ABSTRACT

During the 1977 fall orientation a questionnaire prepared by the American Council on Education (ACE) was administered to about 75 percent of the entering freshman class at the University of South Carolina. The study was part of ACE's ongoing national study, part of the Cooperative Institutional Research Program. An analysis of the results is made, and the demographic data, opinions, and projections of the freshman class are compared by college and with national norms. Eleven areas of interest were selected from the original questionnaire for inclusion in this analysis: student age by December 31, 1977; racial background; average grade in high school; highest degree planned; most important reasons for selecting the college; estimated parental income; probable major field of study; current religious preference; political orientation; residence planned during fall term; and statements that "students estimate chances are very good that they will..." Data are presented in tabular form with some notes. (Author/MSE)

Subject: U.S.C. Freshmen Profile - Fall, 1977

Nature and Scope of the Study:

During the 1977 fall orientation, a questionnaire prepared by the American Council on Education (A.C.E.) was administered to approximately 75% of the entering freshmen class at the University of South Carolina (U.S.C.). A total of 373 other institutions of higher education, including 77 two-year colleges, 250 four-year colleges and 47 universities, also participated in the continuing national study of higher education sponsored by ACE's Cooperative Institution Research Program.

The following study presents a comparative analysis of the various demographic data, opinions, and projections of the entering freshmen at U.S.C. U.S.C. entering freshmen are compared as a whole to the national norms; they are also compared by the college in which they were enrolled. Sex differences were reported where they appeared to be significant.

Comparative data were classified into eight college categories. The following is a list of the categories, with a description of the colleges which were grouped in each category, and the number of students in each sample.

CATEGORY	COLLEGES WITHIN, CATEGORY	NUMBER OF STUDENTS
1. Undecided		544
2. Business Administration		431
3. Humanities and Social Sciences	Humanities and Social Sciences and Criminal Justice	362
4. Science and Math		296
5. Allied Health	Nursing, Pharmacy, Health and P.E.	222
6. General Studies		221
7. Journalism/Education		188
8. Engineering		157
	Total	2421

Eleven areas of interest were selected for this analysis from the original areas contained in the questionnaire.² These eleven areas were selected to provide a composite profile of the entering freshmen at U.S.C. during the fall, 1977 term. Each of these areas is presented in tables and followed by comments to highlight the major comparisons.

²The eleven areas of interest which were considered are:

1. Age by December 31, 1977
2. Racial background
3. Average grade in high school
4. Highest degree planned anywhere
5. Reasons noted as very important in selecting this college
6. Estimated parental income
7. Probable major field of study
8. Current religious preference
9. Political orientation
10. "Students estimate chances are very good that they will"
11. Residence planned during fall term

26 or older	0.4	0.2	0.6	0.0	1.5	0.5	0.0	0.7	0.4	0.4

Comments:

1. The percentages of U.S.C. entering freshmen by age level were generally the same as the national norms, although U.S.C. students were somewhat more dispersed over the total range of ages than were students nationally.
2. U.S.C. entering freshmen were more likely to describe their age as both less than 18 and more than 18 when compared to the national norms.
3. A slightly smaller percentage of U.S.C. entering freshmen (73.0%) described their age as "18" when compared to the national norm of 79.3%.
4. There was a tendency for a higher percentage of younger students (less than 18) to enter the College of Science and Math (9.0%). There was a higher percentage of older students (19 and over) entering the Colleges of General Studies and Engineering.

Table 1-A

20-25	2.9	1.3	2.1	2.0	1.1	1.7
26 or older	0.4	0.6	0.4	0.1	0.2	0.2

Comments:

It is interesting to note that males were more likely to be older than 18 and females were more likely to be younger than 18. This trend was in the same direction as the national norms but more pronounced in the case of U.S.C. entering freshmen.

Table 2

A Comparison of Racial Background
for U.S.C. Freshmen by College and University Norms

Other	0.0	0.2	0.3	1.4	0.0	0.5	0.0	0.0	0.3	1.2

Comments:

1. Approximately 86% of the U.S.C. entering freshmen described themselves as "White/Caucasian" compared to the national norm of 91.3%.
2. U.S.C. entering freshmen, as may be expected of a southern state university, are more likely to describe themselves as Black than is common nationally. The percentages of freshmen describing themselves as Caucasian and American Indian are both comparable to the national norms. Other minorities are less attracted to U.S.C. than is typical nationally.
3. The U.S.C. college enrolling the highest proportion of "Black" students was General Studies with 31.8%.

Comparison of Average Grade in High School for U.S.C. Freshmen
by College and University National Norms

D	0.0	0.5	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.1	0.1

Comments:

1. U.S.C. entering freshmen reported an average grade in high school of "A" considerably less frequently than the national norm (U.S.C., 17.4%; national norm, 31.9%).
2. Entering freshmen at U.S.C. were more likely to report an average grade of "C" in high school than were their national counterparts (U.S.C., 19.7%; national norm, 9.8%).
3. U.S.C. colleges enrolling the highest proportion of entering freshmen reporting that they had received an average grade of "A" in high school were Science and Mathematics (30.9%) and Engineering (27.8%).
4. The College of General Studies enrolled the highest proportion of U.S.C. entering freshmen reporting an average grade of "C" in high school.

C	26.6	13.2	19.7	11.8	5.9	9.1
D	0.2	0.0	0.1	0.1	0.1	0.1

Comments:

1. It is noteworthy that U.S.C. females were much more likely (females, 20.9%; males, 14.1%) than U.S.C. males to report an average grade of "A" in high school.
2. U.S.C. males were twice as likely as U.S.C. females (males, 26.6%; females, 13.2%) to report an average grade of "C" in high school.
3. All of the above trends were in the same direction as the national norms.

Other	4.3	1.8	1.4	0.4	1.8	1.9	0.7	0.8	1.9	1.5

Comments:

1. Compared to national norms (32.6%) a larger percentage of entering freshmen at U.S.C. planned to pursue post baccalaureate degrees (36.9%).
2. As expected a greater percentage of students in the College of General Studies considered the "Associate (or equivalent) degree" to be the highest they would obtain when compared to other colleges.
3. U.S.C. colleges with the highest percentage of students planning post baccalaureate degrees were Science and Math (84.3%) and Humanities and Social Sciences (72.9%).
4. The College of Science and Mathematics had the highest percentage of students planning advanced degrees in medical areas (40.8%) while the College of Humanities and Social Sciences had the highest percentage of students planning law degrees (22.7%).

Other	2.9	2.0	2.5	1.2	1.1	1.1

Comments:

One notes that females aspired to all degrees below the master's level more frequently than males; however, this trend reversed itself for all post-baccalaureate degrees except "other". These results are typical for entering freshmen both at U.S.C. and nationally.

Comments:

- Students varied with respect to the reasons noted as very important in selecting U.S.C. "Has a good academic reputation" was most frequently cited (42.8%) and college representative recruitment was the least frequently cited reason (1.9%).

Comments (continued):

2. In comparison with the national norm U.S.C. students were less likely to cite the following reasons as important in making their college choice: "has a good academic reputation", "offered special education program." U.S.C. students were more likely than their national counterparts to cite as important the following: "influence of relative", "advice of someone who attended", "friend suggested attending."
3. Students in Allied Health and General Studies were more likely to cite U.S.C.'s good academic reputation as very important in selecting U.S.C. (51%, 52.1%) than were students in other U.S.C. colleges.

Comments:

A number of sex differences were apparent in the reasons students gave for selecting U.S.C. Females cited most of the reasons offered more frequently than males especially "has a good academic reputation" (48.5%; 37%), "offered special educational programs" (32.9%; 22.1%), and "advice of someone who attended" (18.4%; 15.9%). The same trends existed in national norms.

$50,000 or more	10.1	13.8	9.9	8.1	4.1	5.2	6.8	3.5	8.9	9.7

Comments:

1. The percentages of U.S.C. entering freshmen by estimated parental income are very similar to the national norms.
2. More than half of the U.S.C. entering freshmen (66.2%) estimated an annual parental income of between $10,000 and $34,999.
3. When compared to other U.S.C. colleges a higher percentage of entering freshmen from the College of General Studies estimated parental income as less than $6,000 (College of General Studies, 21.4%; U.S.C. average 6.6%).
4. At U.S.C. and nationally, a sizable percentage of the entering freshmen had estimated parental incomes exceeding $25,000 (U.S.C., 39.2%; national norms, 39.7%). However 49.3% of the freshmen entering Business Administration had parental incomes in excess of $25,000.

Comments:

The percentages of U.S.C. freshmen entering the different major fields of study were generally the same as national norms, except "Business" which was described as a probable major by 23.9% of U.S.C. freshmen compared to the national norm of 17.5%. Other major fields in which U.S.C. students reported comparatively lower percentages were "Professional" (U.S.C. 14.9%, national norms 20.2%) and "Engineering" (U.S.C. 7.4%, national norm 12.1%).

None	5.8	3.5	6.7	5.4	3.6	2.1	8.3	5.1	5.1	10.9

In order to simplify interpretation the various religions have been grouped into four major categories. Protestant consists of Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian, Quaker, Seven Day Adventist and other Protestant. Other consists of Eastern Orthodox, Latter Day Saints (Mormon), Muslim, Unitarian - Universalist and religion (other).

Comments:

1. Freshmen at U.S.C. are more likely to be Protestant and less likely to be Catholic, Jewish, other or none when compared to freshmen nationally.
2. Over three-fourths of all U.S.C. freshmen (78.8%) described their current religious preference as Protestant.

Comparison of U.S.C. with national norms on principal Protestant denominations yields the following data: Baptist (U.S.C. 38.5%; national norm, 37.1%), Episcopal (U.S.C. 7.7%; national norm 3.2%), Lutheran (U.S.C. 9.6%; national norm 1.6%), Methodist (U.S.C. 26.9%; national norm 14.5%), Presbyterian (U.S.C. 7.7%; national norm 11.3%).

Far Right	0.4	1.0	0.6	0.7	0.0	0.5	0.6	0.7	0.6	0.5

Comments:

1. Political orientations of U.S.C. entering freshmen were almost identical to students in the national norm.
2. More than half (55.1%) of the U.S.C. freshmen described their political orientation as "middle-of-the road" while approximately one quarter of the students (25.9%) described themselves as "far left or liberal."
3. The greatest percentage of U.S.C. entering freshmen describing themselves as "liberal" or "far left" were found in the College of Humanities and Social Sciences (36.8%), the Center for Undeclared Majors (26.0%) and the Colleges of Journalism and Education (26.8%). The greatest percentage of U.S.C. entering freshmen describing themselves as "conservative" or "far right" were found in the College of Science and Mathematics (21.5%) and the Colleges of Journalism and Education (21.8%).

Comments:

- When compared to the national norms, a lower percentage of U.S.C. freshmen estimated that chances were good that they would "live in a co-educational dorm" (U.S.C. 13.4%; national norm, 37.9%).

Comments (continued):

2. A much smaller percentage of U.S.C. freshmen estimated that chances were very good that they would "make at least a 'B' average" when compared to the national norms. (U.S.C. 33.1%; national norm 47.7%). This seems clearly related to the fact that a lower percentage of U.S.C. students also reported making an average grade of 'A' in high school (see Table 3).
3. Over two-thirds of the U.S.C. freshmen (69.1%) reported that chances were very good that they would "get a bachelor's degree"; over half reported (56.4%) that they would "be satisfied with college" and (77.4% estimated that they would probably "find a job in a preferred field".
4. U.S.C. students varied somewhat with respect to estimations that they would "change major fields". Students from the Center for Undeclared Majors were most likely to make the statement (39.5%), and those in Science & Math were least likely (3.5%). This same trend was noted in estimations about change of career choice.
5. U.S.C. freshmen varied by college with respect to estimations that chances were very good that they would "find a job in a preferred field". 83.6% of the freshmen in Allied Health agreed with the statement, whereas little more than half (58.4%) of the undeclared freshmen concurred with the statement. The other colleges fell within these two extremes (U.S.C. average 70.2%; national norm 69.7%).

Other	2.4	0.7	0.9	0.4	1.0	2.1	1.1	3.4	1.4	0.3

Comments:

1. When compared to the national norms, more U.S.C. entering freshmen planned to 'reside with parents or relatives'. (U.S.C. 29.8%; national norm 20.6%).
2. Fewer U.S.C. entering freshmen planned to live in a dormitory (U.S.C. 59.7%; national norm 73.9%) when compared to national norms.
3. Students in the College of Engineering were less likely to live in residence halls and more likely to live with parents and relatives than were entering freshmen in other U.S.C. colleges.

SUMMARY

Profile - The average entering freshman at U.S.C. for Fall, 1977 was:

1. 18 years of age
2. a white/caucasian
