ABSTRACT

The second unit of the grade four level of the FICSS series (Focus on Inner City Social Studies -- see SO 008 271) continues the study of man through cultural awareness of the diverse groups of people comprising America's heritage. Focusing specifically on American Indians, Afro-, Mexican-, and Asian-Americans, and European Immigrants, the unit is intended to aid student appreciation and understanding of the many diverse ethnic groups comprising the nation. The unit investigates the origin, culture, and current status of each group in the United States. The format includes a general introduction; teaching procedures and strategies; knowledge, skill, and behavioral objectives; learning activities; and supplementary teacher and student resources. ## INTRODUCTION TO THE CURRICULUM OF GRADE FOUR

Scope of the Curriculum of Grade Four

The curriculum of the fourth grade builds upon fundamental learnings acquired as a result of the curriculum of the primary grades. The essential thrust of this year is toward enabling students to understand man, his origins, the development of separate, distinct cultures, the cross-fertilization of cultures into the mainstream of American life, and the richness of this diversity. In so doing the units of this year draw heavily upon the principles of anthropology, sociology, and immigration history.

Specifically, the units in grade four include:

4.1 The Origins of Man (4 weeks)

4.2 The Cultural Backgrounds of Americans (12 weeks)

Indians
European Americans
Black Americans
Spanish - Speaking Americans
Asian Americans

4.3 The Multi-Cultural Strands of American Life (12 weeks) (The culture of ethnic groups as they contributed to American life)

4.4 Values of Diversity (4 weeks)

SCOPE OF UNIT 4.2

"THE CULTURAL BACKGROUNDS OF AMERICANS"

Man in the beauty of his variety has inhabited many areas of the earth wherein he sought to develop a life style which had meaning to him. Men from the many corners of the earth were drawn to the continent of North America. Their times of arrival were separated by thousands of years, in some cases, and only hundreds or tens of years in others. What each of these groups of new Americans brought to their new homeland is highly colored by their native culture. Also the reasons for people coming to the New World will affect the life style they choose to develop here. This unit, then, as its title clearly states, is an investigation of "The Cultural Backgrounds of Americans."

But it is impossible to study all groups of Americans. The unit is designed so that various committees of children will be able to investigate the culture of a single group of Americans. Thus, the culture of the following groups are presented in this unit: Africans, Northern Europeans, Chinese, American Indians, and Spanish-speaking groups from Cuba, Puerto Rico and Mexico. The children, therefore, appear to have a choice of one of five committees on which to work. Hopefully, if in the class there is a representative of a group not mentioned in this unit study, the teacher will afford that child and others the opportunity to study that culture. The children learn of the contributions of the five cultural groups when each committee makes its report to the rest of the class.

Through this unit it is hoped that the wealth of the diversity of culture which is the heritage of America will be known, appreciated, and cherished.

INTRODUCTION

Introduction to a Unit Teaching Strategy

Suggested Teaching Procedures and Introductory Activities

Teaching Procedures

1. These units are based on a depth study strategy approach. It is felt that this method is consistent with the "learn by doing" theories of John Dewey, which have been corroborated by Piaget.
2. The basic steps for this strategy consist of introductory activities conducted by the teacher which excite the interest of the student and cause him to ask questions about the new study. These questions serve as an introduction to the scope of the topic.
3. The students, working in groups or individually, research the questions they have raised and categorized. Each student contributes to the committee work in his own special way and at the same time develops the ability to work in a group situation.
4. One of the most easily recognized trends in the development of recent thought in social studies education is that which is directed toward providing inquiry experiences for the pupil. In these experiences, students would not necessarily be told the meaning of the data they would encounter nor would the data necessarily be presented to them. They would have to search for it and to bring meaning to that which they found. From this description, then, it is seen that the depth study strategy proposed here is in concert with the spirit of inquiry.
5. When the group prepares its presentation for the class, they have many occasions to review and restructure their information. After hearing each of the presentations, the teacher leads the class in an overview and helps them gain perspective on the topic. The facts gained are used to develop hypotheses and generalizations. Again, the facts and understandings are used to develop the culminating activity. Although each of these activities is somewhat different, they all are forms of review or reuse of acquired information. The student, then, is somewhat involved in no less than three opportunities to recall and use the new data. Each time, of course, the information is called for in a new context.
6. In a depth study approach, the teacher assumes the role of the structure of learning activities. In addition, the teacher is the most readily available resource person, both for process and content. The class could conceivably ask the teacher to talk to them about a specific topic or to discuss a film or filmstrip. If the teacher has had special experiences which are pertinent to the study, the class may call upon him to show slides or to deliver a special talk.

AN OUTLINE OF A TEACHING STRATEGY

PHASE

PURPOSE

I. Introduction

To motivate students,

II. Raising of questions

To list students' questions.

III. Categorization of questions by students

To organize ideas. To provide experiences in critical thinking.

IV. Formation of and instructions to committees

To form groups for social or psychological ends. To place responsibility for learning upon the shoulders of students.

A. Tasks

To let students know they are defining, pursuing, and reporting their own study.

B. Roles

To aid students in identifying desired organizational schemes for small groups and to help them define the responsibilities and behaviors of leaders and group members.

C. Methods of Researching Information

To aid students in locating, recording, organizing and presenting information.

PHASE

PURPOSE

V. Information Retrieval

To allow students the opportunity to answer their own questions, to employ their library skills, to develop critical thinking and logical organization of data.

VI. Committee Reports

To develop and rehearse the presentation to the class.

VII. Perspective and Overview

To hear the reports of each committee which has sought to answer the questions of the class.

VIII. Developing Hypotheses and Generalizations

To integrate the findings of the committee reports, to note trends, likenesses and differences when compared with other examples known by the students.

IX. Culminating Experiences

To study the information presented to discover some basic principles of the social sciences which may be operant.

To gain further perspective and to enhance recall.

141. the people of Puerto Rico have a republican form of government.
142. the "head" of government is the governor of Puerto Rico.

Skills

The pupil will be able to:

1. recognize relevant ideas as evidenced by his making meaningful contributions to discussions that pertain to the topic at hand.

Skills (Cont.)

2. use the library card catalog and reference materials to locate information relevant to his committee assignment.
3. take purposeful notes while completing committee assignments.
4. organize notes in logical and/or chronological sequence.
5. use maps and globes to locate the countries studied in this unit.
6. interpret relevant charts, diagrams, or graphs while completing committee assignments.
7. plan his work as evidenced by being aware of the things that must be done and allotting time periods to them.
8. distinguish fact from opinion by using key phrases, such as "I think," "in my opinion," or "it is established that."
9. locate on a map the areas from which large numbers of people emigrated to the United States; i.e. Africa, Europe, China, West Indies and Mexico.

Attitudes

The pupil will:

1. respect and accept differences among people as evidenced by his ability to discuss differences and similarities of the different cultural backgrounds.
2. respect and appreciate the human values and the rights of others as evidenced by his cooperation in planning, working, and evaluating group work.
3. respect himself and appreciate the worth and dignity of the individual as evidenced by his own contributions and his willingness to accept those of others.
4. believe that all men share a common origin as evidenced by his fair treatment of persons of other backgrounds.

Behavior:

The pupil will:

1. work in cooperation with his classmates, particularly those who do not have the same cultural background.

Behaviors (Cont.)

2. be responsible for completing his assignments.
3. be courteous and considerate of others.
4. listen calmly and courteously to a differing point of view.
5. cooperate with his fellow committee members.

STRATEGY

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

MATERIAL

I. Introductory Activities

- A. To interest pupils in the study of cultural backgrounds of selected groups of Americans.

- B. To raise questions which will structure the unit study.

ALL COMMITTEES

I. Suggested introductory activities

- A. From Unit 4.1, "The Origins of Man" recall the origin of various groups of man and the races. Span the gap from that unit to the dispersal of man over the globe and his residing in an area to which he subsequently developed a particular life style.

B. HOW DID YOU GET TO AMERICA?

- Ask the class to identify their own national origins. List these on the board. Ask the class to list groups of Americans who are not represented in your class. List these on the board and have the class group them. The grouping will probably include Europeans, Africans, Asians, American Indians, and Spanish-speaking Americans. Ask the class "How and why did your ancestors come to the United States?" "How and why did these other groups of Americans come to the United States?"

C. PATHS TO AMERICA

- The class can place a transparent film over a map and use a felt-tip pen to draw the arrows which show some of the emigration patterns from foreign nations to the United States.

D. "AMERICANS ALL" DISPLAY

- The teacher can prepare five display areas on which have been placed books and realia from each of the five culture groups. The various books provided can serve as a base for this display which can be augmented by articles and periodicals and real items such as foods of each national group.

STRATEGY

- I. Introductory Activities (Cont.)

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

E. CULINARY CULTURE

Ask the pupils to list their favorite foods or foods they have heard of but not yet tasted.

- List these on the board and identify which cultures have been responsible for bringing these foods to the world.

Have the pupils look at the displays, etc., with the intent of raising questions about each of the culture groups.

MATERIAL

STRATEGY

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

MATERIAL

ii. Raising Questions

A. Pupils should raise questions which can structure the scope of the unit

Ask the pupils to list questions which they would like to investigate in order to help themselves know more about the cultural backgrounds of selected groups of Americans. The class should develop about forty to sixty questions.

Some of the questions they might raise are:

1. How did these people live in their own countries?
2. How did the Indians get to North America?
3. Why do the people in Mexico and Cuba speak Spanish?
4. What was life like in seventeenth century England?
5. Why did the Africans come to America?

The teacher should encourage questions by referring to the map, the display of realia, and other elements of the introductory experiences.

III. Categorizing Questions

- A. To organize the questions raised by the class into researchable topics.
- B. To identify topics which can be pursued by class committees:

The class can be guided into organizing the questions they have raised by asking them which questions talk about the same thing as question one, two, etc. Later they can label these categories.

The writer of this unit is unable to predict which categories the class may determine. It does seem likely, however, that they might come upon the following five topic areas:

- Committee A - African-American
- Committee B - European-American
- Committee C - Chinese-American
- Committee D - American-Indians
- Committee E - Spanish-speaking Americans

The content of this unit has been organized according to these topics.

STRATEGY

- IV. Formation of and instructions to Committees
  - 1. To identify the necessary tasks of the committees.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

The students may wish to work in groups to pursue those topics which most interest them. The content might also be revealed through a more traditional approach. The committee organization also allows for individual excellence, especially as it is perceived as effecting group goals.

Activities

Discuss and decide on something like this:

Class discussion concerning:

- 1. The tasks of a committee.
- 2. The roles of committee persons
- 3. The sources of information

CONTENT

- A. Tasks of Committees
  - 1. Organize committee
    - a. Random selection by teacher or students.
    - b. Ranking by students of choices on slips of paper.
    - c. Using sociograms to achieve balance within a committee (may be homogeneously or heterogeneously based).
  - 2. Utilize class questions as starting point for planning committee work.
  - 3. Add new questions suggested by committee members.
  - 4. Assign research, find information, coordinate information, develop and present.

- A. To allow the class exposure to total content of the unit.
- B. To allow each committee to present its findings to the rest of the class by using an interesting format.
- A. Hold a tribal council meeting to tell about the heritage of Africa which now belongs to Americans
- B. Develop a playlet which tells about the Three Kingdoms and the level of culture reached in this era before the white man came.
- C. Enhance reporting activities with models of housing, salt maps, and other visual aids.
- D. Present a 'tasting party' featuring foods of the ethnic group studied by your committee. Demonstrate how to make such foods. Prepare and distribute a mini-cook book. Eat in the style of the particular group. (chopsticks, etc.).
- E. Enhance your presentations by making illustrative materials such as block prints, a diorama, a mural, etc.
- F. Develop your own taped sound track to accompany a commercially available filmstrip. (Or use selected frames of the filmstrip). (Or use two filmstrips simultaneously (Or combine with a play)).
- G. Read letters to and from pen pals in a foreign country.
- H. Develop a TV box and tell the story of your committee on a TV roll.
- I. Develop artifacts to simulate the type which might be found in the native country of each of the groups of Americans.

- O. Draw pictures of shields which might have been used by African warriors.

STRATEGY

VII. Overview

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

After the committees have reported to the class, time should be allowed to review what has been learned and to evaluate the efforts of the learners. Perhaps the class will choose to consider all the original questions that were raised and see whether they have been answered. The major questions will require review so that a foundation is laid for going beyond the material studied to the generalizations and hypotheses concerning human behavior.

There will be some big questions to consider as a result of this study. They may be questions of opinion or questions which require a synthesis of the kinds of information presented by more than one committee. Some of the "big questions" are suggested as follows:

1. Why did we study about the native countries of five groups of Americans?
2. Do you think it would be better for all people to have one set of beliefs, one set of foods, one way to dress... why or why not?
3. What are some of the customs which you have learned about which you think you might like to follow?
4. What are some of the values of other people which you find strange? Whose values are right, yours or theirs? Can you think of a case where the action you would choose would be very different from the action someone in another country might choose because your values are different?
5. What group or race of people had the best culture? What do you mean by the best culture? Does one racial group always seem to come out with a higher level of culture?

VIII. Generalizations

Generalizations are not to be "taught" by the teacher and memorized by the class. Rather, they must be developed by the students as an outgrowth of their learning experiences. The generalizations listed here are derived from the kinds of material presented in this unit. It is not expected that all pupils will be able to arrive at any or all of the following:

1. People learn a life style by living it.
2. As communication between diverse culture groups increases, there will be a greater tendency for the cross-fertilization of life styles to occur.
3. As people increase their economic and social intercourse, they will increase the degree to which they influence each other's cultures.
4. As transportation increases, the possibility of adapting or adopting food habits of other cultures increases.
5. As knowledge of other cultures increases, the possibility of intercultural harmony and respect increases.
6. As one's own knowledge of the contributions of his own culture group increases, his own self-respect and self-esteem improves.

STRATEGY

SOME SUGGESTED CULMINATING ACTIVITIES

IX. Culminating Activities

1. Present an International Fair, which includes the music, dances, and foods of the countries studied in this unit.
2. Prepare a display of art projects, reports, and realia.
3. Have a fashion show which includes the costumes and clothing worn by the five peoples studied.
