ABSTRACT

This guide for affirmative action practices is designed to eliminate discrimination and inappropriate stereotyping in the curriculum practices of the Kalamazoo Public Schools. It sets forth related goals, implementation plans, and evaluation procedures for each aspect of the instructional program. Specific instructional performance objectives are compiled for art education, career education, elementary instruction (reading and social studies), instructional media, music education, physical education, secondary instruction, special education, and student services. The guide is arranged by educational area. Information accompanying each objective includes the person responsible for implementation, completion date if any, and how accomplishment will be measured. For example, one objective of music education is eliminating the type of sex stereotyping which suggests "Boys play brass instruments, girls play woodwind instruments." The music coordinator is responsible for implementation of the ongoing objective. The objective is evaluated by the principal and the music coordinator who periodically review the progress. Guidelines for the evaluation of print and nonprint materials; for a positive, nonstereotyped portrayal of human roles in media center materials; and for evaluating minority group materials are included. INTRODUCTION

This document, Recommendations for Eliminating Discrimination in the Instructional Program, was developed as a guide for affirmative action practices designed to eliminate discrimination and inappropriate stereotyping in the curriculum practices of the Kalamazoo Public Schools. In that sense the document sets forth related goals, implementation plans, and evaluation procedures for each aspect of the instructional program. The preparation of this publication is the logical consequence of previously adopted Board Policy 4243 and a stated performance objective for the 1975-76 school year which reads as follows:

"Discrimination for any reason can have a devastating effect on student learning. We are committed to the total elimination of discrimination based on race, creed or sex. Furthermore, we will work toward the elimination of the stereotyping of roles or people based on any of these characteristics. As indicated above we are requiring administrators throughout the system to include as a part of their performance objectives an indication of the specific activities under their supervision designed to eliminate the type of discrimination addressed here. Although those adherence to quotas, system-wide actions will include the development and implementation of affirmative action programs for both personnel and curriculum practices."

William Coats,
Superintendent

FOREWORD

Throughout the preparation of these performance objectives department managers have found the following objectives to be consistent among departments:

1. Develop awareness among staff members that discrimination and sex role stereotyping do exist.
2. Provide skills improvement programs for staff that focus attention on how to eliminate discrimination and stereotyping.
3. Study course offerings and course content in order to eliminate discrimination and stereotyping.
4. Develop new course content to replace that which is discriminatory and stereotyped.
5. Develop new course content that include women and minorities who have formerly been excluded.
6. Examine new curriculum materials and re-examine materials currently in use in order to avoid using unnecessarily discriminatory and stereotyped materials.
7. Develop ways in which students of each race, creed, and sex can be aware of the expanded opportunities becoming available in the instructional program.

INSTRUCTIONAL MEDIA DEPARTMENT

GUIDELINES FOR THE EVALUATION OF PRINT AND NON-PRINT MATERIALS

1. What is the subject matter and scope? Does it have significant curricular content to justify its cost?
2. If print, does it have literary quality? If non print, is the item attractive and interesting with some aesthetic value of vitality, style, and imagination?
3. Is it well researched, accurate, and authoritative?
4. Who is the publisher or producer and what is his reputation.
5. Is it readable or suitable for students of the age or grade levels at which it will be studied?
6. Is it up to date?
7. Does it duplicate or add to other material in the Media Center?
8. What features are included that will increase its usefulness...table of contents, index, bibliographies, maps, charts...thought-provoking captions, clear labeling, summaries, outlines, questions?
9. What is the need for it in the school? Is it worth the money it costs and the time and effort to use it?
10. How much does it cost? Is it expensive or inexpensive in relation to the total materials fund available? Would some less expensive item produce similar or better results?
11. If print, is it well made...good paper and print, large enough margins for easy opening, good illustrations? If non-print, is it technically satisfactory in respect to photography, sound, color, type size, illustrations...is it physically satisfactory in respect to intended use?
12. Is it educationally sound for the age group for which it is intended? Does it stimulate thinking and inquiry? Does it suggest or lead to worthwhile learning activities?

GUIDELINES FOR A POSITIVE, NON-STEREOTYPED
PORTRAYAL OF HUMAN ROLES IN MEDIA-CENTER MATERIALS

1. Are both parents and children of each sex involved in household tasks?
2. Are fathers shown in roles other than going to work or doing male-type chores? Are there family concerns, community concerns, personal growth concerns?
3. Are mothers shown in roles other than housework or child rearing? Are there family concerns, community concerns, personal growth concerns?
4. Does the home look "lived in" by real, human people or is it a "ready for company," sterile home?
5. Are there accurate portrayals of one-parent families?
6. Are there accurate portrayals of multiple parent (divorce-remarriage) families?
7. Do the male characters respect the female characters and respond to them as equals?
8. Are mothers employed outside the home? In a stereotyping or a creative job?
9. Are boys and girls portrayed with a range of human responses - girls adventurous and aggressive as well as sensitive, boys gentle as well as strong?
10. Are boys and girls participating equally in physical and intellectual activities?
11. Are girls developing independent lives, independently meeting challenges and finding their own solutions?
12. Do girls have a variety of choices and aspire to a variety of goals?

GUIDELINES FOR EVALUATING MINORITY GROUP MATERIALS

When utilizing the Guidelines for the Evaluation of Print and Non-Print Materials, the following guidelines should be used in assessing minority group materials.

1. Appropriate language. If dialect must be used, it should be faithful to the region of the story. A heavy use of words or expressions fraught with connotations of disrespect and contempt is unsuitable.
2. Illustrations must be true to the people depicted, not caricatures or stereotypes.
3. Theme. Minority peoples should be portrayed in all aspects of life - in different living situations, jobs, and professions.
4. Treatment of characters. Characters should emphasize that "they are people faced with the universal problems of all mankind: earning a living, hating and loving, rejoicing and grieving, experiencing successes and failures, learning to find their way through a complex world of ideas and living with other people."
