ABSTRACT

This directory presents the names and addresses of 2,500 public alternative schools and programs serving secondary school-age children in the United States and three Canadian provinces (Ontario, British Columbia, and Alberta). The addresses are listed alphabetically by state, with the Canadian entries in a separate section at the end. Each school or program listed has been assigned a six-digit number; the first two digits indicate the state (numbered in alphabetical order), the next three designate the school in the order it was located, and the final digit indicates the school type, where discernible: 0 = unspecified, 1 = senior high, 2 = junior high, 3 = middle school, 4 = continuation school, 5 = special population school (special populations may be pregnant teenagers, special education students, and students in punitive programs), 6 = combined junior-senior high, 7 = elementary through senior high, 8 = elementary through junior high. The list will be updated periodically. (TE)

ABOUT THIS LIST

The names and addresses of alternative schools appearing on subsequent pages were assembled as part of a national survey of public secondary alternative education. The list was compiled and the survey conducted between September, 1981 and April, 1982.

Our initial list came from a number of different sources. It began with letters seeking help from approximately 150 alternative school friends across the country. Simultaneously, letters of inquiry went to all state departments of education and to the superintendents of schools in all of the nation's towns and cities of more than 50,000 population. In an effort to supplement the listings received from these inquiries, and to offset resulting imbalance in the direction of urban alternatives, requests for the names of suburban alternatives went to all state contacts of the National Education Association's Division of Instruction and Professional Development. Officials of Kettering's /I/D/E/A kindly shared that organization's mailing list, as did officers of a dozen state and regional alternative education associations. A number of education periodicals also helped, by running brief announcements of the survey and requests for the names of individual alternative programs -- including Phi Delta Kappan, ASCD Update, NASSP News Leader, NEA Now, AACTE Briefs, Changing Schools, and Unicorn.

It was our intent to obtain a comprehensive listing of all of the nation's public alternative schools (and schools-within-schools, mini-schools, etc.). Yet as events developed, that goal became impossible, despite extensive efforts and the generous assistance indicated above. (Months later, we are still learning regularly of new programs previously undiscovered by our efforts.) Succeeding pages list a total of 2500 public alternative schools, addressed primarily to the secondary level. We suspect that there are probably two to three times that number altogether -- but that no one is likely to be able to confirm that. There are several reasons. One of the most central is the reporting practices of many school districts, a number of which submitted questionnaires noted to represent four schools — or seven programs — or, simply "multiple schools," without identifying them.

Nomenclature differences were also problematic and led both to some inclusions and exclusions that are misleading. For example, some areas don't consider "magnet" schools to be alternatives — and we know that a number of such programs which we would have liked to list are missing from these pages. On the other hand, some areas label punitive programs "alternatives," and so there are programs of that type listed — although most definitions would exclude them. (We purposely sought to determine what kinds of programs are locally called "alternatives" — which exposed some widely discrepant word usage in different parts of the country, and accounted for some of the particular inclusions and exclusions which further specification on our part might have precluded.)

Although the list to follow is, then, nowhere near the comprehensive one we had hoped for, it does exceed original intentions in several respects. In the first place, Canadian schools from several provinces asked to be included — and so we have a number of listings in Canada. Also, since we were trying to be inclusive of all alternative schools or programs serving secondary-school age youngsters, we ended up with some listings that are not, strictly speaking, secondary schools — e.g., K-12 schools, middle schools which extend into the junior high years, and even elementary school alternatives extending beyond the sixth grade. There are not many such schools but there are some.

Each school or program listed has its own number, and the list is divided by states. The first two digits in the school's identifying number indicate the state — with each state assigned a number according to its alphabetical order among the states. The next three digits are the number we assigned the particular school — typically, reflecting nothing more than the order in which we located it, and beginning with the number 001. There are a couple of exceptions to this, which should be fairly readily apparent. For instance, in New York State, Long Island alternatives are assigned a 100 series number (xx100x), upstate schools are assigned a 000 series number, and New York City schools are assigned a 300-400 series number.

The final digit of each identifying number indicates school type where this was readily discernible and easily classified. Otherwise, a final digit of "0" is assigned.

- 1 indicates special high school alternative
- 2 indicates junior high alternative
- 3 indicates middle school
- 4 indicates continuation school
- 5 indicates special population school, including programs for pregnant teenagers, special education students, and students in punitive programs
- 6 indicates combined junior-senior high alternative
- 7 indicates program extending from elementary into senior high school
- 8 indicates program extending from elementary into junior high

Recipients of this list might be interested in other related products of the Project on Alternatives in Education. As a result of the first year of the Project's inquiry, there is also a report of the national survey and its findings (the survey whose respondents are asterisked on this list). There is also a comprehensive literature review of most of the material published on alternative education, including approximately 800 books, articles, research reports, etc. Finally, a conceptualization of alternative education is in preparation. The manuscript, The Alternative in Alternatives, attempts to identify alternative schools in terms of their departures from conventional education.

Appreciation should be expressed to Joseph Manghise and Dorothy Trombecky for help in assembling and correcting this list. Both have spent difficult hours cheerfully and tirelessly in revising and supplementing it. I thank them both.

We hope to update the list that follows periodically — and indeed, since the current printing have received a number of additional entries. We hope that subsequent printings will also represent refinements and the further elimination of duplications and other errors. We have been far from casual about finding and correcting errors; but we recognize that we've not yet been totally successful.
