ABSTRACT

The fifth of five volumes, this guide for the fourth grade is an outgrowth of the Curriculum Guide in Reading. The guide provides an outline of skills in the communicative arts of listening, speaking, and writing that support and can be integrated with the skills outlined in the reading guide. The introductory section contains objectives, a description of the organization of the book, and a discussion of the interrelationship of the communication skills. The first section includes units on listening subskills: attentive listening, informational listening, critical listening, and recreational listening. The second section contains units on speaking subskills: the mechanics of speaking, the ability to communicate orally, communication techniques, methods of delivery, and style. The third section presents writing units on fundamental skills, practical writing, and creative writing. Each unit lists (1) the skill to be taught; (2) the subskill, which is stated in behavioral terms and which progresses from the fundamental to the advanced; (3) the objective of the lesson; (4) the teaching/learning strategy, and (5) the criterion for determining mastery of the objectives. The appendixes contain a suggested weekly time distribution for language arts, a language arts checklist for elementary teachers, a Chicago Public Schools handwriting award form, a bibliography, and a teacher evaluation form. PREFACE

The phrase "back-to-basics" permeates the educational arena. Throughout the nation, emphasis is being placed on the improvement of communication skills, especially that of writing. In order to accomplish this goal, however, all areas of the language arts must be developed. This guide is an attempt to integrate all four language arts areas: listening, speaking, reading and writing. This integration of skills is vital if effective communication is to be characteristic of today's society.

Concerted efforts have been made to enhance the language arts program by the Chicago public schools. The development of this curriculum guide is the result of many years of intensive work. In the initial stages, a steering committee composed of coordinators, administrators, teachers, and students was formed to identify problems and concerns related to the language arts curriculum. In subsequent research and development, direct feedback from the schools was analyzed to assure the content validity of the communication subskill objectives contained in this guide.

Compiled in this publication is a language arts program stated in behavioral objectives that identifies language arts skills considered essential for competent communication. This guide provides a foundation for a classroom language arts program. This foundation will enable the appropriate staff to utilize materials and strategies for teaching language arts in an efficient and organized manner. The guide delineates specific language arts subskills which should be taught and/or reinforced at the appropriate level.

As the learners progress through the language arts program of instruction, they gain basic communication skills that will assist them in reaching their fullest potential of academic excellence in all curriculum areas.

INTRODUCTION

A Design and Approach to the Teaching of the Language Arts

This Curriculum Guide in the Communication Arts is an outgrowth of the Curriculum Guide in Reading. The guide provides an outline of skills in the communication arts of listening, speaking, and writing which are supportive of and integrated with the skills outlined in the reading guide. This integration of skills occurs as the result of a complete language arts program.

A learner-centered, skill-oriented approach to the teaching of the communication arts is presented in this guide. The skills outlined direct learners to a mastery of the communication arts. Supportive teaching strategies and resources are presented to aid teachers in developing a program which will respond to the instructional needs of learners.

The communication arts guide is comprised of nine books. Each book is composed of three strands—listening, speaking, and writing. Each strand offers a complete program; however, many skills particular to a certain strand may be taught and mastered at one time through an integrative approach. Within each strand there is a breakdown of the subskills appropriate to each area. These subskills are presented in the following order:

Listening, consisting of the subskill strands for attentive listening, informational listening, critical listening, and recreational listening

Speaking, consisting of the subskill strands for mechanics of speaking, ability to communicate orally, communication techniques, methods of delivery, and style

Writing, consisting of the subskill strands for fundamental skills, practical writing, and creative writing.

These subskills are fundamental to the learner's success in attaining competency in the communication arts. For each of these subskills, specific objectives are stated in behavioral terms. The objectives for each subskill progress from the fundamental to the advanced.

Suggestions for teaching strategies and/or classroom activities accompany the objectives. These focus upon mastery of the subskill stated in the objectives. Additional teaching/learning strategies found in textual, nontextual, and reinforcement materials may be provided by the teacher on the bottom section of each page. This easy reference device assists teachers in coordinating their materials with the guides. In each instance, a means of determining mastery of the objective is stated in behavioral terms as the criterion for mastery.

Interrelationship of the Communication Skills

Language arts is the basis of communication in all areas. It is the vehicle of expression and the tool of impression by which we acquire knowledge. In understanding and communicating ideas in any phase of the curriculum, the language arts are used.

The listening, speaking, reading, and writing facets of the language arts program are closely related. Listening and reading are considered the intake of the program (the impression); speaking and writing, the output (the expression). The term language arts represents the fusion of the skills of communication—the impressions and the expression—taught in relation to each other.

The skills outlined in this language arts guide show interrelatedness of the expressive areas of the language arts. This relationship becomes evident to the teacher and learner alike as instruction in the language arts evolves. The learner begins to realize and understand that what he/she is able to hear or speak he/she is able to read or write. And the teacher sees an integration of skills as he/she teaches certain skills or experiences in the language arts. Listening, speaking, reading, and writing all involve common experiences, observations, and thinking skills.

The advantage of breaking down these skills into specific strands and subskills is to delineate those skills involved in attaining proficiency in the language arts. As a whole program, these skills feature abundant experiences in the impression (listening and reading) and the expression (speaking and writing) skills of the language arts. They provide ample opportunities for the expression of the learner's innermost feelings, thereby helping him/her to express himself/herself in oral and written communication.

Communication through Listening

Good listening is one of the most important, most frequently used arts and should be developed at all levels of instruction. Every teacher of language arts provides learning situations and experiences which help to develop the listening abilities of the learner.

The four facets or strands of the language arts--listening, speaking, reading, and writing--are so interrelated that no single facet is independent of the others. Therefore, listening experiences are provided within the framework of the total language arts program rather than in isolation. Special listening experiences devoted to the mastery of particular skills occupy a definite segment of time, but such instruction occurs as an integral part of ongoing learning experiences.

This listening program is based on four major subskills which are fundamental to the learner's success in attaining competency in listening skills. These subskills are Attentive Listening, Informational Listening, Critical Listening, and Recreational Listening. Subskills are categorized according to these four major areas and are stated in terms of behavioral objectives.

Emphasis should be placed on subskills as they become basic to the overall language arts program, since skills in attentive listening, informational listening, and critical listening are pertinent to progress made in speaking, reading, and writing.

Communication through Speaking

Through the speaking program, each learner develops abilities which make speaking an effective means of communication. Varied and meaningful experiences and skills in speaking are provided as a means of fostering a learner's growth in his/her ability to speak and think in a proficient manner. These experiences and skills are emphasized, since the mastery of skills in reading, listening, and writing is to a great extent dependent upon the learner's oral ability and development. The learner and teacher alike become aware of this dependence when the learner's speaking vocabulary becomes a part of his/her reading, listening, and writing vocabularies.

The speaking program evolves from carefully planned experiences integrated with the other facets of the language arts program. Such planning leads to purposeful activities aimed at establishing each learner's competency in the language arts. It also guides the learner toward using friendly, spontaneous oral expression as part of his/her ability to communicate. With practice, the learner will-- participate spontaneously and frequently in classroom conversations and discussions develop social courtesies and skills essential to discussion and conversation develop poise and self-confidence in speaking develop a practical speaking vocabulary develop the ability to speak effectively develop originality in expression develop various means for oral expression.

Experiences and activities should be organized around the five major subskills. These subskills include the mechanics of speaking, which train the learners in acceptable pronunciation, appropriate volume, and vocal flexibility as produced through variations in stress, pitch, inflection, and rate; the ability to communicate orally, which sets the standards and patterns around which acceptable speech is built; communication techniques, which outline the various modes or practices into which oral expression is organized; the method of delivery, which refers to specific means for delivery of oral expression used in common practice; and the styles of oral expression which are commonly practiced. These subskills need special emphasis as part of the complete language arts program in order for the learner to become more competent in oral expression.

Learners with serious speech disorders should be identified and treated by the speech therapist. Learners whose speech patterns differ from those accepted as standard English should receive special help from the teacher within the regular classroom situation. Regional dialects should be respected and should not be confused with incorrect grammar and usage. Every effort should be made to develop a feeling of acceptance and security—to develop genuine support between teacher and learner.

Communication through Writing

Oral and written expression are interdependent. In the beginning stages of written expression, the development of oral readiness is imperative. The spontaneity and natural urge for expression of the primary grade child serve as a basis for written expression. Therefore, it is important to recognize that practice in oral communication should precede written expression.

The writing program-- provides favorable climate for writing--a friendly, informal classroom atmosphere provides enriching first-hand and vicarious experiences to build background and to encourage the desire to speak and write includes systematic, planned instruction in the mechanics of writing provides motivation for creative expression provides situations and centers of interest which promote free expression encourages learners to express their own ideas and experiences encourages the use of standard English.

Such a program fosters the development of techniques and skills that facilitate expression. It is characterized by daily, purposeful practice determined by individual needs. Many practical situations in the learner's common experiences motivate and require written expression.

Skill-oriented activities delineated in this writing program provide instructional opportunities for the learners. Self-expression in practical writing and self-expression in creative writing are developed by means of these activities.

In building the fundamental skills of written expression, learners receive instruction in grammar/usage, capitalization, punctuation, sentence structure, paragraph structure, vocabulary, and dictionary usage. Spelling and handwriting are included in this segment of the writing program.

The practical writing strands is composed of oral practice and readiness, dictating and recording information, alphabetizing, sequencing, record keeping, outlining information, and letter composition. Its major focus is upon conveying information, summarizing, using correct format, and selecting appropriate content for friendly, social, and business letters.

The program of creative writing encompasses oral practice and readiness; original stories, poems, plays, and/or scripts; and sentences, captions, and titles as vehicles for written expression. This program is based upon the theory that in first drafts, the free expression of ideas is more important than the mechanics of writing. Recognition and acceptance of varying interests and abilities of learners help the teacher to guide them toward successful writing experiences. Every effort is made to foster the creativity of the learners and to preserve in each limerick or poem, script or story the qualities which move it original. This presupposes that the teacher will resist any impulse to substitute his/her ideas for those of the learner because he/she is more interested in meeting correct standards than in what the learner writes.

In fostering creative writing ability, the teacher's contributions include reading good literature to the group, providing real and vicarious experiences upon which to build, and allotting sufficient time for reflection and discussion before asking for written interpretation. These aids to growth, surrounded by an atmosphere of freedom and acceptance, allow learners to share inner feelings and reactions through written and oral expression.

Listen for dear honor's sake, Goddess of the silver lake, Listen and save.

Attentive Listening:

Responsibility of the Listener

Objective No. 1

Objective

Given listening activities, the learner will identify their purposes.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Tell the learners that we listen for the following purposes: to participate in conversations and discussions, to obtain information, to make judgments, and to enjoy recreational experiences. Lead a discussion of everyday listening experiences. Show how they relate to the various purposes.

Place the following chart on a duplicating master. Distribute copies of it to the learners and have them record their listening experiences for a two-day period on it. Remind them to list their activities according to purpose.

LISTENING ACTIVITIES
Conversations/ Information Judgments Recreation
Met with study group to plan science project.	Listened to social studies program on WBEZ.	Read a book suggested by a friend.	Listened to records after school.

Provide an opportunity for the learners to discuss their charts in small groups. Check to see that they understand the purpose for different listening experiences.

Criterion

The learner will identify the purpose for listening activities. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Place a group of sentences containing prepositional phrases on the chalkboard. Read the sentences and ask the learners to identify the phrases.

The games in the basement are his. We went to Florida on our vacation. She went into the store.

Point out that phrases are parts of sentences. Show how they need subjects and verbs to make them complete thoughts. List several prepositional phrases on the chalkboard as indicated below. Allow the learners to add phrases to the list. Direct one learner to read a phrase, and call on another learner to use it in an oral sentence. Continue the procedure until all the learners have an opportunity to construct sentences, using the phrases. Encourage them to form declarative, interrogative, imperative, and exclamatory sentences.

Objective

Given a dependent clause, the learner will state a complete sentence, using the clause.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Tell the learners that a dependent clause does not form a complete thought and cannot stand alone. Read aloud sentences containing dependent clauses and ask the learners to identify them. Use sentences similar to the following:

The pencil which is on the desk is mine.

After we left home, my cousin called.

I'm upset because you did not finish your homework.

Place examples of dependent clauses on the chalkboard similar to the ones below. Ask the learners to use their language arts texts and basal readers to locate additional examples.

because I was tardy Monday after we left the playground who do their homework when we left the movie if you finish your chores.

Have the learners work in pairs. Direct one learner to read aloud a clause and have the other learner form a complete sentence, using the clause. Guide the learners to repeat the process, reversing their roles.

Criterion

The learner will use a dependent clause in an oral sentence. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Attentive Listening: Standards for Listening Objective No. 4

Given a discussion, the learner will Objective identify standards for listening.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Tell the learners that attentive listening is an active, involved process which requires them to react and respond. Divide the learners into small groups. Have each group make a list of their classroom listening activities. Direct a group secretary to write the list on the chalkboard. Compare the lists, noting similarities and differences.

Point out the importance of listening and state the necessity of identifying standards in order to improve listening skills. Lead a discussion of listening standards and have the learners contribute to the development of a chart similar to the following:

STANDARDS FOR ATTENTIVE LISTENING

- . Focus on the speaker or activity.
- . Tune out distracting sounds.
- . Identify the speaker's main ideas.
- . Note the use of vocabulary.
- . Check the sequential presentation of ideas.
- . Maintain eye contact with the speaker, if possible.
- . Ask clarifying questions, if necessary.

Place the chart in a prominent location and refer to it before beginning important listening activities. Remind the learners to apply the standards appropriately.

Criterion

The learner will identify standards for listening. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Provide opportunities for the learners to listen to introductions of speakers at school assemblies and on WBEZ programs. Ask them to note the elements in the introductions.

Prepare a list of important persons. Ask the learners to add to the list. Have each learner select a name from the list and prepare a three-minute introduction for him/her. Show them how to use library reference sources for obtaining background information on their speakers. Have the learners present their introductions in small groups. Ask the listeners to make sure the pertinent elements are included in the introductions.

Recognizing Need for Listening

Objective Given listening situations, the learner will recognize the need for critical listening.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Point out the need for critical listening in everyday activities. Show how critical listening takes oral communications apart in order to determine their true messages and meanings.

Discuss the terms fact and opinion. Explain that a factual statement can be verified, but an opinion cannot be verified. List fact and opinion statements on the chalkboard. Have the learners add statements to the list. Relate the statements to content units of study whenever possible.

New York City is larger than Chicago. (fact)
Illinois is the best state in the Midwest. (opinion)
Basketball is the best sport in our gym program. (opinion)
We have 35 students in our room. (fact)
My teacher gives homework every night. (fact)

Discuss the statements and stress the importance of not accepting opinion statements as factual. Guide the learners to ask questions politely when verifying opinion statements.

Point out the use of persuasion in advertising. Have the learners listen to specific commercials on radio and television at an appointed time. Direct them to listen critically in order to identify the following types of propaganda: glittering words, body language, and famous personalities. Provide an opportunity for the learners to discuss this listening activity in small groups. Help them recognize a pertinent need for critical listening in everyday activities.

Place a graph similar to the one below on the chalkboard. Give the learners the following directions for completing the graph:

First, prepare a sheet of paper for listing 20 names of people and favorite ice cream flavors.

Then ask 20 classmates, friends, or relatives their favorite ice cream flavor and list the information on the sheet.

Finally, group the names according to favorite ice cream flavors as indicated on the chart.

> A Beautiful Fall Day by Margery Vos

The air was crisp and cold as I stepped out of the house to start my walk to school. The air nipped slightly at my nose and ears, but not enough to make me cold. The October sky was deep blue and cloudless. The slanted rays of the sun streamed through the treetops, although they didn't offer much warmth. As I walked along, the only sound was the crunching and crackling of leaves beneath my feet. A lone leaf fluttered to the ground ahead of me. Everything was beautiful and quiet.

From Freckled Fantasies, published by the Board of Education of the City of Chicago, 1979.

Read the selection once and direct the learners to sketch the details in the selection.

Answers

Responses can vary. Details can include: a house, a learner, a school, a deep blue and cloudless sky, slanted rays of the sum, leaves on the ground, a lone leaf fluttering to the ground.

Criterion

Informational Listening: Following Sequential Order

Objective No. 3

Objective

Given a selection orally, the learner will write the main points in sequential order.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Remind the learners that the planned arrangement of main points in a selection is called the sequential order. Read a selection similar to the one below to the learners. Instruct them to listen to the selection so that they can write its main points in sequential order. Encourage them to take notes, listing pertinent information.

The Giant Yo-Yo by Herman Jones

A star fell to earth. When it hit the ground, it burst open and a small yo-yo rolled out.

At a playground nearby, children were busy with toy cars and yo-yos. The Star Yo-Yo rolled over to the playground and began to eat all the toy cars and other yo-yos. The more it ate, the bigger it got.

It rolled out of the playground and headed for the nearest toy store. It ate all the little toys in the store, and it liked plastic toys most of all.

Newsmen from all the television stations took pictures of the Star Yo-Yo, and they talked about how large it had grown. Scientists from all over the world tried to figure out what to do with it.

The President of the United States spoke on television, and he asked children to help the country by giving all their toys to the giant yo-yo. He promised that the government would replace all the toys that were fed to the Star Yo-Yo. He also said that if someone did not figure out something to do with the yo-yo, that it would have to be destroyed.

However, the children did not want them to destroy the Star Yo-Yo, for they liked it very much. Then a strange thing happened. The yo-yo stopped growing. The President then decided that the Star Yo-Yo should be placed in a zoo.

Today people from all over the world come to see the Star Yo-Yo, and the children feed it little toy cars and yo-yos.

From Freckled Fantasies, published by the Board of Education of the City of Chicago, 1979.

Direct the learners to write the main points of the selection after reading it aloud to them one time.

Answers

The sequence of the main points in the selection follow: a star fell to earth and a small yo-yo rolled out of it; the yo-yo ate toys and grew larger; people tried to figure out what to do with the giant yo-yo; the yo-yo stopped growing; the President placed the yo-yo in a zoo; people come to visit it, and children feed it toy cars and yo-yos.

Criterion

The learner will write the main points of an oral selection in sequential order with 80 percent accuracy.

Informational Listening: Following Sequential Order Objective No. 4

Given an oral selection, the learner will Objective summarize the details in sequential order.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Explain how details are used to support important facts in selections. Read aloud selections from content area texts and help the learners recognize the use of details. Tell the learners that sometimes the sequential order of the details in a passage may be important. Direct the learners to listen to the following suggested selection while you read it aloud one time:

Chicago Area Animals

Chipmunks and rabbits are animals which live in wooded sections and open fields in the Chicago area. Chipmunks are small, gray-brown animals with rodent-type heads containing cheek pouches. They have short arms and legs with sharp claws. Rabbits are small animals with soft, flexible bodies. They have rodent-type heads with split upper lips and sensitive whiskers. Their strong hind legs have flat heels.

Encourage the learners to take notes while you read the selection aloud. Instruct them to summarize the details in sequential order.

Answers

A summary of details in sequential order may include the following: Chipmunks and rabbits live in the Chicago area. Chipmunks are (1) small, gray-brown animals, (2) with rodent-type heads containing cheek pouches, and (3) short arms and legs with sharp claws. (1) small animals with soft, flexible bodies, (2) with rodent-type heads containing split upper lips and sensi-Criterion tive whiskers, and (3) strong hind legs with flat heels.

The learner will summarize the details in an oral selection in sequential order. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Objective Given a listening experience, the learner will identify the main idea.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Tell the learners that sometimes the main idea in a selection is not directly stated, but it is implied. State that it is necessary to "read between the lines" or to make inferences from the related details in order to identify the main idea in these situations. Show the learners how to infer by reading the following statements and questions:

Statement: The old woman stood on the street corner in her shabby clothes, selling flowers.

Questions: How rich do you think the old woman was?

What is your reason for your answer?

Help the learners become adept at detecting clues to implied meanings. Use riddles to further develop this skill.

Read the following paragraph and direct the learners to identify the implied main idea:

I think I'll find out soon enough if I'm going to like it here. Mr. Holis seems nice enough, but I may have some trouble with one of my classes. I felt terrible when my answers to the problems were wrong. Mother says I'll catch up. I hope she's right.

Answer

Main Idea: The student has started in a new school and is having a problem with math.

Criterion

The learner will identify the main idea with 100 percent accuracy.

Tell the learners that a topic sentence states the main idea of a paragraph. Point out that the other sentences support and develop the topic sentence. Explain that the topic sentence may come at the beginning, the middle, or the end of the paragraph. Read passages to the learners, pointing out the topic sentences. Then write the following paragraph on the chalk board, and have the learners identify the topic sentence.

Buggsy eyed Debbie intently as she took an apple from her lunch box. She had brought a sandwich and a brownie, too, but Buggsy, who had eaten his lunch at recess time, looked so hungry that Debbie gave them to him. Now, after having devoured the sandwich and the brownie, Buggsy wanted a bite of that apple. Buggsy's appetite seemed never to be satisfied.

Answer:

Given a selection, the learner will write an appropriate title.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

List the titles of familiar selections from basal readers and language arts texts on the chalkboard. Point out that the titles indicate the main ideas or the themes of the selections in a concise manner. Read aloud a selection such as the one suggested below, omitting the title. Direct the learners to write an appropriate title for the selection. List the titles on the chalkboard and determine if they are appropriate. Compare them with the author's title.

Flint by Christine McAleer

My dog was the best friend I ever had. His name was Flint. He will never fade out of my mind.

We would always run along the beach, and his soft, sleek fur would shine in the sunlight. We had some very good times which I will never forget.

When I was feeling down, I would sit by the window. Flint would always come along, put his paw on my shoulder, and bring my spirits up.

Flint was a very beautiful dog, too. He was a Shetland sheep dog, kind of like a collie. He was brown, black, and white with a long, white neck.

One day Flint was not feeling well. I took him to the vet. His illness was a painful, fatal disease. He lost a lot of weight and went from a healthy 73-pound dog to a sick 25-pound dog. People stopped me on the street and asked me if I ever fed him.

Soon the question became whether to let him live in pain and misery or to have him put to sleep. The majority of my family said to put him to sleep, but I said no.

Then I realized I was being cruel. I agreed with what they said. It was the only thing we could do to keep him from suffering. It was then I realized how very important he was to me.

Flint died at three o'clock on Thursday, May 17, 1974. It was the saddest day of my life.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Explain that descriptions may tell about the properties or characteristics of persons, places, and things in detail. Point out that a description of an object may include-- what the object looks like how the object feels what the object tastes like.

Identify an object in the classroom and elicit descriptive words related to it from the learners. List the words on the chalkboard and have the learners use them in oral descriptions.

Place a collection of objects in a box or a bag. Tell the learners that they will listen to a description of an unidentified object; then identify it. Select an object from the box, but do not expose it to the learners. Describe the object. Call on a volunteer to identify it. Help the learners state accurate descriptions of other objects. Use the following example:

It is long, slender, and round. It is made of wood, metal, rubber, and graphite.

Answer

THE WHALING INDUSTRY

The colonial whaling industry began in Massachusetts during the 1760s. The right whale was hunted at first because it provided whalebone used for umbrellas and various types of handles. However, by 1815 the sperm whale became the focus of American whalers.

The industry peaked in the 1830s. Whale oil was important for lamps and cooking. However, the expanding petroleum industry brought about the decline of whaling. The development of kerosene provided a cheaper fuel and decreased the demand for whale oil.

Conservation regulations are used to limit whaling and to prevent the extinction of an endangered species. The United States Congress passed legislation which prevented the importation of whale products.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Help the learners differentiate between fact and fantasy in stories by grouping the ideas or happenings in the selections as fantastic or possible. Write the titles of the selections suggested below on the chalkboard. Tell the learners that you will read these selections aloud and will ask them to identify one as fact and one as fantasy.

THE EARTH

The earth is very large in size when compared with the size of the people and of the plants and animals that live on it. It has many different kinds of climates, ranging from very cold at the North and South Poles, to very hot at the equator. Some plants and animals live in all parts of the world. Some that live in the North are adapted to a cold climate, and others that live in the torrid zone are adapted to a hot . climate. To survive, living things must be adapted to the conditions in which they live. Man is able to live in many climates because he has learned to clothe himself, to use heat in cold regions, air conditioning in hot regions, and irrigation in dry regions. Man can, to quite an extent, control his environment. Plants and animals cannot do this. Only those kinds have survived that have been able to adjust to their environment.

Miss Kind

In a little village called Oakwall, there once lived an old woman. Having no children of her own, she adopted any and all animals that wandered to her cottage. Each animal was given a name that it answered to and a special place at the dinner table. The animals loved the old woman, but could not address her by name. They had never heard anyone call her name. One day the calico cat called a meeting of the animals to select a name for the old woman. After many animal speeches, the mouse spoke. "We are very lucky to be treated so royally by this kind woman, so why don't we call her 'Miss Kind'?" All the animals voted, "aye," and that is what the old lady is called today.

Objective No. 6

Objective

Given an opinion drawn from an oral selection, the learner will give evidence to support the opinion.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Explain the characteristics of fact and opinion. Point out that a factual statement's truth or falsity can be proved by pointing to specific information. Show how different opinions can be stated on the same question. Stress that an opinion reflects an individual's feeling on a specific matter. Read aloud the following selection and have the learners identify the evidence which supports the opinion.

Chicago, an Exciting City

Chicago is a very exciting city. The lakefront, with its parks, beaches, and boats, is a beautiful sight. Planes can be seen taking off and landing continually at its three airports: Meigs, O'Hare, and Midway. Boys and girls, teenagers, and men and women are constantly riding bicycles, jogging along paths, playing on tennis courts, and fishing from the shore at the city's many rivers, lakefront areas, and other recreational areas. Many like to stop and sample a "taste" of the city's famous ethnic foods. At night the lights from the tall buildings make Chicago a city of lights. From far across the city we can see the top of the Hancock Building and the Sears Tower. Chicagoans are able to attend plays, concerts, sports events, operas, and ballets in their exciting city.

Opinion: Chicago is an exciting city.

Answers

Evidence to support the opinion: 1. The lakefront is a beautiful sight. 2. Planes can be seen taking off and landing at the airports. 3. People are riding, jogging, playing, and fishing. 4. People are "tasting" ethnic foods. 5. The city lights up at night. 6. There are many recreational activities for people to attend.

Criterion

The learner will give evidence from an oral selection to support a written opinion. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Remind the learners that a riddle is a type of word puzzle. Point out the importance of using details to answer the riddles. Read the riddle suggested below to the learners, omitting the final line. Ask them to answer the riddle. Elicit the details which helped them infer the answer.

A Riddle by Jackie Shane

It's white and fluffy, everything nice.
When melted, it turns into slippery ice.
It falls from the sky, turning here, floating there
But it comes only when there is crisp, cold air.
It's here in the winter, and stays for some time;
Some countries don't have it, but it comes to mine.
Guess what it is, I'm sure you know,
It comes by the flake, and we call it snow.

From The Green Taste of Life, published by the Board of Education, City of Chicago, 1977.

Objective Given oral advertisements, the learner will infer answers to questions.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Read several selections from the classified advertising section of a newspaper. Elicit from the learners information about the selection which is not specifically stated. Use an example similar to the following:

LOST: A one-year-old cat. It has long orange, black, and white hair. It has one green eye and one gray eye. It is declawed and has a rhinestone collar. Its name is Amber. Reward $50.00. Call 423-4867.

Prepare questions similar to the following and have the learners answer them in writing:

- 1. Why is this a valuable cat?
- 2. Would you worry about this cat scratching the furniture?
- 3. Could you return this cat directly to its owner?
- 4. Do you think that this is a house cat? Why?

Answars

Responses can vary. Suggested responses are—

1. The cat is valuable because the owner will pay a reward for its return. 2. No, the cat's claws have been removed. 3. No, you must telephone because an address is not given. 4. Yes, because outside (alley) cats seldom wear fancy collars. Cats that live outside need their claws for self-defense.

Critical Listening: Predicting Outcomes Objective No. 12

Given a science concept and a suggested activity, the Objective learner will predict the outcome of the activity.

Tecching/Learning Strategy

Discuss concepts presented in a science unit of study as indicated below. Have the learners complete the suggested activities in small groups. Ask each group to predict an outcome for the activity.

Concept 1: All matter appears in three basic states (solid, liquid, or gas), each of which has its own characteristics. Solids have a definite shape and volume until something happens to change them.

Activity: Place ice cubes in a tray on a table in the room and predict what will occur.

Concept 2: Liquids have a definite volume, but they do not have a definite shape.

Activity: Use containers of various shapes, such as a cola bottle, a quart jar, or a water glass, and pour the same amount of water into each. Predict the outcome.

Concept 3: Plants and animals are especially fitted for the environment in which they live.

Activity: Place a plant in a dark closet for three days. Do not water it. Predict what will occur.

Answers

1. The warm air will change the ice from a solid to a liquid, thereby changing the shape. 2. The water in each container will be a different shape, but the volume will be the same. 3. The leaves and stem will wilt and droop.

Recreational Listening: Recognition of Emotion

Objective No.

Objective

Given an oral selection containing imagery, the learner will identify and explain the meanings of the expressions.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Read the following story, instructing the learners to listen for words that describe the main character's feelings. Read the following story:

Because this was such a rainy day, the boys at Camp Kellogg were confined to their cabins. They were entertaining themselves by telling of personal experiences. "Mike," said Terry, "tell them what you told me about those dogs. My skin tingles just thinking about it!"

"There is this Mrs. Green on our block," Mike began, "who feeds every stray dog in town. One day she asked me to go to the store for her. As I entered her yard with the bag of groceries, I was stopped in my tracks by a low, angry-sounding growl. I opened my mouth to call Mrs. Green, but no sound would come. As the growl grew louder and more angry, I knew that I had to do something; but what? I was trembling so that I dropped the bag. Then my heart stopped as six ferocious-looking dogs pounced upon the bag and began to gobble up its contents. I gingerly crept out of the yard and managed to stagger home. I don't remember to this day how I got up the stairs and into my bed. That was really a close call!"

Answers

Responses will vary. Possible responses and meanings follow:

1. "My skin tingles just thinking about it." (The memory is still frightening.) 2. "I was stopped in my tracks." (He was startled.)

3. "I opened my mouth to call..., but no sound came out." (He was so frightened that his words choked in his throat.) 4. "Then my heart stopped..." (He thought that this was the end.) 5. "I gingerly crept out of the yard and staggered to my room." (He was so weak and afraid that he could not run.) 6. "That was really a close call!" (He came close to being bitten by the dogs.)

Criterion

The learner will identify and explain meanings of the expressions in oral selections. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

In the Year 2275*
by Naushina Rahman

As you should know, this is the year 2275. I'm going to play with my friends. ... I don't really mean out. I mean I'm going in the indoor garden. Nowadays we don't have gardens outside. We live in the sky. We also have robots working for us. Whatever we want, we tell it to the robot. I'm in an elevator now; I'm going down 7024 floors. seems like a large number, but the elevator takes you down or up 8000 floors in less than a minute. Outside there are only roads. When we go on a field trip, we go to the moon or to Mars. We visit each other's planets all the time. When my father goes to work, he uses his jet. We eat an instant breakfast. It is a warm pill. After it is warmed, we put it on a plate; then we put 2 drops of water on it, and it turns out to be a bacon and egg and milk breakfast. After we eat our breakfast, I give the robot some oil to drink because it makes a good breakfast.

Objective Given a listening selection, the learner will identify the examples of similes and metaphors.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Remind the learners that a metaphor is an implied comparison between dissimilar objects or ideas and a simile is a stated comparison between dissimilar objects or ideas, using the terms like or as. Use examples from previous lessons and review the meanings of the figures of speech. Instruct the learners to listen to a portion of a conversation to note the use of figures of speech. Read the following and ask the learners to identify the similes and metaphors.

"Yes, Janet, I did say that Tommy's mouth is like a motorboat, but I didn't mean to offend him," explained Joy. "It's just that, well, he just talks too much."

"I feel a bit sorry for him," said Janet. "The kids are now calling him 'Motormouth' because of what you said." "Well, they all know what he's like," Joy argued. "Whenever there's a private conversation going on, elephant ears is always around. Those ears perk up like a mosquito's antennae while he tries to act as deaf as a doorknob." "Even so," said Janet, "I think you owe him an apology." "Alright, already!" cried Joy. "I don't know why you're such a mother hen with Tommy."

Objective Given a subject to talk about, the learner will limit his/her talk to that subject.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Provide a model talk which has relevant and irrelevant information. Read it orally to the learners and provide a written copy after it has been read. Have the learners underline the irrelevant items. Discuss the distracting effect caused by irrelevant information.

The American Flag

The first American flag did not look the same as today's flag. The colors were red, white, and blue, but it did not have as many stars as our present flag. The English flag is also red, white, and blue. It is made from the flags of England, Scotland, and Ireland. The 13 stripes represent the first 13 states in the United States of America. The English flag is often referred to as the Union Jack. Those states are also referred to as the 13 original colonies. The English flag has no stars.

Irrelevant Information

The English flag is also red, white and blue. It is made from the flags of England, Scotland, and Ireland. The English flag is often referred to as the Union Jack. The English flag has no stars.

Have the learners select a subject and prepare a talk related to it. Show them how to use the five Ws format to prepare their talk (who, what, where, when, and why). Provide an opportunity for them to give their talks in small groups. Check to see that their talks relate to their subjects.

Criterion

The learner will limit a talk to a given subject. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Objective Given a subject to speak about, the learner will plan an effective introduction.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Provide many opportunities for the learners to observe and discuss effective and interesting oral presentations. Have the learners listen to appropriate radio and television programs during school hours.

Instruct the learners to view television news programs as part of a homework assignment and observe the introductions used on the programs.

Discuss the function of an introduction:

To set the scene or purpose for the talk

To capture the audience's attention

To introduce the characters, story line, or topic.

Instruct the learners that the introduction captures the attention of the listener and introduces the topic. Tell the learners that they may use a surprise beginning, a quotation, a poem, or a question to begin an introduction. Demonstrate to the learners an attention-getting introduction and its relation to a topic. Have the learners suggest topics. List topics on the chalkboard and have the learners practice making introductions.

Use the following example of an introduction:

A well-known story tells of a small animal who thought the sky was falling. In the winter of 1978, the people of Chicago were sure the sky had fallen.

Comets are part of the solar system, and they also travel around the sun. They are unusual in appearance and are composed of solids and gases. These are close together in the "head" but are spread farther apart in the "tail" of the comet. The tail becomes visible to man as the comet approaches the sun and always points away from it. The comet's tail is probably "blown" (away from the sun) by either the pressures of radiant energy or streams of hydrogen particles from the sun or by both. The orbit of the comet is an extremely long oval with the sun nearer one end. Some comets have very long tails; others appear to have no tails at all. Comets have no appreciable gravitational effect upon planets. The most famous comet was Halley's Comet, 1910, which appears every 75 years.

Objective

Given an oral selection, the learner will use appropriate pitch, rate, and intonation to convey its meaning.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Tell the learner that the purpose of an oral reading is to allow the sharing of ideas and enjoyment. Peview with the learners the responsibilities of the speaker:

To choose a selection that meets the needs and interests of the listener

To vary voice in pitch, rate, and tone

To maintain eye contact with the listener

To use body language appropriate to the selection

To use a pleasant voice with adequate volume.

Read selections to the learners to demonstrate the techniques listed above. Consider the following stories from The Arbuthnot Anthology of Children's Literature for brevity, simplicity, and variation in language:

The Banyan Deer (page 166)
Momotaro: Boy of the Peach (page 174)
The Golden Touch (page 250)
The Real Princess (page 302)

Objective No. 6

Objective

Given a definition of exaggeration, the learner will relate a personal experience, exaggerating the details.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Explain to the learners that exaggeration (hyperbole) is a figure of speech which is used to emphasize information. State examples of exaggeration such as the following:

The waves are as high as mountains. This box weighs a ton.

Read a tall tale to the learners. Have them identify examples of exaggeration. Relate a personal experience to the learners in a factual manner. Retell the experience in the form of a tall tale, using exaggeration.

Direct the learners to take a personal experience and make it into a humorous tale through the use of exaggeration. Have the learners present their stories in small groups. Remind the learners to present their stories in a serious manner so that the humor and exaggeration will be effective.

Criterion

The learner will relate a personal experience, using exaggeration. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Provide a variety of content-related topics that may be used for oral reports. Have the learners select a topic and prepare a report, using reference material. Direct the learners to use the following suggested guidelines for preparing and making an oral report. Have them present reports and cite reference materials used.

Preparing an Oral Report

- 1. Choose a topic.
- 2. Take notes on your topic from reference books.
- 3. Study your notes.
- 4. List the order in which you will present your material.
- 5. Write the source of your information in your notes.
- 6. List questions that should be answered in the report.

Making the Oral Report

- 1. Introduce the topic with a statement of the main idea.
- 2. Give details in sequential order.
- 3. Limit comments to the assigned topic.
- 4. Make a closing statement to summarize the report.
- 5. Speak clearly, using an appropriate voice.
- 6. Give reference(s) for the source(s) of information after the report.

Have the learners present their reports in small groups. Check to see that they cite references used.

Criterion

The learner will cite references used in an oral report. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Given a group of selected sentences, the learner will relate each pronoun to its correct antecedent.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Review pronouns with the learners. Remind them that pronouns are words that may be used in place of nouns. Tell the learners that an antecedent is a word or words for which the pronoun is substituting. Write sentences such as the following on the chalkboard and show the learners what word or words the pronouns refer to or replace. Draw one line under the pronoun and two lines under the antecedent.

When Ralph finishes his homework, he will play football. Carol knew that she passed the test.

William lost the book. He was happy when Miss Smith found the book.

Discuss the sentences with the learners. Point out that an antecedent of a pronoun may be in the same sentence or in a preceding sentence. Write sentences such as the following on the chalkboard:

- 1. Kim said that she expected to win the trophy.
- 2. Miss Sung saw Robert and Terry and gave them the books.
- 3. As the airplane moved, it made a loud noise.
- 4. The player took the ball and threw it in the basket.

Write the word proofread on the chalkboard. Pronounce the word as it is being written. Guide the learners in understanding that when we proofread, we read material in order to find and correct mistakes. Write sentences similar to the following on the chalkboard or on a transparency:

During november Marsha attended the lekture series at the museum

During November Marsha attended the lecture series at the museum.

Discuss the sentences with the learners. Have them identify the errors in the first sentence and the corrections in the second sentence.

Explain to the learners that proofreading is the checking of written work for the purpose of correcting errors. Prepare a proofreading chart similar to the one suggested below.

	PROOFREADING CHART

Objective

Given quotations to write, the learner will capitalize the proper words in the quotations.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Discuss with the learners the use of quotation marks (" ") before and after the exact words of a speaker. Point out quotations in basal readers and language arts textbooks. Show how quoted statements frequently come at the beginning of a sentence. Point out how they may come at the end of a sentence. Tell the learners that the first word of a quoted statement begins with a capital letter. Place examples of quotations on the chalkboard, as suggested below, and discuss them with the learners.

"Write a make-believe story," said Mrs. Harper.
"It's time to do our homework," said the twins.
"What?"
Mother asked, "Have you cleaned your room?"
Tom said, "It's fun living in Chicago."

Have the learners add quotations to the list, using correct capitalization and punctuation.

Place sentences similar to the ones suggested below on the chalkboard and direct the learners to capitalize them correctly.

- 1. "may we go shopping?" asked Jean.
- 2. "we flew to the area in a silver helicopter," Tony stated.

Objective

Given examples, the learner will write sentences, using figures of speech.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Discuss the following figures of speech with the learners: metaphor, simile, and hyperbole. Prepare a chart similar to the one below to show how they are used in sentences.

	Figures of Speech
Metaphor	A comparison between different objects or ideas. (Example: The ship ploughs the lake.
Simile	A comparison between different objects or ideas joined by the words like or as . (Example: Her eyes were as large as saucers.)
Hyperbole	An exaggeration used to emphasize a point. (Example: His backpack weighs a ton.)

Explain the figures of speech on the chart to the learners, and point out the sentence examples. Direct the learners to find and to share similar examples from their basal readers, language arts textbooks, and library books.

Instruct the learners to write sentences, incorporating these figures of speech. Provide an opportunity for the learners to share their sentences in small groups.

Criterion

The learner will write sentences, using figures of speech. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Summarizing

Objective No. 18

Objective Given a selection, the learner will summarize it.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Tell the learners that a summary is a brief report that gives the main points of a selection or a presentation in a brief manner. Stress the importance of including the main ideas in a summary. Place a selection similar to the following on the chalkboard or a transparency. Ask the learners to write a summary of it. Remind them that the summary should be brief.

A Family by Tammy Rosenfeld

A family is more important than anything or anyone in the whole world. I love my mother because she does everything for me. Sometimes I get mad at her, but I look back and say, "If it weren't for her, I wouldn't be here today." I love my father because he helps me with my homework and lots of other things. I love my sister, because when I am sad she cheers me up and when I am bored she says, "Let's play a game." That's why a family is important.

My Sister* by Edmond Rodgers

Today when I came home from school, I was met by a little girl with a big smile. She said, "Hi, Eddie, do you want to play with me?"

I walk into my bedroom to put down my papers and hang my coat in the closet. When I step into my room, I see about ten dolls on my bed. A couple of them are on the floor. I open my dresser to get something, and there is another doll in it. I fall over play dishes, get up and trip over a doll buggy.

I play with Lori. She is the mother and I am the baby. Good grief! If my friends saw me they would laugh. After a few minutes, I become a horse and Lori rides me.

At last it is 5:00 o'clock. Sesame Street is on TV. I have one hour off. She loves this program.

Sometimes my cousin, Jimmy, gets mad about Lori and doesn't want her around. He fights with her over a balloon that is her balloon. She is afraid he will keep it, so she tries to get it. Then I say, "Give it to her, Jim." He goes home mad. I think he is acting more like a baby than she is. Lori is three years old and doesn't understand about sharing, but I will teach her about it. it when I teach her about colors and things.

Select a familiar story from the basal reader or a library book. Have the learners become very familiar with the beginning of the story. Discuss the setting, character(s), and the problem.

Review the structure of a story: beginning, middle, and ending. Discuss incidents which occur in the beginning of the story being used in this lesson. Consider the development of the plot in the middle of the story.

Point out that the problem which was presented in the beginning of the story is resolved in the ending. Discuss the author's ending. Ask how the author solved the problem.

Have the learners suggest an alternative ending to the story, and point out that the story might have ended in several ways.

Ask each learner to write an alternative ending to the story. Provide an opportunity for the learners to share their endings.

Criterion

The learner will write an alternate ending to a familiar story. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Stories, Poetry, Plays, and/or Scripts

Objective Given an interesting experience, the learner will write about an actual event from the experience, using who, what, when, where, and why.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Review story writing techniques for organization, proper sequence, appropriate selection of supporting details for each main idea, and the use of who, what, when, where, and why.

Discuss some experience which the learners have shared: a field trip, a school play or festival, or sports event. Develop orally with them an account of one of the events, emphasizing the use of good story writing techniques as mentioned above.

Have each learner write about an event from a personal experience. Prepare a bulletin board display to exhibit the learners' writing.

Criterion

The learner will write about an actual event from a personal experience, using who, what, when, where, and why. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Objective No. 16

Objective

Given an event or topic, the learner will write a news story.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Use a "Current Events" bulletin board to motivate the learners to write news stories about current and meaningful events or stories. Encourage the learners to gather information for the news story from encyclopedias, newspapers, magazines, and radio and television broadcasts.

Show the learners how to write a news story, using the five W's format (who, what, where, when, and why). Stress the importance of using organization and detail in their stories. Select an appropriate story from a newspaper. Write it on the chalkboard, including the title. Discuss the story with the learners, showing how the five W's are used to organize the information. Point out how the title briefly capsulizes the story.

Direct the learners to select a current event or topic and to write a news story about it. Have them make a five W's chart, as indicated below, to organize their information. Show how the information gathered under "who and what" may be used to begin the story; how the "where and when" information may be used as the body of the story; and how the "why" information may be used as the conclusion.

Objective Given an interview situation, the learner will write a news story.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Explain to the learners that an interview is a meeting usually between two people. Tell them that during the meeting one person asks questions, and the other person responds to the questions. Help them understand that the interview may be related to a special event or happening.

Stress the importance of asking good questions throughout the interview in order to obtain appropriate information for writing a news story. Suggest questions that begin with who, what, when, where, why, and how. Direct the learners to write the responses to the questions. Show them how this information will facilitate writing their news story.

Divide the learners into pairs. Have one learner be an interviewer and the other an interviewee.

Divide the learners into pairs. Have them take turns interviewing each other. Direct them to use the suggested questions and relate them to a specific topic or event. Have the learners write a news story, using the information from the interview. Check the news stories to determine if the question format was followed and if the information is accurate.

Criterion

The learner will write a news story after conducting an interview. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Objective Given instruction, the learner will write a narrative composition.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Explain to the learners that a narrative composition requires a plan for telling a story. Instruct them that the plan should include deciding on a topic or theme, determining the character(s), selecting the setting, establishing a sequence of events, and developing an interesting introduction, body, and conclusion.

Place the suggested chart on the chalkboard to assist the learners in organizing their narrative composition. Tell them they may find it easier to write the narration if they select a familiar topic. Show the learners samples of narrative writing in language arts textbooks. Explain the importance of using an interesting introduction and conclusion and vivid details.

Objective

Given examples, the learner will write a poem, using alliteration.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Explain to the learners that alliteration is the repetition of a sound in two or more words. Tell them that the sound is usually at the beginning of a word. Read the following selections to the learners and point out the examples of alliteration. Lead the learners to the generalization that alliteration may be used in poetry or prose.

Waterfall* by Eric Newman

Sparkling water tumbling upon silver rocks.
Delicate ferns glistening with morning dew,
Sunlight filtering through the heavy trees,
Etching a faint pattern on the long grass,
Brown rabbits hopping by the small wild flowers.

I Always Wanted To Be* by Chris Yracheta

I always wanted to be an artist because as I look outside I just love the horizon and the sunset and the moon. I would paint the sky the beautiful blue that it is. I would paint the sun bright gold, the moon yellow, and the stars shiny silver.

I would draw, sketch, and paint beautiful paintings. I would do portraits of my family and friends. I could also paint out my fantasies, and even draw houses and buildings like an architect. I would even draw Mount Rushmore. I could draw all the other landmarks like the Tower of London and the Tower of Pisa and the Statue of Liberty.

It would make me happy if my career turned out right.

^{*}From Freckled Fantasies, published by the Board of Education, City of Chicago, 1979.

Discuss the examples of alliteration in the selections and show how it may be used to produce a musical effect or draw words together in order to give a special effect or emphasis. Have the learners find examples of alliteration in their basal readers, language arts textbooks, and library books. Provide an opportunity for the learners to share their examples with the class.

Place a list of themes on the chalkboard, such as seasons, animals, or holidays. Ask the learners to select a topic/title related to a theme and write a poem about it, using alliteration. Prepare a bulletin board display of the poems. Provide an opportunity for the learners to read the poems and note the alliteration.

Answers

Waterfall: sparkling/silver, delicate/dew, through/trees

I Always Wanted To Be: always/artist, beautiful/blue, stars/shiny/silver, family/friends

Criterion

The learner will write a poem, using alliteration. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Read the following limerick to the learners. Write it on the chalkboard, and provide an opportunity for the learners to discuss this verse form. Lead them to the understanding that the rhyme pattern for the limerick is aabba.

A dancer, while dancing in Bleu, Noticed a large hole in his shoe. Said his partner, "Don't pout, Or show it about, Or the others may notice it, too."

Have the learners find examples of limericks in their basal readers, language arts textbooks, library books, and magazines. Ask them to share their limericks with the class.

Direct the learners to write an original limerick. Provide an opportunity for the learners to illustrate their limericks. Prepare a class scrapbook, listing the limericks under various topics. Place the scrapbook in the room library or a learning center. Provide an opportunity for the learners to read the limericks.

I, The Cloud*
by Michelle Neal

I, the cloud,
A beautiful thing,
I, the cloud,
I, too, can sing.

I, the cloud,
Drop raindrops galore.
 Softly they beat
On the earth's hard floor.

I, the cloud, See good and bad. I, the cloud, Sometimes get mad.

When I get mad,
I shout up a storm.
Sometimes I'm so angry,
That ships and boats are torn.

Then I realize
How silly I've been.
So I make a rainbow
And I'm happy again.

Objective Given a tall tale, the learner will contribute to its dramatization.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Read a tall tale from a basal reader, language arts textbook, The Arbuthnot Anthology of Children's Literature, or a story written by a learner. Discuss the tall tale with the learners, and show them how to prepare a dramatization of the tale. Include the following in the discussion: number of characters, setting, dialogue, scenery, props, and costumes. Establish a format for identifying the setting before writing the dialogue similar to the one suggested below:

The scene is the edge of a forest near a river. Storm clouds are gathering in the sky. Big Jim and Stormy are looking at the river.

Place the learners in small groups. Have each group select a tall tale to dramatize. Ask each group to identify the setting and write the dialogue for the characters involved. Remind them to prepare the scenery, props, and costumes. Involve all the learners in the dramatization. Allow each group to present its dramatization to the class.

Criterion

The learner will contribute to the dramatization of a tall tale. Teacher judgment will determine proficiency.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Tell the learners that a dramatization involves telling a story through an acting out process. Explain that this process includes the following steps:

identifying an interesting event from a literature selection or a content area text.

selecting characters

dividing the dramatization into acts

planning the action

writing the dialogue

preparing costumes, scenery, and props.

Discuss the dramatization with the learners. Include the above steps in the discussion. Divide the learners into groups to work on writing the dramatization, preparing scenery and costumes, and dramatizing the event. Encourage the learners to have as many speaking parts as possible. Determine the format for writing the dramatization, and provide each learner or group with a copy. Have all the learners contribute to the dramatization of the event. Objective Given instruction, the learner will write a script for a television commercial.

Teaching/Learning Strategy

Explain to the learners that television commercials attempt to persuade the viewer to purchase a product or a service. Discuss the following persuasive techniques associated with television commercials: convincing language, famous people, and attractive settings. Have the learners list some of their favorite television commercials, and discuss how persuasion is used in them.

Have the learners select a product and write a script for a television commercial. Stress the importance of using convincing language and emphasize the positive aspects of their product. Remind them that the use of a visual, such as a pictorial illustration, may enhance their presentation.

Encourage the learners to study their scripts and practice their oral presentation in order to improve their diction, expression, and emphasis. Provide an opportunity for the learners to present their television commercials to the class. Check to see that the script is followed during the commercial.
