ABSTRACT

This report indicates to principals that their schools probably have a marihuana problem; outlines measures necessary to the establishment of an effective marihuana prevention program; and suggests ways to handle the marihuana smoker once he has been identified. To help the principal focus upon, understand, and take constructive action with respect to the marihuana problem, the report first attempts to educate the large number of high school principals who assume that no marihuana problems exist in their schools. It then outlines the necessary foundations on which the principal and others should construct a program designed to meet the needs of a particular school and community. Finally, the policy formation and its implementation and the role of the principal in a situation involving a student who has been caught with marihuana are dealt with. This last section emphasizes the legal responsibilities of the principal and the various ways in which he can exercise good judgment in the decisionmaking process without forfeiting his legal duties. Appendixes contain texts of federal drug laws; a State-by-State survey of marihuana laws and penalties; and guidelines for establishing a school board policy on drug discovery. (JF)

INTRODUCTION

The object of this report is to describe the principal's role with respect to marihuana use and abuse by students in high school. Although this report is aimed primarily at marihuana use, other drugs are mentioned only to the extent that they too enter into the picture of what is called the present "drug problem". Furthermore, this report is not recommended to the entire body of school personnel who may be seeking suggestions for an all-encompassing drug program but rather to secondary school principals who are concerned about student marihuana use.

Marihuana usage is focused upon here as national statistics indicate that this drug is the most popular among students. The secondary level is generally the area of concern here as it appears that it is during these years that most students decide whether or not to use marihuana. The principal is chosen as he is gradually being given greater and greater responsibility for formulating and implementing drug programs and policies within his particular school. His role, then, is truly a crucial one if any significant degree of control is to be gained over this controversial and disturbing problem.

To help the principal focus upon, to understand, and to take constructive action with respect to the marihuana problem, this report has been divided into three sections. The first part is aimed at the alarming number of high school principals who assume that there exists no marihuana problem in their schools. Many of these administrators simply have poor educational vision.

The second section is aimed at describing measures to prevent marihuana use at the high school level. This section is not a general description of the kinds of activities that need to be incorporated into a drug education program; that information is available in recent journals, government reports, state board recommendations, local board program outlines, and elsewhere. Part II simply outlines the necessary foundations upon which the principal and others should construct a program designed to meet the needs of a particular school and community.

Part III is an attempt to deal with policy formation and implementation concerning a student who has been caught with or using marihuana. Although there is an abundance of material concerning preventive programs, there is presently a considerable lack of material concerning the issue of what is to be done once a student has been identified as a marihuana user. To help fill this gap, this report relies heavily upon the legal responsibilities of the principal and the various ways in which he can implement good judgement into the decision-making process without forfeiting his legal duties.

In a nutshell, then, this report is intended to indicate to principals that their schools may very well have a marihuana problem. In addition, the report suggests certain measures necessary to the establishment of an effective marihuana prevention program. Finally, it suggests ways in which to handle the marihuana smoker once he has been identified.

PART I "WHAT MAKES YOU THINK THAT MY SCHOOL HAS A MARIHUANA PROBLEM?"

Before any principal is able to assume the role of an educational leader, he must have the ability to comprehend and interpret his environment, specifically his school and community. Too often, principals brush off the marihuana issue by saying that marihuana is an evil which is elsewhere. "There's no real problem here in my school. We don't have any drug users. My kids are good kids."

A. Use of Marihuana vs. Other Drugs

Many principals fail to understand that marihuana smokers are not just the youngsters in the ghetto or those with deep psychological disturbances. Although use of the more potent drugs such as morphine, heroin, LSD, and others appears to be generally restricted to certain socio-economic groups, marihuana is found everywhere in anybody's pocket.

I have been horrified as I have gone around this country talking to high school principals...to have them tell me that drugs aren't a problem in their schools...I am convinced that there is no school district in the United States - whether of 400 or 100,000 students - where drugs are not present.¹

There are several factors which account for this incredible failure on the part of many principals to see a marihuana problem in their schools. Generally these factors could be classified under two headings, the cognitive factors and the affective factors. The heading cognitive factors means that many principals are intellectually ignorant about marihuana. They don't know the correct facts and figures. Affective factors mean that certain principals, regardless of whether or not they understand the facts and figures about marihuana, cannot accept the threatening possibility that some of their students might be using it. Such principals believe that marihuana users are juvenile delinquents who will never amount to much.

B. Cognitive Factors

This report does not focus on the physiological or psychological impact that marihuana potentially has on the user as that information is readily available from any one of several government agencies.² The focus here is upon several interesting findings concerning marihuana users which factually refute several beliefs that many high school principals undoubtedly have.

1. How Many?

Some estimates claim that eight to 12 million people have used or are using marihuana in the United States.³ Others claim that the number of users runs as high as 20 million.⁴ However these figures are often misleading as they do not tell us about marihuana use by any specific group of individuals such as our high school population. In addition, such surveys were often hastily planned and carried out with the objective being to shock Americans into believing that practically everyone smokes marihuana.

The most accurate estimate of how many high school students use or have used marihuana was established only about 21 months ago by the

Table 1. National Estimate of H.S. Students Having Used Marihuana One or More Times

Group	Total	Percent		Number (millions)
		Male	Female	Total	Male	Female
Grades 9-12	22	25	20	3.26	1.82	1.44

An obvious indication of this survey is that if one out of every four or five students has used or is using marihuana, we are not talking about a small minority of youngsters. Due to the size of this group, it is quite possible that many schools, if not most, have a certain number of students who have had marihuana experiences. A second significant implication to be drawn from this survey is that the belief that most marihuana smokers are male is invalid. One may assume that most principals who claim that their schools are nearly immune from marihuana users think more often of male smokers than of female smokers.

Principals must also realize that this considerable number of student marihuana users is not a stagnant figure. It has risen sharply and appears to be continually rising. For example, the number of marihuana arrests made by the United States Bureau of Customs in reaction to the increase of marihuana use rose 362% from 1965 to 1970.⁶ Arrests made by the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, an organization concerned primarily with sale rather than use, rose 80% from 1965 to 1968.⁷ Perhaps most astounding is the fact that arrests made at the state level increased 1000% from 1965 to 1970.⁸ Surely a principal would be foolish to assume that the marihuana problem is "working itself out".

2. Isn't Marihuana Confined to Urban Schools?

Despite the fact that millions of high school students have used or are using marihuana and that this number appears to be rising, many principals would say "so what? What does that have to do with my school? We're not in a ghetto and we don't have major disciplinary problems."

Here again is another fallacy. The following table serves to demonstrate this fact.⁹

Table 2. Type Community and Marihuana Use
(Florida High School Seniors)

	Percentage Marihuana Users
Large City (250,000)	17%
Medium (25,000-50,000)	14%
Small (<25,000)	9%
Rural	8%

These figures would then indicate that marihuana use is not something which occurs only "downtown". It is also quite prevalent in suburban areas and exists to a certain extent in most small and rural areas.

⁹ National Commission on Marihuana and Drug Abuse, Marihuana: A Signal of Misunderstanding, Appendix, Vol. 1 (Washington: Government Printing Office, 1972), p. 290

3. Aren't Most of the Smokers "Poor Kids"?

Another foolish assumption is that only students of low income families smoke marihuana. Examine the following table.¹⁰

Table 3. Family Income and Marihuana Experience Among Florida High School Students (N = 911)

Family Income	Non-users	Users	Totals
Less than $4,000	91%	9%	100%
$4,000 to $7,999	88%	12%	100%
$8,000 to $11,999	88%	12%	100%
More than $12,000	80%	20%	100%

4. Isn't Marihuana a College Problem?

Although many surveys reveal that marihuana is used to a considerable degree at the college level,¹¹ an important question remains. When do students start? The answer, generally, is in high school. The following chart displays this dramatic increase during the secondary years.¹²

¹¹ ibid., pp. 283-4

¹² ibid., p. 284

5. But We Don't Have Any "Pushers" In My School.

This last belief is equally pathetic. The reason why this is placed last among the cognitive factors which affect the principal's awareness is that it borders on the affective factors; namely, kids get marihuana in a dark alley from some hippie.

Before turning to the affective factors, however, examine briefly the following table.¹³

Table 4. How Marihuana Was Obtained the First Time It Was Used by Youth (under 18)

How Obtained	Percent
Bought it	5.1%
It was given to me	78.5%
Other way	7.0%
No answer	9.8%

As pushers usually sell, a reasonable assumption to be drawn from Table 4 is that students obtain marihuana from close friends free of charge. This assumption has been substantiated by further research.¹⁴

What then do these recent findings tell high school principals?

1. A significant number of students have used or are using marihuana.
2. Marihuana is not simply a "ghetown" problem.
3. Students who use marihuana represent all economic levels, not just the lower income group.
4. Students generally begin using marihuana in high school.

¹³ ibid., p. 279

¹⁴ ibid., p. 280

5. Marihuana users in high school are not generally supplied by pushers.

Thomas Shannon, addressing the San Diego State College Drug Abuse Workshop on the school's legal position, stated:

We are dismayed over reports from the probation department and the schools detailing not only the great number of kids involved in drugs or narcotics violations, but also giving evidence that there is no clear pattern of family background, neighborhood environment or economic status.¹⁵

In fact, one could argue more strongly and state that marihuana smokers by and large are those who come from the wealthier families.

Most of today's users are from better than average homes, have higher than average intelligence, and have money.¹⁶

However, regardless of whether principals feel that drugs are limited to use by the rich or poor, the intelligent or the less intelligent, research substantiates the fact that marihuana users are everywhere.

In this regard, marihuana use is unique:

Even the kids are scared of LSD. But they are not scared of marihuana. More and more are trying it; more and more are using it.¹⁷

It is here that we encounter the most difficult factor which affects a principal's willingness to recognize and deal with the marihuana problem - his values. All the facts which abound in national and local research projects are of little value if the principal does not believe them.

C. Affective Factors

1. Principal's Values

A recent newspaper article discussed a well known New York doctor who gave many of his patients drugs which supposedly increased their work potential. Because some of these patients were nationally known, the article claimed that this story was ...far from the typical picture of rag-tag youths dosing themselves with illegally obtained drugs.¹⁸

Unfortunately many Americans, high school principals included, associate drug users with criminals, hippies, long hair, and the riffraff from society. Although the presentation of data refutes many of these assumptions, principals need more than facts. They must be willing to change their beliefs on the basis of these facts. They must be willing to temper their value judgements.

Once a principal has the facts and the myth surrounding the misnamed "killer weed" has been reduced, he must ...understand that a youngster who has experimented with drugs is not necessarily degenerate or unstable, but perhaps merely a normal, well adjusted youngster who is responding to the pressures of his environment in a way which is completely understandable.¹⁹

In order to reach this understanding about students who use marihuana, principals need to

...analyze their views regarding different life styles and the all too common tendency to overreact and generalize about all young people who think and act in untraditional ways...Common myths - such as all unkempt people with long hair are drug addicts, or that those who inhabit communes all use narcotics - need to be examined.²⁰

²⁰ James J. Van Patten, "Education in Relation to Drug Use and Abuse", School and Community, Vol. 100, No. 2340 (March, 1972), p. 182

It is very difficult to determine precisely why some principals who have the facts fail to see the full implications and urgency of the marihuana issue. Many of them see the issue as a national problem but fail to recognize the fact that it could also be a local problem. Perhaps much of their lack of ability to comprehend the issue is undoubtedly based on their lack of ability to understand those who use marihuana. What probably prohibits this understanding is a value barrier which blocks any real, sincere effort to explore that which appears to be alien and possibly threatening, namely, young marihuana users. The challenges made by young people to tradition can be frightening as well as exciting.

Art Linkletter, who has been fighting this drug problem especially hard since the death of his daughter due to drugs, recently pointed out what happened to him when he pushed aside his values long enough to take a good hard look at young drug users:

And then I discovered the most fundamental fact about the drug world; that is, the pushers are your children and my children. Not sinister, underground, characters lurking in alleys, but short-haired, clean-looking, bright-eyed boys and girls who have become influenced by drugs and have become pushers.. They are not criminals, I discovered, but patients. They are victims.²¹

To discover that which Linkletter described is unfortunately not simply a matter of casually looking. It involves the commitment and the desire on the part of the looker to see and to understand. A principal must want to see what is to be seen; otherwise, it will appear not to be there. This "discovery", therefore, is not like stumbling upon a lost gold mine. Assessing and altering values is a difficult and delicate process which can only begin internally.

²¹ Linkletter, op. cit., p. 14

2. Values of Those within the School

Once the principal has realistically realigned his beliefs about young marihuana users, he must then determine what the values are of his superintendent, the local school board, the faculty, and the students. Even the most open-minded, democratic principal will soon encounter serious opposition from "above and below" if those operating within the school do not share the same opinions about marihuana users.

If the principal finds that any segment of those who directly affect the school believes, for example, that marihuana necessarily leads to LSD, that their school has no drug problem, or that offenders caught smoking marihuana should be hanged in the town square, this principal will know who is in need of facts. After these facts have been presented and discussed, unjust values and biases will come under question and undergo alteration. It should be noted that the principal is not expected to act alone in assessing the school climate with respect to marihuana use. It is not a case of St. George being the only one willing or able to slay the dragon. Assistance should be recruited both from within and outside the school.

3. Values of Those outside the School

Once a realistic and honest picture within the school has been established concerning marihuana and its users, the principal will need to lead some sort of value assessment team into the community in order to obtain an accurate description of how the general surrounding public views the marihuana issue. Again, principals are likely to encounter some resistance.

In a recent study of a predominantly black, inner-city high school, the evaluative report claimed the following:

...parents refuse to acknowledge that their children may be involved...It will be the other guy who gets hooked.²²

The point that the principal must stress here is that the school is not storming the community in search of possible marihuana users. The school is not out to "get" anybody. Instead, it is seeking to increase understanding and cooperation in order to deal more effectively with a very serious problem. This problem is neither simply the community's nor the school's. It is their problem.

Once a mutual understanding about marihuana and its users has been established between the school and community, the general concern for marihuana users on a national level must be brought down to the specific case of marihuana users in the local school area. To do this, the principal must assess the extent of the marihuana problem in and around his particular school. Just as his effective leadership will keep communication lines open and promote mutual trust within the school and between the school and the community, his apathy or failure to admit any marihuana problem will cut the school off from the community and increase the potential danger of misinformation and gossip about marihuana.

D. Assessment of the Local Problem

Among other questions, the principal assisted by a representative committee needs to ask the following:

What percentage of the student population has used marihuana?

What percentage used it only once?

What percentage used it more than once but less than 10 times?

²² "Drugs and the Schools: Two Case Studies", Educational Product Report, Vol 3, No. 7 (April, 1970), p. 5

..nat percentage use it monthly? weekly? daily?

When did students begin using marihuana?

Who introduced them to it?

Where is marihuana now obtained? From whom?

What percentage has not yet tried marihuana but intends to?

What percentage will never try marihuana?

Why do students in this community use marihuana?

Is marihuana smoked on school grounds?

Is marihuana exchanged on school grounds?

How effective is the present drug education program (if there is one)?

How effective is the present school marihuana policy (if there is one)?

Although there are many other questions which will naturally arise, these 14 provide initial information concerning the extent of the local marihuana problem. They also provide initial foundations upon which the school and community could build an effective drug education program and develop an effective school policy on marihuana and other drugs.

Naturally, it would be wise for the principal to determine the extent of the marihuana problem outside of his school as well as within it. He should also investigate therefore the other schools in the area, both public and private, elementary as well as secondary. He would also be wise to include in his investigation any neighboring universities and colleges, as well as any prominent youth organizations such as Scouts and church fellowship groups. In addition, he should talk with local medical authorities and the local law enforcement agency. In sum, he must obtain a complete picture of the marihuana picture in his area.

With the local marihuana picture in mind, the principal then needs to consider two courses of action. The first is to help establish a preventive drug education program tailored to meet the specific needs of his school and community. The second is to help formulate a policy to be used as a guideline once a student has been reported as a marihuana user.

PART II MEASURES TO PREVENT ANTICIPATED MARIHUANA USE: DRUG EDUCATION

In the past decade one has witnessed a variety of drug education programs which are based on the assumption that drug use must be stopped before it begins. Even though principals might hear of occasional use of marihuana by particular students, most principals feel that the value of drug education lies in its ability to dissuade possible future users. The Dean of Students at California State College at Long Beach recently stated the following:

Obviously we must deal not merely with individuals who are presently using and abusing but also with potential users, persons who may have a propensity for such experiences. Our concern should be with prevention as well as cure.²³

To meet this need, many schools have some sort of what they call drug education. Perhaps they have a few colorful pamphlets or a couple of movies; perhaps they've had a guest speaker come in or perhaps the school nurse has been officially designated as the person with whom to speak when a drug problem or question arises. However, if mathematics were taught in a similar fashion, it is doubtful if many would call it math education. The point is that most drug education programs are insufficient, sensational, and sporadic. The proof of their ineffectiveness lies in the fact that marihuana use has increased among students.

Even to those schools who have a so-called drug education program is recommended what is outlined in Part I, namely, the assessment of school and community values with regard to marihuana users and the assessment of the local use of marihuana.

There are two criteria which are essential at the outset of any drug education program. Many programs have failed, or are failing, simply because these two necessary conditions have not been satisfactorily met. The conditions are the creation of an open climate and credibility.

A. Open Climate

An open climate is a condition which must be consciously strived for not only in drug education but in all facets of school-community life. Even if the most adequate drug education program exists in a school, it will never be effective unless those parties involved feel free to communicate with each other and to share possibly shocking ideas and opinions. When I mention open climate, I do not mean simply that a school is open if students are permitted to chat in the halls between classes. An open climate suggests that channels of communication be open to all affected by the school: school boards, superintendents, principals, teachers, students, the community, medical authorities, legal agencies, and other formal and informal groups.

A recent survey was conducted at a Maryland high school approximately 15 miles from Washington. From this predominantly white, middle class high school of 3,000 students, 432 randomly selected male and female ninth to eleventh graders were asked several questions regarding their drug education program.²⁴ One of the questions was the following:

If you ever have a problem or a question concerning drugs or drug use, how free would you feel about going to any of the following types of people to talk about your problem: school nurse, teacher, vice-principal, parent, friend?²⁵

Responses were tabulated under "very free", "so-so", and "not very free". The "friend" was naturally the most popular choice for the person with whom another student would speak. The "vice-principal", however, received 63% of the "not very free" vote. Many people would reply that this is quite natural as the vice-principal or principal is a very busy man who doesn't have time to concern himself directly with student problems. He'd like to but he has other more pressing responsibilities. This is truly unfortunate. The principal is in an extremely important position as it is he who is largely responsible for the quality of teaching and learning which occurs in his school. As many students undoubtedly feel that principals are too distant to be concerned with student problems, it is imperative that principals begin to assume the role of the educational leader which means, among other things, that they try to establish an open climate between themselves and the students. This involves more than saying "hello" in the supermarket.

John Langer of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs stated the difficulty of opening lines of communication as follows:

There seems to be a implicit pact among students and teachers that if you don't talk about the problem to each other, each can go on pretending that the other doesn't know it exists. Of course, teachers talk about it to each other, and students talk about it to each other, but somehow, communication between students and teachers on this topic is limited.²⁶

²⁴ Joseph P. Zima and Gene A. Smith, "High School Students, Drugs, and Teachers", School and Society, Vol. 99, No. 2333 (April, 1971), pp. 250-3

²⁶ John H. Langer, "School-Law Enforcement Cooperation"; Guidelines for Drug Abuse Prevention Education, U.S. Department of Justice, Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs (Washington: Government Printing Office, 1970), pp. 14-15

This conversation barrier of which Langer speaks is naturally not limited to teachers and students. It is something behind which the principal may also hide. His role here, as in the local value and problem assessment function, is again one of the initiator. He must attempt to break down these barriers of communication and set an example of openness within his school and community. It would be extremely difficult to imagine a school that enjoyed an open climate with a principal who refused to talk about marihuana or who saw it as only a minor problem of some small minority.

B. Credibility

An open climate is not sufficient by itself for the formation of an effective drug education program. For example, there are many principals whose door is always open to teachers, parents, or students. These administrators encourage open discussion in order to see who stands where on a topic and give school and community members the feeling that they have a voice in the future of their schools. However, when the time arrives for a decision to be made, these principals retire to their office to decide alone. In other words, they feel that their decision will naturally be better than anyone else's. "After all", they think, "that's what I'm paid to do."

The major problem here lies not in the lack of an open climate but rather in the fact that the principal doesn't truly believe in his fellow men. Somehow, he was born to be the leader and leaders inherently make better decisions than followers.²⁷

The key word then is credibility. An open climate which lacks

²⁷ for an excellent description of this type of principal see Thomas J. Sergiovanni and Robert J. Starratt, Emerging Patterns of Supervision: Human Perspectives, (New York: McGraw-Hill Book Company 1971), pp. 94-95 credibility is nothing more than a front for a system where everyone is free to communicate as long as the principal doesn't hear about it.

Let us influence the young by being authentic, open, trusting, and honest. Let us stand up, speak out, be ourselves, and listen.²⁸

The basis of credibility is fact not feeling. Drug education programs which were initiated by a film strip which showed marihuana users suffering among the garbage cans in the alley won't do the trick. In fact, such scare tactics often have the reverse effect. Often,

...because the kids were given misinformation about the harmfulness of marihuana, they have gone to the other extreme in saying it has no harmful effects at all - an allegation which is not true, according to recent findings.²⁹

It must be noted here, however, that many principals are doing their utmost to establish an open climate and the conditions of credibility. They have faith in their fellow men and believe in what they say. Nevertheless, much of what is said about marihuana is completely false.

A good example of the misinformation so prevalent about drugs can be found in the Encyclopedia Britannica, latest edition, regarding marihuana. Look at it. There are at least a half-dozen errors in this statement alone.³⁰

Therefore the principal needs to disseminate the facts in order to create credibility. He must also believe in his fellow men in order to maintain this credibility and to create an open climate.

C. Bases of the Program

Necessary stages to any successful program are planning, implementation, and evaluation. Far too often when principals finally acknowledge that 28 Demos, loc. cit.

29 Linkletter, op. cit., p. 17

30 Demos, op. cit., p. 216

a program is needed,

...it is often because of some sensational incident...which causes community panic and leads in turn to the initiation of ad hoc programs which, hastily conceived and put into action, can do little more than employ scare tactics in an effort to dissuade students from using drugs.³¹

Careful planning, then, is the first important step towards the establishment of an effective program. Here the role of the principal is not one of planner but of coordinator. His concern is not to formulate the program by himself but to involve the members of the school and community in selecting the objectives of the program and the means to achieve those objectives. His concern is one of seeing that the best possible program is implemented, not that his personal ideas are translated into policy.³²

Although this report does not suggest specific materials as these would vary from school to school, the list below enumerates seven common bases to be used as a guideline in the formulation of objectives.

1. Facts

Primary consideration must be given to discussion of facts.

Few issues are so steeped in fallacy, so highly charged by emotional response, and so symbolic of the generation as this one...Too often, I find, both sides of the generation gap are reluctant to let facts interfere with opinions when it comes to discussing the effects of these substances.³³

Therefore, rumors and shouting provide very unstable grounds upon which to build an effective program.

³¹ "Drugs and the Schools: Two Case Studies", op. cit., p. 4

³² A suggested place for a principal to initiate planning would be at the level of local assessment as outlines in Part I.

³³ Lloyd Meeds, "Education: Key to the Drug Problem", Social Education, Vol. 33, No. 6 (Oct., 1969), p. 664

2. Use vs. Abuse

The principal should ensure that the word "abuse" is not coupled as the natural partner with marihuana. Distinction needs to be made between the occasional use of marihuana and abuse. This determination of what is use and abuse must be made on factual information. The word "use", incidentally, should not connote the idea that what is used is harmless. Both terms indicate potential danger; they differ only in degree of harm.

3. Motivational Factors

In a recent article, Robert Elliott pointed out that drug education should "emphasize people, not drugs."³⁴ What Elliott means is that far too many programs are presented completely objectively, coldly, and factually. In addition to the facts and the distinction between use and abuse one needs a close personal examination of the reasons why a student chooses to use or not to use marihuana in the first place.

The current crisis involving drugs illustrates how unsuccessful schools are in assisting students to integrate facts and values. Students have been overwhelmed with facts about drugs and drug usage. For decades, states have required high schools to disseminate information on drugs, alcohol, and tobacco. But the result is simply an increase in experimentation and use.³⁵

Therefore, the following must be included in the school's program:

1. the mood of the individual (joyous, depressed, angry, etc.)
2. the motivation of the smoker (to tranquilize, to become happier, to become more outgoing, to have sexual relationships, etc.)
3. the environment (setting) in which the individual finds or places himself.³⁶

³⁶ Donald J. Wolk, "Youth and Drugs", Social Education, Vol. 33, No. 6 (Oct., 1969), p. 669

4. Decision Making

The entire area of helping individuals to make sound decisions must also be another related focus of the drug education program:

The task is ...to educate, not about the evils of heroin, marihuana, LSD, and the dangers of specific stimulants and depressants, but about people...We must help young people to make informed decisions on the basis of broad general principles.³⁷

The principal has the tremendous opportunity here to share with students, teachers, and others a wealth of good and bad decisions.

5. Laws

Included in any drug education program must be the position of the legal structure with respect to marihuana use. All those involved with the school should have a general understanding of the federal and state laws in addition to any state and/or local policies.

However, it is not suggested that the laws be presented as cold facts of life. Instead, students should participate in investigations of why laws are made, how, and what their purposes are. This is another area which the schools have treated only lightly. Simply mentioning the Declaration of Independence or the Social Security Act is not sufficient.

In addition, the principal should make clear the particular school's policy (if there is one) on the use of marihuana. He should explain his position and the philosophy upon which the policy is based. He should also invite constructive criticism and recommendations for revision if the policy has proven to be ineffective or rigid.

6. Larger Social Problem

Any discussion involving marihuana is bound to open the door to

³⁷ ibid., pp. 666-8

discussing the larger problem of using alcohol, tobacco, coffee, sleeping pills, and countless other accepted household drugs. Unfortunately it is often here where the school population splits into the younger and the older generations. Accusations from students such as "You are all hypocrits when you tell me to stay away from marijuana and you drink gin" are not uncommon. Nor are counter arguments from the adults such as "You are too young to understand what I'm talking about." As Lloyd Meeds stated several years ago, there is no getting around the fact that there is an element in the human makeup that seeks escapism, the negation of reality. This element is no more prominent in American society than others, but is manifest, and is at the root of our problem, in my view.³⁸

Therefore the program cannot be restricted to a discussion of marijuana as if it existed in a vacuum.

7. Alternatives

Finally, the principal must also be concerned with initiating school and community involvement in an effort to find alternatives to using marijuana:

Educators must ask themselves what kind of equivalents can be substituted for potentially destructive use of drugs.³⁹

It is here that the principal will need to be as imaginative and creative as possible. There are countless opportunities to investigate such as sports, student publications, student-teacher debates, and starting a student business. In addition, the principal should look outside as well as within the school for alternatives. Many students who would exchange marijuana use for another more rewarding experience might be "turned-off" by an alternative simply because it was sponsored by the school.

³⁸ Meeds, op. cit., p. 665

In conclusion, it should be stated that it is also the principal's responsibility to see that a continuous evaluation is being made during the program. Although the principal need not do the actual evaluation himself, he should certainly be involved in the representative group which is charged with program assessment.

D. Program Implementation

Many principals differ in opinion on the problem of whether a school's drug education should be a short, intense program or whether it should last the entire academic year. There is also considerable difference of opinion on the question of whether drug education should be a separate course or whether it should be integrated into another course or courses.

1. Short Intense Programs

Principals frequently invite an expert from the medical, legal, or educational field to visit the school in order to speak on marijuana and other drugs. Often the visit is timed with the coming of a vacation and is preceded and followed by various classroom discussions on the subject. The entire school attends the lecture and the community is invited.

However, short intense programs, despite the renown of the speaker or the high cost of the film, are something of which I am very suspicious. First, short programs are an easy way for a principal who is unaware or nonchalant about his school's marijuana problem to quiet the dissatisfaction in the community or central office. When an incident arises, a speaker comes in, an article appears in the local newspaper, and community chatter subsides. The principal is seen as a dedicated administrator who recognizes the problem and is doing something about it. Obviously, this sort of leader neither really cares to see the problem nor does much to solve it.

A second reason to be wary of short programs is related to the belief that only the experts can handle discussions on the marihuana problem. This is false. Although school personnel will need to be trained and to know where to find facts and laws on marihuana, there is no reason why any intelligent and sincere person could not be of great benefit in a discussion of how marihuana is related to use and abuse, motivation, decision making, and the larger social problem of drug use. Perhaps the major reason for believing that only the expert can deal with marihuana is the fact that, by turning the issue over to someone else.. outside of the school, those inside the school can avoid really looking at the problem and taking concrete action to implement solutions.

A final reason why quick programs do not appear to be effective is that they are primarily "hit and miss". The issue is too complex and important to spend only one day a month or one week a year on the marihuana problem. This is like eating only once a week. People need to be free to discuss it anytime and the opportunity to do so should be provided by the school.

2. Ongoing Programs

To date, it is not uncommon for the discussion on marihuana to occur in one of the science classes as it is assumed that marihuana can be analyzed in terms of its chemical substance and possible physiological effects. However, as was outlined in Part II, such a discussion would satisfy only two of the seven ingredients needed in a drug program, namely the facts on marihuana and the distinction between use and abuse. The social context in which marihuana is used and motivational factors are for the most part ignored.

Here is where the principal has another tremendous responsibility. There has always been much debate over what should and what should not be taught in the schools. For example, most Americans agree that the schools should not completely ignore the area of sex education. The present debate now is actually less concerned with the issue of whether or not to teach about sex than it is with the problem of what to teach and how to teach it. The area of sex is only one burning issue with which high school students are concerned. The Viet-Nam War is another. Marihuana is still another.

Therefore, a principal who wishes to deal effectively with the marihuana problem might wish to recommend the initiation of a course which would treat the problems of emotional and physical health.

There must be a massive move toward fully credited courses of study in the health related area - whether you call it health education, social problems, human values is not important. The crisis in narcotics is only one problem. The increasing rate in venereal disease is another; and perhaps the greatest is the ever-increasing number of emotionally ill people in our society. And is health education not a logical place for attacking our problems of air and water pollution, population increase, human survival, and ~~moral and ethical values?~~⁴⁰

Naturally, participation of outside groups would be productive in the course formulation. Outside groups, however, does not imply only professional organizations. For example, if the course topic were the Viet-Nam War, a war veteran could be invited. If the discussion were about drugs, an ex-addict might be asked to visit. As Elliott recommends, "the approach must be varied and community wide."⁴¹

George Demos suggested five years ago:

Let the hippies, the drug users, the militants, and the activists have their say. I would even provide vehicles of communication and sounding boards for their ideas.⁴²

The "vehicle" would be the classroom and its facilities. The "sounding board" would be the school population.

As finding possible solutions to pressing problems is a major ingredient of effective leadership, the principal must endeavor to implement practical and imaginative solutions to the marihuana problem. Whether a school attempts to create a fully credited course or chooses to treat marihuana and its users as part of an already existent course is certainly important. However, the reason for doing anything at all, the objective, is more important, namely, that a realistic attempt be made to cope with some of the problems which amplify the harmful and largely unnecessary generation gap.

E. Two Case Studies of Drug Education Programs

1. Urban, Predominantly Black, High School⁴³

A team of qualified investigators recently attempted to evaluate the drug education program in an urban, public school which was two-thirds black, grades seven through twelve. Various publics within this school community, including the principal and his staff, admitted that they had a drug problem but that their ongoing program was handling it fairly well. However, there was a credibility gap between certain publics and the program did not have the support or interest of various student groups.

⁴¹ ibid., p. 47

⁴² Demos, op. cit., p. 216

⁴³ see "Drugs and the Schools: Two Case Studies", op. cit., pp. 5-10

For example, when the investigating team questioned the students, the students responded as follows:

'All we do is read little pamphlets and watch those movies.' Only a few days and a few pages of text are spent on the subject, they claimed. Further, they objected to what they termed the 'brainwashing technique'. They resented the lack of sensitivity to underlying causes and they were turned off by the heavy emphasis on physiology instead of the psychology of addiction.⁴⁴

Up to this point, the major ineffectiveness of the program was due to the fact that the principal did not play an active or even interested role in the attempted solution of the problem. He was a passive spectator. He was not a leader but a manager performing certain minimal administrative duties.

However, the situation was radically changed, not by the principal but by the students. A group of students visited a local hospital and were surprised to find that some of their classmates were there for treatment of drug abuse. The students were so concerned that they immediately returned to school to ask the principal if they would be allowed to set up an Anti-Drug Week. The principal saw no reason why this request shouldn't be granted so the students began planning to get the school really involved. In addition to the films, posters, discussions, and guests, a small group of students attended a faculty meeting. Their intent was obvious: to get the teachers to open their eyes.

In the course of the faculty meeting, there were undoubtedly those who believed that the problem was not really that bad and that young people have a tendency to exaggerate. To counter this argument, several students pulled from their pockets an impressive assortment of drugs ranging from hashish (a form of marihuana) to Darvon. They had gathered these drugs in a matter of two hours and if only given 24 hours, they could uncover any drug requested. Needless to say, "this enterprise caused quite a stir."⁴⁵

⁴⁴ ibid., p. 8

The school's major difficulty was, of course, that the principal had allowed the school to, as the evaluative report stated:

...become laden down with concerns that overtaxed the machinery, and less pronounced problems were going unheeded or being ineffectively handled.⁴⁶

The problem was "less pronounced" only in the sense that it was less obvious than others. This situation is undoubtedly also true in many other schools. After all, few students flagrantly smoke marihuana in the halls or go to the principal to describe what they saw the last time they were "stoned".

2. Small, Predominantly White, Protestant, High School⁴⁷

A second case study is interesting to describe because it involves a school which many people think of as being the opposite of an urban, predominantly black, high school. This second high school investigated was small, predominantly white, Protestant, and was situated in a suburban community.

The principal here didn't believe that his school had a drug problem. According to him, such things just didn't exist in "good" neighborhoods. The local police, however, had a different feeling. Several officers on the force compiled some basic information on drugs and sent it out to the parents in the community:

⁴⁵ ibid., p. 9
⁴⁶ ibid., p. 10
⁴⁷ ibid., pp. 11-14

The police said that the initial reaction from parents was completely defensive; they were insulted that the behavior of their children was even questioned. Perhaps the parents felt that they were being attacked and accused of having failed in helping their children cope with their problems.⁴⁸

Fortunately, once the concern for drug users was triggered, the principal became involved. He had been in the district for six years and had a fair amount of good rapport with faculty, students, members of the community, and the system's administration. With this already existent, partially open climate, the principal and various segments of the school and community began to look at their values with respect to drugs and drug users. They defined the problem and assessed the extent of drug use in their area. With the help of a "mini-grant" of $5,000 from the government, they implemented a program which concerned itself with drugs and reasons why people turn to drugs.

In both cases, it was not the principal who initiated the program. In fact, both principals seemed to react more than act. It took something to jar them loose. To say this is unfortunate would be an understatement. Educational leaders are not those who rise to meet an already serious problem and ask "Did somebody call me?" They must not wait to be called on but already be there.

⁴⁸ ibid., p. 11

PART III MEASURES TO BE EMPLOYED WHEN A PRINCIPAL DISCOVERS MARIHUANA
OFFENSES: SCHOOL POLICY AND ITS IMPLEMENTATION

Regardless of the effectiveness of a drug prevention program, most principals will have to deal with specific incidents when marihuana users are reported. What does he do? To whom is he responsible? What are his choices of action?

It is advisable that the principal not be caught off guard. He should have a policy statement regarding marihuana use, as well as the use of other drugs, to which he could turn:

When a student is found with drugs, it is mandatory that the school have a stated policy regarding them, or it has no means of disciplining the student.⁴⁹

However, what sort of policy is this to be? Upon what should it be based? Who should make it up? What exactly is implied in the phrase "disciplining the student"?

A. Legal Role of the Principal

Despite the fact that the principal owes allegiance to the field of professional educators, he, his superintendent, and the local board are responsible to the state for what occurs within a particular school. This definitely includes apprehending a student marihuana user.

Therefore, it is strongly suggested that the principal understand the laws regarding marihuana use and that he have copies of these documents in his school for any interested party to examine. He should be aware not only of national regulations but also of state laws and state and local board policies (if such policies exist).

⁴⁹ Langer, op. cit., p. 15

1. Federal Level

Legal enactments are usually reflections of the societal values at a given time and place. Until recent years, the feeling most Americans had regarding marihuana users was one of mistrust. The National Commission on Marihuana and Drug Abuse stated in 1972:

In short, the mass character of youthful marihuana use has been frequently interpreted as a rejection of the institutionalized principles of law and a lack of concern for individual social responsibility, which threatens the social and political institutions. Implicit in this view is the assumption that a young person who uses marihuana in spite of the law cannot be expected to assume an individually and socially responsible adult role.⁵⁰

In the first half of the twentieth century we were fooled by the marihuana plant much in the same way as Americans and Europeans were fooled by the tomato in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

For years, it was considered poisonous and was grown only for decoration... Later, the plant came to be looked on as an aphrodisiac, a love potion, and the young men of France and Italy would gobble one down before calling on their lady loves... To the Puritans settling the New England shores, a love potion was as bad a poison, and the tomato plant was used only for a garden decoration... I believe Thomas Jefferson was one of the first brave souls to actually eat a tomato.⁵¹

Such claims about marihuana were prevalent in America until recent years. Specifically, marihuana was classified as a narcotic drug and was thought to be addictive. In fact, Congress continued in the 1950's to escalate penalties for marihuana use. The penalties at that time approved at the federal level are displayed on the following page in Table 5.⁵²

As marihuana use increased, and also the number of arrests in the late 1950's and in the 1960's, considerable attention was paid to marihuana and a large amount of research was conducted by the federal government in an effort to determine a realistic picture of the marihuana problem. This research continues today.

In effect, there has recently been

...a trend toward leniency in marihuana cases within the legal system and a recognition by policy-makers of widespread uncertainty regarding the effects of marihuana.⁵³

By mid 1970, marihuana was no longer considered a narcotic by 24 states and the District of Columbia. In the meantime, the United States Supreme Court declared certain aspects of the Marihuana Tax Act of 1937 unconstitutional⁵⁴ and certain members of the federal government began to express their concerns in an effort to seek new legislation with regard to marihuana and its users.

⁵³ ibid., p. 107

⁵⁴ see Leary v. U.S., 395 U.S., 6, 89 S. Ct. 1532 (1969)

Possession of all drugs, including marihuana, was reduced to a misdemeanor. Special treatment for first offenders was provided, allowing expungement of the record upon satisfactory completion of a probationary period. Casual transfers of marihuana were treated in the same manner as possession. After a series of wide-ranging hearings, Congress passed the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act⁵⁵, and on October 27, 1970, the President signed it into law.⁵⁶

After passage of this law came the Uniform Controlled Substances Act which recommended to states that they classify drug possession as a misdemeanor. As of early 1972, 42 states and the District of Columbia have done so. In the remaining eight states, four have the option of sentencing possessors as misdemeanants.

Federal regulations as they presently stand are displayed below in Table 6.⁵⁷

Table 6.

⁵⁵ See Appendix I for a copy of this law

⁵⁶ National Commission on Marihuana and Drug Abuse, op. cit., p. 108

⁵⁷ ibid., Appendix, Vol. 1, p. 496

In helping to formulate a school policy, the principal must be aware of these trends in the federal laws as well as the laws themselves. It should be noted that although penalties for student use of marihuana have been markedly reduced in the past decade, the penalties which now exist are still strict enough to send an 18 year old senior to jail for two years. If applied to distribution of marihuana, these penalties could send him away for as long as ten years.

2. State Level

The various laws regarding marihuana use and distribution vary from state to state.⁵⁸ For example, in Virginia, a state which followed recommendations set forth in the Uniform Controlled Substances Act, first possession of marihuana is considered a misdemeanor. However, second and subsequent offenses are punishable as felonies for which the user may be imprisoned for two to 20 years or spend not more than 12 months in jail.⁵⁹

The statutes of the Commonwealth of Virginia clearly differentiate between possession of hashish, a more potent form of marihuana, and marihuana itself.⁶⁰ Possession of hashish is punishable as a felony and those convicted may serve anywhere from one to ten years in prison. The word "possession" was defined in a recent Virginia case, Ritter v. Commonwealth⁶¹, as including the "use or being under the influence"⁶².

58 see Appendix II for a summary of the various state regulations.
59 National Commission on Marihuana and Drug Abuse, op. cit., p. 567
60 ibid.
61 see Ritter v. Commonwealth, 210 Va. 732, 740 (1970)
62 National Commission on Marihuana and Drug Abuse, loc. cit.

The Virginia principal should be aware of the fact that penalties in this state are especially severe in comparison to those in other states. For example, distribution may be punishable as a felony with imprisonment of one to 40 years and/or a fine of not more than $5,000. Distribution to a minor is also considered a felony with imprisonment of five to 40 years and/or a fine of not more than $50,000.⁶³

As of early 1972, only 24 states including Virginia have passed some sort of law which requires that schools provide drug education. Most of these laws leave the actual contents and methods to be used up to the educational agencies within the states. As of December 31, 1970, only 17 states had actually developed a drug education curriculum and another ten said that they were making preparations to do so. It is surprising to note that at that time 20 states still left the development of drug education programs and policies entirely up to the local school districts.⁶⁴

Upon examination of the Virginia State Department of Education's policy regarding drug education, the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse had this to say:

The Department has developed new materials relating to health education. However, only minimum references are made to drugs and no special programs on marijuana exist in the elementary grades. On the secondary level, marijuana is treated with other drugs but is given no special emphasis.⁶⁵

3. Local Level - the School Policy

The Virginia State Board of Education approved on January 29, 1971, 63 ibid.

64 ibid., Appendix, Vol. II, pp. 1200-1

65 ibid., p. 1224

Guidelines for Establishing a Policy and Procedures for Drug Discover in Schools.⁶⁶ These Guidelines required that all local school boards establish a drug policy as it is the school's responsibility to deal with this "serious social and health problem".⁶⁷ On November 5, 1971, the Virginia State Department of Education sent out a prototype policy for examination and interpretation by local school boards.⁶⁸ This suggested policy stated the following:

The principal has the overall responsibility within his school for the disposition of drug related incidents...The principal will make the decision relative to when the law enforcement officials shall be involved and has the responsibility of informing the parents or legal guardian.⁶⁹

This suggested policy further states that the superintendent must always be informed of drug incidents, that desks and lockers may be searched under certain conditions, that the principal must turn over contraband material to the public authorities, that visitors must register when entering school, that parking areas must be supervised, and that certain seldomly used areas of the school must be kept locked.

The following specific responsibilities were also outlined for the Virginia principal:⁷⁰

1. Shall have knowledge of drugs, their use and abuse, and drug education.
2. Shall report all activities relating to drugs to the superintendent.
3. Shall be familiar with sources to which drug problems may be referred.
4. Shall report any law violations concerning drugs to the law enforcement officials after consultation with the superintendent.
5. Shall notify parents or legal guardian when a student's

66 see Appendix III for a copy of this document

67 see Appendix III, page 1.

68 see Appendix IV for a copy of this document

70 see Appendix IV, pp. 3-4 appearance and behavior seem symptomatic of drug usage. In an emergency medical assistance shall be obtained.

6. Shall take appropriate disciplinary action against a student who is guilty of violating any drug law.

7. Shall require all students who take medication at school to have written permission on file stating the type, dosage, and duration of treatment.

8. Shall keep accurate information concerning drug use or abuse in confidential files.

9. Shall assist teachers of health education in including instruction in drugs and drug abuse.

What is important to mention here is that the Virginia principal has considerable breathing room in the interpretation of how an incident is to be handled. The state and federal laws as well as the Virginia State Department of Education policy are simply the metes and bounds within which the principal must act.

B. The Principal's Interpretation of the Laws and the School Policy

Although the Virginia State Department of Education has stated that the principal must report all drug incidents to his superintendent, and that, after consultation with the superintendent, these incidents must be reported to the local law enforcement officials, it is reasonable to assume that some degree of understanding can be established between school officials and local police authorities. Although the drug incident should be reported, it is unnecessary that every offender be turned over to the police, provided, of course, that the police and the school officials share mutual trust and respect. A Massachusetts lawyer who is known for his experience with handling drug cases, suggested:

The police should not be informed by the school officials or by you (parents), unless you can be absolutely certain that a) there is no other alternative and b) they will deal with the situation in a manner other than bringing the criminal law to bear against your child. There are other resources in your community - a mental health center, a drop-in center, or a hot line which can put you in touch with someone or some place that will help you. (parenthesis mine) ⁷¹

⁷¹ Neil L. Chayet, "A Briefing for Parents: Your Child and the Law", Today's Education, Vol. 61, No. 3 (March, 1972), p. 40

Especially in the case of marihuana which is not considered to be a narcotic drug in most states, the principal, if authorized by the local board, should use his professional judgement in determining whether or not a student's drug offense needs to be handled by the police.

Most school administrators, faced with the problem of dealing with drug users, probably accept the idea that persons who do harm to themselves or dangerous things to themselves need help rather than punishment. No doubt this is part of the reason for their reluctance to turn students over to the police.⁷²

The obvious question many principals would raise here is whether or not they are required by law to turn in a marihuana user. Although the statutes do not spell this out, the present situation would indicate that the principal is not legally required to turn in all drug offenders, especially in the case of first offenses for marihuana use.

It is a common misapprehension that if a student reveals use of a drug or plans to do so, it is incumbent upon one to report him to the police; otherwise, it is assumed, one may become accessory to a felony. This is false. If a person merely states that he has done something or plans to do something, it does not mean that he has in fact, done so or will do so. I suggest that those of us who have contacts with drug users or potential drug users gain a full understanding of privileged communication, professional ethics, and the treatment of confidential information.⁷³

Another question arises as to what to do with the confiscated marihuana. The obvious answer is to turn it, but not necessarily the user, over to the police. However, not everyone agrees with this procedure.

The fact that you find or are given a substance which appears to be or is said to be marihuana or some other substance does not necessarily mean that it is in fact that substance. You are not a

⁷² Alfred R. Lindesmith, "Drug Use as a Divisive Influence", Phi Delta Kappan, Vol. L, No. 4 (Dec., 1968), p. 221

⁷³ Demos, op. cit., p. 215

chemist, and there is no obligation on you to secure a chemical analysis. In most situations, the best thing is to permanently dispose of the substance as quickly as possible. Because of the lack of positive identification of the substance, there is no obligation on you to inform the police.⁷⁴

This, however, would seem to be a very risky policy for a principal to adopt. If it could be proven, for example, that the principal who disposed of the substance actually believed the substance to be marihuana, he could find himself in some very tight and embarrassing legal difficulties. Furthermore, it would be extremely valuable information for a principal to know whether or not the substance were hashish or marihuana as penalties in Virginia differentiate between the two. It would also be useful to know exactly how "pure" the substance was.

The final and most important question to raise involves the marihuana user? What is to be done with the student? Present trends indicate that expulsion is generally too severe a penalty, provided of course that the student hasn't repeatedly broken the law and that he doesn't constitute a danger to the other students. Suspension is a possibility if the activities planned for the period of suspension are beneficial and not harmful to the student. Any justification for suspension must come from the fact that being away from school proves to be more rehabilitative and worthwhile than remaining in school. This involves then the local school area and the relationship which exists between the student and his parents.

Naturally, doing nothing at all about the offense is practically synonymous with condoning student marihuana use. The point to be emphasized is that the punishment must fit the offense. Although guidelines should be established by each school concerning such things as where and when the offense occurred, frequency of marihuana use, previous record, and motivations for using marihuana, there should be enough flexibility within the choices of disciplinary action so as to provide for individual student differences. Therefore, implicit in the determination of a penalty is the belief that it must provide the student with the opportunity to examine his values and needs and to find alternatives for using marihuana. It is here that the school and its principal should help.

In summary, the principal should have the full cooperation and understanding of school authorities, teachers, students, law officers, and community members. Furthermore, his school's policy should accurately reflect the thinking of the entire community but not conflict with federal and state laws or school board policies. In addition, the policy must provide the principal with the opportunity to use his common sense and professional opinion. To do anything less is to confine the principal to the role of a manager who simply processes marihuana users through predetermined, rigid penalties. Perhaps more importantly, to do anything less is to deprive the school of the educational leadership it so desperately needs to grow and to survive.

C. Two Case Studies of Implementing School Policies

1. East Coast, Suburban, White High School⁷⁵

An average sized, suburban, middle to upper middle, predominantly white school recently surveyed its student body and found that 11% of the students used marihuana at least once a week and that 33% of the students have tried it. The school has a quiet past in the sense that no major disciplinary problems have arisen and students claim that they do not let smoking marijuana interfere with their schooling.

⁷⁵ Ochberg, op. cit., pp. 57-59

Whenever a student is found in class to be under the influence of drugs, the teacher reports the student to the assistant principal who calls the nurse. If the nurse finds that the student has taken illicit drugs, the parents, not the police, are notified. However, if an ambulance is called, the local law authorities are notified. If a student is found with drugs in his possession or is caught selling drugs, the assistant principal notifies the police as well as the parents.

2. A New Jersey High School Case⁷⁶

The case "E.E." v. Board of Education of the Township of Ocean, Monmouth County (N.J., 1971) points out some of the difficulties a school may encounter when implementing its policy. One of the students set a meeting with two other students to smoke hashish during lunch period. The vice-principal found them and asked what they were doing. They freely admitted that they were smoking "pot". As a result, the school suspended the student who had arranged the rendez-vous. After a period of seven weeks, the student was readmitted on probation. The terms of this probation were as follows:

1. He could take only those courses necessary for graduation and admission into a college or university.
2. He would be obliged to leave school grounds every day after sixth period.

⁷⁶ see Laurence W. Knowles, "'Pot' Smoking Students Not Easy To Discipline", Nation's Schools, Vol. 89, No. 6 (June, 1972) p. 58

3. He would not be allowed to eat lunch at school.

4. He would be restricted from extracurricular activity participation.

The student felt that the punishment was too severe and appealed the school's decision to the New Jersey State Commissioner of Education. The school administrators quickly organized and presented the argument that the student could have been permanently suspended as he constituted a threat to the other students. The Commissioner ruled in favor of the student and required that the student's record be expunged. In addition, the Commissioner ruled that the probationary terms be lifted with the exception of the restriction from participating in extracurricular activities.

Meanwhile, the student had gone to juvenile court where the ruling was simply an order to be on good behavior for a period of six to nine months. The student during this period was not required to report to any probation officer. Therefore, if the student had chosen to go to court instead of to the Commissioner, the youngster might easily have been fully reinstated into school with no probationary limitations whatsoever.

Conclusion

To a large extent, a school will be no better or worse than its principal. It is perhaps unfortunate that a school that has a poor principal continues to survive by merely going through the motions of meeting the minimal needs of its students.

A good definition of learning might be the development of the ability to solve problems. Too often these problems are artificially imposed on the student. They are external to him. They involve getting the right answer in Math class or remembering what the text explained as the major causes of the Civil War. Perhaps due to such external problems, students light up a "joint" after school in an effort to understand themselves or simply to "forget it all".

Principals need to remember why they occupy the leadership position in their schools. Yes, bus schedules are important. So is knowing who was at assembly and who was not. But students are young people with innumerable questions about themselves and their environment. If schools leave these questions unchallenged, they have failed. So have the principals.

If a principal is to be a leader, he must have followers. No one will follow a man who doesn't know where he is going or who is going where the followers don't care to go. Although the problem of marihuana presents anxiety, fear, and sometimes anger, it also provides a tremendous opportunity for principals to open their minds and hearts to young people. Problem-sharing is a marvelous way to begin problem-solving.

To solve the marihuana problem, the principal must concern himself not with marihuana but with marihuana users. Many students are in trouble, some of them big trouble, and they want help despite the fact that they might have long hair or say that they wish to be left alone.

In order to be leaders, principals will have to allow themselves to be known by teachers and students as people as well as professionals. They will have to show themselves as humans, not just as administrators. Above all, they must never lose sight of the fact that marihuana is not evil by itself but is symptomatic of the unmet and perhaps ignored needs of many young people. The principal must recognize these needs and ensure that his school is attempting to satisfy them. Otherwise the schools will never even come close to their role of helping in the effective development of young people and of a great nation.

TITLE II—CONTROL AND ENFORCEMENT

PART A—SHORT TITLE; FINDINGS AND DECLARATION; DEFINITIONS

SHORT TITLE

SEC. 100. This title may be cited as the "Controlled Substances Act". Citation of title.

FINDINGS AND DECLARATIONS

SEC. 101. The Congress makes the following findings and declarations:

(1) Many of the drugs included within this title have a useful and legitimate medical purpose and are necessary to maintain the health and general welfare of the American people.

(2) The illegal importation, manufacture, distribution, and possession and improper use of controlled substances have a substantial and detrimental effect on the health and general welfare of the American people.

(3) A major portion of the traffic in controlled substances flows through interstate and foreign commerce. Incidents of the traffic which are not an integral part of the interstate or foreign flow, such as manufacture, local distribution, and possession, nonetheless have a substantial and direct effect upon interstate commerce because—

(A) after manufacture, many controlled substances are transported in interstate commerce,

(B) controlled substances distributed locally usually have been transported in interstate commerce immediately before their distribution, and

(C) controlled substances possessed commonly flow through interstate commerce immediately prior to such possession.

(4) Local distribution and possession of controlled substances contribute to swelling the interstate traffic in such substances.

(5) Controlled substances manufactured and distributed intrastate cannot be differentiated from controlled substances manufactured and distributed interstate. Thus, it is not feasible to distinguish, in terms of controls, between controlled substances manufactured and distributed interstate and controlled substances manufactured and distributed intrastate.

(6) Federal control of the intrastate incidents of the traffic in controlled substances is essential to the effective control of the interstate incidents of such traffic.

(7) The United States is a party to the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs, 1953, and other international conventions designed to establish effective control over international and domestic traffic in controlled substances. 18 UST 1407.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 102. As used in this title:

(1) The term "addict" means any individual who habitually uses any narcotic drug so as to endanger the public morals, health, safety, or welfare, or who is so far addicted to the use of narcotic drugs as to have lost the power of self-control with reference to his addiction.

(2) The term "administer" refers to the direct application of a controlled substance to the body of a patient or research subject by—

(A) a practitioner (or, in his presence, by his authorized agent), or

(B) the patient or research subject at the direction and in the presence of the practitioner,

PART B—AUTHORITY TO CONTROL;

STANDARDS AND SCHEDULES

AUTHORITY AND CRITERIA FOR CLASSIFICATION OF SUBSTANCES

SEC. 201. (a) The Attorney General shall apply the provisions of this title to the controlled substances listed in the schedules established by section 202 of this title and to any other drug or other substance added to such schedules under this title. Except as provided in subsections (d) and (e), the Attorney General may by rule—

(1) add to such a schedule or transfer between such schedules any drug or other substance if he—

(A) finds that such drug or other substance has a potential for abuse, and

(B) makes with respect to such drug or other substance the findings prescribed by subsection (b) of section 202 for the schedule in which such drug is to be placed; or

(2) remove any drug or other substance from the schedules if he finds that the drug or other substance does not meet the requirements for inclusion in any schedule.

Hearing opportunity.
Rules.

80 Stat. 381.
5 USC 551.

Rules of the Attorney General under this subsection shall be made on the record after opportunity for a hearing pursuant to the rulemaking procedures prescribed by subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5 of the United States Code. Proceedings for the issuance, amendment, or repeal of such rules may be initiated by the Attorney General (1) on his own motion, (2) at the request of the Secretary, or (3) on the petition of any interested party.

(b) The Attorney General shall, before initiating proceedings under subsection (a) to control a drug or other substance or to remove a drug or other substance entirely from the schedules, and after gathering the necessary data, request from the Secretary a scientific and medical evaluation, and his recommendations, as to whether such drug or other substance should be so controlled or removed as a controlled substance. In making such evaluation and recommendations, the Secretary shall consider the factors listed in paragraphs (2), (3), (6), (7), and (8) of subsection (c) and any scientific or medical considerations involved in paragraphs (1), (4), and (5) of such subsection. The recommendations of the Secretary shall include recommendations with respect to the appropriate schedule, if any, under which such drug or other substance should be listed. The evaluation and the recommendations of the Secretary shall be made in writing and submitted to the Attorney General within a reasonable time. The recommendations of the Secretary to the Attorney General shall be binding on the Attorney General as to such scientific and medical matters, and if the Secretary recommends that a drug or other substance not be controlled, the Attorney General shall not control the drug or other substance. If the Attorney General determines that these facts and all other relevant data constitute substantial evidence of potential for abuse such as to warrant control or substantial evidence that the drug or other substance should be removed entirely from the schedules, he shall initiate proceedings for control or removal, as the case may be, under subsection (a).

(c) In making any finding under subsection (a) of this section or under subsection (b) of section 202, the Attorney General shall consider the following factors with respect to each drug or other substance proposed to be controlled or removed from the schedules:

- (6) What, if any, risk there is to the public health.
- (7) Its psychic or physiological dependence liability.
- (8) Whether the substance is an immediate precursor of a substance already controlled under this title.

(d) If control is required by United States obligations under international treaties, conventions, or protocols in effect on the effective date of this part, the Attorney General shall issue an order controlling such drug under the schedule he deems most appropriate to carry out such obligations, without regard to the findings required by subsection (a) of this section or section 202(b) and without regard to the procedures prescribed by subsections (a) and (b) of this section.

(e) The Attorney General may, without regard to the findings required by subsection (a) of this section or section 202(b) and without regard to the procedures prescribed by subsections (a) and (b) of this section, place an immediate precursor in the same schedule in which the controlled substance of which it is an immediate precursor is placed or in any other schedule with a higher numerical designation. If the Attorney General designates a substance as an immediate precursor and places it in a schedule, other substances shall not be placed in a schedule solely because they are its precursors.

21 USC 321.
Dextromethorphan, exception.

(f) If, at the time a new-drug application is submitted to the Secretary for any drug having a stimulant, depressant, or hallucinogenic effect on the central nervous system, it appears that such drug has an abuse potential, such information shall be forwarded by the Secretary to the Attorney General.

(g) (1) The Attorney General shall by regulation exclude any non-narcotic substance from a schedule if such substance may, under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, be lawfully sold over the counter without a prescription.

(2) Dextromethorphan shall not be deemed to be included in any schedule by reason of enactment of this title unless controlled after the date of such enactment pursuant to the foregoing provisions of this section.

(c) Registration granted under subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall not entitle a registrant to (1) manufacture or distribute controlled substances in schedule I or II other than those specified in the registration, or (2) manufacture any quantity of those controlled substances in excess of the quota assigned pursuant to section 306.

Prohibition.

(d) The Attorney General shall register an applicant to manufacture controlled substances in schedule III, IV, or V, unless he determines that the issuance of such registration is inconsistent with the public interest. In determining the public interest, the following factors shall be considered:

Post, p. 1257.

(1) maintenance of effective controls against diversion of particular controlled substances and any controlled substance in schedule III, IV, or V compounded therefrom into other than legitimate medical, scientific, or industrial channels;

(2) compliance with applicable State and local law;

(3) promotion of technical advances in the art of manufacturing these substances and the development of new substances;

(4) prior conviction record of applicant under Federal or State laws relating to the manufacture, distribution, or dispensing of such substances;

- (1) maintenance of effective controls against diversion of particular controlled substances into other than legitimate medical, scientific, and industrial channels;
- (2) compliance with applicable State and local law;
- (3) prior conviction record of applicant under Federal or State laws relating to the manufacture, distribution, or dispensing of such substances;

Research.

(f) Practitioners shall be registered to dispense or conduct research with controlled substances in schedule II, III, IV, or V if they are authorized to dispense or conduct research under the law of the State in which they practice. Separate registration under this part for practitioners engaging in research with nonnarcotic controlled substances in schedule II, III, IV, or V, who are already registered under this part in another capacity, shall not be required. Pharmacies (as distinguished from pharmacists) when engaged in commercial activities, shall be registered to dispense controlled substances in schedule II, III, IV, or V if they are authorized to dispense under the law of the State in which they regularly conduct business. Registration applications by practitioners wishing to conduct research with controlled substances in schedule I shall be referred to the Secretary, who shall determine qualifications and competency of each practitioner requesting registration, as well as the merits of the research protocol. The Secretary, in determining the merits of each research protocol, shall consult with the Attorney General as to effective procedures to adequately safeguard against diversion of such controlled substances from legitimate medical or scientific use. Registration for the purpose of bona fide research with controlled substances in schedule I by a practitioner deemed qualified by the Secretary may be denied by the Attorney General only on a ground specified in section 304(a).

DENIAL, REVOCATION, OR SUSPENSION OF REGISTRATION

SEC. 301. (a) A registration pursuant to section 303 to manufacture, distribute, or dispense a controlled substance may be suspended or revoked by the Attorney General upon a finding that the registrant—

Post, p. 1285.

- (1) has materially falsified any application filed pursuant to or required by this title or title III;
- (2) has been convicted of a felony under this title or title III or any other law of the United States, or of any State, relating to any substance defined in this title as a controlled substance; or
- (3) has had his State license or registration suspended, revoked, or denied by competent State authority and is no longer authorized by State law to engage in the manufacturing, distribution, or dispensing of controlled substances.

(b) The Attorney General may limit revocation or suspension of a registration to the particular controlled substance with respect to which grounds for revocation or suspension exist.

Service of order.

(c) Before taking action pursuant to this section, or pursuant to a denial of registration under section 303, the Attorney General shall serve upon the applicant or registrant an order to show cause why registration should not be denied, revoked, or suspended. The order to show cause shall contain a statement of the basis thereof and shall call upon the applicant or registrant to appear before the Attorney General at a time and place stated in the order, but in no event less than thirty days after the date of receipt of the order. Proceedings to deny, revoke, or suspend shall be conducted pursuant to this section in accordance with subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5 of the United States Code. Such proceedings shall be independent of, and not in lieu of, criminal prosecutions or other proceedings under this title or any other law of the United States.

80 Stat. 381.
5 USC 551.

(d) The Attorney General may, in his discretion, suspend any registration simultaneously with the institution of proceedings under this section, in cases where he finds that there is an imminent danger to the public health or safety. Such suspension shall continue in effect until the conclusion of such proceedings, including judicial review thereof, unless sooner withdrawn by the Attorney General or dissolved by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Registration, suspension.

(e) The suspension or revocation of a registration under this section shall operate to suspend or revoke any quota applicable under section 306.

(f) In the event the Attorney General suspends or revokes a registration granted under section 303, all controlled substances owned or possessed by the registrant pursuant to such registration at the time of suspension or the effective date of the revocation order, as the case may be, may, in the discretion of the Attorney General, be placed under seal. No disposition may be made of any controlled substances under seal until the time for taking an appeal has elapsed or until all appeals have been concluded except that a court, upon application therefor, may at any time order the sale of perishable controlled substances. Any such order shall require the deposit of the proceeds of the sale with the court. Upon a revocation order becoming final, all such controlled substances (or proceeds of sale deposited in court) shall be forfeited to the United States; and the Attorney General shall dispose of such controlled substances in accordance with section 511(e).

Post, p. 1277.

LABELING AND PACKAGING REQUIREMENTS

SEC. 305. (a) It shall be unlawful to distribute a controlled substance in a commercial container unless such container, when and as required by regulations of the Attorney General, bears a label (as defined in section 201(k) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act) containing an identifying symbol for such substance in accordance with such regulations. A different symbol shall be required for each schedule of controlled substances.

Symbol.

(b) It shall be unlawful for the manufacturer of any controlled substance to distribute such substance unless the labeling (as defined in section 201(n) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act) of such substance contains, when and as required by regulations of the Attorney General, the identifying symbol required under subsection (a).

52 Stat. 1041.
21 USC 321.

(c) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations under section 503(b) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act which shall provide that the label of a drug listed in schedule II, VII, or IV shall, when dispensed to or for a patient, contain a clear, concise warning that it is a crime to transfer the drug to any person other than the patient.

65 Stat. 648.
21 USC 353.

(d) It shall be unlawful to distribute controlled substances in schedule I or II, and narcotic drugs in schedule III or IV, unless the bottle or other container, stopper, covering, or wrapper thereof is securely sealed as required by regulations of the Attorney General.

84 STAT. 1257

QUOTAS APPLICABLE TO CERTAIN SUBSTANCES

Production
quota.

SEC. 306. (a) The Attorney General shall determine the total quantity and establish production quotas for each basic class of controlled substance in schedules I and II to be manufactured each calendar year to provide for the estimated medical, scientific, research, and industrial needs of the United States, for lawful export requirements, and for the establishment and maintenance of reserve stocks. Production quotas shall be established in terms of quantities of each basic class of controlled substance and not in terms of individual pharmaceutical dosage forms prepared from or containing such a controlled substance.

(b) The Attorney General shall limit or reduce individual production quotas to the extent necessary to prevent the aggregate of individual quotas from exceeding the amount determined necessary each year by the Attorney General under subsection (a). The quota of each registered manufacturer for each basic class of controlled substance in schedule I or II shall be revised in the same proportion as the limitation or reduction of the aggregate of the quotas. However, if any registrant, before the issuance of a limitation or reduction in quota, has manufactured in excess of his revised quota, the amount of the excess shall be subtracted from his quota for the following year.

quota.

(c) On or before July 1 of each year, upon application therefor by a registered manufacturer, the Attorney General shall fix a manufacturing quota for the basic classes of controlled substances in schedules I and II that the manufacturer seeks to produce. The quota shall be subject to the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section. In fixing such quotas, the Attorney General shall determine the manufacturer's estimated disposal, inventory, and other requirements for the calendar year; and, in making his determination, the Attorney General shall consider the manufacturer's current rate of disposal, the trend of the national disposal rate during the preceding calendar year, the manufacturer's production cycle and inventory position, the economic availability of raw materials, yield and stability problems, emergencies such as strikes and fires, and other factors.

(d) The Attorney General shall, upon application and subject to the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section, fix a quota for a basic class of controlled substance in schedule I or II for any registrant who has not manufactured that basic class of controlled substance during one or more preceding calendar years. In fixing such quota, the Attorney General shall take into account the registrant's reasonably anticipated requirements for the current year; and, in making his determination of such requirements, he shall consider such factors specified in subsection (c) of this section as may be relevant.

Quota,
increase.

(e) At any time during the year any registrant who has applied for or received a manufacturing quota for a basic class of controlled substance in schedule I or II may apply for an increase in that quota to meet his estimated disposal, inventory, and other requirements during the remainder of that year. In passing upon the application the Attorney General shall take into consideration any occurrences since the filing of the registrant's initial quota application that may require an increased manufacturing rate by the registrant during the balance of the year. In passing upon the application the Attorney General may also take into account the amount, if any, by which the determination of the Attorney General under subsection (a) of this section exceeds the aggregate of the quotas of all registrants under this section.

Controlled
substances, incidental
production,
exception.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this title, no registration or quota may be required for the manufacture of such quantities of controlled substances in schedules I and II as incidentally and necessarily result from the manufacturing process used for the manufacture of a controlled substance with respect to which its manufacturer is duly registered under this title. The Attorney General may, by regulation, prescribe restrictions on the retention and disposal of such incidentally produced substances.

Restrictions.

RECORDS AND REPORTS OF REGISTRANTS

Sec. 307. (a) Except as provided in subsection (c)—

Inventory.

(1) every registrant under this title shall, on the effective date of this section, or as soon thereafter as such registrant first engages in the manufacture, distribution, or dispensing of controlled substances, and every second year thereafter, make a complete and accurate record of all stocks thereof on hand, except that the regulations prescribed under this section shall permit each such biennial inventory (following the initial inventory required by this paragraph) to be prepared on such registrant's regular general physical inventory date (if any) which is nearest to and does not vary by more than six months from the biennial date that would otherwise apply;

(2) on the effective date of each regulation of the Attorney General controlling a substance that immediately prior to such date was not a controlled substance, each registrant under this title manufacturing, distributing, or dispensing such substance shall make a complete and accurate record of all stocks thereof on hand; and

(3) on and after the effective date of this section, every registrant under this title manufacturing, distributing, or dispensing a controlled substance or substances shall maintain, on a current basis, a complete and accurate record of each such substance manufactured, received, sold, delivered, or otherwise disposed of by him, except that this paragraph shall not require the maintenance of a perpetual inventory.

(b) Every inventory or other record required under this section (1) shall be in accordance with, and contain such relevant information as may be required by, regulations of the Attorney General, (2) shall (A) be maintained separately from all other records of the registrant, or (B) alternatively, in the case of nonnarcotic controlled substances, be in such form that information required by the Attorney General is readily retrievable from the ordinary business records of the registrant, and (3) shall be kept and be available, for at least two years, for inspection and copying by officers or employees of the United States authorized by the Attorney General.

(3) to the extent of any exemption granted to any person, with respect to all or part of such provisions, by the Attorney General by or pursuant to regulation on the basis of a finding that the application of such provisions (or part thereof) to such person is not necessary for carrying out the purposes of this title.

(d) Every manufacturer registered under section 303 shall, at such time or times and in such form as the Attorney General may require, make periodic reports to the Attorney General of every sale, delivery, or other disposal by him of any controlled substance, and each distributor shall make such reports with respect to narcotic controlled substances, identifying by the registration number assigned under this title the person or establishment (unless exempt from registration under section 302(d)) to whom such sale, delivery, or other disposal was made.

Preservation
and avail-

(c) (1) Every person who in pursuance of an order required under subsection (a) distributes a controlled substance shall preserve such order for a period of two years, and shall make such order available for inspection and copying by officers and employees of the United States duly authorized for that purpose by the Attorney General, and by officers or employees of States or their political subdivisions who are charged with the enforcement of State or local laws regulating the production, or regulating the distribution or dispensing, of controlled substances and who are authorized under such laws to inspect such orders.

DANGEROUS SPECIAL DRUG OFFENDER SENTENCING

SEC. 409. (a) Whenever a United States attorney charged with the prosecution of a defendant in a court of the United States for an alleged felonious violation of any provision of this title or title III committed when the defendant was over the age of twenty-one years has reasons to believe that the defendant is a dangerous special drug offender such United States attorney, a reasonable time before trial or acceptance by the court of a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, may sign and file with the court, and may amend, a notice (1) specifying that the defendant is a dangerous special drug offender who upon conviction for such felonious violation is subject to the imposition of a sentence under subsection (b) of this section, and (2) setting out with particularity the reasons why such attorney believes the defendant to be a dangerous special drug offender. In no case shall the fact that the defendant is alleged to be a dangerous special drug offender be an issue upon the trial of such felonious violation, be disclosed to the jury, or be disclosed before any plea of guilty or nolo contendere or verdict or finding of guilty to the presiding judge without the consent of the parties. If the court finds that the filing of the notice as a public record may prejudice fair consideration of a pending criminal matter, it may order the notice sealed and the notice shall not be subject to subpoena or public inspection during the pendency of such criminal matter, except on order of the court, but shall be subject to inspection by the defendant alleged to be a dangerous special drug offender and his counsel.

Notice.

Prohibition.

(b) Upon any plea of guilty or nolo contendere or verdict or finding of guilty of the defendant of such felonious violation, a hearing shall be held, before sentence is imposed, by the court sitting without a jury.

Hearing
without jury.

Notice.
Presentence
report, inspection.

The court shall fix a time for the hearing, and notice thereof shall be given to the defendant and the United States at least ten days prior thereto. The court shall permit the United States and counsel for the defendant, or the defendant if he is not represented by counsel, to inspect the presentence report sufficiently prior to the hearing as to afford a reasonable opportunity for verification. In extraordinary cases, the court may withhold material not relevant to a proper sentence, diagnostic opinion which might seriously disrupt a program of rehabilitation, any source of information obtained on a promise of confidentiality, and material previously disclosed in open court. A court withholding all or part of a presentence report shall inform the parties of its action and place in the record the reasons therefor. The court may require parties inspecting all or part of a presentence report to give notice of any part thereof intended to be controverted. In connection with the hearing, the defendant and the United States shall be entitled to assistance of counsel, compulsory process, and cross-examination of such witnesses as appear at the hearing. A duly authenticated copy of a former judgment or commitment shall be prima facie evidence of such former judgment or commitment. If it appears by a preponderance of the information, including information submitted during the trial of such felonious violation and the sentencing hearing and so much of the presentence report as the court relies upon, that the defendant is a dangerous special drug offender, the court shall sentence the defendant to imprisonment for an appropriate term not to exceed twenty-five years and not disproportionate in severity to the maximum term otherwise authorized by law for such felonious violation. Otherwise it shall sentence the defendant in accordance with the law prescribing penalties for such felonious violation. The court shall place in the record its findings, including an identification of the information relied upon in making such findings, and its reasons for the sentence imposed.

Penalty.

Sentence.

(c) This section shall not prevent the imposition and execution of a sentence of imprisonment for life or for a term exceeding twenty-five years upon any person convicted of an offense so punishable.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the court shall not sentence a dangerous special drug offender to less than any mandatory minimum penalty prescribed by law for such felonious violation. This section shall not be construed as creating any mandatory minimum penalty.

Conditions.

(e) A defendant is a special drug offender for purposes of this section if—

(1) the defendant has previously been convicted in courts of the United States or a State or any political subdivision thereof for two or more offenses involving dealing in controlled substances, committed on occasions different from one another and different from such felonious violation, and punishable in such courts by death or imprisonment in excess of one year, for one or more of such convictions the defendant has been imprisoned prior to the commission of such felonious violation, and less than five years have elapsed between the commission of such felonious violation and either the defendant's release, or parole or otherwise, from imprisonment for one such conviction or his commission of the last such previous offense or another offense involving dealing in controlled substances and punishable by death or imprisonment in excess of one year under applicable laws of the United States or a State or any political subdivision thereof; or

(2) the defendant committed such felonious violation as part of a pattern of dealing in controlled substances which was criminal under applicable laws of any jurisdiction, which constituted a substantial source of his income, and in which he manifested special skill or expertise; or

(3) such felonious violation was, or the defendant committed such felonious violation in furtherance of, a conspiracy with three or more other persons to engage in a pattern of dealing in controlled substances which was criminal under applicable laws of any jurisdiction, and the defendant did, or agreed that he would, initiate, organize, plan, finance, direct, manage, or supervise all or part of such conspiracy or dealing, or give or receive a bribe or use force in connection with such dealing.

A conviction shown on direct or collateral review or at the hearing to be invalid or for which the defendant has been pardoned on the ground of innocence shall be disregarded for purposes of paragraph (1) of this subsection. In support of findings under paragraph (2) of this subsection, it may be shown that the defendant has had in his own name or under his control income or property not explained as derived from a source other than such dealing. For purposes of paragraph (2) of this subsection, a substantial source of income means a source of income which for any period of one year or more exceeds the minimum wage, determined on the basis of a forty-hour week and fifty-week year, without reference to exceptions, under section 6(a) (1) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 for an employee engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, and which for the same period exceeds fifty percent of the defendant's declared adjusted gross income under section 62 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. For purposes of paragraph (2) of this subsection, special skill or expertise in such dealing includes unusual knowledge, judgment or ability, including manual dexterity, facilitating the initiation, organizing, planning, financing, direction, management, supervision, execution or concealment of such dealing, the enlistment of accomplices in such dealing, the escape from detection or apprehension for such dealing, or the disposition of the fruits or proceeds of such dealing. For purposes of paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection, such dealing forms a pattern if it embraces criminal acts that have the same or similar purposes, results, participants, victims, or methods of commission, or otherwise are interrelated by distinguishing characteristics and are not isolated events.

(f) A defendant is dangerous for purposes of this section if a period of confinement longer than that provided for such felonious violation is required for the protection of the public from further criminal conduct by the defendant.

(g) The time for taking an appeal from a conviction for which sentence is imposed after proceedings under this section shall be measured from imposition of the original sentence.

(h) With respect to the imposition, correction, or reduction of a sentence after proceedings under this section, a review of the sentence on the record of the sentencing court may be taken by the defendant or the United States to a court of appeals. Any review of the sentence taken by the United States shall be taken at least five days before expiration of the time for taking a review of the sentence or appeal of the conviction by the defendant and shall be diligently prosecuted. The sentencing court may, with or without motion and notice, extend the time for taking a review of the sentence for a period not to exceed thirty days from the expiration of the time otherwise prescribed by law. The court shall not extend the time for taking a review of the sentence by the United States after the time has expired. A court extending the time for taking a review of the sentence by the United States shall extend the time for taking a review of the sentence or appeal of the conviction by the defendant for the same period. The taking of a review of the sentence by the United States shall be deemed the taking of a review of the sentence and an appeal of the conviction by the defendant. Review of the sentence shall include review of whether the procedure employed was lawful, the findings made were clearly erroneous, or the sentencing court's discretion was abused. The court of appeals on review of the sentence may, after considering the record, including the entire presentence report, information submitted during the trial of such felonious violation and the sentencing hearing, and the findings and reasons of the sentencing court, affirm the sentence, impose or direct the imposition of any sentence which the sentencing court could originally have imposed, or remand for further sentencing proceedings and imposition of sentence, except that a sentence may be made more severe only on review of the sentence taken by the United States and after hearing. Failure of the United States to take a review of the imposition of the sentence shall, upon review taken by the United States of the correction or reduction of the sentence, foreclose imposition of a sentence more severe than that previously imposed. Any withdrawal or dismissal of review of the sentence taken by the United States shall foreclose imposition of a sentence more severe than that reviewed but shall not otherwise foreclose the review of the sentence or the appeal of the conviction. The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of the review of the sentence. Any review of the sentence taken by the United States may be dismissed on a showing of the abuse of the right of the United States to take such review.

INFORMATION FOR SENTENCING

70 Stat. 929.
42 USC 242a.

Post, p. 1265.

SEC. 410. Except as otherwise provided in this title or section 305(a) of the Public Health Service Act, no limitation shall be placed on the information concerning the background, character, and conduct of a person convicted of an offense which a court of the United States may receive and consider for the purpose of imposing an appropriate sentence under this title or title III.

PROCEEDINGS TO ESTABLISH PRIOR CONVICTIONS

Prohibition.

SEC. 411. (a)(1) No person who is convicted of an offense under this part shall be sentenced to increased punishment by reason of one or more prior convictions, unless before trial, or before entry of a plea of guilty, the United States attorney files an information with the court (and serves a copy of such information on the person or counsel for the person) stating in writing the previous convictions to be relied upon. Upon a showing by the United States attorney that facts regarding prior convictions could not with due diligence be obtained prior to trial or before entry of a plea of guilty, the court may postpone the trial or the taking of the plea of guilty for a reasonable period for the purpose of obtaining such facts. Clerical mistakes in the information may be amended at any time prior to the pronouncement of sentence.

(2) An information may not be filed under this section if the increased punishment which may be imposed is imprisonment for a term in excess of three years unless the person either waived or was afforded prosecution by indictment for the offense for which such increased punishment may be imposed.

(b) If the United States attorney files an information under this section, the court shall after conviction but before pronouncement of sentence inquire of the person with respect to whom the information was filed whether he affirms or denies that he has been previously convicted as alleged in the information, and shall inform him that any challenge to a prior conviction which is not made before sentence is imposed may not thereafter be raised to attack the sentence.

Previous conviction, affirmation or denial.

(c) (1) If the person denies any allegation of the information of prior conviction, or claims that any conviction alleged is invalid, he shall file a written response to the information. A copy of the response shall be served upon the United States attorney. The court shall hold a hearing to determine any issues raised by the response which would except the person from increased punishment. The failure of the United States attorney to include in the information the complete criminal record of the person or any facts in addition to the convictions to be relied upon shall not constitute grounds for invalidating the notice given in the information required by subsection (a) (1). The hearing shall be before the court without a jury and either party may introduce evidence. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the United States attorney shall have the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt on any issue of fact. At the request of either party, the court shall enter findings of fact and conclusions of law.

Denial, written response. Hearing.

Court without jury. Evidence, introduction.

(2) A person claiming that a conviction alleged in the information was obtained in violation of the Constitution of the United States shall set forth his claim, and the factual basis therefor, with particularity in his response to the information. The person shall have the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence on any issue of fact raised by the response. Any challenge to a prior conviction, not raised by response to the information before an increased sentence is imposed in reliance thereon, shall be waived unless good cause be shown for failure to make a timely challenge.

Constitution of U.S., violation.

(d) (1) If the person files no response to the information, or if the court determines, after hearing, that the person is subject to increased punishment by reason of prior convictions, the court shall proceed to impose sentence upon him as provided by this part.

Sentence, imposition.

(2) If the court determines that the person has not been convicted as alleged in the information, that a conviction alleged in the information is invalid, or that the person is otherwise not subject to an increased sentence as a matter of law, the court shall, at the request of the United States attorney, postpone sentence to allow an appeal from that determination. If no such request is made, the court shall impose sentence as provided by this part. The person may appeal from an order postponing sentence as if sentence had been pronounced and a final judgment of conviction entered.

(e) No person who stands convicted of an offense under this part may challenge the validity of any prior conviction alleged under this section which occurred more than five years before the date of the information alleging such prior conviction.

Any officer acting under such warrant, shall, as soon as practicable after entering the premises, identify himself and give the reasons and authority for his entrance upon the premises.

Authority to break and enter under certain conditions.

ADMINISTRATIVE INSPECTIONS AND WARRANTS

SEC. 510. (a) As used in this section, the term "controlled premises" means— "Controlled premises."

(1) places where original or other records or documents required under this title are kept or required to be kept, and

(2) places, including factories, warehouses, or other establishments, and conveyances, where persons registered under section 303 (or exempted from registration under section 302(d)) may lawfully hold, manufacture, or distribute, dispense, administer, or otherwise dispose of controlled substances.

(b)(1) For the purpose of inspecting, copying, and verifying the correctness of records, reports, or other documents required to be kept or made under this title and otherwise facilitating the carrying out of his functions under this title, the Attorney General is authorized, in accordance with this section, to enter controlled premises and to conduct administrative inspections thereof, and of the things specified in this section, relevant to those functions.

(2) Such entries and inspections shall be carried out through officers or employees (hereinafter referred to as "inspectors") designated by the Attorney General. Any such inspector, upon stating his purpose and presenting to the owner, operator, or agent in charge of such premises (A) appropriate credentials and (B) a written notice of his inspection authority (which notice in the case of an inspection requiring, or in fact supported by, an administrative inspection warrant shall consist of such warrant), shall have the right to enter such premises and conduct such inspection at reasonable times.

(3) Except as may otherwise be indicated in an applicable inspection warrant, the inspector shall have the right—

(A) to inspect and copy records, reports, and other documents required to be kept or made under this title;

(B) to inspect, within reasonable limits and in a reasonable manner, controlled premises and all pertinent equipment, finished and unfinished drugs and other substances or materials, containers, and labeling found therein, and, except as provided in paragraph (5) of this subsection, all other things therein (including records, files, papers, processes, controls, and facilities) appropriate for verification of the records, reports, and documents referred to in clause (A) or otherwise bearing on the provisions of this title; and

(C) to inventory any stock of any controlled substance therein and obtain samples of any such substance.

(4) Except when the owner, operator, or agent in charge of the controlled premises so consents in writing, no inspection authorized by this section shall extend to—

- (A) financial data;
- (B) sales data other than shipment data; or
- (C) pricing data.

(c) A warrant under this section shall not be required for the inspection of books and records pursuant to an administrative subpoena issued in accordance with section 506, nor for entries and administrative inspections (including seizures of property)—

- (1) with the consent of the owner, operator, or agent in charge of the controlled premises;
- (2) in situations presenting imminent danger to health or safety;
- (3) in situations involving inspection of conveyances where there is reasonable cause to believe that the mobility of the conveyance makes it impracticable to obtain a warrant;
- (4) in any other exceptional or emergency circumstance where time or opportunity to apply for a warrant is lacking; or
- (5) in any other situations where a warrant is not constitutionally required.

(d) Issuance and execution of administrative inspection warrants shall be as follows:

(1) Any judge of the United States or of a State court of record, or any United States magistrate, may, within his territorial jurisdiction, and upon proper oath or affirmation showing probable cause, issue warrants for the purpose of conducting administrative inspections authorized by this title or regulations thereunder, and seizures of property appropriate to such inspections. For the purposes of this section, the term "probable cause" means a valid public interest in the effective enforcement of this title or regulations thereunder sufficient to justify administrative inspections of the area, premises, building, or conveyance, or contents thereof, in the circumstances specified in the application for the warrant.

(2) A warrant shall issue only upon an affidavit of an officer or employee having knowledge of the facts alleged, sworn to before the judge or magistrate and establishing the grounds for issuing the warrant. If the judge or magistrate is satisfied that grounds for the application exist or that there is probable cause to believe they exist, he shall issue a warrant identifying the area, premises, building, or conveyance to be inspected, the purpose of such inspection, and, where appropriate, the type of property to be inspected, if any. The warrant shall identify the items or types of property to be seized, if any. The warrant shall be directed to a person authorized under subsection (b) (2) to execute it. (B) On and after the date prescribed by the Attorney General pursuant to clause (2) of section 703(c) of title II, the requirements of a manufacturer's license with respect to a basic class of narcotic drug under the Narcotics Manufacturing Act of 1960, and of a registration under section 4722 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 as a prerequisite to issuance of such a license, shall be superseded by a requirement of actual registration (as distinguished from provisional registration) as a manufacturer of that class of drug under section 303(a) of title II.

Ante, p. 1253.

(C) On and after the effective date of the repeal of such section 4722 by section 1101(b)(3) of this title, but prior to the date specified in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, the requirement of registration under such section 4722 as a prerequisite of a manufacturer's license under the Narcotics Manufacturing Act of 1960 shall be superseded by a requirement of either (i) actual registration as a manufacturer under section 303 of title II or (ii) provisional registration (by virtue of a preexisting registration under such section 4722) under section 703 of title II.

(d) Any orders, rules, and regulations which have been promulgated under any law affected by this title and which are in effect on the day preceding enactment of this title shall continue in effect until modified, superseded, or repealed.

¹Year of Law means the last year in which the jurisdiction's marihuana laws were revised or amended in any way. This includes those jurisdictions that enacted entirely new laws, as well as those that may have only changed a penalty provision.

²The Uniform Controlled Substances Act classifies marihuana as a hallucinogen. This is the modern trend, as most jurisdictions have come to realize that scientifically marihuana is not a narcotic.

³Conditional discharge is designed to permit a judge to place a first offender on probation in lieu of sentencing him to prison. It is usually applicable only to cases of first offense possession, and is available only once with respect to any person. In addition, this provision calls for confidentiality of the defendant's record upon fulfillment of all the terms and conditions of his probation. This precludes any criminal record from following the individual in later life.

⁴Some jurisdictions have created a separate penalty for possession of a limited amount of marihuana. While state laws usually do not specify their reasons, it may be inferred these states consider possession of less than the designated amount to be possession for personal use.

5 In states with no special provision for possession of small amounts, the "possession" offense covers possession of any amount. In states which do not have such a special provision, "possession" offense covers possession of over the specified amount. Possession does not include possession with intent to sell. This offense is usually punishable as if it were the actual offense of sale. Thus, the penalty for possession with intent to sell is the same as that for sale in 16 jurisdictions. The following 12 jurisdictions do not have a penalty for possession with intent to sell: Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Maine, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, Pennsylvania, Texas, and the District of Columbia. Six other states have made possession with intent to sell a separate offense from sale: Arizona, California, New York, Ohio, Rhode Island, and Vermont.

6 This heading may include delivery, distribution, dispensing, furnishing, transportation, trafficking or transfer according to the individual jurisdiction.

7 "NNT" designates not more than.

8 There are several jurisdictions that give prosecutorial discretion as to whether a particular offender is to be treated as a felon or a misdemeanant. This is indicated on the chart by use of "OR" in the appropriate column.

9 In the Mississippi Uniform Act, two separate penalties for possession were mistakenly included. The Mississippi Legislature is currently attempting to correct this error.

GUIDELINES FOR ESTABLISHING A POLICY AND PROCEDURES FOR DRUG DISCOVERY IN SCHOOLS

As one of its major tasks, the school is responsible for providing a safe and healthful environment conducive to wholesome living and effective learning. To help provide such an environment at a time when drug abuse is a serious social and health problem, school divisions should establish policies and procedures relative to drug abuse in the schools and on school property. This is necessary so that all school personnel (students as well as employees), local health agencies, local law enforcement officials, parents, and citizens of the community are aware of the role the school will play in any situation involving the use of drugs in school. The Guidelines for Establishing A Policy and Procedures for Drug Discovery in Schools have been prepared to assist school divisions in developing a plan of action to be followed when a student is suspected of using or is actually caught using, possessing, or selling drugs in school or on school property.

SCHOOL BOARD POLICY

Local school boards are requested to adopt and publish a policy governing the use, possession, and sale of drugs by students. This policy statement should:

1. Emphasize the education, health, and welfare of students, instead of punitive action.
2. Provide help for drug-troubled students who seek counseling.
3. Provide for appropriate disciplinary action when drug abuse problems arise.
4. Be legally sound and permit staff members to carry out their responsibilities without fear of repercussions. Policy statements should be reviewed by the school board's attorney and/or commonwealth's attorney before adoption. They should establish clear lines of authority and good responsibility for all members of the school staff.

5. Permit the principal and/or other persons designated by the school board to search a student's locker or desk under the following circumstances:
 - a. When the students have been informed in advance that, under school board regulations, desks and lockers may be inspected if facts exist which give the administration reasonable belief that articles and materials exist which would be injurious to pupils.
 - b. When facts exist which give the administration reasonable belief that articles and materials exist which are likely to pose a threat to the maintenance of discipline and order in the school.
6. The principal should make provision for controlling the use of parking areas on school property and steps to be taken in prosecuting offenders.
7. Establish procedures with the police and/or juvenile authorities as to when they should be contacted and how drugs which are found should be handled.
8. Provide guidelines for the principal regarding proper procedures for allowing law enforcement officers to question students while they are under the school's authority.

Implementing School Board Policy

Procedures should be set up so that when a member of a school's staff becomes aware of a drug abuse incident he knows the precise steps to be followed. These procedures should become part of a school's written health services policies which should delineate basic rules for handling all emergency health situations, including suspected drug abuse.

All professional personnel at some time may be intimately involved in discovery of the use, possession, or sale of drugs in the school. Suggestions relative to the role of such personnel follow:

Principal

1. The principal's first responsibility in the administration of the school board's policy relative to drug abuse should be to properly review and interpret that policy to both his professional and non-professional staff.
2. He should have a knowledge of drugs and drug abuse.
3. He should keep abreast of all local, State, and federal laws relative to the use, sale, and possession of dangerous drugs.

4. He, or his designated representative, should be notified of all drug-related incidents in the school. He should send to the school nurse any pupil referred to him whose appearance and behavior seem symptomatic of drug abuse. In the absence of a nurse, he should inform the parent that the student is ill and request the parent to come to the school. When the parent arrives at school, he or she should be informed of the problem and requested to remove the student from the school and have him examined by the family physician.
5. If the student is in need of immediate medical attention, the principal should inform the student's parents and make arrangements to transfer the student to a local hospital to be placed under the care of the family physician.
6. He should require any student under medical care and using prescribed medication in school to present to the school nurse, to the principal, or to someone officially designated by him a doctor's order stating the type of medication prescribed for the student, dosage, and duration of treatment.
7. He should designate a staff member to keep accurate and detailed records on all drug incidents (all such information should be treated as being confidential).
8. He should report all drug abuse incidents to the division superintendent of schools, or his designee.

Teacher

1. The teacher should have knowledge of drugs and drug abuse.
2. He should be able to recognize significant changes in appearance and behavior of students. (Material on Pages 1 and 2 of the Department's publication, Drugs and Drug Abuse, will help teachers recognize symptoms of drug abuse.)
3. He should report students showing symptoms of drug abuse to the principal, who in turn may refer them to the nurse.
4. He should be alert to the presence of strangers in the school building or on the school grounds. These incidents should be brought to the immediate attention of the principal.
5. All teachers should properly supervise all areas of the school including rest rooms and locker rooms.

Nurse

1. The nurse should have knowledge of drugs and drug abuse.
2. She should be able to recognize symptoms of drug abuse.
3. She should observe the student referred to her and, having considered the information supplied by the teacher and/or principal, determine whether the pupil is in need of immediate medical attention. If so, she should inform the principal who is responsible for contacting the student's parents, unless in keeping with school board policy he has delegated responsibilities enumerated under the heading "Principal" to a staff member.

4. She should keep the principal advised of pertinent information about harmful drugs and drug abuse.
5. She should keep accurate and detailed records of all drug incidents. If there is no school nurse, the principal should designate someone on his staff to keep such records.

Guidance Counselor

1. The guidance counselor should become informed about the nature and effects of dangerous drugs and other harmful substances.
2. He should be able to recognize symptoms of drug abuse.
3. When pupil problems associated with drugs are identified, he must keep the principal fully informed and work very closely with appropriate staff members.

Other Professional Staff

1. They should become informed about the nature and effects of dangerous drugs and other harmful substances.
2. They should be able to recognize symptoms of drug abuse.
3. When pupil problems associated with drugs are identified, the principal must be kept fully informed.
4. They should work closely with those staff members to whom the principal has designated responsibility for handling drug problems.

PROTOTYPE POLICY AND PROCEDURES FOR DRUG DISCOVERY IN SCHOOLS

Recognizing that the use and abuse of harmful drugs by students has become a local, State, and National problem, the _____ (City/County) School Board adopted the following policy concerning the sale, possession, dispensing, and/or use of drugs on school property and at all school sponsored activities:

SCHOOL RESPONSIBILITY

The schools are responsible for maintaining an environment in which students are protected from drugs and drug related activities. The community rightfully expects the school to exercise this responsibility to prevent drug problems from arising.

The laws regarding the sale, possession, and usage of drugs are clear; and appropriate penalties are provided for violators of these laws. All members of the school community are subject to these laws on the school grounds as well as elsewhere and have the responsibility as citizens to uphold these laws.

As in handling all student health problems, school personnel should be cognizant of the need and responsibility to think in terms of the welfare of the individual student as well as the entire student population. Because of the seriousness of a drug problem, no one staff member should attempt to handle such a problem alone but should follow the same procedure used in the referral or handling of other academic behavioral, emotional, and/or health problems.

PROCEDURES

The principal has the overall responsibility within his school for the disposition of drug related incidents. All referrals of drug use or abuse cases within the school should be made to him or his designated representative. He is responsible for all contacts within the school, between the school and outside agencies, and/or parents concerning drug problems. The principal will make the decision relative to when the law enforcement officials shall be involved and has the responsibility of informing the parents or legal guardian.

The principal or designated authority in his absence shall immediately remove a student who is discovered using, possessing, or selling drugs on school property. In all cases, the superintendent shall be notified of such action.

The principal has this drug policy as his authority for any appropriate action and shall be guided by the specific steps herein. At the beginning of each school year, all school personnel shall be informed of this policy.

SEARCHING LOCKERS AND DESKS

The principal or designated person in his absence may search a student's locker or desks under the following circumstances:

- a. When the student has been informed in advance that under school board regulations desks and lockers may be inspected if the administration has reason to suspect the presence of articles or materials injurious to the best interest of the school.
- b. When the principal suspects the presence of drugs or other harmful substances which are likely to pose a threat to the maintenance of discipline and order in the school.
- c. When a witness is present.

HANDLING CONTRABAND MATERIAL

Any contraband material is to be turned over immediately to the principal or designated person in his absence who is personally responsible for holding and delivering them to the public authorities.

Such materials should be received in the presence of witnesses and marked for future identification. A receipt with witnesses' signatures should be furnished the owner, if known, and one demanded from the officer who takes possession.

SUPERVISING PARKING AND OTHER AREAS OF THE SCHOOLS

1. Shall request all visitors to register at the office when entering school property, including grounds. Persons who "hang around" with no legitimate reason for their presence shall be requested to report to the principal immediately.
2. Shall supervise all parking areas and school grounds during lunch hours and at other times when students are out of class. Any person found in the areas with no legitimate reason shall be reported to the principal immediately. He shall take appropriate action as indicated under "Discovery of Drug Abuse."

3. Should lock all areas of the school that are seldom used, such as basements and storage areas, to prevent their use of illicit purposes.

LAW ENFORCEMENT AUTHORITIES

The principal should arrange periodic meetings with local law enforcement authorities on drug abuse. Arrangements should be made to cooperate with the local, State, and Federal law enforcement authorities in the detection, prevention, and prosecution of possible violations.

Student Counseling

Students who have questions concerning drugs should be encouraged to seek the help and counsel of school personnel. School personnel who are approached by students for help on drug problems should follow one or more of the following procedures depending upon the nature of the request:

1. Counsel the student on the need to evaluate and remedy his problem.
2. Encourage the student to discuss his problem with his parents or guardians and inform them that the parents must be notified.
3. Inform the student about community agencies that are available to help with his or her problem after consultation with the principal.
