ABSTRACT

Arranged in eight sections, this catalog provides elementary and secondary educators with resources on global education. General resources in section 1 are arranged under organizations and projects, language and area studies centers, youth exchange organizations, miscellaneous, and bibliographies of books, journals, and classroom activities. Section 2, Africa, contains separate listings of books, journals, films, and educators' and students' bibliographies, each subdivided by subject area. Section 3, divided into segments on East and Southeast Asia, includes lists of books, slides, films, and games. Lists of museums and newspapers are also included. Section 4 contains information on Australia organized under teachers' books, students' books, films, videos, resource kits, and aboriginal contacts. Resources on Canada, section 5, include listings of books, periodicals, newspapers, miscellaneous, games, and tourist bureaus. Section 6 cites books, texts, supplementary materials, teachers' guides, opportunities for continued study, and bibliographies on Latin America. Section 7, the Middle East, enumerates books, general information, literature, magazines, and media materials, each subdivided by country. Section 8 covers books, folktales, and films on the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. Many sections list English and foreign language sources, and additional resources, embassies, and national organizations. The catalog concludes with a nine-page alphabetical listing of publishers and distributors and their addresses. (LP)

...in today's highly interdependent world a liberal education should develop in each individual the realization that his or her own country, region, and ethnic, religious, social, or linguistic group are but one among many, each with differing characteristics, and that countries, regions, or social groups are not necessarily inferior or superior, and that one cannot see one's own country and culture in perspective until he or she has studied other lands and countries.

PREFACE

This catalog is one of the activities of the Southwest Consortium on International Understanding. The Consortium is comprised of the six state departments of education in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas, and the Southwest Educational Development Laboratory. A project of the Division of Educational Information Services at the Southwest Educational Development Laboratory, it is funded by the United States Department of Education, Office of International Education.

The Consortium is based on the philosophy that citizens of all ages need to be aware of the economic, political, and cultural interconnections between their region and other countries, and that such international understanding is essential for effective citizenship education. It creates a sustained forum on international issues and provides educators in the six states with information and materials on the topic.

The catalog has been compiled for the purpose of providing educators with a listing of resources which are available either through libraries or directly from the sources noted. It is intended for use at the elementary and secondary levels; however, many of the sources noted may be useful at any level of the educational process.

The editors dedicate the catalog to those teachers, administrators, and school board members who are committed to providing the young people of their charge a sense of membership in the whole human race and of their global responsibilities. In order to create programs to produce "internationalism" and "interculturalism," we suggest that the several premises listed below from which many people operate -- often without awareness -- should be questioned and replaced.*

QUESTIONABLE PREMISE

1. Possession of information changes behavior; "knowledge" results in better understanding of the human condition.
2. Organized learning can take place only in classrooms.

EXPLORATORY (OR NEW) PREMISE

1. Possession of information must be accompanied by corresponding affective learning experiences in order for behavior to reflect understanding of the human condition.
2. The world is the "campus" of schools and colleges. The curriculum of this campus can be organized effectively.

QUESTIONABLE PREMISE

3. International education is an area of study.
4. In order to do anything new or different in education "new" money is required.
5. All people need to be prepared to work at productive jobs.
6. Global conflict is still an alternative if differences cannot be solved otherwise.
7. Dramatic change can occur only through revolution; the establishment is so entrenched that change can never be rapid, but only evolve.
8. A man is prepared for the future if he is vocationally competent (can make a living), can vote with a modicum of intelligence, is functionally literate and not a "trouble-maker."

EXPLORATORY (OR NEW) PREMISE

3. International education is an attitudinal dimension of all areas of study.
4. Most needed changes in education would result from ceasing to do much of what we now do and replacing it with what is more needed.
5. Most people are not needed in the economic structure to make money at jobs; they should be prepared to make life more worthwhile.
6. Loss of liberty and destruction of civilization is the net result for all mankind in a nuclear confrontation. When defeat is imminent, extremes become alternatives.
7. American institutions are unique in that they have the capacity to incorporate avenues for change. Negating this capacity breaks faith with the historic function of American institutions; facilitating this capacity is imperative in times of social crisis.
8. "The educated person can no longer function as a contributing member of society without knowledge and experience concerning other peoples and other cultures. The forces and factors of the international scene underscore the importance of a citizenry informed about and sensitive to other peoples." Every man must recognize that his behavior is vitally interrelated to the welfare of all men.

QUESTIONABLE PREMISE

9. Leadership and instructional personnel in education will develop, improve and change if a strong leader tells them to and manipulates the system so that congruous behavior is rewarded by the system.

EXPLORATORY (OR NEW) PREMISE

9. Professional people identify more with their profession (discipline) than with an institution or a system. The key leadership function is in creating a climate supportive of change and providing the opportunities and avenues through which improvement can occur, e.g. international/intercultural experience.

* Orr, Paul Glenn. The American Sponsored Overseas School: A Research Matrix, The Center for International Education of the Massachusetts State College System, Buzzards Bay, Massachusetts, 1974, pp. 5-6.

Dr. Orr's prologue to his study provides an excellent introduction to the concepts of internationalism and interculturalism and the cause for concern. He cites the great inconsistency in providing a lot of information and very little, if any, appropriate educational experiences in trying to develop affective behaviors.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

A volume of this nature can only be made possible through the efforts of those persons most directly responsible for its development. The associate editors introduced at the end of the catalog have contributed a great deal of their time and energy in compiling the various sections. Most of them are associated with university foreign language and area study centers which have active outreach programs in elementary and secondary education. The charge to them was open in that they were given free rein to develop their section as they saw fit. Users of the Catalog are encouraged to contact these persons directly should they have any questions or concerns related to a particular section.

We have tried to be consistent with our abbreviated coding for grade levels. The following have been used throughout the Catalog: (h) - grades 10-12; (j or m) - grades 7-9; (e) - grades K-6; and in some cases (p) - pre-school through 4. It should also be kept in mind that prices quoted may not necessarily stand the test of time. The basic attempt is to give a general idea of cost. Also (R) means a basic resource.

As general editor I wish to thank all my associate editors and the project staff members for their continued support. Especially to Dr. Martha Smith, Project Director, for her abiding faith in my work. To Pam Grisham, Barbara Lecroy and Margaret Martone for all their typing and organizing skills; and lastly to my colleagues within the six state education departments who continually lent their moral support and good will.

My sincere hope is that this Catalog will contribute to increased international understanding.

-- Donald W. Myers
General Editor

INTRODUCTION TO GENERAL RESOURCES

This section is just what the title implies -- general resources. It includes references that go beyond just that of printed materials. Any teacher or school administrator interested in the international area should consider all of the various possibilities for students and staff, including study abroad, student exchanges, community programs, professional organizations, and the like.

Some of the sources cited in this section may be duplicated elsewhere in the catalog. Our editorial philosophy has been - better to duplicate than to omit. One must continually think of teaching aids that go beyond just those of paper, pencil, and chalkboard. Every community has an important resource - the human one - that can be effectively used in helping achieve international understanding.

I recommend that all teachers research their local community to see just what international resources they can find. A "trip" through the yellow pages of the phone book can be an enlightening experience. A survey of the community for its international resources would be of great value to any school district or system. Let me hear from those of you who do it!

ORGANIZATIONS AND PROJECTS

There are a great many organizations and projects involved with global education activities. During the 1981 year Global Perspectives in Education Incorporated (GPE), (see listing below) produced a directory of these sources called The Global Yellow Pages. Some of those listings are noted below along with references to some of their developed materials.

1. Global Perspectives in Education, Inc.
218 East 18th Street
New York, NY 10003

GPE is a nonpartisan, non-profit organization, that builds upon American democratic traditions to help prepare young people for the challenges of national citizenship in a global age. It is by far the most productive and respected organization of its kind in the U.S. today. GPE has an information exchange which includes an Information Exchange Newsletter, meetings and conferences, and INTERCOM, a quarterly publication designed to help translate research and scholarship into effective school and community programs.

2. Society for Intercultural Education, Training and Research (SIETAR)
1414 Twenty-Second Street, NW
Suite 102
Washington, DC 10037

SIETAR is an international association of diverse individuals and institutions concerned with promoting effective intercultural interaction. The Society's membership promotes: contact among educators, trainers, researchers and those whose position or interests involve them with people from another culture; exchange and dissemination of information and knowledge; and professional development.

3. Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE)
205 East 42nd Street
New York, NY 10017

It is an educational service that aids teachers, schools and school systems in incorporating world education goals and perspectives into their school curricula. They offer in-service training, seminars, consulting assistance, materials and a free newsletter.

UNIVERSITY FOREIGN LANGUAGE AND AREA STUDIES CENTERS

Over the past several years and with the support of federal funding, close to 100 foreign language and area centers were developed at various colleges and universities around the country. The world regions they study include Africa, Asia, Latin America, Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, the Middle East, and Canada. ~~Some focus on issues of international concern rather than on geographical areas.~~ All of these centers are required by federal law to commit a small portion of their budgets to serving constituencies outside their own universities.

Although a reduction in federal support has dwindled both the centers and their outreach programs, some continue to provide resources for elementary and secondary teachers. Several of these are contributors to this publication.

~~It is interesting to note that no centers have been established to promote West European languages and cultures. The general attitude is that there is no need; however, this is far from the truth. Western European languages have been on the down swing and there are no outreach programs devoted to this area. In the development of this catalog we were unable to find an institution or individual that could compile a section on Western European resources for teachers.~~

Below are listed a few of the centers that have exceptionally good outreach programs and provide materials outside their region. The rest may be found listed in the Global Yellow Pages published by GPE.

1. Center for Asian Studies
Texas Program for Educational Resources on Asia (TEXPERA)
The University of Texas
Austin, TX 78712

They offer the following services to teachers throughout the region: A bimonthly newsletter with information on events with an Asian focus occurring around the state; information on resources available to be loaned out; and reports on activities and programs of the Center. They maintain a library, audio-visual materials, information sheets on various topics, a radio series, and they conduct workshops for teachers.

2. Center for Middle Eastern Studies
Middle East Resource Center
The University of Texas
Austin, TX 78712

They offer research and instructional materials available on loan. They consist of books, monographs, slides, tapes, newspapers, and magazines on such subject areas as history, music, mathematics, art, current events, geography, food, religion and energy.

3. The Institute of Latin American Studies
The University of Texas at Austin
Austin, TX 78712

Although they do not maintain an outreach program the Center has developed some excellent publications on information and materials for teaching about Latin America.

4. Center for Teaching International Relations
Graduate School of International Studies
Ben Cherrington Hall, Room 210
University of Denver
Denver, CO 80202

The Center was established for the purpose of improving the teaching of international/intercultural studies at pre-collegiate levels. They assist classroom teachers to become more proficient in the teaching of global, social science, and educational skill topics. They offer in-service courses, a masters degree program, and many publications.

5. Institute of International Studies
The University of California
Berkeley, CA 94720

The Institute houses two excellent centers. The Center for South and Southeast Asia Studies publishes a magazine called REVIEW. The Spring issue of 1982 provides an overview of their outreach movement of schools.

The Center for Middle Eastern Studies publishes a newsletter and a guide to resources for teachers.

6. The Center for African Studies
University of Florida
470 Grinter Hall
Gainesville, FL 32611

They have an outreach service that publishes a periodic newsletter called IROHIN. It often contains information of interest and value to teachers.

7. Center for Latin American Studies
University of Florida
308 Grinter Hall
Gainesville, FL 32611

The Center publishes a great deal of information useful to teachers. They also issue a newsletter called DIALOGO.

3. Brigham Young University
Language and Intercultural Research Center
240 B-34
Provo, UT 84602

They publish occasional learning aid booklets and a series of briefing aids called Culturgrams which are 2-4 page condensations about foreign countries.

9. Cornell University
Southeast Asia Program
120 Uris Hall
Ithaca, NY 14853

The program at Cornell issues a bulletin each semester in order to keep those who teach courses dealing with Southeast Asia or who work with Southeast Asians in the U.S. informed of the resources on that region which are available through Cornell.

10. Center for Near Eastern and North African Studies
Outreach Program
The University of Michigan
144 Lane Hall
Ann Arbor, Michigan

They issue a newsletter and have materials available on a lending basis to teachers.

YOUTH EXCHANGE ORGANIZATIONS

For those interested in study or travel abroad on an exchange basis the following organizations are highly recommended:

1. AFS International/Intercultural Programs
313 East 43rd Street
New York, NY 10017

They foster understanding among people of approximately 60 nations through exchange programs enabling high school students to live with a family in another culture for a summer or a year.

2. Amigos de las Americas
5618 Star Lane
Houston, TX 77057

Through AMIGOS, young volunteers serve in public health projects in Mexico, the Caribbean, Central and South America. They have over 30 chapters nationwide.

3. The Experiment in International Living
Brattleboro, VT 05301

It is the oldest organization of its kind offering high school semester and summer abroad programs.

4. International Christian Youth Exchange
74 Trinity Place, Room 610
New York, NY 10006

They offer a unique experience to young people ages 16-24 and their families through a traditional high school exchange program and volunteer community service.

5. Youth for Understanding
International Student Exchange Program
3501 Newark Street, NW
Washington, DC 20016

They are dedicated to fostering international understanding by making possible family living experiences abroad for students ages 15-18.

• MISCELLANEOUS

1. The ERIC Clearinghouse for Social Studies/Social Science Education (ERIC/ChESS)
855 Broadway
Boulder, Colorado 80302

For those interested in obtaining current educational materials on any given subject filed, ERIC is one of the best sources. ERIC, the Educational Resources Information Center, is a nationwide network of 16 clearinghouses, each sponsored by a university or professional association. ERIC provides read access to more than 100,000 educational documents through its information storage and computer retrieval system. Among these materials are curriculum guides, teaching units, descriptions of innovative programs, bibliographies, and research reports.

Write to ERIC/ChESS at the address above for information on duplicate printouts of ERIC computer searches on topics of your interest and get on their mailing list.

2. Futures Unlimited: Teaching About Worlds To Come, R. M. Fitch and C. M. Svengalis, National Council for the Social Studies, Bulletin 59.

Provides practical examples of teaching strategies and lists of recommended resources for teachers and students who are concerned about the ability to cope with change.

3. Global Concerns, Our Concerns. A radio/cassette series on global concerns presented by the School of International Affairs, 1303 International Affairs Building, Columbia University, New York, NY 10027.

The ten half-hour programs are designed for use with adults, however, they may be used with senior high students or for teacher in-service projects.

4. Filmstrips for Area Studies: A Critical Evaluation of K - 12 Learning Materials, William Lipsky and Associates, Occasional Paper No. 7, Curriculum Inquiry Center, Graduate School of Education, University of California, Los Angeles.

An excellent guide to quality control in the use of area study filmstrips. Valuable as a resource and evaluation technique.

5. The New Heritage Network. An ethnic heritage program operated by the Education Service Center, Region 20, 1314 Hines Avenue, San Antonio, TX 78208.

Components of the program are teacher-developed ethnic/cultural activities; workshops for teachers; television programs on video tapes; multimedia materials/community resources; and a student activity book.

6. Transitions, 18 Hulst Road, Amherst, MA 01022.

A resource guide to budget travel, work, and study abroad. It emphasizes timeliness and reliability through informative articles and first-hand reports. Special issues focus on specific countries, areas, and topics. Subscription rates are $6 a year.

A GLOBAL STUDIES BIBLIOGRAPHY

Center at Indiana University)

BACKGROUND READING

- Becker, James (ed.), Schooling for a Global Age. McGraw-Hill, New York, 1979. This book presents a strong case for improving and expanding global perspectives in education in American schools. It includes information about exemplary programs at the elementary and secondary school level and an extensive bibliography.
- Biswas, Margaret R., and Asit K. (eds.), Food, Climate, and Man. John Wiley and Sons, New York, 1979. Written by nine of the world's leading scientists, this book suggests problems and prospects of maximizing food production without destroying the ecological basis for achieving and sustaining such production.
- Blake, David H. and Robert S. Walters, The Politics of Global Economic Relations, Prentice-Hall, Inc., Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey, 1976. A concise overview of the political aspects of international economic transactions such as trade, aid, investment and multinational corporations. Examines issues which are causing conflict in the global political economy.
- Botkin, James W., Mahdi Elmandjra, and Mircea Malitza, No Limits to Learning, Bridging the Human Gap. Pergamon Press, New York, 1979. Makes the case that learning and the individual human being--not material resources--are the key to our future. Proposes "anticipatory and participatory" learning as an alternative to more traditional learning by shock.
- Brown, Lester, World Without Borders. Random House, New York, 1972. A clearly written source for students and teachers which deals with such problems as the environment, the rich-poor gap, urbanization, and hunger, and shows the interrelationships with population trends, resource shortages, and the arms race. The author describes the meaning of multinational corporations and global interdependence, and also suggests ways of achieving a better world in the future.
- Cleveland, Harlan and Thomas W. Wilson, Humangrowth, An Essay on Growth Values and the Quality of Life. Aspen Institute, Palo Alto, California, 1978. Reviews the values of underlying growth policies. Offers a pragmatic analysis suggesting that a world-wide transition from indiscriminate economic growth to selective humangrowth is already underw

- Commoner, Barry, The Closing Circle: Nature, Man and Technology. Alfred Knopf, New York, 1971. A lucid description of ecology, and suggestions for some needed changes in economic thinking if we want to survive.
- Ehrlich, Paul R., and Anne H., The End of Affluence: A Blueprint for Your Future. Ballantine Books, New York, 1974. Describes how the world system is functioning, cities population growth, increasing affluence, and faulty use of technology as major factors in the declining quality of life, and offers suggestions for survival.
- Falk, Richard, This Endangered Planet. Random House, New York, 1971. Argues that preoccupation with the warfare-threat system has kept us from dealing with poverty, racism, overpopulation, and diseases; calls for massive redirection of human energy and material resources.
- Hardin, Garrett, Exploring New Ethics for Survival: The Voyage of the Spaceship Beagle. Viking, New York, 1972. An appraisal of what the human race must do to survive. Includes discussion of pollution, population, resources and ethics.
- Hayes, Denis, Rays of Hope: The Transition to a Post-Petroleum World. W. W. Norton & Co., Inc., New York, 1977. An excellent review of the present energy situation and some well thought out alternatives for a more energy-efficient world.
- Hoopes, David S., Intercultural Education. Phi Delta Kappa Educational Foundation, Bloomington, Indiana, 1980. This pamphlet presents a persuasive case for a conceptual approach to global or intercultural education which emphasizes cultural pluralism and global interdependence. Suggests cultural identity is an important element in efforts to develop global perspectives.
- Kocher, Eric, International Jobs -- Where They Are -- How to Get Them. Addison-Wesley, Reading, Massachusetts, 1979. Contains information on entering and advancing in an international career. Lists hundreds of jobs in government, business, private agencies and international organizations. Tells where to apply, what languages are needed and what working conditions will be like.
- Levering, Ralph B., The Public and American Foreign Policy. William Morrow and Company, Inc., New York, 1978. An overview of public involvement in foreign policy issues in the period 1918-1978. Analyzes the effect of education, political affiliation, ethnic identity and media usage on the roles and attitudes of individuals regarding foreign policy issues.

- Meadows, Dennis, The Limits of Growth: A Universe Book. New York, 1972. Predicts a world-wide collapse within a century unless the growth of population and industry is halted and a "global equilibrium" established.
- Mische, Gerald and Patricia, Toward a Human World Order. Paulist Press, New York, 1977. Presents ways of thinking about how global and local issues are related to one another and how citizens may help to bring about a more just world policy.
- Morgan, Dan, Merchants of Grain. The Viking Press, New York, 1979. A narrative of the grain trade's history. An analysis of the intertwining between business, diplomacy and the distribution of food around the world.
- Muller, Ronald, and Richard Barnett, with Joseph Collins and David Moore (eds.), Global Reach: The Power of the Multinational Corporations. Simon and Schuster, New York, 1974. Critical review of the operation of multinational corporations. Includes case studies and a wealth of data.
- Reischauer, Edwin O., Toward the 21st Century: Education for a Changing World. Alfred A. Knopf, New York, 1973. Argues that the universal problems faced by humankind require international negotiation which in turn requires an informed citizenry educated in a new and radically different way. Better understanding of the outside world and changes in attitudes toward other people are seen as crucial to human survival.
- Schneider, Stephen H. and Lynne E. Mesriow, The Genesis Strategy: Climate and Global Survival. Plenum Press, New York, 1976. An intriguing look at the world's changing weather and the impact it is likely to have on world food resources.

education efforts and research concerning students' knowledge and attitudes and international cooperation. Provides information about programs emphasizing human rights and the search for world peace.

Wanniski, Jude, The Way the World Works: How Economies Fail and Succeed. Basic Books, Inc., New York, 1978. Argues that the world is a closed political economy in which all humans are members of the global electorate and vote their preferences. Political, economic and military spheres intertwine and the global electorate makes choices striving for a better life.

Ward, Barbara, The Home of Man. W. W. Norton and Company, New York, 1976. Background data and an overview of the issues discussed at the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements.

Ward, Barbara, Progress for a Small Planet. W. W. Norton, New York, 1979. Concludes that the world need not be torn asunder by rising demands for economic growth and exhaustion of resources--if a fairer sharing of resources is extended to the whole of world society, a new emphasis on use of renewable resources is accepted and sound environmental management is achieved. The author believes that moderate changes pursued by citizens with dedication and vigor can provide a stable basis for our planet's survival.

Hanvey, Robert G., An Attainable Global Perspective, New York: Center for Global Perspectives, 1978. Describes elements that contribute to the formation of a global perspective-consciousness, including "state of the planet" awareness, cross-cultural awareness, knowledge of global dynamics, and awareness of human choices.

Huntley, James R., "The Global Significance of the Evolving Atlantic-Pacific System," NATO Review, no. 6, December 1977. This article provides evidence and arguments supporting the notion of an emerging interlocking world-wide economic system of which the Atlantic-Pacific powers of OECD are the vital core.

Johansen, Robert C., "The Arms Bazaar," Harper's, May, 1979. Argues that despite SALT agreements the U.S. and Soviet military postures are not aimed at eliminating nuclear weapons or military power in human affairs. States that the unpromising long-range consequences of the continuing escalation of the arms race makes necessary a practical program for abolishing war.

Keyfitz, Nathan, "World Resources and the Middle Class," Scientific American, Vol 234, No. 1 (July, 1976), pp. 28-35. Points out that it is the middle class that is the biggest threat to world resources and calls for mobilization of scientific and engineering talent to solve the technical problems and enable the middle class to continue to expand.

- Leestma, Robert, "Education for a Global Age: What is Involved?" Vital Issues, Vol. XXVIII, No. 7, Center for Information on America, Washington, Connecticut 06793, March, 1979. Identifies five main elements in global education as "unity and diversity of mankind," "international human rights," "global interdependence," "intergenerational responsibility," and "international cooperation," and summarizes major arguments for immediate and widespread improvements in education with a global perspective.
- McNamara, Robert S., Development and the Arms Race, University of Chicago, May 22, 1979. Argues that the world has reached a point where additional military expenditures actually erodes security. Provides support for the notion that the concept of security encompasses far more than military force.
- Muller, Robert, Need for Global Education; Global Interdependence Center, Philadelphia, World Affairs Council, 1978. Cites improved living conditions on earth, increased population and the advent of a dense network of interdependencies on earth as evidence of the need for global education and the formulation of a new ethics.

SOURCES OF LESSONS AND CLASSROOM ACTIVITIES

Abramowitz, Norman, Charles Bloomstein, and William Nesbitt, Teaching Youth About Conflict and War, National Council for the Social Studies, Washington, D.C., 1973. Reviews some of the historical, philosophical, biological, psychological and economic factors associated with war. Provides a rationale for teaching about war and peace. Includes activities, a game, and suggestions for developing classroom materials.

Branson, Margaret S. and Cathryn J. Long, Global Perspectives: The Human Dimension, Pt. 2: Planet-Knowing and Planet-Caring. New York, Center for Global Perspectives, 1977 (Intercom, 87). Presents teaching materials, emphasizing the relationships between the self, other people and our world, and the tensions between the need for change and the need to care for the natural environment. Lessons examine how diverse groups in India, Antarctica and the U.S. are dealing with specific environmental issues.

Cleaveland, Alice Ann, Jean Craven, and Maryanne Danfelter, "Universals of Culture," Intercom 92/93. New York: Global Perspectives in Education, 1979. This handbook offers an approach to the study of cultures using functions which culture serves and what are found in some form in every culture. Lessons, activities and stories are used in dealing with such universals as: play and recreation, arts, social control, language and communication, and world view.

"Great Decisions 1982," Foreign Policy Association, New York, 1982. Concise summaries and discussion of questions relating to eight current foreign policy or world issues. Topics include: "America's Defense," "Protecting the World's Resources," "Japan," "Poland and the USSR."

Headline Series, Foreign Policy Association, New York. This well-established series deals with current foreign policy or world issues. Among the more recent titles are: "The U.S. Interdependence and World Order" by Lincoln and Irvangi Bloomfield; "Future Worlds" by Richard Falk; "The Conduct of United States Foreign Policy in the Nation's Third Century" by Bayless Manning; "Nuclear Proliferation: A Strategy for Control" by Andrew J. Pierre with Claudia Moyne; and "Global Interdependence and the Multinational Firm" by Lloyd Cutler.

Indiana in the World, Department of Public Instruction, Indianapolis, Indiana, 1978. This handbook contains lessons, activities and strategies for identifying and using resources, expertise and instructional materials available in local communities within a state to learn about and to participate in global affairs.

Indy in the World, The Indianapolis Star and The Indianapolis News, Indianapolis, Indiana, 1978. Demonstrates how to use the pages of local newspapers to gain a better understanding of global events and the relationship between local affairs and world affairs.

King, David C., Margaret S. Branson, and Larry E. Condon, Education for a World in Change, A Working Handbook for Global Perspectives, Center for Global Perspectives, New York, 1976 (Intercom, 84/85). A handbook for curriculum infusion that offers perspectives on the 21st century. Includes avenues for change in education, and sample lessons for grades K-12. Topics included are: Talking with our hands (K-3), Planning a park (4-6), What use is an electrical toy (7-9), and Agenda for Space (10-12).

King, David, Education for a World in Change: A Report, Intercom 96197, Global Perspectives in Education, New York, 1980. Includes description of successful programs, defines terms, answers questions people ask about global education.

Kinghorn, Jon Rye, Guide to Four Essential Themes, Charles F. Kettering Foundation, Dayton, Ohio 1979. A curriculum guide for school improvement through global education. Emphasizes the themes -- valuing diversity, understanding the world as an interdependent system, developing effective working relationships with others, and understanding prevailing world conditions, the process of change and emerging trends. Lists goals with implications for global education and suggested ways of responding to each.

Mehlinger, Howard D., et. al., Global Studies for American Schools, National Education Association, Washington, D.C., 1979. Based on the Indiana University Social Studies Development Center's Global Studies Project, this booklet provides a rationale for global studies, sample lessons for middle grades, and a discussion of how to evaluate materials.

Otero, George G., and Carol Moeller, Teaching Reading in the Social Studies, a Global Approach, Center for Teaching International Relations, University of Denver, Denver, Colorado, 1978. A guide with teaching activities focusing on reading and thinking skills. Provides models to be adapted to social studies topics. Also provides basic tools for assessing the readability of social studies texts with special techniques for using maps and newspapers.

Population Reference Bureau, 1887 Connecticut Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Publishes a variety of reports, bulletins, maps, simulations and handbooks suitable for use in secondary schools. Especially useful in study of world and national population trends.

UNESCO. Associated Schools Project in the USA. Helping Boys and Girls Discover the World, Teaching About Global Concerns and the United Nations in Elementary and Middle Schools, edited by Leonard Kenworthy. United Nations Association of the USA, New York, 1978. This pamphlet provides lists of resources, suggests ways of adding a global dimension to existing curricula, and offers ideas for themes or units dealing with world problems, area studies, and subject fields.

Kidron, Michael and Ronald Segel, The State of the World Atlas, Simon and Schuster, New York, 1981. This atlas provides information and interpretation -- much of it in the form of maps and graphs -- in regard to such worldwide concerns as energy, food, military power, trade and mineral resources.

Johnson, Jacquelyn and John Beneger, Global Issues in the Intermediate Classroom, Social Science Education Consortium in Boulder, Colorado, 1981. Includes lessons, activities, handouts and sources of information and materials for teachers and students.

U.S./Japan Conference for Cultural and Educational Interchange, Opening Doors: Contemporary Japan, Asia Society, New York, 1979. Includes teaching materials developed by specialists from Japan and the United States. The themes relate to some aspect of life in an industrial age and apply to the United States and to Japan, thus showing the commonalities that exist among people. The themes are Contemporary Life, Perception and Expression, Decision-making, Identity, and Values. Includes an extensive bibliography.

Switzer, Kenneth A. and Paul T. Mulloy, Global Issues: Activities and Resources for the High School Teacher, Social Science Education Consortium, Boulder, Colorado, 1979. INTRODUCTION TO AFRICA

This is a catalog of some of the existing educational resources on Africa, particularly Black Africa. The catalog might be useful to students, educators, teachers K-12, business, labor, agriculture, shipping and governmental leaders at the state and local levels.

Africa is a vast continent with heterogenous political and ethnic traditions as well as varying economic potential. Although Africa is difficult to quantify accurately, it could be said that it consists of about 52 countries with a median population of 4 million. Nigeria, with a population of about 80 million, is the most populated black country in the world.

About 45 percent of all Africans live in countries whose lingua franca is English, about 20 percent live in countries where French is the main official language, and about 23 percent have Arabic as the official language. The rest of the population employs a vernacular or another European language. On the basis of religion, about 40 percent are Moslems, 25 percent Christians and the rest practice a variety of indigenous African religion.

INTRODUCTION TO THE MATERIALS

This catalog contains teaching resources for teachers of K-12 in subject areas such as Education, Arts, Architecture, Music, Drama, Economics, Commerce, Agriculture, History, Geography, Imperialism, Environment and Ecology.

The major geographical areas concerned are the English-speaking West African countries, French-speaking West African countries, East and Central Africa and countries of Southern Africa. The materials in this catalog could be obtained at major college and university libraries across the nation, particularly through the Inter-library loan system.

Each article contains references and bibliography of text books and other printed materials which are valuable for in-depth studies.

FILMS

The listed films are arranged under subject headings such as (1) description and travel, (2) politics and government, (3) social conditions, (4) social life and customs, etc. The films may be obtained from the 91 sources, both government and commercial agencies, listed in the Sources of Films section.

For each film there is a descriptive entry, consisting of the title of the film, its source and physical characteristics, the age levels to which it is applicable, its price, other supplementary information, and a summary of the film content. An alphabetical title index, listing every film in the bibliography followed by the subject heading under which the descriptive entry for it appears, is included so that the location of the descriptive entry for a film may be found if the title is known.

government and politics, and social life for the nations of Asia through books, texts, curriculum units, audio-visuals and other resources - magazines, newsletters - and resource centers - universities and other educational organizations, governmental organizations, civic organizations and museums.

Looking at Asia one can find wide ranges in quality of life, from great affluence to great poverty, from rural villages to large urban centers, from an illiterate populace to a highly educated society, and including various forms of government. Avoidance of stereotypes with their half-truths is important when teaching about Asia; rather it should be approached on its own terms using materials written by Asians themselves and those who have carefully studied the area from the outside. Asian civilizations are older than our own. Ideas, goods and people have flowed among their nations throughout history; the development of the West was just one more ingredient in the mix of Asian history. Asia is influenced by the West, though in some cases the influence may be detrimental to its nations and peoples. Of course the flow of ideas is not one-way: the West has been influenced by Asia - its philosophies, cultures, economies and political systems - as well.

The dilemma and challenge for Asia is to combine influences and ideas of the West within Asian historical and cultural contexts. The challenge for educators is to convey Asia - its problems and its successes - to their students so that they might more fully understand this dynamic and important region of the world.

There are several books in this bibliography that merit attention at the outset. First is China: A Multimedia Guide by Mary Sive (1982). Comprehensive in its survey of materials on China - books, audio-visuals, films, etc., this book replaces the older resource guide by Posner and de Keijzer, China: A Resource and Curriculum Guide, and is very useful to teachers of all levels. Different and more limited in their individual scope are two useful publications of the Japan Society. The first, Japan in Films (1982), annotates documentary films available about Japan. The second, a monograph entitled What Shall I Read About Japan provides a bibliography of books pertaining to many aspects of Japan and Japanese life. It is very helpful for those wishing to independently read about Japan. Focus on Buddhism and Focus on Hinduism (1981) are two recent critically annotated guides to audio-visual materials on these two important Asian religions. Although these two books concentrate on religion, they are more broadly defined to include society and culture. Barbara Harrison's Learning About India: An Annotated Guide for Non-specialists (1977) is still the most useful publication in this area despite its publication date. The best bibliography on Southeast Asia for teachers is Southeast Asia: A Resource Guide for Teachers prepared by the Project on Asian Studies at the University of Michigan. There are frustrations with out-of-print books on occasion and new publications are missing but it is still the best place to begin.

Other materials on Asia are available from embassies and consulates, trade organizations, etc. These should be used carefully and as supplements to other materials because they may lack critical focus. On a practical note, free-loan films available from these sources are in high demand and should be requested early. Finally, prices on materials for sale may or may not be correct. You should expect increases in many cases.

INTRODUCTION TO AUSTRALIA

In compiling the resource list on Australia, the needs of the individual classroom teacher were taken into account. The list does not attempt to present an authoritative scholarly listing of all material on Australia (together with some South Pacific and New Zealand items) that is available in the United States. Instead, it confines itself to the needs of teachers and students in the K-12 grade range and mainly to nonfiction material.

The following resource materials are included:

- a. Books specifically for the teacher
- b. Books suitable for the student
- c. 16mm films
- d. Videos
- e. Filmstrips (with or without cassette)
- f. Resource kits which usually include parts of a, b, c, d, & e.

In discussing books, it was acknowledged that many teachers would want to both update their own knowledge as well as to provide students with some material to use. In this latter respect, a grade level has been indicated as that to which it would be suitable. However, this is a rough guide and items could, especially in the hands of a skilled teacher, be adapted to other levels. When reading the book reviews, it is important to note any comments related to the publication date of the material. Much of the material located is no longer current and this must be borne in mind during selection. This is especially the case with material that pertains to be an up-to-date account. Students, too, should be made aware of this problem prior to reading the material. Generally, it can be estimated that four years can be taken from nonpublication dates to give the data date.

The films and videos listed should be previewed before being used in the classroom. Again, as with books, the date of production should be taken into account before using any film or video. Sometimes an old film can be used if placed into its historic context and followed up by current data either in the form of another film or video or written material.

Most of the filmstrips listed are either accompanied by notes or cassettes. They are often suitable for individual student use following a teacher directed lesson. Again, the date of the material should be noted and all material previewed.

Only a few resource kits have been noted, but the innovative teacher will find it easy to combine several of the items listed elsewhere into a meaningful kit/resource. For example, a combination of filmstrips, video, and print material could form a useful starting point.

In compiling this list, the following sources were used:

- Australian government listings and holdings information provided by the Australian Information Service. This is a very useful source of material. The Australian Consulate-General in New York has a comprehensive film holding. Indeed, the New York Consulate-General has the most comprehensive library of Australian material in the United States.
- Publishers catalogues and bibliographies
- Austin Public Library. This was used in an attempt to discover what material would be readily available to a teacher utilizing a local library. The Austin library was used as an example of the type of library that is available to many teachers either locally or within a reasonable traveling distance.

Thus, the listing is reflective of the sources easily available to K-12 teachers. As such, it must be noted that there is a lack of very recent material; most of it being produced in the early to mid 1970s. As such, teachers are advised to obtain up-to-date additional material from magazines and Australian government sources. To assist in this, some addresses are included.

It is hoped that this listing provides teachers with some useful data and guidelines in the selection of materials appropriate in the studying of Australia and the South Pacific.

--Michael Bradley

Bush Walkabout. Poignart, Alex. Reading, Massachusetts: Addison-Wesley, 1974. (grades 2-7)

Winner of Australia's Children's Book of the Year Award. An excellent photo study of the adventures of two Aborigine children who are lost in the bush.

Captain Cook (Learner Verified Edition II), Concept & Inquiry ERC Social Science Program. Dallas: Allyn & Bacon, Inc, 1974. (e)

A well structured and illustrated reading book tracing Captain Cook's voyage to the Pacific. Events leading up to his death in Hawaii are covered and it does not include the exploration of Australia and New Zealand.

Changing Land Use: The Back Lachlan District of Australia: A Case Study of Land Use in a Semi-Arid Area (and) Student Workbook.
Laws, Kevin. Athens, Georgia: Georgia University, 1978, $3.00
(h) Teacher's guide.

A social studies unit and student workbook that explores changes in land use over time in a semi-arid area of eastern Australia. The unit takes a historical approach from showing how Aborigines inhabited the area 30,000 years ago to the present sheep-raising properties. The consequences of the changes on the land are explored.

Children of the Desert. Wallace, Phyl and Noel. Nashville, Tennessee: Thomas Nelson and Sons, 1969. (e) Teacher's guide.

A well illustrated portrayal of the Aboriginal children of the Pitjamtjatara tribe. The book shows how childhood is the training period for existence in this nomadic tribe.

Colonial Australia before 1850. Fletcher, Brian. Nashville, Tennessee: Thomas Nelson and Sons, 1976. Teacher's guide/reference.

This surveys the principal features of Australian history in the early colonial period and especially focuses on New South Wales.

Cooper's Creek. Moorhead, Alan. New York: Harper and Row, Inc., 1963. Teacher's guide/reference.

An excellent account of the Burke and Wills expedition of 1860 and its tragic conclusion. The deprivations that they had to endure are thoroughly covered with numerous references to original documents.

Dan McDougall and the Bulldozer. Pender, Lydia. New York: Abelard-Schuman, 1963 (e), Teacher's guide.

Dan drives his bulldozer to Sydney from the outback. However he finds that he prefers the outback to city life. Suitable for reading aloud.

Encyclopaedia of Australia. Learmouth, Andrew and Nancy. Frederick Warne & Co., Ltd., 1973 (K-12) Teacher's guide/reference.

An extremely detailed reference collection covering the major fields of biography, geography, natural history, literature, the arts, sports, etc.

Flying Doctor Calling: The Flying Doctor Service of Australia. Hill, Ernestine. Sydney: Angus and Robertson, 1953 (j,h) Teacher's guide.

Provides a history of the early years of the Royal Flying Doctor Service. It outlines some of the problems faced by people in the Outback in the early 20th Century. It focuses on the Rev. Dr. John Flynn's efforts to establish the service.

Folk Tales of the World: Australia. Beckley, Rene. Leeds, UK: E. J. Arnold & Son, 1965. (e)

Eight stories of traditional Aboriginal life are included. Well illustrated.

INTRODUCTION TO CANADA

Many Americans think that Japan is America's largest trading partner. It's not. Canada is.

That lack of knowledge about Canada is not unique. Even though it is a bordering country we are appallingly ill informed about it. For too long we have had a simplistic view of Canadians as being "just like us," and we have displayed a basic ignorance of both recent and distant events in Canadian history and politics.

We need to know about Canada in the interest of American future security and well being--especially at a time when interests of Canada and the United States are diverging in such areas as economic development, the exploitation of natural and marine resources, and foreign policy.

One might consider both the theoretical and practical reasons for looking at Canada from a comparative point of view. Since students often relate to Canada because of the "just like us" view, Canada can be used as a comparative tool in looking at various developments in the history, geography, and economics of the U.S.

We hope that this listing of resources helps in assisting teachers to include Canada in their courses.

BOOKS AND ARTICLES I.

Only a few books and articles that field testers recommended are listed here. It was not feasible to do more than that. For a more thorough, annotated listing of books and teaching materials send to the Canadian-American Center at the University of Maine for Teaching Canada: A Bibliography.

Berton, Pierre. The National Dream; The Last Spike (two books under one cover). Toronto: McClelland and Stewart, 1974.

Brebner, J. Bartlett. Canada: A Modern History. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1960

Bowles, R. P.; Hanley, J. L.; Hodgins, B. S.; MacKenzie, W. M.; and Rawlyk, G. A. Protest, Violence and Social Change. Canada: Issues and Options Series. Scarborough, Ontario: Prentice-Hall, 1972.

Other titles in the "Issues and Options" Series: Canada and the U.S. (1973) Canadiens, Canadians, and Québécois (1974)

Bowles, Richard et al. (eds.) Canada and the U.S.: Continental Partners or Wary Neighbors? Scarborough, Ontario: Prentice-Hall, 1973.

The Editors cover wide ranging topics on cultural, economic, and political relations, both in their contemporary and historical setting. A good source book for teachers.

Canada. Investigating Man's World Series. Glenview, Illinois: Scott, Foresman, 1971.

Field testers recommended this for use at the 7th grade level.

Careless, J.M.S. Canada: A Story of Challenge. Toronto: Macmillan, 1970.

Clark, Robert J. et al. Canadian Issues and Alternatives. Toronto: Macmillan, 1974.

A textbook which examines a variety of Canadian issues. Unit 3 is entitled "The American and Us;" unit 4 examines Canada's role in world affairs.

Clement, Wallace. Continental Corporate Power: Economic Linkage Between Canada and the United States. Toronto: McClelland and Stewart, 1977.

This book presents the thesis that Canada is dominated by multinational companies. The book is of interest to teachers but may not be suitable as a student text.

Cook, Ramsay. Canada: A Modern Study. Toronto: Clarke, Irwin and Company, 1971.

Cornell, P. G.; Hamelin, Jean; Quellet, Fernand; and Trudel, Marcel. Canada: Unity in Diversity. Toronto: Holt Rinehart, and Winston, 1967.

Current History.

The issues for April, 1972; April, 1974; and April, 1977, are devoted to articles on Canada. For the address, see the appropriate section below.

Footprints in the Snow. Mississauga, Ontario: Little Rock Schoolhouse Educational Publications.

Contains brief biographies on over 75 Canadian heroes and heroines.

Foreign Policy Association. Great Decisions--1978.

Contains a chapter on Canada.

Fox, Annette; Hero, Alfred; Nye, Joseph (eds.). Canada and the United States: Transnational and Transgovernmental Relations. New York: Columbia University Press, 1976.

A collection of essays on Canada-U.S. relations which focus on the interdependence between the countries. Useful for teachers.

Fry, Earl. Canadian Government and Politics in Comparative Perspective. Washington, D.C. University Press of America, 1978.

It has an excellent summary of significant events in the history of Canada and is written in a manner that makes it easily understood.

Gough, Barry. Canada. Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey: Prentice-Hall, 1975.

Describes Canada's emergence as a modern nation concentrating on those aspects of history that are unique to Canada such as: the effects of climate and geography; French Canadian-English Canadian relations; and the myths and realities concerning relations with the United States.

Grime, Alexander R. Canada. Boston & Toronto: Ginn and Company, 1973.
For elementary grades.

Herstein, H. H.; Highes, L. J.; and Kirbyson, R. C. Challenge and Survival: The History of Canada, Scarborough, Ontario: Prentice-Hall, 1970.

Kirbyson, Ronald C. In Search of Canada. Scarborough, Ontario: Prentice-Hall, 1977. 2 vols.

Intended to solve the problem of reading material that is too difficult, this book is written at the 8th - 9th grade reading level.

Lower, A. J. Canada: An Outline History. Revised. Scarborough, Ontario: McGraw-Hill Ryerson Limited, 1973.

Lower, Arthur R. M. Canadians in the Making: A Social History of Canada. Don Mills: Longmans Green, 1958.

Lyon, Peyton; Tomlins, Brian. Canada As An International Actor. Toronto: Macmillan, 1979.

A look at Canada's image as seen by outside "experts." They rated Canada's military power, economic strength and political influence in the world.

McDeirtt, Daniel; Scully, Angus; Smith, Carl. Canada Today. Scarborough: Prentice-Hall, 1979.

Written for the secondary school audience, this text looks at five themes in Canadian studies. The theme on Canadian-U.S. relations focuses on economics and culture. (A teacher's guide is available.)

Metcalfe, William, ed. Understanding Canada. A Multidisciplinary Introduction to Canadian Studies. New York: New York University Press, 1982.

Ministère Des Affaires Intergouvernementales, Gouvernement du Québec. Quebec in Brief.

Available in both English and French.

Milner, Henry. Politics in the New Quebec. Toronto: McClelland and Stewart Limited, 1978.

North-South Institute. North-South Encounter: The Third World and Canadian Performance. North-South Institute, 1977.

This publication examines and "grades" the performance of Canada (North) in its relations with the poorer countries of the "South."

Ricker, John C.; and Saywell, John T. How Are We Governed? Toronto: Clarke, Irwin and Company, 1967, 1971.

Robeson, Virginia A.; ed. Documents in Canadian History. Toronto: Ontario Institute for Studies in Education.

Royal Bank of Canada. Conspectus of Canada.

Free of charge

Saywell, John. Canada Past and Present. Toronto: Clark, Irwin and Company, 1975.

Available free from the Canadian Consulate in New York City. A useful brief survey of Canada.

Skeoch, Alan and Smith, Tony. Canadians and Their Society. Toronto: McClelland and Stewart Limited, 1973.

Skidmore, Darrel R. Canadian-American Relations. Toronto: Wiley, 1979.

A readable student text dealing with the economic, political and cultural relations between Canada and the U.S.

Time, February 13, 1978.

The cover story, "Canada--A House Divided," has been found helpful.

Tomlin, Brian. Canada's Foreign Policy: Analysis and Trends. Toronto: Methuen, 1978.

A collection of essays dealing with Canada's world relations. Four essays focus on U.S. relations. Not a student text.

Wood, Dean D. Multicultural Canada: A Teacher's Guide to Ethnic Studies.
Toronto: Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, 1978.

Lists over 700 sources including books, articles, brochures, films, and audio-tapes relating to 46 separate ethnic groups.

INTRODUCTION TO LATIN AMERICA

Geographically, the term Latin America is applied to all countries and territories between the Rio Grande and Cape Horn. Historically, the name has referred to the principal colonizers of the area, Spain and Portugal, whose language and heritage were derived from Latin. However, the Native Americans who were here to greet the Europeans and the Africans who were brought here by the Europeans have also contributed substantially to the cultural heritage of the region.

A formal relationship between the United States and Latin America is maintained through the Organization of American States, which had its roots in the Monroe Doctrine, promulgated by President James Monroe in 1823.

Throughout the years U.S. attention to Latin America has been sporadic. For example, the Good Neighbor Policy during the FDR Administration, the Alliances of World War II, and the Alliance for Progress of the short-lived Kennedy Administration were positive expressions of cooperation. Nevertheless, not all of our relationships have been of a congenial nature, such as the lingering controversy over the Panama Canal and the Cuban crisis.

For the past ten years there has been a dearth of publications on Latin America for grades K - 12, although some Latin Americanists have continued to publish their research. Therefore, many of the items included in this bibliography are models for preparation of curriculum materials to meet today's needs and some primary sources of contemporary information on Latin America.

Keeping abreast of current developments is possible through television and radio broadcasts and the press. Such rapid changes as the devaluation of the Mexican peso in August, 1992, and the resulting economic crisis for Mexico are taking place daily. Listings of periodicals which specialize in Latin American news are included, as well as professional journals and organizations and centers devoted to research on Latin America, where the latest information on events, publications, and investigation in the area may be obtained. In schools where Spanish and Portuguese are read, librarians might choose to subscribe to selected publications from Latin American countries.

Some bilingual materials and works from Latin American authors in translation are included in order to provide a more balanced view of the history and culture.

A brief section in a world geography book may be expanded through the use of classroom sets of selected materials and audio visual aids to provide a more comprehensive study of the area or an in-depth study of a region or country. As an example, two geographies which provide the background for this kind of treatment are:

Educational Challenges, Inc. World Geography. Lexington, Mass: D.C. Heath and Co., 1983, pp. 240-275. Grades 9 - 12.

Unit Three is devoted to areas of the world, of which Latin America is treated as one. Chapter 11 introduces the area with an overview and then gives specific attention to Mexico, Central America, the Caribbean nations, the Guianas and Brazil, Venezuela and Andean South America, and Southern South America. The teacher's edition gives helpful suggestions for interrelating Latin America with other regions of the world.

Israel, Saul, Douglas Johnson and Denis Wood: World Geography Today.

Pages 338 - 399 are devoted to Latin America. The first section treats all of Latin America as an area. Then it is divided into geographical regions, with relevant pictures. It briefly relates problems affecting economy and provides geographic and historical background.

BOOKS

Arciniegas, German. Latin America: A Cultural History. New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1967. 494 pages.

The work of a Latin American historian, translated by Joan Mac Lean, presents the story of the Americas through the eyes of a Hispanic American, who was born in Colombia in 1900. It is authentic, easy to read, and contains excerpts from a multitude of other publications.

Blouet, Brian W. and Olwyn M. Blouet. Geography of Latin America: An Introductory Survey. New York: Wiley, 1981. 350 pages.

Thematic approach on prehistoric periods, transportation, agriculture, population growth, mining and manufacturing, Latin America and the world scene, and others. Treats all of Latin America as an area, instead of a regional approach. A valuable reference book for the teacher.

Burns, E. Bradford. A History of Brazil. New York, N.Y.: Columbia University Press, 1980. 579 pages.

A comprehensive, contemporary history of Brazil. A useful tool for an in-depth study of the largest country on the South American continent.

Burns, E. Bradford. Latin America: A Concise Interpretive History (3rd ed. illus.). Englewood Cliffs, N.J.: Prentice Hall, 1982. 352 pages paper. $12.95.

Highly recommended.. The most current, interesting work by an active scholar and professor at the University of California. A bibliography is included.

Díaz del Castillo, Bernal. The Conquest of New Spain. Penguin Books, 1963. 412 pages.

J. M. Cohen has translated from the original transcript of the diary kept by Bernal Díaz del Castillo of the conquest of the area from Honduras to Mexico City, 1517-1521, as seen through the eyes of a conqueror. It is one of few first-hand accounts of the area at this time. The original is located in Guatemala, although photographic copies are available in Spain and Mexico. (The Discovery and Conquest of Mexico, Translated by A. P. Maudslay and published by the Kingsport Press in 1956 from the same primary source.)

González Dávila, Francisco. Ancient Cultures of Mexico. Calzada de la Milla-Chapultepec, Mexico 5, D.F.: Museo Nacional de Antropología, 1971. 79 pages. Grades K - 12.

An invaluable guide to any teacher who needs a brief, illustrated reminder of the ancient civilizations of Mexico as displayed in the National Museum of Anthropology. The explanation of the radio carbon dating and the Mayan numerical system are extremely useful. Should be in all school libraries.

Halperin, Maurice. The Taming of Fidel Castro. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1981.

Presents behind-the-scenes account of research done by noted scholar, Oscar Lewis, who was involved in his in-depth autobiographical interviews in Cuba with permission of Fidel Castro. His unexpected expulsion and destruction of his research brought about his death, according to author.

Johnston, Edith. Regional Dances of Mexico. 8259 Niles Road, Skokie, Illinois: National Textbook Company. 86 pages. K - 12.

Reprint of the Banks Upshaw version of 1935. Contains music, steps, and directions for staging of ten popular folk dances.

Pendle, George. A History of Latin America. 625 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022: Penguin Books. 1976. 271 pages. $2.95.

An authoritative and concise history written by a specialist who was connected with South America for over forty years. He has successfully integrated the history of the principal countries into one story, including anecdotal accounts by other scholars.

South American Handbook. Bath, England. Trade and Travel Publications. Approximately 900 pages. Grades 6 - 12.

Published annually, it is a useful guide for travelers in Latin America.

Toor, Frances. Mexican Folkways. New York: Alfred Knopf, 1962. Also A Treasury of Mexican Folkways. New York: Crown Publishing Company, 1974. 566 pages. Grades K - 12. Blaine Etheridge Books have also reprinted Toor's Mexican Popular Arts. 1973. 109 pages

The most complete editions available of Mexican celebrations and customs. Reference books to be placed in all school libraries.

Varner, John Grier. El Inca. The Life and Times of Garcilaso de la Vega. Austin, Texas: The University of Texas Press, 1968. 410 pages.

A carefully researched biography of a mestizo who lived his early years in the Inca culture with his mother and his later years in the homeland of his father, the Spanish conquistador. It is a good source for Inca traditions at the time of the Spanish conquest and of the Spaniards who came to conquer. The author and his wife studied many documents in Peru and in Spain, including the works of Garcilaso de la Vega himself.

INTRODUCTION TO THE MIDDLE EAST

The Middle East is a cultural region made up of countries which are located in North Africa and Southwest Asia. The area is bound together culturally by Islam and the Arabic language, although minority religions in the area include Bha'i, Christianity, Druze, and Judaism. Other languages represented in the area include Turkish, Farci (Persian), Hebrew, Berber, Kurdish, and others.

The countries which are commonly considered Middle Eastern are: Afghanistan, Algeria, Bahrain, Egypt, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Tunisia, Turkey, United Arab Emirates, Democratic Peoples Republic of Yemen, and the Yemen Arab Republic. Palestine is included as it is a distinct cultural entity from the state of Israel, although they occupy the same territory.

The countries of the Middle East represent a wide variety of geographies, climates, and economies. Along the Mediterranean coast and the great river valleys there is agriculture and in some of the wealthier countries irrigation is turning the desert into good agricultural areas. About 2/3 of the Middle East is desert or step climate, but the majority of the population lives in the areas of adequate rainfall. Only 3% of the total population is Bedoin (or Nomadic), a common western stereotype of the Middle East. The rest of the population is settled in villages (about 58%) and cities (about 39%). Only about half of the Middle Eastern countries have oil resources. Although all the countries are advancing to greater or lesser extent in terms of technology, most choose not to adopt a "western" lifestyle to accompany the technology. The family is still the single most important institution in society after religion.

The much publicized Arab-Israeli conflict involves the creation of the state of Israel (in 1948) on the British colony of Palestine. The general position of the Arab states (all M.E. countries except Iran, Israel, Turkey) is to defend the right of the displaced Palestinians to return to their homeland and live an Arab existence.

Middle Eastern governments do not distinguish between religion and state. The laws which govern life are proscribed by God in the Qur'an (Koran), with the exception of Israel, which is not a Muslim state. Muslims are divided into two groups, Sunni and Shi'a. Westerners are most familiar with Shi'a Islam as it is the group to which Iranians and southern Iraqis belong, the Ayotollah Khomeini being their present leader. However, the vast majority of Muslims are Sunni and practice Islam in a different fashion. The basic philosophical distinction is that Sunni's believe that a wise learned man should lead the community of believers while the Shi'a believe that the main religious leader must be a direct descendent of the prophet Muhammad.

INTRODUCTION TO THE MATERIALS

The resources that follow are a selection of materials covering a wide range of viewpoints on this diverse area of the world. All countries are not represented in every section due to lack of materials in some areas. The resources are divided into:

Written Materials (books, publishers, magazines & newsletters)

Audio-Visual Materials (films, filmstrips, slides, records, sources)

Organizations (national, six states, and embassies)

These materials represent generally the most up-to-date material available. Only materials published after 1970 were considered unless the topic or the particular material was exceptional in subject matter or the date had no bearing on the material. As many as possible, but not all, of the materials were previewed. Some are in common use nationwide, but are not recommended. Prices for rental or purchase may vary almost from week to week and therefore are listed here only as a guide to the price range. Elementary materials are always noted, the rest assumed to be secondary, unless a special notation has been made. The sources on all of the material are listed and the addresses are found together at the end alphabetically.

All of the organizations put out materials and/or information and are helpful when contacted. Those organizations with speakers available are listed accordingly. The embassies are an invaluable source of pictures, travel guides, books, pamphlets, and maps. Usually once you are on their mailing list you will receive materials from time to time after the initial contact.

New materials are constantly appearing, and any omission was strictly an oversight on my part.

I wish to thank Mary Alice Cooper, also of the Center for Middle Eastern Studies, University of Texas at Austin, for her patience and assistance in the collection of these materials.

--Ann Grabhorn

INTRODUCTION TO SOVIET AND EAST EUROPE

This preliminary bibliography was put together by outreach staff at The Soviet and East European Language and Area Center (SEELAC) at Harvard and the Russian and East European Studies Center at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. It is incomplete and in the process of being revised. Teachers are most welcome to submit reviews and/or suggest titles of books that should be reviewed. It is most useful to have the view of a classroom teacher as well as that of an area specialist:

The purpose of the bibliography is to aid teachers in choosing books for their school libraries and finding supplementary readings for their students. Not all of the books are recommended, but it seemed as important to us to warn teachers about books with strongly biased views or incorrect information as to alert teachers to the many fine books written on various subjects. A few books with reading levels more suitable for the slow reader are included and marked ER (easy reader), but in most cases they can be utilized by the better readers as well because they contain good information. We have also included a few books that are out of print (marked o.p.) which seem to be particularly good and may be available to you through your libraries.

BOOKS

A Harvest of Russian Children's Literature. Morton, Miriam (ed.)
University of California Press, 1970. (K-12)

This collection, divided into three sections appealing to different ages, includes poetry, short stories, and excerpts from longer works. The introduction by Morton will interest teachers because it gives an overview of children's literature in the Soviet Union, including works translated from English.

A Map History of Russia. Catchpole, Brian. London: Heinemann Educational Books Ltd., 1976. Illustrations, index: (j)

This book is highly recommended for its accuracy and for the skill with which the illustrations enhance the text. Imaginative illustrations, such as a "map" of a typical kolkhoz and a map of the city of Moscow in the 17th century, a chart of the population growth between the early 18th and 20th centuries, and a facsimile of a "beard license" from the time of Peter the Great, supplement the more conventional maps that illustrate changing borders and important locations.

A Parade of Soviet Holidays. Watson, Jane Werner. Champaign, IL: Garrard Publishing Co., 1972. (e, j)

This book describes traditional religious days, new Soviet holidays, and regional days for celebrations. The latter are especially useful because they provide information on the lives of non-Slavic peoples in the USSR. The reading level required is very low, but the book's information will appeal to better readers as well as slow ones.

A Russian Schoolboy. Aksakov, Sergi. Trans. J. D. Duff. Illustrations by Kirill Sokoloff. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1978. (j, h)

Aksakov was a distinguished 19th century recorder of the details of the life of the aristocracy living in the country. This book is composed of his reminiscences of being sent to boarding school in Kazan at the beginning of the nineteenth century. His long descriptions will be enjoyed by the exceptionally sensitive child who is an excellent reader. The average child, however, would find it difficult to relate to this work.

A Sparrow in the Snow. Darel, Sylvia. New York: Stein & Day, 1973.

(h)

Sylvia, a native of Riga, is sent to Siberia with the rest of her family. Soon after their arrival on a Soviet collective farm, the father is sent to prison. At nineteen, as a university student, she too is arrested and sent into exile.

Alik the Detective. Alekin, Anatoli. Trans. by Bonnie Carrie. New York: William Morrow & Company, 1977. (j)

A young boy, who dreams of becoming a writer of detective stories, finds a mystery to solve. A sixth or seventh grader might enjoy reading this Soviet mystery and then comparing it with one of his/her favorite American mysteries.

As Others See Us (Reprints from The Christian Science Monitor, 1974. Gruliow, Leo; Boris Strelnikov and Vasilii Peskov. (j)

This little booklet, costing only $1.00 is an intriguing collection of articles or excerpts from articles written by two Soviet journalists describing a trip across the U.S. and an American correspondent travelling in the U.S.S.R. The reactions of the Soviets to their travels in our country should fascinate American students. Even slow readers will enjoy this collection of articles.

Battle of Stalingrad. Skipper, G. C. Chicago: Children's Press, 1981. Maps, photographs. ER (e,j)

The description and pictures of the Battle of Stalingrad convey well the suffering and sacrifice of the Soviet people during WWII.

Behind the Urals: An American Worker in Russia's City of Steel. Scott, John. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1973. (h)

Written by an American who arrived in the Soviet Union in 1932 at the age of twenty prepared to help build a new society. Trained as a welder, he was sent to Magnitogorsk, a new steel city where he shared all the deprivations of the Soviet workers, the horrors of their lives as well as their great pride in building a steel plant despite the odds against them.

COOKBOOKS often describe daily life as an introduction to the books as a whole and to individual recipes as well. Enjoy the insights in:

BYELORUSSIAN CUISINE by V. A. Bolotnikova. Minsk, Uradzhai, 1979.

COOKING FROM THE CAUCASUS by Sonia Uvezian. New York: Harcourt-Brace, 1978.

RUSSIAN COOKING by Helen & George Papashvily. Alexandria, VA: Time-Life Books "Foods of the World Series".

Czars and Czarinas of Russia. Rice, Tamara Talbot. New York: Lothrop, Lee and Shepard Company, Inc., 1968. (j)

Beginning with Ivan III, this well-written book traces the childhoods and lives of tsars and tsarinas down to that of Nicholas II. The details of court life and the youth of the monarchs should appeal to younger readers. Although slightly monarchist in tone, Rice does present a balanced history. Illustrated with photographs and maps.

Discovering the Soviet Union. Mikhailov, N. Moscow: Progress Publishers, 1965. (j)

A detailed survey of the Soviet Union's different regions from the perspective of the Soviets themselves.

Displaced Person. Bloch, Marie Halun. New York: Lothrop, Lee and Shepart Co., 1978. (e,j)

The story focuses on the struggles of a fourteen-year-old boy, Stefan, who has left the Ukraine during the war and is living in Germany in the last days of WWII. It is a poignant story that will enthral fifth through eighth graders. However, since this book focuses on people fleeing the Soviet Union, and the references to life under Stalin are not always clear, it would have minimal value in conjunction with a unit on the Soviet Union unless, perhaps a student were also reading a Soviet story about the heroic struggle and total dedication of Soviet citizens in WWII.

Exit from Home. Heyman, Anita. New York: Crown Publishers, 1977. (j)

A Jewish youth, training to become a rabbi in oppressive turn-of-the-century Russia, becomes exposed to "worldly" ideas which change his attitude toward his religion and his country.

Five Sisters: Women against the Tsar. Engel, Barbara Alpern, and Clifford N. Rosenthal, eds. and translators. New York: Schocken Books, 1977. (h)

This well-done and useful collection has translations of segments of the memoirs of five important female revolutionaries and is highly recommended. Useful in a 19th-20th-century Russian history course; revolutionary movements course; women's history; etc. The short introduction provides a concise explanation of the revolutionary movements of late nineteenth century Russia. Index, illustrations and short bibliography of suggested further readings.

From the Yaroslavy Station: Russia Perceived. Pond, Elizabeth. New York: Universe Books. Select bibliography. (h)

This book is really a series of lectures on important topics such as the nationalities, dissidence (and the lack of), the economy, Soviet military strength, and the leadership of the Soviet Union. The information is all hung loosely together structured by a train ride on the Trans-Siberian railroad. Anecdotes are included to illustrate points, but between anecdotes much solid information is conveyed.

Handbook of Soviet Nationalities. Katz, Zev; Rosemary Rogers, and Frederic Harned, eds. New York, 1975. (h)

This provides general information--geography, history, demography, language and culture--of each nationality in a similar format. It also includes bibliography and statistical information of all sorts. The best up-to-date reference.

Insights: Soviet Union. Leppert, Ella. Columbus, OH: Charles E. Merrill, 1980. Photographs, glossary, Index. (j)

For teachers anxious to find a brisk little introductory text for short courses on the Soviet Union, this is an appealing book. There is an abundant use of source material from newspapers, popular journals, and monographs on history and culture. Although there are some mistakes in the text, they are evident enough and obviously the result of an editor's oversight.

It is I, Seagull: Valentina Tereshkova, First Woman in Space. Sharpe, Mitchell R. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell, 1975. (j)

This biography of Tereshkova should interest boys and girls alike. There are a few puzzling errors such as associating the giving of the patronymic (a middle name derived from the individual's father's name) with a religious ceremony.

Joseph Stalin and Communist Russia. Blassingame, Wyatt. Champaign, IL: Garrard Publishing Co., 1971. Photographs, glossary, index. (j)

Students could learn much about the life of Stalin and major events in Soviet history from this well-written biography.

Journey Across Russia: The Soviet Union Today. McDowell, Bart. Washington, D.C.: National Geographic Society, 1977. Color Photographs. (j,h)

The photography is superb and covers all republics. The text is accurate and informative, but it may be too difficult for many middle school students. However, the captions to the pictures are themselves informative. Every school library should have a copy.

Lenin for Beginners. Appignanesi, Richard and Oscar Zarate. New York: Pantheon Books, 1979. Photographs, cartoons, bibliography.

Contrary to its title, this is not a useful book for beginners. Behind its surface of clever cartoons, it offers little explanation of key Marxist or Leninist theories, but bombards the reader with a barrage of doctrinal labels and distinctions, which could not be understood without prior acquaintance with Marxist terminology and history. Hundreds of names and dates are tossed into the text with only the most sporadic efforts to identify their historical significance and overall relevance to Lenin.

Looking at Russia. Photographs. Hewitt, Philip. New York: J. B. Lippencott, 1977. ER (j)

This book is mistitled. Its strength lies in the fact that it offers a short section on each republic of the U.S.S.R. and the pictures convey well the ethnic diversity of the country. The brief sections on history, on the other hand, are so riddled with errors that they should not be read. Good for supplemental browsing.

My Childhood in Siberia. Tchernavin, Tătiana. London: Oxford University Press, 1972. (e,j)

When Tatiana was nine years old, her family moved from Moscow to Tomsk. Her book presents a good picture of the life of a professor's family in Siberia at the end of the nineteenth century. Written for children, the chapters are short, the print is large and there are some fine pictures of Siberia.

Marc Chagall: An Introduction. Greenfeld, Howard. New York: The Overlook Press. $13.95.

More than half of this book focuses on Chagall's life in pre- and post-revolutionary Russia and provides us with a good deal of information on the restrictions placed on Jews in Tsarist Russia and on the chaotic shifts in the early years of Soviet power. This delightful book includes reproductions of the artist's work in color and black & white.

Marx for Beginners. Del Rio, Eduardo (pseudonym Rius). New York: Pantheon Books, 1979. Cartoons (h)

This is a cartoon version of Marx's life written by a Marxist. The reading level varies between seventh and ninth grade but the pages, which include many obscure caricatures, will be incomprehensible to a middle school student. While academic freedom must be upheld, such a propagandistic approach as is used in this book will only complicate a subject that requires tact and truth in its instruction.

Moscow. Gruliow, Leo. Amsterdam: Time-Life Books, 1977. (j,h)

Neither a travelog nor a history, the emphasis is on people and their lives rather than on monuments. Gruliow's perspective is that of an American who lived in Moscow in the 30s and returned in three later decades and his commentary to very good pictures of Moscow can contribute greatly to our understanding of Soviet Russians. Highly recommended.

Moscow (The World's Cities Series.) Levin, Deana. London: Chartwell Books, 1978. (e,j)

Many pictures with brief text give a quick overview of the surface of Moscow.

Moscow and Leningrad Observed. Bartoli, Georges. Trans by A. and E. Thomson. London: Oxford University Press, 1975.

Excellent photography and a text written with style.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC Articles:

"Down on the Farm, Soviet Style: An American 4-H Adventure," 155, no. 6 (June 1979). By John Garaventa. Photographs by James Tobin and Carol Schmidt.

As part of the 4-H International exchange program twelve American students spent the summer of 1978 in the USSR. First they attended the Byelorussian Agricultural Academy for four weeks; then they moved to farms where they worked with Soviet farmers. There is probably no better way for a student to gain some understanding of life on these collective farms than through the eyes of these American students who share both their joys and their frustrations. Strongly recommended.

"Easter Greetings from the Ukrainians," (April 1972). By Robert P. Jordan, and James A. Sugar.

Good short article on how American-Ukrainians decorate eggs. Excellent series of pictures showing the process.

"Handclasp in Space," 149, no. 2 (February 1976). By Thomas Y. Canby.

This is a very short article with little text but it has great symbolic value. In space the Soviets spoke English and the Americans, Russian. Think about it!

"Moscow: The City Around Red Square," 153, no. 1 (January 1973). By John J. Putnam. Photographs by Gordon W. Gahan.

The text rambles but offers insights into certain facets of Soviet life. The photographs are excellent. An inset (pages 25-33), entitled "Imperial Russia's Glittering Legacy," will give the students some idea of the wealth of the royalty under tsardom. The rest of the article focuses on Moscow today.

"Siberia's Empire Road: the River Ob," 149, no. 2 (February 1976). By Robert P. Jordan. Photographs by Dean Conger.

This very interesting article could be used in comparing how the U.S. and U.S.S.R. are solving the problems of getting oil out of the tundra regions.

Peoples of the Earth. Vol. 14: U.S.S.R. East of the Urals. Humphrey, Caroline, ed. The Danbury Press, 1973. o.p. (K-12).

This volume stresses the great variety of geographical regions, cultures, and languages in Siberia. The chapter, "Siberian Russians," should fascinate students because it discusses how the Russians have utilized the spirit of pioneers in adapting to a new way of life. Excellent photography.

Peoples of the Earth. Vol. 15: Western and Central Asia. Singer, Arnold. New York: The Danbury Press, 1973. (K-12) o.p.

This volume begins with a discussion of nomadism, a concept essential to an understanding of the peoples of this region. Three chapters are devoted to peoples in the USSR with background and traditions of each group discussed as well as their adaption to Sovietization. The chapters are short but very useful and the pictures are excellent.

Pleasures and Palaces--The After-School Activities of Russian Children. Norton, Miriam. New York: Atheneum, 1972. (e,j)

Although a bit cute at times, the author gives descriptions of after-school activities of children all over the Soviet Union. It describes pioneer palaces and the various activities they support.

Russia: From the Inside. Kaiser, Robert G. and Hannah Jopling Kaiser. New York: Dutton, 1980. (j,h)

Most of the photographs were taken by men and women who were professional photographers before they left the Soviet Union. There is an emotionalism in them that is rare. The emphasis is on people with text as sweeping as the selection of photographs in its attempt to characterize the daily life of the people while providing commentary on the history of that nation.

Reading for the Masses: Popular Literature in the U.S.S.R. 1976-1980. Friedberg, Maurice. Washington: International Communications Center, 1981. Teachers or Advanced highschool.

Friedberg examines Soviet novels, short stories, poetry, and dramas as sociological evidence of popular tastes and concerns, as a mirror of social problems now agitating the average Russians, and as aesthetic products.

Russia and the United States. Sivachev, Nikolai V. and Nikolai N. Yakovlev. Translated by Olga Titelbaum. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979. (h)

This book is written by two senior Soviet scholars for the sole purpose of having our almost exclusively English-reading public cognizant of the Soviet view of Soviet-American relations. The authors' perspective is especially discernable in their selection of key determinants as well as their methodology. They preface their discussion of specific events with a Marxist historical analysis which is sometimes superficial, yet also a refreshing contrast to Western historians who often unduly focus on the impact of individual personalities. Recommended for high school students, it should be balanced with other views which demonstrate the narrowness of the authors' nationalistic and ideological biases.

Russian Cooking. Papahvily, Helen. Time-Life, 1969.

The title of this two-book set is a misnomer, because it explores a variety of lands and peoples of the Soviet Union through their native dishes. It includes background historical notes and fine photographs, as well as recipes, and provides a culinary survey ranging from the days of the tsars to present-day cooking in Great Russia, the Baltic States, Ukraine, Caucasus, and steppes of Central Asia.

Russian History Atlas. Gilbert, Martin. New York: MacMillan, 1975.
(K-12)

Presented in a very clear and informative manner, this atlas surveys Russian/Soviet history through maps. It contains detailed maps showing not only the wars and expansions of Russia, but also areas of famine, exile, rebellions, and revolutionary activity.

Russian Plays for Young Audiences. Edited and translated by Miriam Morton. Rowayton, CT: New Plays, 1977. (h)

This is a collection of five plays by Soviet authors Aleksin, Mamlin, Rozov, Schwartz, and Ustinov.

Search Behind the Lines. Ryss, Yevgeny. Translated by Bonnie Carey. New York: William Morrow and Co., 1974. (Grades 5-6)

This book, published in 1946, is a story of two children who must cross enemy lines during the war and is typical of stories written in the early post-war years: the Germans were all evil; the Soviets, with the exception of a few traitors, are good. The book is an adventure story written for children and stresses not the suffering of the people in wartime but the heroic acts of the children.

Siberia. Lengyel, Emil. New York: Franklin Watts, Inc., 1974. Photographs, Map. ER (j)

The chapters on the climate, the people of Siberia, and the history of the region are particularly good with the chapter on the Trans-Siberian railroad needing updating to include the new BAM line. Excellent supplementary material for a unit on the Soviet Union.

Soviet Almanac. By members of Novosti Press. New York: Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, 1981. Color photographs. (j,h)

This visually-pleasing book compiled by the editors and photographers of the official Soviet press focuses on the land, work, and life in the Soviet Union. The text has some interesting information but it also includes some very misleading statements. It would be best to use it to show students how the Soviets want us to see them and understand their history.

Soviet Deserts and Mountains. St. George, George. Netherlands: Time-Life International, 1974. (j,h)

The major areas presented in this collection of photographs are the two western deserts, the Karakum and the Kyzylkum; two mountain ranges, the Pamirs and the Tien Sham; and the two rivers, the Amu Darya and the Syr Darya that empty into the Aral Sea.

Soviet Dissent: Intellectuals, Jews, and Detente. Axelbank, Albert. New York: Franklin Watts, Inc, 1975. (j,h)

Axelbank gives a clear and balanced presentation of the issue of human rights and offers arguments both for and against detente in terms of its potential benefits and detriments, in terms of human rights in the U.S.S.R.

Soviet Sports Exercise Program. MacLean, Norman; Barry Wilner and Earl Hoerner. New York: Drake Publishers, 1977. (j)

These authors suggest many reasons for the successes the Soviets have enjoyed in international competitions in recent years and, at the same time, are willing to question the justness of the Soviet system in selecting talent at such an early age. The book includes a chapter on the requirements for awards in the Soviet GTO Program (Prepared for Work and Defense) from ages 10 to 60. Encourage your students to test themselves on the requirements!

Soviet Union. Jackson, W. A. Douglas. Seattle: The Fiedler Co., 1980. Photographs, glossary, index, skills manual. (j)

A fine text offering a good overview of the geography, history, and government of the U.S.S.R. as well as an introduction to the cultural and daily life of the Soviets.

Soviet Union. (Global Insights: Peoples and Cultures Series). Lepert, Ella C. Columbus, OH: Charles E. Merrill, 1980, $3.90, ISBN 0-675-01912-5. Photographs, glossary, index. (h)

This book is one of a series dealing with six global areas with the focus on people and their environment rather than on the nation-state. An appealing book emphasizing the rich diversity of the country telling in a direct and interesting manner about the history, people and culture.

~~Soviet Union: The Land and Its People. Morey, George. London: Mac Donald Educational, 1976. Photographs and drawings. (K-12)~~

Part of a multivolume series, this book is basically a picture book with lots of information on topics such as cooking, sports, shopping, and other aspects of daily life as well as short sections on major historical figures and events. All of the books in this series emphasize the positive and this one is no exception.

Tales from Central Russia. Retold by James Riorda. Illustrated by Krystyna Turska. England: Destrel Books, 1976.

Children will enjoy the tales. The excellent commentary, aimed at adults, includes an account of Afanasiev's struggles to collect and publish Russian folktales and a good discussion of the fairy stories, animal tales, and everyday tales with appropriate contrasts and analogies with folktales of Western Europe.

The ABCs of Soviet Socialism. Millar, James. Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1981. (h)

Expressly written for the layperson and nonspecialist, this authoritative and easy-to-read work unravels the multifarious complexity of Soviet economics. Millar traces the historical evolution of the Soviet economy and shows how it functions today in addition to appraising the performance of the Soviet economic system in relation to its goals and methods. He suggests possible directions the system may take in the future.

The Cambridge Encyclopedia of Russia and the Soviet Union. Edited by Archie Brown and others. Cambridge University Press, 1982.

An excellent resource for teachers.

The Children of Theatre Street. Barnes, Patricia. New York: Viking and Penguin Books, 1978. Photographs, index. (j)

This book about the Vaganova Choreographic Institute, better known as the Kirov Ballet School, will delight any youngster who has studied ballet. The first chapter on the history of Russian ballet will appeal only to a few, but the rest of the book, which focuses on the children of the Kirov School, will fascinate many.

The Communist Bloc. Gibson, Michael. England: Wayland Publishers, 1979. Glossary, photographs. (j)

Using a shotgun approach, Gibson attempts to cover too much and in doing so gives the impression that Communism is a monolithic system without any differences across national boundaries. Basically he discusses political and military actions while ignoring the economic system. The book includes many factual errors and should be avoided.

The Diary of Nina Kosterina. Ginsburg, Mirra (trans.) New York: Crown Publishers, 1968.

Published in a leading Soviet literary journal, Novyi mir, during the "Thaw" (1962), this diary begun by Nina Kosterina at the age of fifteen covers the years 1936-1941 and ends when she leaves to fight as a partisan behind German lines. Much of it is an introspective examination of relationships, but interwoven with her personal growth is the story of how this young woman, a member of the Komso-mol, comes to grips with the arrest of her uncle and father. It thus gives us insights into the psychological make-up of an individual who is a true believer in Communism, whose mother and father were partisans during the Civil War, and who must sort out the realities faced by the family during Stalin's purges. Few American students will be able to understand the enormous number of literary references and the significance of literature for this young woman studying geology, but this will in no way lessen the value of reading the book. The diary entries are generally very short, and the book is easy to read.

The First Book of the Soviet Union, Revised Edition. Snyder, Louis. New York: Franklin Watts, 1978.

This is the fourth revised edition of a book originally published in 1959. However, although a few pages have been added at the end of the book, almost nothing has been revised in the main body of the book. Two-thirds of the book focuses on history, government and the communist party. This is a curious orientation for a first book of the Soviet Union which seems by its format to be aimed at third graders. It would seem far more appropriate to teach children of this age about the geography and culture of the Soviet Union than to accent the brutal sides of Soviet history as this book does.

The Kremlin: Citadel of History. Klein, Mina C. and H. Arthur. New York: The MacMillan Company, 1973. (j)

The authors do not limit themselves to discussing events associated with the Kremlin but rather use the Kremlin as a focus for writing a history of Russia, which is surveyed up to the departure of Khrushchev. This well-written book does contain some errors and incomplete interpretations of Russian history.

The Making of Champions: Soviet Sports for Children and Teenagers. Morton, Miriam. New York: Atheneum, 1974. Photographs. (j)

Morton gives enthusiastic descriptions of sports schools in the U.S.S.R., the dedication of Soviet youngsters, and the intensity of interest in sports in the Soviet Union.

The Moscow Circus School. Harris, Leon. New York: Atheneum. o.p. (e,j)

Similar to the format in The Russian Ballet School, this book will fascinate the elementary and middle school-age child.

The Russian Alphabet Book. Parker, Fan. New York: Coward-McCann, Inc., 1961. o.p. Reference:

Here is a chance to learn the Cyrillic alphabet and some Soviet geography as well. The alphabet is given at the beginning, then each page focuses on one letter and a geographic location in the Soviet Union (a city, river, republic, mountain range) beginning with that letter. Any student who locates these places on a map will greatly increase his/her awareness of the vastness of the Soviet land.

The Russian Ballet School. Harris, Leon. New York: Atheneum, 1970. (e,j)

Aspiring dancers will be captivated, but they will not be alone in their fascination with this book about the system that has produced some of the world's greatest dancers. Soviet children enter ballet schools at the age of ten. The description of the rigorous routine of classes from nine a.m. until six p.m. daily and marvelous photography by the author should leave an imprint in the minds of American children. Highly recommended.

"The Russian Grain Embargo," Cobblestone, 3, No. 4 (April 1982). Hays, Otis Jr. (e)

This article presents a good simple survey of US/USSR relations through the period of the Russian Grain Embargo imposed by the U.S. in a way that would be easily understood by most elementary school children. However, since this issue of Cobblestone focuses on wheat, the article ends with a graph of the leading wheat growing countries in 1981-82. Since this graph shows the USSR as the leading producer of wheat, children may well ask why the USSR was not able to produce enough grain to meet its needs. The article does not point out the differences in the uses of various grains; the Soviets for the most part are importing feed grains, not wheat for bread. Teachers using the article should clarify this point.

The Russians. Smith, Hedrick. Ballentine Press, 1976.

Well-written book on so many aspects of Soviet society and daily life by a reporter who lived there.

The Russians in America. Eubank, Nancy. Minneapolis: Lerner Publications, 1973.

Although the purpose of this book is to examine the emigrants' experience in America, it contains excellent information on why these people fled their own country. The book is mistitled, for while focusing on the Russians, it does discuss the experiences of the Ukrainians, Latvians, Lithuanians and others. In "Russian Emigration between the Two World Wars" V.I. Lenin is repeatedly referred to as 'Nicholas Lenin.' Please correct this mistake if you have a copy of the book. The last chapter, "Russian-American Contributions" can be used independently to make the students aware of Russian-born Americans who have enriched our cultural life and increased our scientific knowledge.

The Russian's World: Life and Language. Gerhart, Geneva. New York: Harcourt, Brace, Javonovich, Inc., 1974. Illustrations, index. ISBN 0-15-577983-4.

This book is a storehouse of detail about daily life in Russia before the Revolution and in the U.S.S.R. today. It includes detail hard to come by elsewhere that is almost always accurate. Although a person who knows Russian will appreciate parts of it inaccessible to the non-Russian speaker, most of the information is presented in a way that is quite understandable without a knowledge of Russian. This book provides for teachers those bits and pieces of information needed to bring immediacy to the subject.

The Siberian Challenge. Max, Alfred. Englewood Cliffs, NJ: Prentice Hall, 1977. o.p. (j)

In this stimulating book, the French journalist clearly describes the areas of Siberia which he visited and gives us ample quotes from the people who live and work there. He conveys well the significance of the immense wealth of the natural resources of Siberia and the problems, both technical and human, which must be met to make Siberia render increasingly large amounts of natural gas, oil, gold, coal, lumber, diamonds, etc. Strongly recommended for good students ready to think about world issues.

The Siberians. Mowat, Farley. New York: Penguin Books, 1970. (h)

Fascinating and readable account of Mowat's personal encounters with Siberians in his trek across this broad, northern Soviet land.

The Soviet Juggernaut (World War II). Ziemke, Earl F. and the Editors of Time-Life Books, 1980. Photographs. (h)

In the report of the committee of the U.S./U.S.S.R. textbook Review Project, the Soviets faulted American texts with downplaying or even ignoring the important role of the Soviet Union in WWII. This book will quickly correct any such false impression. Even if students do not read the book, they will learn much from the pictures. However, the clarity of the format, no doubt, will entice any teenager into reading at least some sections of the text. Highly recommended as supplementary reading for high school students.

The Soviet Union. 3rd Edition. Belasco, Milton Jay and Harold E. Hammond. New York: Cambridge Book Co., 1979. Index, glossary, Maps.

Straightforward and businesslike is perhaps the best description of this book. Subheadings and multiple choice quizzes make it easy for a middle school student to use. The chapters on history, Communist principles, the economy and government are good; those on Soviet society and culture are weak. The bibliography needs updating and spelling errors in Russian terms and names, corrected.

The Soviet Union: A Land of Many Peoples. Watson, Jane Werner. Champaign, IL: Garrard Publishing, 1972. Photographs, Index. ER

Although this book does not survey the various nationalities as one would expect by its title, it does offer a good survey of Russian and Soviet history.

The Soviet Union and Eastern Europe 1978 (The World Today Series). Sharp, Samuel L. Stryker-Post Publications, Inc., 1978.

This is strictly a mundane reference work. The updating appears to be minimal. For example, the '78 edition had only five short paragraphs added to the section on the Soviet Union from the '77 edition. The 1979 edition should have been published in August 1979.

The Soviet Union Today. Dornberg, John. New York: The Dial Press, 1978. Photographs, index. (j)

The book begins with a brief historical introduction as background for a discussion of the Soviet Union today. Then Dornberg emphasizes what life is like for the Soviet citizen as a result of the Soviet way of doing things, while also giving concise descriptions of the forms of Soviet government and social organization. The language is precise and the author humanizes the issues that he treats.

The Tartar's Sword. Kimmel, Eric A. New York: Coward, McCann and Geohegan, Inc., 1974. (j)

This fast-paced adventure story of the 15-year-old Ukrainian boy, Hrisha, will appeal to both girls and boys. Starting in 1623, the book is based on the beginning of the Cossack wars that raged for more than fifty years in the Ukraine and eventually resulted in the annexation of 1/2 of that territory to Muscovy. Cossacks, Polish overlords, Crimean Tartars and personal and national freedom are the major actors and topics. WARNING: This is a war story and does contain violence.

The United States and the Soviet Union: A Background on the Struggle for Power. Liston, Robert A. New York: Parents' Magazine, 1973. (j)

This is a provocative book for good readers interested in the history of Soviet-American hostility. The author concentrates primarily upon American perceptions of, and reactions to, the Soviet Union. He ascribes tension between the two countries to fundamental misperceptions caused both by sincere ideological differences and by more cynical domestic political motivations on both sides. For good, mature readers.

The U.S.S.R. Today: Facts and Interpretations. 2nd Revised Edition. Hecht, Leo. Springfield, VA: Scholasticus Publishing, 1982. Appendices, index. $12.95. (j)

In this second edition Hecht has updated statistics on the population and the economy, added several charts, expanded suggested readings and included the USSR Constitution and the Statutes of the CPSU in appendices. This is a handy reference book divided into 28 topics.

The U.S.S.R. Today: Perspectives from the Soviet Press. 5th Edition. Compiles and Edited by Gordon Livermore and Fred Schulze. Columbus, OH: Charles E. Merrill, Inc., 1981.

This compendium of articles from the Soviet press is intended to serve as a supplementary reader in introductory college and high school courses on the Soviet Union. In addition to a wide range of topics covered in past editions, there is an interesting section on population and manpower resources providing the student with easy access to the results of the 1979 census. In general, this is a good book for sharpening students' perceptions of both the differences and similarities in the problems faced by the u.s.s.r. and the U.S.A.

The Volga: Russia's River of Five Seas. Watson, Jane Werner. Champaign, IL: Garrard Publishing, 1972. (e,j)

The author does a fine job of presenting the history of this area from the time of the Khazars and Vikings to modern times. It is a story of great hardships and lives sacrificed to the development of the mighty Volga.

We the Russians: Voices from Russia. Shulman, Colette, Ed. New York: Praeger, 1974. (j)

This is a collection of translations from Soviet newspapers, magazines, and journals complete with editor's comments. Issues discussed are drugs, sex, marriage, morals and the arts.

Worldmark Encyclopedia of the Nations: Europe. New York: John Wiley and Sons, Inc., 1976. (j,h)

The encyclopedia provides well-organized facts and statistics on the lands and peoples of the U.S.S.R. Topics include location, size, topography, climate, flora and fauna, population, agriculture, and natural resources.

Young Mark: The Story of a Venture. Almedingen, E.M. New York: Farrar, Straus, and Giroux, 1968. (j)

Historical novel about Mark Poltoratsky, son of a Ukrainian minor landowner, who had an exceptional voice and ran off to the capital where he received schooling and joined the Imperial Chapel's Choir.

Other pertinent family chronicles by Almedigen are Anna, Ellen, and Fanny.

Yuri Gagarin, First Man in Space. Sharpe, Mitchell R. New York:
The Storde Publishers, 1969.

The author traces the life of Gagarin from his childhood to his historic space flight in 1961. The book gives the reader a good idea of the development of the Soviet manned space program in the fifties.

BOOKS

EASTERN EUROPE

Art from Many Hands: Multicultural Art Projects for Home and School. New Jersey: Prentice Hall, 1981. Photographs and Appendix.

Chapter Four on European arts includes sections on Polish wycinanki (paper cutouts), Ukrainian pysanki (decorated eggs), and Byelorussian straw designs. The directions are clear and the illustrations of work done by both professional craftsmen and children are delightful.

Czechoslovakia: Profile of a Socialist Republic at the Crossroads of Europe. Paul, David W. Boulder, CO: Westview Press, 1981. (h)

Chapters include Historical Backgrounds; History, Geopolitics, and Czechoslovakia's International Position; Government and Politics; The Economy; Czechoslovak Society; Culture and Education. Annotated bibliography.

Other books in series are:

Hungary: A Profile by Ivan Volgyes.

Romania: A Profile by Lawrence C. Graham

The GDR: A Profile by Henry Krisch

East Germany in Pictures. Hoover, John P. New York: Sterling Co., Inc., 1977. Photographs and index. (e,j)

This volume in an 'upbeat' "visual geographic series" tends to blame the rhetoric of the "cold war" for masking all the wonderful qualities of life in East Germany and stresses the virtues of the socialist world.

Eastern Europe: A Communist Kaleidoscope. Dornberg, John. New York: The Dial Press, 1980. (j,h)

An interesting and informative look at the day-to-day life, culture, and politics of five of the Eastern European countries: Poland, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Hungary, and Bulgaria. Dornberg successfully portrays the all-important differences and similarities of these countries.

Lands and Peoples, Volume 4: Europe. Lexicon Publications, 1977.

This seems to be a reliable, though uninspiring, reference book. Chapters on each country--Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Rumania and the Soviet Union--are broken down into sections on geography, history, cultural achievements, the economy, religion, language, etc.

Tito: A Pictorial Biography. Maclean, Fitzroy. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., 1980.

Maclean was sent as Churchill's personal representative to Yugoslavia in 1943 to contact Josip Broz (code name "Tito"). This seems to be an excellent biography.

FOLKTALES

How the Moolah Was Taught a Lesson and Other Tales from Russia. Tit-tev, Estelle and Lila Pargment (trans. and adapters). New York: Dial Press, 1976.

Chechen, Avar, Samoyed, and Tuvini stories for children.

How Wilka Went to Sea and Other Tales from West of the Urals. Ginsburg, Mirra (trans. and editor). New York: Crown Publishers, 1975.

From the literature of the Lapps, Nentsy, Udmurts, Moldavians, etc.

Russian Tales and Legends. Downing, Charles, Ed. Illustrated by Joan K. Monroe and Kyrrill Sokolov. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1978. (j,h)

Tales the People Tell in Russia. Wyndham, Lee, Editor. New York: Julian Messner, 1970.

Some of these tales have themes in common with other European literatures and may not be specifically Russian. However, this in no way hinders enjoyment of the tales. Also, the tale by Pushkin is not really a tale but a section of a long narrative verse.

The Kaha Bird. New York: Crown Publishers, 1971.

Tales of people of Mongolian and Turkic origin.

The Lazies: Tales of the People of Russia. New York: Macmillan, 1973.

Tales of Azerbaijan, Latvia, Central Asia, as well as Russia.

The Master and the Winds. New York: Crown Publishers.

Tales told by the small isolated peoples of the harsh, cold regions of northern Siberia and the Russian Far East.

FILMS

Death of Stalin. 1963, 55 min. 16 mm. B&W. Narration in English
(Chet Huntley). McGraw Hill. (h) $13.55.

Newsreel film, in good condition with excellent narration. Eyewitness accounts of the events which preceded and followed the death of Stalin have been gathered from journalists, diplomats, and former communist leaders. The topics discussed are Stalin's power in his last years, the pattern of purges which preceded his death, the impact of his death on the world, and the power struggle which followed his death. The presentation is excellent.

From Russia with . . . Bruno Gerussi. 1977, 52 min. 16 mm. Color.
Narration in English. (e, j, h) $25.00.

This one long variety show can become tedious. Good photography in this presentation of many folk ensembles, some ballet, with shots of monuments and buildings interspersed.

Leisure Time, U.S.S.R. (Russia Series) 1967, 13 min. 16 mm. Color.
Narration in English. Julien Bryan. (h) $7.60.

Besides giving a view of the Russians' leisure activities, this film also presents the problems of crowded living conditions, lack of automotive transportation, and low income which must be considered when planning for recreation. Government influence through censorship and subsidization of athletic activity is pointed out, as well as the uncertain implications of leisure time itself. Photography good.

Lenin and Trotsky (Twentieth Century). 1964, 27 min. 16 mm. B&W —
Narration in English (Walter Cronkite) CBS. $8.30. (h)

Excellent newsreel with theme of the leadership of Lenin and Trotsky during the Russian Revolution and subsequent appraisal of their efforts in the Soviet Union.

Leningrad. 1967, 50 min. 16 mm. Color. Narration in English. NBC News.
$20.85. (h)

The historical development of Leningrad and its role in Russian history. The presentation is generally objective, though there is an anti-Soviet slant near the end. Color, photography, technique, sound, narration, and music are all excellent. Some historical background preparation is recommended for a younger audience.

Milestones of the Century: Soviet History and Relations, Part 1 — 1960.
22 min. 16 mm. B&W. Narration in English. Pathe News. $7.40. (h)

Newsreel film clips of significant political and diplomatic events involving the Soviet Union. Political slant shifts from clip to clip.

PYSANKA: The Ukrainian Easter Egg. 1975. 14 min. 16mm. Color. Narration in English. $8.00 (All ages)

This film explains both the pre-Christian and Christian custom of decorating eggs and offers an excellent presentation of the development of the symbols on the eggs. A demonstration of the technique of sealing designs into the shell with wax will intrigue young and old alike. Excellent photography Religion in Russia. 1968, 22 min. 16 mm. Color. Narration in English. Julien Bryan. (h) $10.00.

The film focuses on three religions which exist in Russia: Russian Orthodoxy, Judaism, and Buddhism. Development of the theme is quite adequate, and the presentation is interesting. There are some pre-Revolutionary scenes of Jewish religious practice. Scenes from Eisenstein films add dramatic interest. Very few judgments are passed; for the most part the film sticks to reportage, leaving the viewer to form his own judgments. High educational value. Excellent photography.

Rise of Khrushchev. 1963, 53 min. 16 mm. B&W. Narration in English. NBC. $13.55. (h)

Narration and photography - very good. Theme is conditions which made Khrushchev's rise to power possible and the tactics he used.

RUSSIA: THE COMMUNIST REVOLUTION. 1969, B&W. Narration in English. Granada-NOVA-TV Productions. (ii)

Russia in World War I. 20 min. $6.80

The Last Years of the Tsars, 19 min. $6.80.

The Bolshevik Victory, 20 min. $6.80.

Lenin Prepares for the Revolution, 22 min. $7.00.

These films are fairly interesting and well done. They reflect not so much an ideological view of the revolution as a view that one would expect from the victors. In this sense, the commentary is slanted but tolerable. Photography good; lots of newsreel and Eisenstein.

Rise of Soviet Power. 1966. 63 min. 16mm, B&W. Narration in English, BBC. (h) $16.90.

This newsreel film traces the rise and strengthening of communist power through 1964. There are also scenes which show communism as a world movement. The film tends to be anti-Stalinist and the ills of the tsarist regime are blamed on the influence of Orthodoxy, but the presentation is comprehensive and views of meetings of world leaders between the World Wars are interesting.

Siberia: A Day in Irkutsk. 1966, 51 min. 16 mm. Color. Narration in English. NBC News. $20.75. (h)

This interesting and enlightening film was produced under the surveillance of the Soviet government, and the residents who appear in the film were picked by the Soviets. Excellent color, photography and narration.

Joseph Stalin (Biography Series). 1963, 27 min. B&W. Narration in English. Wolper Production. (h) $8.30.

Interesting newsreel film and excerpts from Eisenstein productions on Stalin's climb to power and his impact as a dictator. This film tends to emphasize the ruthless aspect of Stalin's life. Eisenstein's films express historical moments more dramatically than factually. Exceptionally clear newsreel footage from before and after the revolution.

Siberia: The Endless Horizon. 1969, 50 min. Color. Narration in English. National Geographic Society. $18.75. (All ages)

This is a superb filmic description of Siberia covering in some detail the trans-Siberian railroad, Irkutsk, and some of the other Siberian cities, river and truck transportation, education, religion, cultural activities, the fur industry, and all the problems posed by the oppressive cold. The one topic which is not discussed is politics, which is a welcome relief in dealing with films about Russia. Spectacular photography, comprehensive narration, excellent music and the inclusion of the sounds of daily life combine to make this a film of high value.

Soviet Central Asia: Its Problems and Promises. 1967, 17 min. Color. Narration in English. Bailey Films. $8.10. (h)

An introduction to the indigenous cultures of Soviet Central Asia and the problems of integrating communism with the national and religious peculiarities of the area. Attention is also given to current problems of housing and food. Geography is clearly presented and the history is interesting. Problems are not disguised and yet credit is given to positive accomplishment. Photography is good. Color, sound and narration are excellent.

Soviet Union: Epic Land. 1971, 29 min. Color. Narration in English. Encyclopedia Britannica and Novosti Press. $12.85. (h)

This is one of the few films regarding the Soviet Union which combine educational purpose with artistic photography. A geographical orientation of the Soviet Union, from desert to ice cap, and scenes of landscapes, streams, mining, factories, agriculture, and transportation are well integrated to give a clear and comprehensive impression of vast Russia and its people. Photography, color & music are outstanding.

The Kremlin. 1963, 55 min. Color. Narration in English. NBC, McGraw Hill
$23.00 (h)

The history and culture of Russia as reflected in the Moscow Kremlin. An objective presentation. Color, photography, sound, narration, and music are all excellent.

The Russian Consumer (Russia Series V). 1968, 13 min. Julien Bryan.
Narration in English. $8.00 (h)

An idea is given as to the availability of luxury items such as TV sets, washing machines, tape recorders, and vacations to various levels of society in the Soviet Union. The manager of a factory, a factory worker, and the peasant are taken as examples. Anti-Soviet slant. Color excellent. Photography good.

The Russian Peasant—The Story of Russian Agriculture. 1968. 18 min.
Narration in English. International Film Foundation. (h) $10.00

The history of the Russian peasant and Russian agriculture with an Anti-Stalinist slant. Photography, color, and narration are good. Engravings and documentary film of the revolution and World War II are joined with contemporary film of the collective farm to show the life of the peasant and the development of agriculture. Time does not allow for a comprehensive development of the theme, and the film concentrates on the negative aspects of State and collective farms.

The Soviet Union: A Student's Life. 1972, 20 min. Color. Narration in English. Encyclopaedia Britannica Educational Corporation and Novosti Press Agency. $10.30 (h)

This film outlines the Soviet educational system from nursery school through the university. The glorification of work and the importance of achievement to serve party and country are stressed in Soviet schools. Pioneer camps, student work camps in Siberia, as well as the formal classroom all contribute to the program of building a new society. A fairly objective and enjoyable film with excellent color and good photography and narration.

The Soviet Union: Faces of Today. 1972, 26 min. Color. Narration in English. $12.00.

A general overview of the Soviet Union emphasizing regional differences and economic activities.

The Soviet Union: Farming the Collective Way. 1969, 20 min. Color. Narration in English, ABC and McGraw Hill. $10.20 (e,j)

A dramatization of a "typical, average day" in the life of a collective farm worker and his family showing the basic structure of life on a collective farm. Approach is very simplistic and the tone is naive and euphoric. Pro-Soviet slant. Color, photography, sound, and narration are excellent.

The Soviet Union: Man, Minerals and Machinery. 1969, 19 min. color. Narration in English. McGraw Hill. (j,h) $10.00.

The transition which industry in the Soviet Union is making from heavy industry to consumer goods. The story quality makes the film more appropriate for junior high school students. Photography and color are good.

The Volga. 1966, 50 min. Color. Narration in English. CBS. $21.75 (h)

This film shows a Russia not usually seen by the tourist, where many of the modern conveniences of Moscow and Leningrad are missing. Excellent narration gives insight into conditions and changes surrounding Volgograd, with memories of World War II; Ulyanovsk, Lenin's home town; Yaroslavl, one of the oldest towns in Russia, and Moscow. Western slant. Photography, color, and narration are excellent.

USSR-City on the Volga. 1968, 24 min. Color. Narration in English. Neils Drechsel, Denmark. $11.60 (h)

Life in Yaroslavl for a family of three generations. Subtly pro-Soviet. Details of daily life often neglected in other films are nicely presented. Photography and color are good.

USSR-Soviet Citizen and His Community. 1968, 23 min. Color. Narration in English. Neils Drechsel, Denmark. $11.60 (h)

This film demonstrates how the soviet people are attempting to meet the stated goals of communism, beginning with the individual in his community. The film treats the krushins which governs matters of public morality, local courts that settle family disputes and neighborhood problems, education from nursery school through high school, and the pioneers. Emphasis is on responsibility and discipline in the child's life and how communist philosophy is an integral part of a child's world in play, group activity, and education. An objective and well-presented film concerned with a neglected area of soviet life.

Women of Russia (Russia Series III). 1968, 11 min. Color. No narration. Julain Bryan. $6.75 (All ages)

To a background of music, scenes of women at work and occasionally at play show the great diversity of jobs which women assume in Russia. Manual labor such as digging ditches and working in fields, the world of a wife and mother, a more exclusive world of a doctor, ballet dancer, even a fashion model are shown in flashes of contrast and diversity. A nonpolitical and enjoyable film. Color & photography are good, sometimes excellent, but inconsistently so.
