ABSTRACT

Services available to migrants in California are listed in this directory. Migrant programs which existed in the first part of 1973 are identified by county. Community Action Agencies and labor camps in the state (with the exception of those labor camps operated under the state Migrant Family Housing Centers program) are included. Information for each county includes the total population, estimated migrant population, migrant labor demand, estimated migrant wages, names of crops, work periods, and migrant programs. Briefly described in the appendix are the methodology used for the survey of California's migrant programs; Title III-B migrant programs; College Assistance Migrant Program; High School Equivalency Program; Title I Migrant Education; migrant health services; and migrant family housing centers. Dear Sir(s):

MIGRANT PROGRAMS IN CALIFORNIA was developed by a grant from the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity, Migrant Division, to the Colorado Migrant Council's Juárez-Lincoln Graduate Center. This book is the second in a series of three and follows MIGRANT PROGRAMS IN TEXAS.

This handbook was compiled for use by agencies working with migrant farm workers. It is our objective that in the utilization of this directory, the awareness of programmatic services and needs of migrant farm workers will be increased.

Sincerely yours,

INTRODUCTION

In 1971, the Manpower, Evaluation and Development Institute reported to the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity that only 9% of 4,000 migrant families interviewed in their study had applied for public assistance, even though most families had incomes well within the O.E.O. established poverty guidelines. It is our opinion that low participation in public assistance programs by migrants is due to the self-determination of migrants to work rather than accept such public assistance. Reasons given for low participation, according to the study, included among others, "unawareness of programs' existence".

In preparing this directory of services available to migrants in California, it is our contention that the lack of awareness of migrant programs is not restricted to migrants, but includes personnel of agencies serving migrants.

Therefore, the efforts of this publication were concentrated in identifying programs available to migrants county by county. Although California is one of the most advanced states in the nation in keeping data on the agricultural labor force, program information was difficult to obtain.

Especially significant was the Title I Migrant Education program. Rather than keeping all the information at the state level, California has initiated a plan for migrant education that delegates this function to regional offices. Due to the decentralization of Title I Migrant Education on the state level to the local regions, information received from the Title I Migrant Education programs was neither uniform nor very adaptable for our use.

Although the research for this publication was comprehensive in scope, the materials contained herein are limited. First, we did not feel we should include Community Action Agencies since in all likelihood they will not be in existence much longer. Also, all of the labor camps in the state are not included. Instead we have included only the labor camps operated under the state Migrant Family Housing Centers program.

An important consideration in utilizing this directory is the current status of the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity. It is still uncertain whether this Federal agency will continue to exist. As a direct result of the state of flux, migrant programs are uncertain as to their future existence. Some are being considered for continuation, while others have yet to begin the process.

In summary, the compilation of this publication attempted to include programs which were in existence during our visit to the State of California in the first part of 1973.

MIGRANT PROGRAMS IN COUNTY

Gridley Labor Camp Clinic
Route 1, Box 355
Gridley, California

Funded by: U.S.D.H.E.W., State of California
Service Area: Butte County
Migrant Population Served: 655
Migrant Population Not Served: 1,445 (during peak season)

This clinic has been in operation for about 10-1/2 years. It provides bilingual health education, nursing care, performs screening and laboratory tests, emergency medical service on a fee-for-service basis and dental referrals. Counseling and supervised child care are also provided. Referrals for employment and other available services are also part of the program services.

The clinic, in providing services, relies on a consumer advisory board composed of 9 members to assist in determining priorities. The advisory board addresses such issues as the identification of health needs, the types of services acceptable to the farm worker population, and the scheduling of clinics.

Rural California Housing Corporation
Gridley, California

Funded by: O.E.O. Title III-B
Service Area: Gridley
Migrant Population Served: 20 families
Migrant Population Not Served: Information not available

In Gridley there are two housing projects being administered through the Rural California Housing Corporation (see Sacramento County profile). Each project will provide housing for 10 families. The Rural California Housing Corporation is providing technical assistance in land acquisition, loan processing, construction, and construction supervision.

Title I Migrant Education
Region II

Funded by: U.S.D.H.E.W.
Service Area: Butte County
Migrant Population Served: Information not available
Migrant Population Not Served: Information not available

Programs operating under Title I Migrant Education provide supplementary educational activities and training for personnel to provide education for migrant children that can be tailored to their specific needs and migratory patterns. Main goals of the program are:

- * to provide a curriculum and methodology which deals with the rate of change of schools by migrant children
- * to provide health care and social services to assist migrant children while in school
- * to cooperate in interstate communication on the progress of the migrant child through the migrant student record transfer system.

Each county having Title I Migrant Programs is administratively a member of a region. For additional information, refer to appendix, Title I Migrant Education.

School Districts participating in the Title I Migrant Education Program in Region II were not reported. Consequently, the districts listed below are those districts that are eligible for a Title I Migrant Education program. Funded by: State and Federal funds
Service area: Colusa County
Migrant Population Served: 100 migrant families
Migrant Population Not Served: Information not available

This camp is one of 27 migrant family housing centers operated by the State of California. In this, one of the most innovative efforts to provide migrant families with housing, health care, and education services, California appears to be a trend-setter.

The housing provided in the migrant family housing centers is low-cost, quality housing with laundry and sanitation facilities.

Health care provided in the camps includes services for the entire family. Services include diagnostic and screening clinics, prenatal and post partum care, immunizations, general examination and hospital referral. Educational services provided include adult basic education, compensatory education, summer school, and early childhood day care centers.

Migrant family housing centers are organized as self-contained communities. Consequently, residents elect a camp council to make policy and govern the camp and to advise the administrative office on matters such as operation, maintenance, and administration of the centers.

Migrant Family Housing Centers

Funded by: Combination of funds from Federal and State Agencies
 Service Area: Kern County
 Migrant Population Served: Total of 200 migrant families (see breakdown below)
 Migrant Population Not Served: Information not available

These camps are two of 27 migrant family housing centers operated by the State of California. In this, one of the most innovative efforts to provide migrant families with housing, health care, and educational services, California appears to be a trend-setter.

The housing provided in the migrant family housing centers is low-cost, quality housing with laundry and sanitation facilities. Health care provided in the camps includes services for the entire family. Services include diagnostic and screening clinics, prenatal and post partum care, immunizations, general examination, and hospital referral. Educational services provided include adult basic education, compensatory education, summer school, and early childhood day care centers.

Migrant family housing centers are organized as self-contained communities. Consequently, residents elect a camp council to make policy and govern the camp and to advise the administrative office on matters such as operation, maintenance and administration of the centers.

Service Area: Merced County
Migrant Population Served: 324 migrant families (see breakdown below)
Migrant Population Not Served: Information not available

These camps are five of 27 migrant family housing centers operated by the State of California. In this, one of the most innovative efforts to provide migrant families with housing, health care, and educational services, California appears to be a trend-setter.

The housing provided in the migrant family housing centers is low-cost, quality housing with laundry and sanitation facilities. Health care provided in the camps includes services for the entire family. Services include diagnostic and screening clinics, prenatal and post partum care, immunizations, general examination, and hospital referral. Educational services provided include adult basic education, compensatory education, summer school, and early childhood day care centers.

Migrant family housing centers are organized as self-contained communities. Consequently, residents elect a camp council to make policy and govern the camp and to advise the administrative office on matters such as operation, maintenance and administration of the centers.

Migrant Family Housing Centers

Funded by: Combination of funds from Federal and State Agencies
Service Area: Riverside County
Migrant Population Served: 105 migrant families
Migrant Population Not Served: Information not available

This camp is one of 27 migrant family housing centers operated by the State of California. In this, one of the most innovative efforts to provide migrant families with housing, health care, and educational services, California appears to be a trend-setter.

The housing provided in the migrant family housing centers is low-cost, quality housing with laundry and sanitation facilities. Health care provided in the camps includes services for the entire family. Services include diagnostic and screening clinics, prenatal and post partum care, immunizations, general examination, and hospital referral. Educational services provided include adult basic education, compensatory education, summer school, and early childhood day care centers.

Migrant family housing centers are organized as self-contained communities. Consequently, residents elect a camp council to make policy and govern the camp and to advise the administrative office on matters such as operation, maintenance and administration of the centers.

In Riverside County, the migrant family housing center is located at:

Indio Labor Camp
Indio, California
(105 family units).

Service Area: Sacramento County
Migrant Population Served: 400
Migrant Population Not Served: 2,230 during peak season

The Concilio is a federation of 22 Mexican American organizations dedicated to social, economic, educational, and environmental growth of Mexican Americans. It provides services to approximately 8,000 clients, of which about 5% are migrant agricultural farmworkers. Some of the services provided include securing employment, welfare, education, housing, medical services, immigration, consumer guidance, referrals, and follow-up service. The Concilio also provides assistance in translating, interpreting, and counselling. Legal assistance is also offered. Health Services provided include recruitment for medical care foundation health plan. This plan provides access to medical services, private physicians, and availability of medical benefits in all categories.

The Concilio in cooperation with a local television station presents a one-hour program every week spotlighting issues of interest to Spanish-Speaking persons.

Another service provided by the Concilio is in the area of economic development. Staff support, technical assistance and business packaging are part of the services offered under the economic development component.

Manpower training is also offered by the Concilio. This includes both on-the-job training and academic courses aimed at developing careers in said services, community relations, education and public health.

In some cases, emergency services can be provided. These include clothing, food, shelter, transportation, food stamps, furniture and funeral assistance.

The operating policy of the Concilio is determined by a Board of Directors that also serves in an advisory capacity. Each of the 22 affiliate organizations elects one member to the Board. About 60% of the total membership of the Board of Directors are low-income Spanish Speaking.

Service Area: Butte, Colusa, Glenn, Lake, Mendocino, Napa, Placer, Sacramento, Sonoma, Sutter, Yolo
Migrant Population Served: 478 families
Migrant Population Not Served: 3,614 families

This federally funded program provides a means for self-help housing and long term low interest loans for qualifying families. Under self-help housing, participants learn during three phases of building: pre-construction, construction, and post-construction.

During pre-construction land acquisition, client recruitment, loan processing, and construction training takes place.

At construction time, RCHC provides technical assistance and supervision. Construction under self-help housing begins when 6 to 10 families organize and decide to build. Families learn building techniques and assist each other in actual construction work. Each family contributes 30 hours of labor/work.

In the post-construction period, RCHC holds workshops in which participants learn landscaping, interior decorating, home economics, and budgeting. In Sacramento County, there are 19 families being served.

The RCHC is governed by a 13 member Board of Directors, 8 of whom are former migrants. In addition, each county has a county advisory committee who meets monthly and submits reports to the Board of Directors.

The County Health District is involved in an environmental project directly related with migrant and seasonal agricultural farm workers. The local health officials in the district inspect crop harvesting sites for housing code violations. In 1972, approximately 1,152 sites were inspected with only 32% complying with housing regulations. Of 402 labor camps located in the county, only 181 were registered. Labor camp locations are determined by aircraft surveillance, with a follow-up visit by a sanitation aide. In addition to surveying harvest sites, the local health district also inspects mobile food vending units to insure that such facilities comply with safety and sanitary regulations.

Supportive services such as counseling, individualized classes and tutors are provided for the students. Once the students have graduated, the HEP program also provides placement services for college entrance, vocational training and employment. A policy advisory committee meets approximately 6 times a year to advise the program administration. The advisory committee is comprised of 33% HEP students, 51% farm workers, and the remaining 16% is selected at large.

Migrant Family Housing Centers

Funded by: Combination of funds from Federal and State Agencies
Service Area: Stanislaus County
Migrant Population Served: Total of 222 migrant families (see breakdown below)
Migrant Population Not Served: Information not available

These camps are three of 27 migrant family housing centers operated by the State of California. In this, one of the most innovative efforts to provide migrant families with housing, health care, and educational services, California appears to be a trend-setter.

The housing provided in the migrant family housing centers is low-cost, quality housing with laundry and sanitation facilities. Health care provided in the camps includes services for the entire family. Services include diagnostic and screening clinics, prenatal and post partum care, immunizations, general examination, and hospital referral. Educational services provided include adult basic education, compensatory education, summer school, and early childhood day care centers.

Migrant family housing centers are organized as self-contained communities. Consequently, residents elect a camp council to make policy and govern the camp and to advise the administrative office on matters such as operation, maintenance and administration of the centers.

The three camps in Stanislaus County are:

Empire Labor Camp
5130 South Avenue
Empire, California
(78 family units)

Patterson Labor Camp

D.Q.U. is the sponsor and grantee for the National Migrant Worker Program (NMWP). To assist in the National Migrant Worker Program, D.Q.U. has sub-contracted with Trabajadores Adelante in Gilroy; La Clinica de Salubridad in El Centro; Fresno County Community Action Agency; and Greater California Education Project of Modesto.

The NMWP provides manpower training and supportive services to allow a migrant family to leave the migrant stream and become employed in a more stationary or stable job. Once a family has qualified under NMWP guidelines, trainees are tested for aptitudes and vocational interests. After counselling, a trainee is enrolled in any of several types of training programs. These include institutional training, on-the-job training, private sector training and a combination of work experience with training.

As soon as the trainee has completed his training period he is placed in a job. If relocation is needed, NMWP also assists in this. Working in the job, however, is not necessarily the final step of the NMWP. After a trainee is employed, efforts are made to provide opportunities for continued training and upward job mobility.

In conjunction with the services provided the trainee, NMWP also provides family services. Medical services, transportation, child care services, relocation services, job placement and follow-up services are provided.

Programs operating under Title I Migrant Education provide supplementary educational activities and training for personnel to provide education for migrant children that can be tailored to their specific needs and migratory patterns. Main goals of the program are:

- * to provide a curriculum and methodology which deals with the rate of change of schools by migrant children
- * to provide health care and social services to assist migrant children while in school
- * to cooperate in interstate communication on the progress of the migrant child through the migrant student record transfer system.

Each county having Title I Migrant Programs is administratively a member of a region. For additional information, refer to appendix, Title I Migrant Education.

School Districts participating in the Title I Migrant Education Program in Region II were not reported. Consequently, the districts listed below are those districts that are eligible for a Title I Migrant Education program. Those marked with an asterisk (*) are school districts receiving priorities for funding.

Migrant Population Not Served: Information not available

Under the California Department of Human Resources Development, the Division of Employment Data and Research issues a semi-monthly Farm Labor Report. This publication reports timely information on crops, activity, acreage, peak labor requirements, how many are working, what additional labor force is needed, facilities available for farm workers, and the prevailing wage rates.

For information collection and dissemination, there have been established Rural Manpower Centers. In this county, Rural Manpower Centers are located at:

APPENDIX

METHODOLOGY FOR THE SURVEY OF
MIGRANT PROGRAMS IN CALIFORNIA

In order to acquire and compile data for this report, a standard research design was implemented. This included preliminary research from central information sources, identification of data base, on-site visits and final compilation of information.

PRELIMINARY RESEARCH. Preliminary information on California was conducted by utilizing the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity, Migrant Division, California state agencies, and local social agencies. From correspondence with these agencies, counties with migrant population and/or programs were identified. Additionally, funding proposals of Title III-B programs were at our disposal. After identification of migrant counties and programs was complete, a verification process was implemented in which all identified migrant programs were contacted by phone or mail to verify the existence of a migrant population and their operation.

IDENTIFICATION OF DATA BASE. After preliminary information had been accumulated and verified, counties to be surveyed were established according to the following criteria:

- 1) Significant (over 100) migrant population during any season, or
- 2) Existence of a migrant program, or
- 3) Inclusion in service area of a migrant program.

According to our information and sources listed below, 43 of the 58 counties in California met the criteria.

INFORMATION SOURCES.

- 1) County Population - Population figures for all California counties are from the official 1970 Census. This is the source for the latest available statistics on population.
- 2) County Migrant Population - Estimates of migrant population by county are from the California State Department of Human Resources Development's Report 881M #11. This publication is current as of February 1973. This report is compiled by the Employment Data and Research Division of the Department of Human Resources Development and gives mid-month estimates of agricultural employment by type of worker for California counties by month. Only the peak month estimates were included in our reports.
- 3) Migrant Wages - Wage estimates are from the California State Department of Human Resources Development's Report 881-A. Twenty-four of these semi-monthly reports were obtained for a time period ranging from February 1972 to March 1973. This provided s with a complete picture of wages for farm workers over a one-year period. The lowest and highest wages by county for this same period are included in our report.

- 4) Migrant Labor Demand - Figures are from the California State Department of Human Resources Development's Report 881-A. This is the peak labor requirement in man weeks by county, and only peak month estimates were included in our reports. A man week is defined as one man working for one week. We determined the migrant labor demand by analyzing the 24 reports available and citing only the peak month estimate.
- 5) Crops Grown In County - This information is from the following booklets published by the Crop and Livestock Reporting Service of the California State Department of Agriculture:
 - A) California Vegetable Crops (1970-1971)
 - B) California Grape Acreage - 1972
 - C) California Fruit & Nut Acreage - 1971
 - D) California Field Crop Statistics
 - E) California Agriculture - 1971
- 6) Harvest Season - California Agriculture - 1971, Crop and Livestock Reporting Service of the California State Department of Agriculture.
- 7) Other Work Periods - California Guide for Farm Workers, Department of Human Resources Development's Rural Manpower Service.

ON-SITE VISITS. Projects and agencies visited on-site were limited according to the amounts of information which were available. Apart from state agencies, county agencies were visited in Fresno, Sacramento, Tulare, Madera, Kings, San Diego, Imperial, San Luis Obispo, Los Angeles, and Kern. Organizations visited included all Title III-B agencies such as the Greater California Education Project, Trabajadores Adelante, and Campesinos Unidos.

FINAL COMPILATION OF INFORMATION. All information gathered from field visits, correspondence and research was compiled on agency and county profile forms designed and developed specifically for this project. From these information forms, data was edited and compiled into the resulting report.

TITLE III-B MIGRANT PROGRAMS

Under the Economic Opportunity Act, Title III-B funds are allocated for the establishment of programs to prepare migrant and seasonal farm workers for upgraded jobs; to provide alternatives to farm work, if they so desire; and to provide assistance to the family.

Projects operating under Title III-B provide a multi-pronged approach to ameliorating the situation of the migrant and seasonal farm worker. Some projects are established for the adult head of household with emphasis on skill training in preparation for job training. Other projects are aimed at serving the entire family. Some of these projects are in the area of health, nutrition, medical services, housing and counseling. Some projects also concentrate on a specific age group such as infants and children, high school aged youth, and college aged youth. For these groups, Title III-B provides early childhood development, HEP, and CAMP programs.

Project sponsors of Title III-B include state and local government agencies, universities, non-profit corporations, local agencies and church-related groups.

In the State of California there are seven Title III-B agencies (excluding HEP and CAMP programs).

COLLEGE ASSISTANCE MIGRANT PROGRAM (CAMP)

The College Assistance Migrant Program (CAMP) was established by the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity to assist migrant and/or seasonal agricultural farm worker youth to enroll and successfully complete a four-year college program.

Eligible students are migrant youths who have either graduated from high school or hold a High School Equivalency diploma and whose families earn less than the Federal poverty income levels established by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The CAMP program not only provides assistance to students, it also provides supportive services such as counseling, curriculum advising, tutorial services, and other special services as the students' needs determine. As part of CAMP students are enrolled in a summer session of preparatory work and orientation to college life, workshops in basic college skills and study habits.

CAMP students attend college at one of approximately four colleges hosting CAMP programs. California hosts one CAMP program.

HIGH SCHOOL EQUIVALENCY PROGRAM (HEP)

The High School Equivalency Program (HEP) was established by the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity to help migrant children who have not graduated from high school. HEP offers residential training leading to passage of the General Educational Development (GED) examination, or into a career ladder job or college.

Eligible students are migrant youths who have dropped out of school and are between the ages of 17 and 22 and whose families earn less than the Federal poverty guidelines as determined by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

HEP students live at one of 18 program sites situated on college campuses scattered throughout the United States. In addition to instruction, HEP students receive room and board, intensive counseling and a weekly stipend of $10.

TITLE I MIGRANT EDUCATION

California has over 80,000 migrant children eligible to participate in migrant education and concentrated in 34 counties located within the seven major crop harvesting areas in the state. To serve these migrant children, the State Department of Education has implemented a California Plan for the Education of Migrant Children. The objectives of the California Plan are:

- 1) to maintain a month for month learning rate so that one month in attendance in participating schools will produce one month's progress in school subject matter.
- 2) to maintain the rate of attendance of the migrant child at the same rate of a child in residence by providing child welfare and family related programs.
- 3) Maintaining health of migrant child.
- 4) Training of personnel working with migrant children for more effective teaching
- 5) Maintaining interstate cooperation; and sharing of information to provide a continuous educational program for students.

The administration of the California Plan for the Education of Migrant Children is decentralized and based in six regional offices according to districts. Districts are determined by migrant population in the state. In each region, a county superintendent of schools is designated as the state's agent for supplementary education of migrant children. Because each Regional office controls Title I Migrant Education funds, the county superintendent is responsible for contracting with school districts, marshalling resources within his county and assisting in the management of the regional effort. This particular administrative system allows for policy determination and coordination on a state level, management at the regional level and supervision at the local operational level.

Under the California Plan, any child who has moved with his family from one school district to another during the past year so that a parent or other member of the immediate family might secure employment in agriculture or in related food processing activities qualifies for participation in migrant education.

As part of Title I Migrant Education, the California Plan includes procedures for migrant parents to participate in the program. Some parents are employed as aides. Others, according to the California State Department of Education, are members of parent committees which assist in developing programs, mobilizing and coordinating community resources, planning, implementing and evaluating program objectives.

Parent committee participation is done at three levels: first, the local district advisory committee, second the county coordinating committee and then the regional advisory committee. At the local level, district committee members are appointed by the school district official. In the county coordinating committee, the county superintendent appoints some representatives from the school district committee and includes agencies and other representatives to assist him. This committee attempts to coordinate resources and provide maximum utilization of facilities in implementing a migrant education plan. The regional advisory committee is selected by the county superintendents in conjunction with the regional director. The regional advisory committee is comprised of members of county coordinating committees and agencies and representatives in the region.

The activities provided under the California Plan include instructional activities that are supplementary, Health and Welfare services, training of professional and para-professional personnel, and supportive services.

Instructional activities provided include in-school elementary and secondary education, pre-school education, extended day education and summer school education.

Health and Welfare Services include: medical and health, dental health and education, nutritional services, and child welfare services. Health services include immunizations and screening followed by examination and diagnosis and remediation. Welfare services include assessment and remediation of environmental, social and psychological factors causing poor school attendance.

Pre-service and in-service training for personnel includes workshops, college and university courses and practicums in teaching migrant children for experienced teachers.

Supportive services provided include transportation for children and parents, when necessary, to clinics and medical or dental facilities. Recreational programs are also provided in late afternoon and evenings.

Complementing the regional Title I Migrant Education activities, the California Plan has instituted a Migrant Teacher Assistant Mini-Corps. This service also operated under Title I Migrant Education funds operated in four regions and covered 26 counties. Under the auspices of the Mini-Corps, 200 bilingual college students who wanted to become teachers worked as teacher assistants in summer migrant education programs. The Mini-Corps members were trained and supervised by faculty of California State College.

In conjunction with migrant education, California also provided Mobile Dental Clinics in three regions. Dental services included examinations, fluoride treatments, repair work, and extractions.

Under the California Plan, pre-school and daycare services are provided in publicly operated migrant family housing centers. In operating the multi-source funded early childhood programs, activities are provided to enhance the academic, social, physical and psychological development of migrant children ages 3 to 5.

MIGRANT HEALTH SERVICES

In California, the Farm Workers Health Service of the State Department of Public Health, Berkeley California, coordinates and assists Migrant Health Projects throughout the state. Additionally, it provides training, technical assistance and sponsors rural health oriented conferences. These projects are funded through federal, state and some local funds. In 1971-72, nine different projects were funded by H.E.W. through state contracts. Six projects were funded directly from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare and six projects were funded by state monies.

Health services provided to migrant farm workers vary depending on size and facilities available. In general, order of services provided to meet health needs include care for acute conditions, health counselling, laboratory tests, and care for chronic illnesses. Other services provided include pre-natal and post-partum care, well baby-child care, family planning, and screening tests. Immunizations, T.B. tests and referrals to other services are also provided. Mental and dental services are also available on a limited basis.

MIGRANT FAMILY HOUSING CENTERS

Migrant family housing centers are provided by the state by utilizing state and federal funds. In a joint venture, different state agencies have pooled their resources to provide housing, health training and educational benefits to migrant residents.

Housing provided for migrants afford low-cost, quality housing for residents. Included in the projects are laundry and sanitation facilities.

There is a day care center located at each of the 27 migrant housing centers. Services provided are cultural enrichment, supervised custodial care, health services, nutrition, supervised play-periods, language development, and meals. Day care is offered 12 hours a day, 5 to 7 day a week. Children attending are between the ages of 3 and 5. The day care operation is totally funded by the state.

There are three infant care centers. One is located at the Harney Lane Site in San Joaquin County, one is at the Dixon Site in Solano County, and the third is at the Yuba City Site in Sutter County. Supervised care of the children during the day enables both parents to work in the fields.

Educational coordination is provided at the migrant centers. This makes available compensatory education, remedial education, summer school, adult basic education, and regular school attendance.

The health services offered at the housing centers are for the entire family. Diagnostic and screening clinics are available at each center, and most centers provide preventive and curative outpatient medical services. Other services include pre-natal and post-natal care, immunizations, general examinations, screening, follow-up and hospital referral.

The 27 family migrant centers are self-contained communities located near agricultural activities and sources of community services. Each of the housing centers is governed by a camp council. The residents of the center elect members to the camp council which is comprised of residents and the Migrant Advisory Board of the central office. The camp council holds regular meetings and recommends spending of profits made in the laundry facilities and other small projects. Also, the camp council advises and recommends actions directly related to the operation, maintenance, and administration of the housing center.
