ABSTRACT

This directory provides information on nine Federal library programs and 72 Rederal library-related programs, as well as a bibliography of publications on the grants application process. While it provides a guide to funding sources, it is intended only to lead libraries to possible funding sources rather than serving as a complete information source. Of the four main sections, the first contains an annotated listing of 20 existing directories and other current publications relevant to library-related funding sources. The next lists nine Federal programs that provide direct support for library projects. Programs are arranged alphabetically by the name of the authorizing Act and program descriptions include authorizing legislation, program purpose, fund 'uses, applicant eligibility. requirements, grant type, level of funding, grant range, average grant, application/program source, and application closing date when available. The 72 library-related Federal programs listed in the next section are arranged alphabetically by program title, and include program descriptions providing the same information as the Federal program listings. A selected bibliography of publications on grantsmanship follows. Indexes by applicant eligibility, authorization, rederal agency, and subject area are also included, followed by a directory of state library agencies in the United States. (Author/MBR)

I. INTRODUCTION

This Introduction will serve to tell the reader what the Directory is and what it is not. The Directory provides information regarding nine Federal library programs and 72 Federal library-related programs. Programmaries included in Section III and Section IV contain information found in Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance, 1978, American Library Association's Federal Grants: Where in the Bureaucracy to Find Them and its ALA Washington Newsletter, the Educational Media Yearbook, program summaries prepared by staff members of the Division of Library Programs, U.S. Office of Education, and a number of other sources.* Many of the programs in these Sections are currently funding, or have funded library projects. Libraries are eligible for funding under all of the included programs.

The Directory provides a guide to sources of funding, but only a guide. It is not meant to be a complete program information source, but is only intended to lead libraries to possible funding sources for projects which are proposed to meet their assessed needs. If any program in the Directory seems to be a likely funding source for a library project, the library should immediately contact the responsible administering agency to determine if the project falls within the program scope. The tibrary should request program guidelines, lists/abstracts of previously funded projects, a current application packet (or a previous year's packet if the filing deadline has passed), and the filing date for the funding cycle. A timely call or letter to the appropriate administering agency is an essential first step in the search for project funds.

Directory Organization. Section II of this Directory contains an annotated listing of 20 existing directories and other current/recent publications relevant to library-related funding sources. The Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance (CFDA) is the primary listing of Federal program sources. Used in conjunction with other Section II publications, and Section III and IV program listings, the reader can obtain a good overview of library-related funding sources and specific programs available through the government. A number of Section II publications also include funding sources sponsored by the private sector.

Section III lists nine Federal programs that provide direct support for library projects. Programs are arranged alphabetically by the name of the authorizing Act. Program descriptions include the CFDA number, authorizing legislation, purpose of the program, uses to which funds may be applied, applicant eligibility requirements, the type of grant, level of funding, range of grants, average grant, application/program information source and application/closing date when available.

Library-related Federal programs are listed in Section IV. Seventy-two programs are included for which libraries are eligible within the scope of each program. Programs are arranged alphabetically by program title, and program descriptions follow the format of Section III entries.

Section V is a bibliography of publications on the grants application process. It is not intended to be comprehensive but is included as a listing of publications that may be of interest and assistance to the reader as he or she develops a strategy in the search for project funding.

ERIC Full Text Provided by ERIC

Federal programs included in Sections III and IV are indexed in Section VI providing a number of access points to each program. The programs are indexed by: Federal agency responsible for the program; applicant eligibility, whether State, or local government, an organization, individual, or a combination; authorization -- an alphabetical listing of authorizing Acts for the programs; CFDA number; and subject.

State library agencies are the contact source for many of the included Federal programs. Section VII is a listing of all State/Territorial library agencies.

Types of Grants. Federal assistance for library programs/projects included in this Directory falls in one of two grant categories — formula grants to States and discretionary grants. The administering agency, information/application source, application procedure and deadline will vary depending upon the grant category of the program(s).

Formula grants to States provide support for the establishment, expansion, innovation or improvement of Library programs and not confined to ongoing support of a specific project or projects. The appropriation for which each State is eligible is determined by a formula that takes into account a number of factors (e.g.: State population, income levels, numbers of students in public and private schools). Program formulas are detailed in each program's enabling legislation and each program formula is unique. In order to qualify for a formula grant, a State agency must submit an operating plan and other required documentation to the appropriate Federal agency detailing the State's proposed participation in the program. State/local matching funds are required under a number of formula grant programs. Libraries that want to explore funding possibilities under a State formula grant should contact the administering State agency—usually the State Library or State Department of Education. The State agency will provide information on the program, the State criteria for selection of projects, State priorities for funding, application procedures, and the applicability of the specific library project to the State's overall program plan.

Discretionary grants (or project grants) are awarded directly from the Federal government to entities of the State and local government, and to public and private nonprofit institutions and organizations. Discretionary programs are intended for specific grant purposes, including experimental and demonstration grants, planning grants, survey grants, technical assistance grants, construction grants, fellowships, research grants, scholarships, traineeships and training grants. Application forms and information regarding any library-related discretionary program may be obtained by contracting the responsible Federal agency.

Application Process. A considerable amount of background preparation is necessary before the application process is reached. A library or group of libraries should have completed some form of needs assessment in order to describe reasonably the present services and to project future service patterns. Desired services should have been ranked in priority order and a plan of action to develop and implement these ranked services should have been drafted. From the plan of action, one or more high priority projects may likely be identified that require developmental or demonstration funds beyond the current library/libraries budget. It is these projects that are considered in relation to appropriate outside funding sources.

An applicant should consider a number of the following steps in the application process

when one or more likely funding sources have been identified for a proposed project; (I) contact the administering agency to determine the scope of their program and whether the proposed project falls within the scope; (2) discuss preapplication and application procedures and request necessary application forms; (3), find out the deadline date for submission of the application; (4) ask if there are any restrictions on use of program funds; (5) find out the range and average grant for a project; (6) request program guidelines (including legislated program rules and regulations), annotated lists of receptly funded projects, and any other program material that would be of use in diafting and submitting a proposal; (7) find out if there are program matching requirements, and it so, whether cash or in-kind contributions are required; (8) ask if there are renewals or extensions of applications and the procedures involved; (%) follow all requirements of the program prior to and in submitting the application; (10) ask the administering agency for assistance whenever there is any question regarding the program or the application procedure -- applicants may telephone, write or visit the agency office directly to initiate the application process; and (II) above all, mail or deliver the application before the deadline date. Applications postmarked after the mailing date or hand delivered to the agency after the deadline date will not be considered for funding in that funding cycle.

Acknowledgements: Special thanks to Shirley Brother and Pauline Winnick of the Office of Libraries and Learning Resources and to Janice Kee who recently retired from the Office, for their sustained interest in and publication of listings of Federal library-related programs and their excellent summaries of these programs. Their assistance and these listings were very useful in the preparation of this Directory. Thanks also to Michael Buchko, Jr. who coordinated the technical production of the Directory.

The compilers have attempted to include all Federal programs for which libraries are currently eligible. There may be, however, programs that we missed or programs that were listed about which the reader has some question regarding appropriateness of the program(s) for library-related projects. We welcome comments an any aspect of this. Directory — types of information included, omissions, Directory organization, indices to the programs, among other things. We want to make future editions of the Directory as useable and useful as possible. Please send your comments to:

The ALA Washington Newsletter provides up-to-date information on the status of library-related legislation, funding authorizations and appropriations, new library and library-related programs, and other legislative issues that have impact on library programs and services.

American Library Association, Washington, D.C. Office. Legislative Report of the ALA Washington Office, issued semi-annually.

The Report is a summary of Federal legislation and legislative aprivity relative to library programs and services over a six-month period. Excellent features are the appended listing of Federal library-related programs and the status report on Federal legislation of interest to libraries. The Report and the ALA Washington Newsletter are excellent sources for anyone who wants up-todate information on Federal support for library programs.

Annual Register of Grant Support, 1977/78, 11th edition. Chicago, Marquis Academic Media, Marquis Who's Who, 1977. approximately $50.00 (revised annually).

One of the most comprehensive sources of non-repayable financial support, this guide directs the user to approximately 2,400 programs including those applicable to libraries. Each description includes: information on the type, purpose and duration of the grant; amount of funding available; eligibility, requirements; number of applicants and recipients in the most recent year for which statistics are available; application procedures and deadlines; personnel of the funding organization with the address, founding date and telephone number; data epicerning the interests of the organization as well as cooperative funding programs. Four indices make the information readily accessible.

The A-V Connection: The Guide to Federal Funds for A-V Programs, 1977. edition. Fairfax, Virginia, National Audio-Visual Association, 1977. n.p., $15.00 (National Audio-Visual Association, 3150 Spring Street, Fairfax, Virginia 22030).

Detailed information is included on 32 U.S. Office of Education programs that NAVA has identified as likely funding sources for purchase of audiovisual equipment and materials. Comprehensive information about each program is. presented in a standard format similar to the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance, though the scope has been focused on audio-visual projects and a considerable amount of useful material not in the CFDA has been added.

The Bowker Annual of Library and Book Trade Information, 22nd edition, 1977. Edited and compiled by Nada Beth Glick and Sara L. Prakken. New York, R. R. Bowker, 1977. $24.95.

A regular feature of the Bowker Annual is a section on library legislation, funding and grants. Federal legislation and Federal library programs are discussed in some detail. An overview of Federal library-related programs is followed by a discussion of foundation support for libraries and a listing of. foundations that have funded library projects during the previous year.

ington Office, 1977, $2,00, while the supply lasts.

This guide to 27 Federal library-related programs includes a detailed description of the parameters of each program listing eligibility requirements, types of projects funded, amount of funding available, and where to write for additional information on the program. One feature of the guide is its table of contents which indicates where the funding decisions are made for each program -- i.e., State agency, local governing agency, or Federal agency in Washington, D.C. American Libraries, November 1977 issue contains an up-todate "but not comprehensive" listing of Federal and private sources of library funding compiled by Sara Case entitled, "Grants and How to Get Them: An Update."

Catalog of Federal Education Assistance Programs, U.S. Office of Education, Washington D.C., Government Printing Office, published annually, 1976. $7.30. 1977 edition in process.

This Catalog is based on the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance and contains descriptions of programs administered by the U.S. Office of Education and other Federal agencies that support educational services, professional training or library services. Programs are indexed by program name keywords, authorizing Act, public law, U.S. code, administering agency, eligible applicants, and general program key words.

Cawley, Rebecca, compiler. Guide to Funding Sources for American Indian Library and Information Services, Washington, D.C., U.S. Department of the Interior; Minneapolis Minnesota, National Indian Education Association; November, 1974, 70p.

Program descriptions of 30 Federal programs and six private foundations are included in this Guide. Federal program information follows the general form and scope of the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance. Most of the Federal programs listed for FY 1974 are currently active, and are likely funding sources for library projects.

Commerce Business Daily, U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C., Government Printing Office. Published daily excluding Saturdays, Sundays and Holidays. $105.00 first/class mail.

The Daily is a listing of U.S. Government produrements invitations, contract awards, subcontracting leads, sales of surplus property and foreign business opportunities. Request for Proposal (RFP) notices relative to contracts for library-related activities, studies, etc., occasionally appear in the Daily.

Educational Media Yearbook, 1977. James W. Brown, editor. New York, R. R.

Bowker, 1977. $19.95.

A "Directory of Funding Sources" is included on pages 365-392 of the Yearbook. Fisting sources of funding for audio-visual, instructional technology, library and teleconfimunications projects. The Directory-includes information on 91 foundations, listing contact information and types of media programs supported in recent years. An annotated listing of Federal agencies that support media programs is included; information on specific programs is not mentioned, however. A selected, annotated bibliography of books, periodicals, directories and organizations that provide grant and contract information services is quite useful.

Elnor, Nancy. While You're Up, Get Me a Grant: a Basic Bibliography on Grants, compiled by Nancy Elnor, Elizabeth Katz and Martha Powers. 2nd printing, 1976. 10p. Bay Area SRRT, 2745 Stuart #3, Berkeley, CA 94705. $1.50.

Intended as a starting point for persons interested in library grant programs, this bibliography includes references to directories, books on grantsmanship, foundations, resource centers, special collections in libraries (principally California) and library fund-raising sources. Most entries have a brief annotation describing the service or special feature of the item described.

Federal Register. Washington D.C., Office of the Federal Register, National Archives and Records Service. (for sale by Superintendent of Documents, U.S.

Government Printing Office) $50/yr.

Published daily except Saturday, Sunday and Federal holidays, the Federal Register is a publication established in the 1930's by Congress to inform the public about regulations of the Executive Branch and independent agencies of the U.S. Government. It provides information on changes in rules and regulations, and deadlines for submitting projects under specific grant or contract programs. It is indexed monthly, quarterly and annually. The Office of Education is required by law to list all closing dates for its projects in the Federal Register. Individual copies of an issue of the Federal Register are sometimes available free from your Congressman or Senator.

Grants Register, 1977–1979. 5th edition. Ronald Turner, editor. New York, St. Martins Press, 1976. 800p. $25.00.

Published every two years, this publication provides information on scholarships, fellowships, research grants, exchange apportunities, grants-in-aid, competitions, and other awards offered by government agencies, international, national and private organizations. Primarily, it is intended for graduate and post-graduate level students. The coverage is international with emphasis on English-speaking countries. Each entry includes descriptive information about the award, requirements for eligibility, haw to apply, and an address to contact for further information. The sixth edition is scheduled to be available-in Autumn 1978.

The Grantsmanship Center News. Published six times a year by the Grantsmanship Center, 1015 West Olympic Soulevard, Los Angeles, California 90015. $15.00.

Selected topics relative to public and private funding sources are discussed at length in each issue of the News. Regular features present useful information for the grant seeker: Funding Notes, brief news items, about government and private funding; Federal Regulations Summary, brief summaries of program guidelines published in the Federal Register; Deadlines, filing deadlines for Federal grant programs; and New Publications, annotated listing of grants-related publications.

Hillman, Howard. The AFT of Winning Government Grants, by Howard Hillman and Kathryn Natale. New York, Vanguard Press, 1977.

Hillman's book is included in this Section because it has a comprehensive, annotated list of 66 sources of information regarding government and private funding (Information Sources, pages 118-191). The information is up-to-date and includes a number of sources not listed in this Section that the reader may want to examine.

U.S. Department of Agriculture, Rural Development Service. The Federal Assistance Programs Retrieval System (FAPRS).

FAPRS is not a publication, but is a computer data-base service permitting on-line, interactive searching of the Federal funding sources contained in the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance. FAPRS is designed to provide information to local communities on the current rural/urban development programs for which the communities are eligible. Persons may query the system using computer terminals in a number of Federal, State and multicounty organizations. For information on FAPRS, contacts FAPRS, Rural Development Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250; telephone: (202) 447-9296.

United States Government Manual. Office of the Federal Register, National Archives and Records Service. Washington, D.C., Government Printing Office, published annually. 1977178, $6.50.

The Manual provides a description of the purpose and programs of most government agencies and a list of the administrative personnel for each agency included. Name, subject and agency indices provide good access points to all of the agency information.

U.S. Office of Education. Direct, Discretionary Grant Programs: Closing Dates for Receipt of Applications for Fiscal Year 1978. (Federal Register, Oct. 12, 1977, pt. 2) Washington, D.C. 330.

Periodically the Federal Register publishes this announcement of closing dates for OE grant programs. It first lists in chronological order the closing dates of the programs, then a list of programs for which closing dates are not yet available, and finally a detailed description of application procedures on all programs listed, arranged in order by closing date.

U.S. Office of Education. Guide to OE-Administered Programs. Annual, published in American Education early each calendar, year; reprinted for distribution by OE.

This guide groups all Office of Education programs into four major categories: 1) Institutional support; 2) Individual support; 3) Research support; and 4) Construction support. It is arranged in simple graphic style showing type and purpose of assistance, authorizing legislation, appropriation, who may apply, and where to apply.

III. FEDERAL LIBRARY PROGRAMS

This Section includes information on nine federal programs that provide support exclusively for library services and activities. Program descriptions present basic information on the purpose, scape and size of the program, who may apply, and where to apply. If the reader has an interest in any of the programs listed, contact the appropriate administering agency for additional information. Agencies will generally supply program guidelines and listings of previously funded projects and will discuss the appropriateness of a particular project to the program scape and priorities.

FY 1979 program obligations are projected, not approved amounts, unless otherwise noted.

Indices that permit a multiple access approach to each of the programs listed in this Section and in Section IV are included in Section VI of the Directory.

IV. FEDERAL LIBRARY-RELATED PROGRAMS

This Section presents information on 72 library-related Federal programs. Libraries are eligible for each of the programs listed, but must meet the purpose, scope and program priorities in order to be considered for funding. These programs permit potential projects to take an imaginative approach to library services and activities for diverse user groups. In fact, a totally imaginative approach is the only way in which libraries will qualify for some of the included programs.

FY 1979 program obligations are projected, not approved amounts, unless otherwise noted.

Contact the appropriate administering agency for further information regarding any of the programs listed in this Section or in Section III

PURPOSE	To provide significant additional Federal financial assistance to States and local governments under conditions that will promote a maximum amount of local flexibility and discretion-in the delivery of governmental services to citizens. (Note: When first enacted, the Act specified eight priority categories, one of which was libraries; however the 1976 amendments have eliminated all priority areas. General revenue sharing still remains a possible source of increased library funding, both for construction purposes, and operating expenses.)	To provide services and resources to encourage educational institutions, governmental agencies and private organizations to improve and expand their activities relating to reading. Used for training local Right-to-Read administrators to exert leadership in finding solutions to the literacy problem in the State; for developing innovative programs in reading readiness for preschool children; and to provide for the distribution of books to children. Includes the Reading Academy Program which provides reading assistance and instruction to youths and adults who are not served by other programs either in or out of formal schools. This program is suitable for joint funding with other closely related Federal programs.
ELIGIBILITY REQUIRE- MENTS	State and local units of government.	Any public or nonepublic school or school district officially recognized by the State Department of Education; any State Department of Education in the U.S. or its possessions; any accredited college or university, or any community agency eligible to receive Federal funds (including libraries).
