ABSTRACT

The comprehensive guide is a planned approach to career education providing the necessary concepts, facts, and activities to all students in a sequential and continuous format during their school years, K-12. The document opens with a career development scope and sequence model, and sections on career development concepts (self concept, world of work, and career planning and preparation). The major portion of the document is divided into three guides: Elementary School Career Education, K-5 (118 pages); Middle School Career Development, grades, 6-8 (149 pages); and Secondary School Career Development, grades 9-12 (279 pages). Lesson units for the various grade levels are grouped by grade under the broad headings of Self, Work World, and Career Planning and Preparation. Each heading is further subdivided under the more specific headings of career development concept, general objective, behavioral objective, suggested activities, resources and materials, and evaluation procedures. Other sections of the guide are devoted to: elementary music; a local resource guide, K-5, for the Oshkosh area; a glossary of 78 terms used in career education; and forms for evaluation by the teacher to improve the guide. PREFACE

Currently, public concern is focused on the inadequate attention schools are giving to the career development needs of youth. Educators are beginning to appreciate the need for developmental programs of career awareness and exploration activities for all students at all levels. Too often programs to facilitate career development have been ad hoc and incidental rather than carefully planned programs composed of logically organized, sequential learning experiences.

Responding to the career development needs of youth through effective programs is the responsibility of all educational personnel at all levels. Meeting this task will require that career development be assigned a high level priority and be approached in a manner commensurate with other major educational goals. The Oshkosh Career Development Guide provides an excellent framework on which to build a meaningful career development program. It offers an effective basis for encouraging the involvement and commitment of all school personnel in the implementation of its goals and objectives. The Guide is a positive response to public concern and has the potential of being a major force in making education relevant for today and tomorrow.

INTRODUCTION

"No two persons are born exactly alike, but each differs from each in natural endowments, one being suited for one occupation and another for another - - all things will be produced in superior quantity and quality and with greater ease, when each man works at a single occupation in accordance with his natural gifts."

Plato

"... we must decide what manner of men we wish to be and what calling in life we would follow; and this is the most difficult problem in the world."

Cicero

The age of the two quotes listed above speaks of the concern that man has had over the years regarding a suitable vocational choice. Over these years, various writers have delineated differing theories of vocational choice. From these theories a common note appears: that is, that vocational choice is complex and does not simply take place suddenly, out of the clear blue sky. Rather, it involves a developmental process over a period of years, and primarily during the years spent in school. Certainly, educators have been made aware of this fact and efforts have been expended in an attempt to provide guidance in vocational choice. However, these efforts have often lacked coordination and a systematic approach.

Some students have received information necessary to the process of vocational development, others not. Some students are engaged in career education activities during one semester but not during the next. Some teachers have embraced career education and some have disclaimed its use. It is just such concerns that the concept of career education attempts to alleviate. Career education is a planned approach to providing the necessary concepts, facts, and activities to all students in a sequential and continuous format during their school years, K-12. This guide, which all educators in the Oshkosh Area Schools can use in their curriculum planning, is just that - a guide. It is not a recipe book, but

SELF

The Career Development Model views SELF or SELF-UNDERSTANDING as a process in which an individual internalizes personal perceptions of his characteristics -- how others perceive him in the surrounding environment. This component of the guide deals with, to what and how an individual thinks about himself -- his attitudes, feelings, perceptions and evaluation of himself. SELF is then the individual's own frame of reference. When he looks at himself or is viewed by others he is using this internal frame of reference. What and how the individual views himself is determined by his relationship with his environment that he is in from which he extracts perceptions of his attitudes, feelings, and evaluations. Through the Career Development efforts of educators the student will receive sufficient counsel and guidance to increase his knowledge, acceptance and affirmation of what and how he thinks about himself. This ultimately is the goal of the Wisconsin Career Development Model.

Vital to the acceptance and usefulness of programs emerging from this model rests on the ability and willingness of educators and parents to provide the continuing assistance to students efforts to know, accept and affirm understanding of themselves and the world of work. Students will vary in their ability to structure their self-concept in a positive way. This only makes our job that much more complex but not impossible. No matter what level the individual is perceived, placing him increasingly in touch with "SELF" is important and represents a sound concept for Public Education.

WORLD OF WORK

During their lifetime, probably one half the children in school will be employed in occupations that are non-existent today. Therefore, instead of emphasis being placed upon an existing occupation, more attention should be devoted to understanding the world of work, attitudes toward work, and recognition of the need for continued occupational growth. Emphasis should also be placed on the fact that realization of potential requires continuous growth. Additionally, society creates within an economic atmosphere that affects each individual and his opportunities. Economic conditions not only influence his food, shelter and clothing but also his educational setting, occupational life, leisure time, and self-expression time. Because of the fact that economic conditions affect each person in many ways, it is important that this information be provided as well as the occupational information.

In the 20th Century, scientific discoveries have affected the world of work. Scientific discoveries and their applications in industry and business technology have changed organization functions and tasks, and thus have changed the nature of the world of work. As industries change, so do the manpower needs. The number and kinds of new jobs created are large, but also a large number of jobs are discontinued as a result of scientific discoveries.

The composition of the labor force has changed from one in which goods producing industries predominate. Moreover, occupational requirements have changed in favor of jobs needing more education and training. Education then needed to change toward helping individuals gain the kinds of skills and attitudes needed to find jobs that will assist them in finding fulfillment of self. At the same time the individual needs to see the relationship of his present job to a family of jobs into which he may move in the future.

Changing Role of Work in Life of Individual

Work must be perceived as being an integral part of self expression and self realization. Work should be regarded as an opportunity for expression, growth and development. If work is to be viewed as an expression of oneself and if one is ever changing, then his job and probably his occupation should change -- maybe more frequently during some periods of his life than other stages of his development. Perhaps the frame of reference should be one in which the normal development of an ever-maturing individual includes a succession of jobs during the course of his lifetime in which each job contributes to his growth and self improvement in preparation for the next.

CAREER PLANNING & PREPARATION

Information Gathering	Family	Peers	Community	Education and Training
Awareness that information on the world of work is available and where to obtain it	Awareness that one's family plays a critical role in structuring values and attitude towards one's career plans	Awareness that one's friends influence the individual's attitudes and values toward the work world	Awareness that the community may have impacting environmental elements that could affect career choice	Awareness that different workers need varying degrees of educational preparation for success
Awareness of a system for the collection and use of occupational information	Recognize what family influences are being applied (Positive or Negative)	Understand what friends are now having an impact on the individual's decision making (Reasons)	Begin to identify some of the elements in one's environment that are having impact on one's decision making	Realize that occupational competencies requirements influence the kind and degree of one's educational preparation
Develop occupational research skills and understand present and future employment trends	Understand the influence one's parents are having on career choice.	Ability to screen positive and negative information offered from friends	Understand the community influences and prepare to deal with their impact	Understand the necessity for obtaining employability skills and where to obtain these skills
Identify tentative career objectives based upon accurate and pertinent occupational and self information	Evaluate the expectation family has for you and how it might affect your decision	Realize what individuals can assist one in career planning and preparation	Recognize that career choice could be influenced by opportunities in his community	Know where and how to apply for a job

... This development...
... occupational, the professional, the...
developmentally approach calls for the collecting and utilization of information...
quested by individuals over an extended period of time. Their... and their desired purposes are crucial. Decision making at each stage of development may be regarded as the end result of acquiring and processing information.

Recent occupational changes in America require new skills, techniques and knowledge. Certain occupations are being replaced with new ones and workers are being re-trained or their education broadened for new roles. Education and training also are important in determining job opportunities. The rate of change in industry and new machines is governed to some extent by the rate workers can be educated or retrained. An industry cannot afford to install new machines nor create new jobs at a faster pace than individuals can be educated. The educational potential (including training) of available individuals is a major determinant of the rapidity of change for each business or industry. Therefore, education is becoming more of a determinant of occupations than occupations are of education. The education of an individual, his potential, his willingness to obtain it, and his ability to apply it to his occupational situation, are important factors in determining his occupational future.

Concept: An understanding and acceptance of self is important throughout life.
General Objective: Begin to recognize the need for continuous self appraisal in a diversified society.

Behavioral Objective	Suggested Activities	Resources & Materials	Evaluation Procedures
The child should be able to select activities which will strengthen his/her weaknesses.	The child chooses and records his free time activities on his own chart. These are found around the room. i.e. A Fishing Game for addition or subtraction facts. The teacher of another child listens to the facts on the fish that are caught. Phonics Games and work sheets.	Teacher constructed chart listing specific free activities. i.e. The Fishing Game Phonics Game Lesson 7 and 8 Our Working World Families at Work SRA p. 54-63 You and Me MacMillan , p.5-9	Teacher observation of the child's free time activities and his individual characteristics.
The child should recognize, his strengths and weaknesses (personal and academic) by engaging in a number of structured (though diversified) activities.	The child role plays in a "TV Program" situation showing how a child at his very best would act. Keep person graph, chart, birth date, finger prints, foot prints, height, weight.	" Lonesome Ben " record Focus on Self Kit , SRA Discussion SRA Manual P. 39	The teacher observes if the child chooses free time activities to strengthen an area of weakness. Give five words to describe self. Then have two children work as a team, giving five words to describe each other.

Behavioral Objective	Suggested Activities	Resources & Materials	Evaluation Procedures.
The child will verbally state or depict on paper six physical differences in his classroom.	The children identify obvious physical differences in their classmates. i.e., height, weight, color of eyes, hair, etc. Children help to record their own height and weight in Sept. and again in June. Each child lies down on paper and someone traces their outline. Then the child colors and cuts out the form. Then the class compares their image with others for size, color of eyes, hair, etc.	Pictures of children: Record: Cindy and the Elf. SEA - From Focus on Self Kit Physical Attributes of Self - Manual 1.18 Book: Hoppy, Sally Who Am I? Discussion can be held on the physical production of sound - what actually happens in your mouth and throat when you produce both types of sound. Vocal exercises on syllables with the different types of vowel sounds are useful if done correctly--open throat, unified shape of lips, focused sound. (These activities are progressively more advanced)	Tape Recorder Songbooks Vocal Exercises (ascending and descending scales and arpeggios) Mirrors may be helpful in noticing position of tongue and lips.	Identification of the kind of vocal production is usually done by teacher on the children as a group. A noticeable improvement of the group's vocal sound as identified by the teacher and students themselves (using a tape recorder) is the ultimate goal of the objective. Checklists could be used for individual students to evaluate themselves in sound production.

Behavioral Objective

Suggested Activities

The child will be able to create a melody for an existing short poem.

Children list items they have to know in order to be able to create a melody from a poem. This activity pre-supposes musical theory background in notation and pitch relationships.

After each child has written his melody each one can be performed by child or teacher.

Piano
Staff paper
Resource people - band director
music specialist
piano student

Children list musical knowledge they used in creating their melody.

Children and teacher evaluate melodies.

Children discuss what specifically they would need to know in order to expand on their melody.

1. To play their melody on the piano - a student in class that plays the piano could explain needed knowledge.
2. To have their melody orchestrated and played by a band - band director may briefly present how this is done.
