ABSTRACT

This document was designed for use by professionals concerned with bilingual and multicultural education. It is divided into three sections. The first encompasses various aspects of teaching methodology and materials, history and background, and evaluation problems. Part 2 focuses on the Texas law governing bilingual/multicultural education (Senate Bill 121), textbooks submitted to the Texas Education Agency (TEA) for adoption, and certification requirements established by TEA. The final section lists Texas resources in bilingual/multicultural education. (Author/PMP)

An Introduction To This Package

Written, published and distributed by the Texas Information

Service (TIS) with aid from the staff of the Dissemination Center for Bilingual Bicultural Education (DCBBE), this package is designed to fulfill some general information needs of professionals concerned with bilingual and multicultural education.

Three major sections comprise the package. The first encompasses various aspects of teaching methodology and materials, history and background, and evaluation problems. The second section focuses on the Texas law governing bilingual/multicultural education (Senate Bill 121), textbooks submitted to the Texas Education Agency for adoption, and certification requirements levied by TEA. The final section deals with resources, human and material, in Texas which are connected with bilingual/multicultural education.

Copies of some useful documents published for professionals are included gratis in this package. TIS hopes that these materials will point to people and places of assistance to educators in establishing and operating successful bilingual and multicultural programs, supportive of TEA's efforts in this regard.

BILINGUAL EDUCATION: AN INTRODUCTION TO CONCEPTS

The following remarks were excerpted from a paper presented by Frank Angel at the Bilingual Educator's Workshop: Teaching Strategies for the Bilingual-Bicultural Classroom, Pasadena, California, (March, 1974). The paper is entitled Three Different Conceptualizations of Bilingual Education, Their Implications and Consequences: An Exploration and a Critique, and will form a chapter in a book being written by Frank Angel.

Two of the conceptualizations described by Mr. Angel have simply evolved unsystematically and, consequently, possess both positive and negative features. In historical contrast to other countries, the term bilingual education has produced in the United States a primary focus on language, and more specifically Spanish. The most important challenge still facing educators in this country, says Angel, is the development of a total educational program which avoids the pitfalls of both "deficiency education" and extreme ethnocentrism.

The first of the conceptualizations, which form, according to Mr. Angel, the organizing center for curriculum, is the Language Oriented Bilingual Curriculum.

Defined as the learning and use of two languages as the medium of instruction, this concept involves many problems which need resolution. Among them are the inclusion of English as a Second Language and Spanish as a Second Language for those who prefer either Spanish or English respectively; the inclusion of more than oral language skills; the teaching of other subjects bilingually; teacher training; and evaluation methods.

The central problem connected with the Language Oriented concept is its impact on the total development of students. Relationships between language and all the domains of development, cognitive, affective and psychomotor remain to be examined in depth. Moreover, bilingual education yet seems dominated by language specialists, which has tended to make language teaching quite formalized, with too little emphasis on how children learn language, and developmental processes in general.

The second conceptualization is labeled by Angel as the Culture Oriented Program, which implies the addition to the curriculum "culture." This addition of the term bicultural does not indicate what elements of The Culture are to be studied, nor does it indicate how the curriculum is to be constructed.

Many issues are involved in the complex subject of culture in the curriculum. Indeed, Angel indicates that there is no single satisfactory definition of what culture is. He raises the further point as to how both cultures, expressed in "Bicultural" are to be taught, in particular how the English part is to be accomplished.

All of the problem areas defined for the Language Oriented curriculum are equally applicable to the Culture Oriented curriculum, with the additional technical, philosophical and practical considerations of curriculum development, adequate instructional materials, scheduling, teacher preparation and the place of language in the Culture Oriented curriculum.

The third of Angel's conceptualizations is the Cognitive Development Curriculum, which identifies an approach that could underlie or permeate both the Language Oriented and Culture Oriented curricula. Central to this concept is the work done by Piaget, because of the possibilities of application.

Angel outlines in several pages the Piagetian theoretical structure upon which he bases this Cognitive Development curriculum. As this structure focuses on bilingual education, Angel says this:

Much test evidence, particularly achievement test results, show the Chicano and Indian child failing below norms at the third grade and above. Piagetian conceptualizations imply that the school has not attempted to build the necessary training programs that could gradually draw the child away from the explicit, concrete curricular settings typical of the lower grades to higher representational levels in which emphasis shifts to covert, internalized operations at ever-increasing distances from immediate perceptual contact.

Generally, in the Cognitive Development focus of the curriculum, within a definition of bilingual education larger than Language and Culture, neither language nor culture are excluded but are given "means" roles rather than "ends" roles. The Cognitive Development curriculum, both process and product, is justified because it focuses more fundamentally on the causes of low achievement and poor school performance, and places cognitive development in a primary position in the curriculum.

In summary of the three conceptualizations, Angel makes the following point:

Holding to the notion that it should be the children who are being educated who should be the primary consideration, it becomes evident that the solution is not an either/or matter. It is not whether schools should teach Spanish and English, or whether the schools should multi-culturize the curriculum, or whether the schools should concern themselves with the cognitive and affective development of children and youth, but rather how all this should be done.

Some Selected Definitions of Terms Connected With Bilingual Education 1

- balanced bilingual an individual who is equally skilled in the use of t languages
- compound bilingual an individual who translates from one language to the other (usually because he learned his second language under those circumstances), does not keep language systems separate, and experiences considerable interference between them
- coordinate bilingual an individual who has two separate language systems, usually learned under different conditions, which cause minimal interference with each other
- degree of bilingualism how well an individual knows the languages he uses
- diglossia a situation in which each language is typically used in, and considered appropriate to, different types of situations (e.g. home vs. outside, discussing particular topics, in certain roles, etc.)
- interference how one of a bilingual's languages influences his use of the other-the use of nonnative sounds, constructions, or word-choices as a result of influence from the native language

I. B. Teaching Methods

In A Handbook of Bilingual Education, Rudolph Troike and Muriel Saville make ten suggestions on teaching techniques and materials, both new, untried procedures, and adapted axioms which they feel are basic to all bilingual programs:

- 1. Accept the child where he is and build upon his previously acquired foundation.
- 2. You are not just teaching the child more about his language, though this may be needed, but you are teaching him or her other things in that language.
- 3. A systematic teaching approach is required for children at all ages, because a second language is not learned by mere exposure to it.
- 4. When classroom dialect differs from that used by the child, no stigma ought to be attached to that difference. Instead, techniques ought to be used to help the child become fluent in the classroom dialect.
- 5. A contrastive analysis ought to be the basis for materials development or selection and evaluation measures.
- 6. To avoid "translation-type" learning, direct instruction in two languages should be at different periods of the day.
- 7. Always make provision for different learning rates and levels of experience.

Saville, Mariel R.; Troike, Rudolph C. A Handbook of Bilingual Education. Washington, D.C.: Teachers of English to Spe kers of Other Languages, Revised Edition, 1971. 71p.

- 8. Language drills and practice ought to be based on realistic situations of different types.
- 9. Language drills to instill new linguistic habits should be based on a disciplined teacher-student repetition cycle of activity children apparently enjoy.
- 10. Motivation is a key to any child's success in learning a new language, and thus his or her need to know ought not be neglected.

The Handbook also contains discussion on curriculum components, most important of which is initial reading success; language teaching, including specific, practical suggestions for technique; phonology, with an idea for activities; syntax, in which a lesson plan is outlined; and vocabulary and reading, with a consideration of dialect differences encountered.

An Introduction to Evaluation in A Bilingual/Multicultural Setting
(Margie Saenz, ESC Region XIII, Research & Evaluation)

An evaluation is required as an integral part of every bilingual education project. Its purpose is to enable those who make decisions concerning the project to continuously assess how well objectives are being met, to identify which factors are contributing to failure or success of objectives, and to permit revision of plans so operational deficiencies may be corrected.

An evaluation plan must be comprehensive; that is, it must provide an assessment of progress in all project components-instruction, staff development, materials acquisition and development, and community involvement. Because of the complexity and technical nature of evaluation, many districts seek outside technical assistance. A full time project evaluator will be essential if a project plans to implement an indepth evaluation design.

For developing and evaluating the instructional component, there is a critical shortage of Spanish tests. Most project personnel have developed their own tests, since they know the needs of their students.

Criterion referenced testing has been an answer to measuring Spanish reading, since the majority of the commercial reading tests were developed for students who speak Puerto Rican Spanish, and since they are also too difficult for our bilingual students.

Students will be tested in English reading using the California Achievement Test and also a criterion referenced test. By using two measures one can see the actual progress of students. In arithmetic the students will be tested using the SCDC math test (criterion referenced) and the California Achievement Test.

In the area of Spanish reading, the project students will be measured by the SCDC Spanish reading criterion referenced tests.

The Mexican-American Cultural Attitude Scale and the Anglo American Attitude Scale will be used twice a year to measure students' attitude towards both cultures. Your School and Classmates will be used to measure self-concept of project students. (All the tests should be administered by personnel who are bilingual.)

In order to evaluate the actual bilingual education setting in the classrooms, trained bilingual observers will be visiting the classrooms twice a year. The Descriptive Observation Record for Individualization of Instruction by Ben Harris and Betty Coody will be used. Items have been added in order to get specific feedback on bilingual teaching. One has to be careful when using this type of evaluation since many teachers have negative feelings about observations. Our project uses the overall evaluation results which are more beneficial than individual results and at the same time prevent uncomfortable feelings among teachers. We want to help the teachers in every matter that will improve their bilingual teaching, and we feel that through feedback from observations the quality of bilingual education can be improved.

Much work still needs to be done in the area of instruments for bilingual education.

The author has divided the American experience into two periods: 1840 to 1920, and 1963 to the present. The latter time period is defined as beginning with the Dade County, Florida bilingual program, while the 1840-1920 period concerns itself primarily with the influx of a German-speaking population, which provided an impetus for bilingual education in America.

This study investigated non-linguistic factors which have contributed to educational problems for Chicanos. As an answer to the view of bilingual education as "parrot" English, the author examines the Bilingual/Bicultural Follow-Through Model (grades K - 12) at the University of California, Riverside, which incorporates two languages and two cultures. Included in the program are teacher training aspects such as Spanish as a Second Language for teachers, and culture-matching teaching strategies.

II. A. Senate Bill 121: A Synopsis

A. The policy:

The state of Texas, in an effort to provide a quality public education for all, recognizes the need to establish a comprehensive, state-wide compensatory program of bilingual education for children whose home language is not English and who cannot achieve satisfactorily in an English-language curriculum.

B. The procedure:

Each school district governing board will determine the number of children with limited English-speaking ability, within its jurisdiction under regulation of the State Board of Education, and classify them according to primary language at each grade level.

This is to be done not later than March 1.

At the beginning of the 1974-1975 school year, each district having 20 or more such children at any one grade level will institute a bilingual education program. The program will begin at the first grade, and increase one grade level each school year until the program is offered up to and including the sixth grade.

C. Content and methods:

A bilingual education program will be full-time, cover all subjects required by state law or school district regulation, in both English and the home language of the children. Further, speaking reading, writing and comprehension of both English and the home language, as well as the cultures of both, will be stressed.

Subjects such as art, music and physical education, primarily nonverbal subjects, are to be given in regular classes, and children of limited English-speaking ability will participate with their English-speaking peers. Elective courses may be taught in a language other than English. Children enrolled in the program are to be given full opportunity to participate in extracurricular activities.

D. Enrollment:

Each child of limited English-speaking ability shall be enrolled for three years or until a performance level is achieved which enables the child to participate in regular classes. He or she may not be kept in the program longer than three years without parental approval, and should the child be removed before true proficiency in English is achieved, based on test scores, he or she may be re-enrolled for the remainder of the three year period left at the time of transfer.

Parents or guardians of children enrolled in the program will be notified within 10 days of enrollment.
