; there are 30 concept scales (one for each concept across the 12 tasks) and 12 task scales (one for each task totaled across the 30 concepts). Note that each item appears in two different scales--one concept scale and one task scale.
