ABSTRACT

This annotated bibliography lists four-hundred and twenty-six social science journals and periodicals. It was designed for social studies/social science students, faculty, and scholars interested in keeping up in their field. All social science disciplines, which include anthropology, economics, geography, history, political science, and sociology, are represented, with the exception of psychology. In addition, journals concerned with area studies and other topics are included. Selection criteria were based upon including all social science journals written exclusively in English subscribed to by Millersville State College. Classified by subject, journals are grouped according to: 1) a general category (for journals general in scope); 2) area studies (for journals concerned with specific countries); 3) various topics (that include journals under cartography, Chicanos, civil liberties, demography, folklore, international affairs, law, social studies education and urban studies; and 4) specific social science categories. Title entries provide information on publisher, number of issues per year, and a one sentence descriptive annotation. (SJM)

Annotated and Categorized Bibliography of Journals in Social Sciences and Social Studies in Ganser Library, Millersville State College, Millersville, Pa.

This annotated/categorized bibliography was conceived to meet the needs of social studies/social science students and faculty for a listing of journals and periodicals other than alphabetically by title. Unless one is familiar with most of the journals in a particular discipline, locating materials can be a time-consuming and sometimes frustrating experience. While periodical indexes will direct the inquirer to specific articles and journals, there are often times when he would like to locate and browse in journals related to a general area of interest or concern. This bibliography should be helpful for this kind of reading.

Within the framework of the information explosion, journals and periodicals proliferate so rapidly, that unless one is a professional librarian, it is difficult to maintain familiarity with what is entering the field. This bibliography should be helpful not only to students who are just beginning to use these sources, but to scholars who are interested in keeping up with what is being added to their fields of study.

All of the journals in social sciences currently subscribed to by Ganser Library, Millersville State College have been examined for inclusion in the bibliography. They have been placed in categories which will be described below.

The social science disciplines which are represented includes anthropology, economics, geography, history, political science, and sociology. Although recognized as a social science, psychology has not been included because there is such a wide variety of special interest areas within the general field. In addition, sources written exclusively in a language other than English have not been included.

The categories as listed below present an overview of how the compiler approached the categorization of the journals.

Where necessary, explanatory remarks are included.

1. GENERAL: This category includes journals so general in scope that they couldn't be placed in any of the specific categories. They may also be interdisciplinary in nature without any one overriding theme.
2. AFRICA: Journals primarily concerned with the African continent and its nations. See Number 7, BLACK STUDIES for journals with that emphasis, including some which have an African/other nation/continent orientation.
3. ANTHROPOLOGY: Note the next entry, ARCHAEOLOGY as a separate category.
