ABSTRACT

The high school cheerleader has the opportunity to set the stage for sportsmanship, school spirit, and the mood of the athletic program. A carefully planned program is essential to leading cheerleading sections into feelings of good fellowship and interschool rapport. This chandbook is designed to assist teacher-sponsors and administrators in the organization and administration of cheerleader squads. Sections discuss administration of cheerleading activities and procedures for conducting cheerleading activities. An appendix contains sample forms of rules and regulations for cheerleaders, application form for cheerleading, letter to parents, and tryout score sheet. Information is also included on official basketball and football signals. A bibliography is included. (CJB)

PREFACE

Cheerleading: A Handbook for Teacher-Sponsors has been prepared to serve primarily as an aid to sponsors in the organization and administration of cheerleading groups.

The high school cheerleader has the opportunity to set the stage for sportsmanship, school spirit, and the mood of the athletic program. A carefully planned program is essential to leading cheerleading sections into feelings of good fellowship and interschool rapport.

It is hoped that sponsors and administrators will find in this handbook information and ideas helpful in the encouragement and support of cheerleading groups.

INTRODUCTION

Cheerleading groups, as we know them today in our Chicago public high schools, have a comparatively short history. Some had their beginning during World War I. During the 1920s their membership consisted primarily of boys; in the early 1930s both boys and girls became cheerleaders. In more recent years in most schools, women in the Department of Health and Physical Education have taken over the sponsorship of the squads. With the advent of Title IX, some schools again have both boys and girls on their squads.

In the past, each local school set up its own requirements for eligibility, selection, uniforms, training, and conduct. This handbook is presented for the purpose of working toward the goal of some citywide unity in principles of operation. The handbook is also designed to assist sponsors in the organization and administration of cheerleader squads. It is hoped that this publication will benefit the cheerleaders, the teams, the sponsors, the schools, and the communities they serve.

ADMINISTRATION OF CHEERLEADING ACTIVITIES

The Role of the Principal

It is suggested that the principal-- appoint a teacher to sponsor the cheerleaders and guide her/him in the fulfillment of contingent responsibilities attend activities involving cheerleaders when possible approve attendance of cheerleaders at games away from the school approve fund-raising activities when applicable approve the calendar of events.

The Role of the Teacher-Sponsor

The teacher-sponsor should-- work cooperatively with the principal, the faculty, and physical education departments approve final selection of varsity cheerleaders attend and guide all practice sessions attend all sports events in which cheerleaders participate supervise and control all functions of the cheerleaders:

tryouts instruction and practice sessions cheerleading at sports events presentation of awards special activities appoint or supervise the election of a squad captain .

keep, or cause to be kept, the following files in permanent form:

annual calendar records of requirements for eligibility, tryouts, awards, and other procedures for training, selection, participation see that uniforms are clean and either identical or harmonious within the squad insure the cheers contain no profanity or obscenity arrange for half-time activities with the opposing school during the week before the game (Home team initiates the discussion of arrangements.) sequence of group performances time allotment (15 minute half-time, 20 minute special events).

The Role of the Captain

The cheerleading captain should-- keep an attendance, scholarship, and participation check of all squad members keep a record of supplies issued to or returned by cheerleaders; e.g., megaphones, blouses select and lead the squad in all cheers at sports events at which the group functions arrange for and supervise the teaching of cheers provide leadership in the selection and function of committees keep a record, in log or scrapbook form, of all cheerleading activities.

The Role of the Varsity Cheerleader

As a member of the cheerleading squad, every student should-attend all practices and games unless absent from school or excused by the sponsor lead in the development of standards of good sportsmanship for audience participation at sports events set a good example for other students in appearance, behavior, and scholarship.

PROCEDURES FOR

CONDUCTING CHEERLEADING ACTIVITIES

The varied activities conducted in relation to cheerleading should be such that they contribute measurably to the function of the school and to the encouragement of high level behavior in all forms of athletic activities, both by participants and spectators.

Eligibility

Applications. Forms should be filed at a time designated by the cheerleading sponsor; this is usually after the close of the football season. These forms should include data on year in school, class average, current grades, attendance and discipline records, participation in other activities, student interest, and teacher recommendations. (See samples on pages 17 and 18.)

Parental Approval. It is advisable to have on file a form signed by a parent. This should indicate approval of student participation and acceptance of responsibility for the cheerleader during games, in traveling to and from games, in related activities, and in the purchase of the necessary uniform. (See sample on page 19.)

Scholarship. Since cheerleaders are participating beyond general school requirements and in a capacity of leadership, it is essential that they exemplify a high level of school achievement in addition to cheering skill. The requirements for participation in interscholastic sports are to be followed. A student must receive passing grades in three major subjects and physical education for the previous semester and every five weeks, as checked. A student failing at the end of the five-week period is ineligible for the next five weeks unless the failure is at the twentieth or thirty-ninth week. The student is then ineligible for the succeeding semester. In addition, each school may specify more stringent scholastic requirements regarding grades.

Citizenship. At the time of tryout for the squad, a student should be above reproach in standards of personal conduct. Recommendations from the division room teacher, class teachers, and counselors should be required. Spaces for such recommendations may be included in the application form. (See sample on page 18.)

Health and Appearance. Each cheerleader is to have a physical examination annually. The certificate must be submitted previous to the training period, and it must certify that the person is in excellent health and that the student is capable of participation in all phases of physical education activity. Her/Mis appearance, inclusive of posture, grooming, hair care, and other details, should exemplify that which is most acceptable for a teenage girl/boy. Generally speaking, extreme hair styles or extreme makeup are not acceptable.

Year Group in School. Eligibility for trying out should be open to all girls and boys enrolled in the school.

Selection'

There are few positions in the school which offer opportunities for leadership comparable to cheerleading. Carefully selected, well-trained, and well-supervised cheerleaders have a tremendous influence on school spirit, morale, and sportsmanship. It is, therefore, extremely important to choose those persons who can carry the responsibilities incumbent upon cheerleaders.

Preparation for Tryouts. After the close of the football season, the captain and sponsor should schedule two to three weeks of instructional periods, during which interested girls and boys meet at least twice per week to learn and practice a designated number of school cheers. Periods selected should be such that all who wish to are able to participate; e.g., during the usual cheerleading practice period and/or before or after school.

A publicity program, including posters, bulletins, physical education class announcements, and newspaper articles, should be carried on by designated varsity members.

During the first practice session, candidates should receive copies of all requirements for cheerleading, an application blank, and a parent consent form. A brief explanation of procedures for the practices and tryouts may be made.

Instruction may be given by varsity cheerleaders in small groups, with argangements made for periodic rotation from leader to leader. To afford a broad base for judgment by the selection committee, candidates should be taught at least three cheers involving a great variety of activity.

The captain, with the approval of the sponsor, is responsible for all arrangements. She/he should prepare a list of applicants; check attendance; record completed applications, parent consent forms, and physical examinations; and give them to the sponsor.

Tryouts. Applications and parent consent slips must be on file before a person may try out. In the event that a person is selected for the varsity squad, she/he must submit her/his physical examination record before additional training is permitted.

The actual tryout is to be a demonstration of the cheers learned during the practice sessions, but selection for the varsity team is based upon eligibility plus proficiency in cheerleading performance and tumbling ability.

In general, the higher the standards which a school can maintain for selection and participation, the more desirable the activity is for students.

Judging. In the actual judging of participants, it is important to give the varsity squad an opportunity to plan and assist. The sponsor must approve the final selection. One way to accomplish this is to have the selection committee membership comprised equally of cheerleaders and adults. The adults may include teachers of other subjects or administrative personnel, in addition to physical educators. A second method, if the number trying out warrants, is to have a preliminary tryout with ratings done by the sponsor and varsity cheerleaders. The committee for the final selection may then be composed of physical educators and other adults.

Before judging, the sponsor should discuss with the committee the factors to be judged and the method of scoring. Rating scales of 0 to 4 may be used. The following list of qualities and characteristics is suggested:

appearance, height, and weight personality, pep, enthusiasm cheering ability rhythm, timing, and coordination agility voice use audience appeal poise tumbling activity.

For the judging, participants may wear numbers and work alone or in twos. They should demonstrate at least two cheers selected by the sponsor.

For the final selection, it may be advisable to have the varsity cheerleaders who are not graduating scored. The purpose of this is to keep them alert and to discourage the development of undesirable attitudes. In this sense, a girl or boy is competing for a position on the squad and maintains her/his place only by superior performance.

- 7

Squad Size. Each school may determine the size of its own squad, but for most purposes a group of 10 to 12 cheerleaders is adequate. Some schools may prefer to have more than one cheer group; a frosh-soph, which is an apprentice team, and a varsity group.

Another plan is to have a pep club, whose members learn the sports rules and cheers and attend games. Then, only pep club members may be eligible for practice and tryouts for cheerleading.

Training and Practice

Both careful training and extensive practice are essential for development of high-level skill in cheerleading techniques and for development of endurance to participate without undue fatigue.

Supervision and Teaching. ALL ACTIVITIES OF THE CHEERLEADERS ARE TO BE SUPERVISED BY THE SPONSOR. Actual instruction in cheerleading movements may be done by the captain or shared by the varsity members. Planning of new yells, formations, and halftime activities may also be the function of the entire squad. If tumbling is included in the group's program, it is the direct responsibility of the sponsor. Safety practices and proper decorum and dress must prevail at all times.

Meeting Times and Places. It is the responsibility of each cheerleader to arrange her/his class schedule to permit practice and attendance at sports events. Scheduling cheerleading for ninth period daily will minimize the number of excuses from classes necessary for presence at games. Cheerleaders are expected to attend all practice sessions and related activities. Exceptions may be allowed only with the consent of the sponsor.

If possible, the group should meet in the gymnasium. The auditorium stage, ROTC room, or other areas with a large, open space are often practicable. During warm weather, cheerleaders may meet outside on a lawn or in a park, if available. ALL SESSIONS MUST BE SUPERVISED DIRECTLY BY THE SPONSOR.

Training. A period of conditioning activities should precede the training of new cheerleaders and the resumption of activity after the summer vacation. The training period for new cheerleaders should include—overview of purposes of cheerleading teaching of school cheers methods of announcement to the audience selection and presentation of suitable cheers establishment of patterns of movement methods of addience control use of cheers for encouragement only allowance for opponents to complete cheers before starting another cheer suppression or control of booing by distraction, e.g., starting a response or a favorite cheer discouragement of audience-instigated cheers

'development of new cheers awareness of national trends in movements and cheer patterns maintenance of originality contests for original cheers development of halftime activities special yells (V for victory, school emblem) tumbling drills, dances, novelty stunts that are appropriate, done in coordination with the school band or pep club

responsibilities of the individual cheerleaders uniform attendance.

The captain is responsible for the instruction in cheering. Actual teaching may be done with mass groups or carried on by varsity members with small groups.

Effectiveness of cheering is in direct proportion to the appropriateness of the cheer, the simplicity and uniformity of group movement, the degree of coordination between the yell and the movements, and the sportsmanship level of the audience.

Uniforms

Many styles of uniforms are available. The important considerations for use in Chicago public high schools should be propriety, cost, maintenance, and attractiveness.

One type of uniform which serves satisfactorily includes-- cheer sweater and collar skirt or slacks shoes, saddle or all white blouse or shirt which may be used on warm days or indoors.

The uniform should combine the school colors in an attractive manner, fit well, and be clean and pressed at all times.

In the event that students cannot afford costumes, the school may supply sweaters and/or skirts or slacks. These are issued in the same way as sports uniforms. Each student is responsible for alterations, maintenance, and return of clean equipment in good condition. If a school can afford it, heavy jackets or blankets in school colors and gloves may be supplied for cold weather.

For practice sessions, regulation gym uniforms are most practical.

Participation on the Varsity Squad

Good cheerleaders are an asset both to the competitive teams and to their schools. It is a privilege to be a cheerleader, and the position carries many responsibilities.

Scholarship. The policy is stated under "Eligibility" on page 5.

Citizenship. A cheerleader must be exemplary in school on the way to and from games, and during games. She/He must be a person who is completely reliable in behavior and attendance at practices and games.

Conduct at Games. Opposing cheerleaders should meet before the game and again at halftime. They should be courteous and friendly. Cheerleaders should never start a cheer if opponents are performing during halftime of a football game, and halftime or time-out at basketball games.

During basketball games, cheerleaders may not be on the floor at the end of the intermission or a time-out. Cheerleaders may not cheer on the floor at the sidelines close to the basket during a free throw. As a result of failure to comply with these regulations, officials may charge a team with a technical foul.

Arrangements should be made for wraps and books belonging to visiting cheerleaders at basketball games.

Cheerleaders should remember to cheer with a purpose. They should encourage the team during defeat as well as during victory. All yells should be made positive. An opponent or an official's decision should never be ridiculed.

An audience's energy must be channeled into constructive, sportsmanlike behavior. Silence during signal calling in football and free throws in basketball constitutes good audience behavior. An injured player on either team deserves applause.

Halftime is a good time to combine squads and cheer for both schools. It is also a time for cheers requiring formations such as the school initial or "V" for victory. Also, special performances by pep clubs, pom pons, and dance groups may be scheduled at this time.

Cheering may be done as a unit. The captain is responsible for selecting all cheers. Knowledge of the game should help in a choice of proper yells for each situation.

Cheering starts with a definite signal. The captain, standing in a position where she/he can be seen by all, can do this by a standard signal such as an arm swing or pull down. Standard-ization of movement will result from continued practice.

Travel to and from Games. Each cheerleader is responsible for her/his own expenses. The parent signifies responsibility for her/his child. The sponsor should encourage those travel arrangements which will afford greatest safety. A sponsor may incur liability by driving students to and from games.

Special Activities. Whenever they occur, special activities may be carried on in conjunction with sports activities. It is important that they have a definite purpose or value to the function of cheerleading, such as training for audience participation, sportsmanship and school spirit, ticket sales; awards, and others.

Sports or pep assemblies are organized for the purpose of developing enthusiasm, setting standards of sportsmanship, and teaching cheers for games. Programs may be carried out by the cheer sponsor, coaches, chairman of the physical education department, or as a cooperative effort of several. Such assemblies should be carefully planned to achieve maximum value. Timing is important.

Attractive displays on bulletin boards and in the school newspaper can contribute to the cheerleading program by setting standards of sportsmanship for competition, informing students of game schedules and cheers, and advertising tryouts for a new cheer group.

Socials may be held in conjunction with the student council or physical education department. They may take the form of a dance, homecoming, or victory program.

Most schools hold an annual or semiannual banquet or luncheon to honor varsity athletes. Cheerleaders are often invited to attend.

The sale of tickets is not ordinarily the responsibility of the cheerleaders, but this group often cooperates in this task.

Awards

An award system is important in that it recognizes good service to the school, for the team and for the student body.

To earn a letter, a cheerleader should participate as a varsity member, inclusive of the training period, cheerleading, and related activities, for at least one full year.

Letter requirements include-- fulfillment of all requirements for cheerleading citizenship scholarship (may not be ineligible more than two five-week periods) health record participation in practice sessions service at football and basketball games for complete seasons.

A chevron may be awarded if a girl or boy serves satisfactorily for a second year of training and cheering at football and basketball games. The chevron may be a metal bar which can be attached to the original letter award.

The cheerleading letter suggested is an eight-inch block letter, reverse colors of varsity letters, with an appropriate designation such as the word Cheerleader or a megaphone.

Awards and megaphones, with the approval of the principal, should normally be purchased out of the athletic fund.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR CHEERLEADERS

It is the responsibility of cheerleaders to conduct the selves as good citizens of High School at all times. The following standards are expected of all cheerleaders.

1. Scholarship Average of C

Each cheerleader is to show her/his coursebook to the sponsor each marking period.

A cheerleader is ineligible for 10 weeks following a marking period with less than a C average. In the event of two periods of ineligibility, the cheerleader is dropped from the squad.

If at any time a cheerleader receives a final failing grade, the cheerleader is dropped from the squad.

2. Regular Attendance

Each cheerleader is expected to attend all practice sessions and games at which the squad performs, unless excused by the sponsor.

3. Maintenance of Uniform

Each cheerleader is expected to furnish and maintain her/his own uniform. A cheerleader must have a clean, neat appearance and must be well-groomed at all times.

4. Good Conduct

Cheerleaders are representatives of the school at all times. They should avoid exhibitionism, hysteria, and sarcasm; they should show the spectators that they enjoy cheering and that they expect and appreciate full audience participation and cooperation.

5. Responsibility for Cheering

It is the responsibility of the cheerleaders to promote good sportsmanship. They must know the cheers and be ready to cheer every time the captain signals, regardless of the score. A team that is losing needs enthusiasm even more than a winning team.

A cheerleader will be suspended or dropped from the squad at the discretion of the sponsor for the following reasons:

improper attire undesirable behavior careless appearance and habits failure to perform duties properly undesirable language failure to attend scheduled events unsportsmanlike behavior uncooperative attitude any act that damages the reputation of the school.

CHEERLEADING PYRAMIDS

Cheerleaders are incorporating pyramids more and more into their cheers and chants. These are used to captivate the attention of the audience. These pyramids vary in size and shape, and are effective in promoting mass crowd participation.

Several styles of pyramids include braced, split, staircase, triangle, and fan. Some ideas that may be used when directing cheerleaders in pyramid building are listed below.

No pyramid should be more than three persons high. (IHSA allows only two persons high when cheerleaders perform in state tournaments.)

If three persons high, the pyramids must be braced.

The group must have a continuous spotter if the top person's feet are more than six feet off the ground.

No back flips are permitted off any pyramids.

Front suspended flips are permissible, but only off people standing with both feet firmly on the ground.

Spotters should be utilized to build the pyramid and also to dismantle them.

Pyramids should be organized in the following manner:

Design the pyramid on paper.

Indicate the proper order for safe mounting.

Organize the spotting of mounts and dismounts.

Indicate the proper order for safe dismounting from the pyramid.
