ABSTRACT

This digest describes types of statewide programs for the training of adult educators. Eight types of programs involving 19 states are outlined, and contacts for each are given. These programs are included: Michigan Staff Development Collaborative, the Iowa Community College Telenetwork (or Telenet), Virginia Consultant Training Institute to disseminate 310 projects, Oregon Adult Education Talent Bank to provide technical assistance, multi-state conference to start networking with adult basic education and English as a Second Language staff from other states, state networks and centers, and staff development--state by state (a listing of directors and their addresses and telephone numbers for states that support a state staff development specialist or sponsor a staff development center). The final section identifies some new staff development resources. Two appendixes list, in alphabetical order by state, staff development projects and dissemination projects. Project title and funding, contact person with address and telephone number, description, and product are provided for each project. (YLB)

INTRODUCTION

In the summer of 1984 Dr. Ed Jones of George Mason University and Jean Lowe of the Fairfax County, Virginia Adult Education Program initiated a modest project to collect information about staff development practices in adult education. Two surveys were conducted - one went to State Directors of Adult Education and selected staff development specialists in the field, another to state adult education associations.

When the completed survey forms began to arrive, we were intrigued by the variety of responses...particularly those that mentioned statewide systems or processes for the training of adult educators. This Digest is the result of further investigation of selected responses to the Jones/Lowe surveys. Additional material was gathered from the current 310 Catalog of Adult Education Projects.

The purpose of this Digest is not to recommend "model" programs to the field, but to describe programs that seem to have implemented successfully a variety of good ideas...ideas that other adult educators might consider trying. Eight types of programs, involving 19 states, are outlined, and contacts for each are given. Some new staff development resources are also identified in the final section.

If you are aware of other successful (and interesting) programs, please let us know about them. Perhaps a second Digest could be developed to give exposure to additional staff development efforts and resources.

Our thanks to those adult educators who shared their program information with us, to Ed Jones and Jean Lowe for gathering the initial data, and to Frances Littlejohn for preparing the Digest manuscript.

MICHIGAN STAFF DEVELOPMENT COLLABORATIVE

In 1978 Michigan adult educators recognized the need for a long-range, statewide staff development plan for adult education teachers, administrators, and support staff. Few regularly scheduled inservice or staff development opportunities were available on a continuing, developmental basis in areas around the state. Most inservice efforts that existed were sporadic and lacked a cohesive design and format. Many did not systematically address the different levels of training, experience, and career commitment of teachers, administrators, and support staff in adult education programs. In many instances it was not possible to identify the most effective staff development resources at local district, intermediate district, or higher education levels and plan cooperatively for their use.

To respond to this challenge, the Planning Collaborative was funded as a one-year project to design a long-range staff development plan. The Planning Collaborative had the broad involvement of educators from local district adult education programs, universities and colleges, intermediate school districts, and the Michigan Department of Education.

The Subsequent plan proposed a cooperative network to have impact on a minimum of 600 practitioners each year of full operation. In the first year, three elements were put into operation:

1. A Staff Development Collaborative consisting of representatives of key agencies and groups to initiate, direct and monitor the implementation of the plan was established. A director and secretary served as the staff for the Collaborative.
2. Staff Development Facilitators were identified by the Staff Development Collaborative. They were selected from local adult education programs, universities and colleges, intermediate school districts, and community-based organizations and agencies. They stimulated the development of local and area staff development planning and programming and were located in and served all areas of the state. Resources were linked to the adult educators who needed them.
3. Small 310 grants and other incentives stimulated local districts and area staff development.

In the second and following years, staff development leadership training of program administrators and teacher leaders was planned. They were trained to initiate and generate staff development processes in their districts and areas. They served as a communication and learning network for each other.

The plan identified a variety of funding resources and urged adult educators to use all of these sources to offer staff development opportunities and activities to practitioners at every level.

An evaluation design was included, which provided for analyzing and modifying the plan, the program, and the process each year as well as a final evaluation of the impact of the staff development plan on practitioners and students alike. A Staff Development Council was established. It consisted of 14 members including the project director.

The project identified, selected, and trained fourteen (14) Staff Development Facilitators. These Facilitators served as initiators and helpers in staff development efforts at the local and area level and as educational brokers in linking local and area groups to resources throughout the state. They were selected from applications and nominations from local adult education programs and intermediate school districts.

In 1982 the Staff Development Collaborative expanded its scope and maximized its capacity building, replication and dissemination by:

- training Management Teams to coordinate and manage the implementation of staff development incentive grants in six geographic areas of the state;
- using trained Facilitators to serve intensively the six areas of the state;
- training a network of teacher leaders and coordinators and administrators in planning, implementing and evaluating staff development at the local and area level;
- extending and expanding the incentive grant component by further developing some 1980-81 programs and by reaching additional new educators needing services.

The following learning areas were identified by adult educators as priorities for staff development:

- Self awareness as a person/professional/learner.
- Knowing adult students and helping them to know themselves and become self-directed learners.
- Interaction strategies.
- Teaching strategies.
- Curriculum systems and areas.
- Program management, communication and leadership.
- Staff development planning and programming.

In Fiscal Year 1985, over 85 small projects and a variety of area - and state-wide projects were funded. The total investment for the Staff Development Collaborative this year is $272,000. Literacy volunteer training and employability skills teacher training are being highlighted.

THE IOWA TELENET

The Iowa Community College Telenetwork, or Telenet as it is commonly known, is a unique communications system that links all of Iowa's area community colleges and vocational schools with audio-teleconferencing. The system was established in 1975, and has proven to be an instrumental part of instructional and administrative communications throughout the state's public community colleges.

The Telenet operates over what is called a dedicated private telephone line. This line has 28 terminals or sites in the community colleges across the state where the teleconferencing equipment is located. At each site people can talk and listen to other participants at any or all of the other sites simultaneously. The Telenet system is like having a state-wide party line; however, it is unique because it can accomodate large or small groups at each site. This is referred to as live interactive audio-teleconferencing.

The Telenet also has a special switchboard system that can allow several participants, guests, or presenters who can't be at a Telenet site location to call in, from any telephone anywhere, and the Telenet operator will connect their calls directly into the system.

This feature allows caller(s) to participate in state-wide audio teleconferences, no matter where they are located, simply by using their telephone. This has proven very beneficial to the Telenet system because it has given participants in the area colleges access to a variety of guest presenters or authorities, people that normally would not be able to travel to a Telenet site or who are not located in Iowa.

Within the community colleges the system is utilized both for administrative communication, such as for meetings and conferences, as well as for instructional programming.

The Telenet has proven effective within the community colleges for:

Committee Meetings	Special Lectures
Departmental Meetings	Press conferences
Administrator Meetings	Discussion Groups
Faculty & Staff Meetings	Financial Meetings
Adult & Continuing Education	Faculty & Staff Workshops
Courses	Curriculum Planning Meetings
Undergraduate Courses	Guest Speaker Presentations
Graduate Level Courses	Informal Lunch Time Programs
Conferences & Workshops

The Telenet eliminates costs which are incurred by meeting face-to-face such as mileage, food, lodging, and travel time. For classes and other instructional programs, the Telenet is beneficial because it can provide instructional programs to locations where such programs normally would not be available due to a lack of funding or resources. For example, an instructor can be at one location, and yet he or she can have a state-wide classroom with students located in up to 27 other communities. The instructor is therefore saved the time and expense of traveling, while the students are provided with instruction that normally might not be available in their area of the state.

The telenet is available to all community college administration, faculty, students and staff for community college related programming, at no charge. The system is also available to outside groups and organizations at reasonable rental rates.

VIRGINIA CONSULTANT TRAINING INSTITUTE

The Virginia Adult Education Program supports a variety of staff development services, including a state conference (see Project SAIL) and a resource center. The Consultant Training Institute (CTI) and its followup activities are new statewide efforts.

The Institute was held February 28-March 2, 1985. The purpose of this first Institute was to provide a geographically representative group of ABE and ESL teachers with the background and content of five 310 projects, as well as the skills for disseminating project outcomes to local staff. Each participant was trained to disseminate a particular project relating to their experience and/or educational background.

All participants were trained in the organization and delivery of local workshops. This included needs assessment, negotiations with local supervisors, setting objectives, developing training plans and evaluation.

The 310 projects being disseminated by this group are:

- . Curriculum Adaptations for Special Education (CASE)
- . Independence in Work
- . Teachers as Counselors in ABE
- . Competency Based Education for ESL
- . ESL Curriculum Guidelines for Non-Intensive Programs.

Dissemination activities are conducted in collaboration with Virginia's State Resource Center which locates the appropriate consultants, pays them, and reimburses local participants for travel and meals. The CTI consultants will meet again in August to discuss their experiences in disseminating projects to other ABE teachers.

OREGON ADULT EDUCATION TALENT BANK

Local ABE programs often request guidance and technical assistance in such areas as working with hard-to-reach individuals, curriculum adjustments, improvement of instructional materials, and program management. These needs may be temporary problems which appear briefly, but sharply, or may be a long-term problem that has continued to frustrate staff.

Located throughout Oregon are numerous teachers and administrators of adult basic education who have the talent and experience to meet the needs that periodically become apparent in local programs. The purpose of the Talent Bank is to make it possible for those with needs to draw on the talents of those who can help.

Subject areas covered by the 27 Talent Bank members include: ABE, Adult High School, Brain Research, Career Development, CAI, Conference Planning, ESL, Learning Disabilities, Learning Styles, Motivation, Reasoning skills, Team Teaching, Writing, and many other topics.

The Adult Education Talent Bank is coordinated through the State Director of Adult Education in the following way:

- . Local program determines their need and identifies from the statewide listing the individual(s) who can meet that need (see example).
- . Local program director contacts the individual listed in Talent Bank.
- . Individual clears the date with their own local director.
- . Service is provided and an evaluation form completed.
- . Individual notifies the State Director of Adult Education in writing of services provided, summary of evaluation, mileage (state rates) and per diem (state rates).
- . State Director of Adult Education processes materials and mails a check to the individual.

As additional individuals become members of the Talent Bank, their data is mailed to all programs for inclusion in the Talent Bank catalog.

MULTI STATE CONFERENCE

Project SAIL (Summer Adult Institute and Lyceum) is supported by a 310 grant provided through the Adult Education Service of the Virginia Department of Education. It is held at George Mason University in Fairfax. This week long institute is designed to provide adult education instructors and supervisors with knowledge and insights relating to ABE and ESL learners and programs. The project grant pays for tuition, room, and meals for 200 Virginia participants. In addition, SAIL hosts small delegations (5-10 persons per group) from several other states, including North Carolina, Maryland, West Virginia, and Puerto Rico. The purpose is to start networking with ABE and ESL staff from other states and to learn about their successful practices. All out-of-state SAIL participants are funded by their own adult education programs.

The basic format for SAIL week involves major instructional sessions relating to individual strands (intensive courses) which occur on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, while large group sessions, 310 sessions, and various additional small group enrichment sessions are held on Tuesday and Thursday mornings. Tuesday and Thursday afternoons are kept open to provide participants time to follow up with presenters, to study, and to enjoy leisure and recreational activities.

The formal instructional program in 1985 consists of nine academic strands:

1. Introduction to Adult Basic Education
2. Introduction to Adult ESL
3. Advanced Adult ESL: Translating Theory into Practice
4. Administration of Adult Basic Education Programs
5. Training Teachers as Counselors in Adult Basic Education
6. Language Arts in Adult Basic Education
7. Beyond Learning Disabilities: Learning Styles and Teacher Expectations in ABE
8. Upper Level ABE (pre-GED) Instructional Methods
9. ABE Populations with Special Needs

These two credit (optional) intensive courses involve advance readings and a final project, which participants complete at home after the conclusion of the institute. In addition to the usual 310 project and other small group presentations, four independent research projects conducted by Northern Virginia ABE teachers will be presented and discussed.

In conjunction with SAIL '85, a special issue of Virginia's ABE Newsletter will be published. It will highlight activities of all the states represented at the conference, and will be distributed at SAIL.

STATE NETWORKS AND CENTERS

A number of states fund centers to provide staff development and/or related services to local practitioners. The 3 general types are:

- 1) Clearinghouses, which specialize in information and materials dissemination. New York, Pennsylvania, and Washington sponsor such projects.
- 2) Resource Centers, which provide clearinghouse services and staff development/technical assistance to local programs in general and specialized areas of adult education. Resource centers are supported by Connecticut (1), Illinois (3 - North, Central, South), Indiana (1), New Jersey (2 - North & South), North Dakota (1) and Virginia (1).
- 3) Dissemination Networks, which identify (and in some cases evaluate) instructional programs and products relevant to adult education, and assist in the dissemination and local adoption of these programs and products. Texas has supported the longest-running network - the TRENDS project. California (see flow chart, page 10), Florida, and New Jersey also support statewide networks.

For information on the above projects, contact the appropriate state office of Adult Education (see list on pages 11-15) or project directors identified in Appendices A & B.

STAFF DEVELOPMENT - STATE BY STATE

The Jones/Lowe Survey identified 14 States that support a State Staff Development Specialist, and 11 states that sponsor a staff development center of some kind. These states are indicated on pages 11-15.
