ABSTRACT

Presented by handicapping condition are program standards in Ohio for public special education of exceptional children, 6 to 18 years of age, and for legal dismissal from school attendance. The state board of education is said to be authorized by the state legislature to prescribe and adopt standards, grant permission to local school districts to operate programs, and to provide services for handicapped students. Program standards are given for the following handicaps: aural handicaps, physical handicaps, visual handicaps, multiple handicaps, learning and behavioral disabilities, emotional disturbance, and mental handicaps (educable only). Also, standards are given for speech, language, and hearing services; school psychological services; transportation; individual instructional services; individual supplemental services; and legal dismissal from school attendance. Typically specified in relation to handicapping condition are general guidelines for the special education unit; eligibility; assessment and placement; aspects of the comprehensive program (including services); class size and age range; housing, facilities, equipment, and materials; the educational program; supervision and other support staff; and qualifications for teachers, aides, therapists, and volunteers. Specified for severely handicapped students are standards for individual instructional services such as home or telephone instruction and supplemental tutoring. It is explained that legal dismissal from school concerns school age children with IQ levels under 50 and is based upon evidence of psychological evaluation, trial placement in programs, and conferences with parents. INTRODUCTION

Appropriate instructional programs and services for handicapped children are necessary to assure that those children receive an opportunity to develop their maximum intellectual, social and career potential.

Under Chapter 3323 of the Ohio Revised Code, the Legislature has placed the responsibility for prescribing and adopting Standards for Ohio's Special Education Program for Handicapped Children with the State Board of Education. The State Board is authorized to grant permission to local school districts to operate programs and to provide services for handicapped children. The minimum Standards contain criteria to establish eligibility for State reimbursement for programs and services for handicapped children.

The adoption of new Standards for Special Education culminates six years of effort on the part of the Ohio Department of Education and local school districts to identify desirable alternatives in program organization, educational methodology, and instructional materials. This statewide search included experimental proposals submitted by individual school districts requesting approval for modification of programs which went beyond the concepts contained in the 1966 Program Standards. Statewide projects to identify new models for the assessment and placement of the handicapped child and new instructional approaches were conducted with funds made available through Title III, ESEA and Title VI, EHA. Newly developed teaching methodology was introduced into Special Education in cooperation with the state-assisted universities and local school districts. The mounting flood of new media and materials designed to facilitate the education of handicapped children has been carefully reviewed, placed in local school districts for field testing and evaluated by a statewide system of Instructional Resource and Materials Centers. Advisory Committees have met repeatedly to assist the Ohio Department of Education in the evaluation of the results of these efforts and to provide further consultation on directions that should be explored cooperatively by local school districts, universities and the Ohio Department of Education.

By January, 1973, a great deal of data had been accumulated in the files of the Department of Education indicating the nature of the modifications that had been field tested and validated. These changes have been introduced into the new Program Standards in Special Education. The first draft of these Standards was reviewed intensively with the help of Advisory Committees to the Department of Education, area meetings with superintendents of schools, discussions with parents of handicapped children, consultation with professional organizations and representatives of volunteer agencies, and the reactions of administrators of Special Education in universities and local school districts. Further consultation was obtained by the State Board of Education as they conducted their public hearing as part of the process necessary to adopt new Standards.

The Program Standards for Special Education and Legal Dismissal from School Attendance contained in the following pages reflect the many suggestions that were received. It is believed that the Standards make available to local school districts those options and alternatives which have been adequately validated and field tested. These new Standards retain the best of previous practices in Special Education, respond to the developing technology available at the local, state and national level in the education of handicapped children, allow for flexible implementation at the local school district level in accordance with the needs of the community and the child to be served, and continue the opportunity to search for alternatives which may improve Ohio's efficiency in the education of handicapped children.
