ABSTRACT

Described are proceedings of a 1973 institute in Nassau County (New York) to provide general education administrators with an overview of special education administration as well as the interface between special and general education. It is noted that the institute was cosponsored by the Division of Handicapped Children of the New York State Education Department and the Cooperative Educational Services Board of Nassau County. Explained through the media of photography and excerpts from dialogues is the Special Education Administration Task Simulation (SEATS) game which involved role-playing by institute participants in the roles of a special education administrator, budget director, superintendent, director of pupil personnel services, director of special education, assistant superintendent for instruction, and building principle. Included are comments by participants such as "my horizons have been broadened--I would feel free to consult with my opposite number from another district." (MC)

THE PURPOSE

In an attempt to identify to general education leadership the concerns of special education administrators and the needs of the children they serve, a Special Study Institute was held in Nassau County, New York, on December 13, 14, and 15, 1973. This was cosponsored by the Division of Handicapped Children, Bureau for Physically Handicapped Children, of the New York State Education Department and the Board of Cooperative Educational Services of Nassau County.

THE AIM

The Institute was designed to provide general education administrators with an overview of the role(s) of special education administration and an understanding of the integral relationship that special education has with general education. As child advocates, it was desired that the general education administrators participating in the Institute would recognize and appreciate the benefits of cooperative relationships with special education personnel and would return to their respective programs more cognizant of their responsibility to provide appropriate learning experiences for all children.

THE TOOL

The Special Education Administration Task Simulation game (SEATS), developed by Dr. Daniel D. Sage at Syracuse University, was utilized. Through the use of this simulation game, all Institute participants were involved in role-playing activities. Assuming different roles, participants were confronted with real problems and issues related to the administration of special education programs.

The SEATS game provides for the establishment of a central school district called "Dormit" and sequentially assigns Institute participants to the administrative roles within that school system.

THE INSTITUTE

The following pages of photographs and text are extractions from various role-playing activities that took place during the three-day Institute. The text extractions are taken from spontaneous dialogue among Institute participants as they acted out their various roles in the SEATS games. Each participant took a turn as the special education administrator and had the opportunity to play a variety of other roles during the three days. The photographs were taken while the "actors" were playing out some of the simulations as general educators, special educators, or parents in the simulated school system—Dormit Central School District.

you have any idea what the financial impact will be?

"We taxpayers have a right . . ."

" . . . why don't you deal with the problem?"

DIRECTOR OF BUDGET

" . . . what's best for the kid . . . not what's best for the teacher, not what's best for you . . . not what's best even for the district . . ."

ur

district is one happy family. We have no problems here.

SUPERINTENDENT

"Pretty soon this thing is going to rip wide open."

"I will get back to you."

"... if this is the kind of cooperation..."

"There seems to be a lack of communication..."

"I took your advice ...
I trusted you ...
I put confidence in you ...
I'm getting no place ...
no one calls me ...
no one informs me ...
in fact, when I call it seems to me the whole defensive mechanism goes up."

"You're not responsive to us."

Remember

it's what's best for the kid . . .

"It seems like my child has been railroaded."

"I want my child in school today."

DIRECTOR OF
PUPIL PERSONNEL SERVICES

"You've got to find a place for this kid."

"Where do we go from here?"

"Number one in my thinking is the individual child."

"When people come to me . . . I become their advocate."

"I'd like to talk to the principal right now."

ears are burning with all this stuff.

"What a bunch of bull that is."

"You're supposed to be a special educator. . . ."

"Who is in charge when they work in my building? You or me?"

DIRECTOR OF SPECIAL EDUCATION

"I'll admit he gets a little emotional at times."

"I think I'm being put off."

"I'm thoroughly disgusted."

"I've got a kid in your system . . .
you should know that kid."

'm behind you 100 percent.

"We are, however, concerned as to the double standard of graduation procedures practiced at the high school level."

"There's no way to properly schedule these kids into the program."

"I'm sure you are aware that any innovative approach causes some people to raise eyebrows."

ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT, INSTRUCTION

"Why does my classroom have to be in a basement and why can't my children take P.E. with the other children? I need a break too, you know."

"... I feel we had better begin looking at some existing programs."

his

is no reflection
on the kids,
I just need the room.

BUILDING PRINCIPAL

"... exactly how do you see your role in this district with relation to my school?"

"I run a tight ship here, we don't have any problems."

"I am completely amazed at this system and at your attitude."

"... when a message goes out of this building, it's either going to be endorsed by me or it's not going out of the building...."

"You take care of your job... I'll take care of my job."

COMMENTS from institute participants

"My horizons have been broadened. I would feel free to consult with my opposite number from another district now."

"Special education, with all of its ramifications, is more specific than general education."

"The experience was a great lesson in frustration. It's difficult to accomplish goals with unending enthusiasm if you are constantly thwarted."

"A monumental task needs the cooperation of all personnel on all levels."

"Convinced that more staffing, monies, education of community must be considered."

"It gave me an opportunity to focus on simulated problems that are very "real.""

"We'll redefine what we mean by the plan of special education in our district."

"... I am more aware of the task of the special education administrator because of this institute."

"I have become even more child-centered as a result of this institute."
