ABSTRACT

This booklet is a resource guide for use during Hispanic Heritage week and throughout the year to encourage learning about the many contributions Hispanics have made to our country. Part I describes Hispanic countries, giving brief facts about population, languages, racial and ethnic groups, capital city, religions, government, historical notes, geography, and economy. The countries are listed alphabetically except for Spain which comes first. Part II considers Hispanics in the United States and highlights four major groups. This section includes a brief demographic overview, followed by specific discussion of Mexican Americans, Puerto Ricans, Cubans, and Dominicans, with demographic data for each group. Part III gives global contributions and achievements of Hispanics, first from an historical perspective, focusing primarily on individuals. These achievements are listed in chronological order from 1900-1984. Next are achievements in politics, including data on number of elected officials of Hispanic origin in cities and states, with related demographic data on proportion of Hispanics in the local or state population. This is followed by information on Hispanics' achievements in sports and by miscellaneous facts of interest about Hispanics. Part IV consists of a brief reading list on Hispanics in the United States. Part V is a resource list of commissions, committees and councils on Hispanic affairs. Part VI lists the sources consulted for this information. (CG)

INTRODUCTION

Hispanic Heritage Week was created by a joint resolution of the Congress of the United States in 1968.

Hispanic Heritage Week provides a focal point for encouraging people to learn about the many contributions Hispanics have made to our country. It provides an opportunity for all Americans to celebrate a special chapter in our rich history and pay special tribute to a proud group of Americans for their accomplishments.

Men and women of Hispanic descent have played a vital role in the development and progress of the United States, opening new frontiers and establishing missions and settlements that were the forerunners of some of our most important and thriving urban and cultural centers.

Hispanics were among the first to settle this country and colonize all of the southwest and major portions of the south.

Hispanics continue to make significant and enduring contributions to this society. Hispanic accomplishments in science, technology, politics, the arts and other fields have greatly enhanced our American way of life.

Hispanic Heritage Week is also an opportune time to acknowledge and strengthen the bond between the United States and Latin America. From the American Southwest, which once belonged to Mexico, to the island of Puerto Rico, which once belonged to Spain, the United States has brought within its borders many elements of Spanish heritage. This booklet presents a brief overview of various aspects of Hispanic culture. It should serve as a resource for classroom teachers as they plan activities emphasizing Hispanic heritage, not just in September, but throughout the school year.

PART I: FACTS ABOUT HISPANIC COUNTRIES

SPAIN

POPULATION: 38,234,000 (1983)

CAPITAL: Madrid

LANGUAGES: Spanish (official)
Catalán, Galician, Basque

RELIGIONS: Predominantly Roman Catholic

RACIAL AND ETHNIC GROUPS:

Spanish (Castilian, Valencian, Andalusian, Asturian) 72%
Catalán 16%, Galician 8.2%, Basque 2.3%

GOVERNMENT: Constitutional Monarchy; Head of State: King Juan Carlos I

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

Spain was settled by Iberians, Basques and Celts, partly overrun by Carthaginians, and conquered by Rome c. 22 BC. The Visigoths, in power by the 5th century AD, adopted Christianity but by 711 AD lost power after the Islamic invasion from Africa. Christian reconquest from the north led to a Spanish nationalism. In 1469 the kingdoms of Aragón and Castile were united by the marriage of Ferdinand II and Isabella I, and the last Moorish power was broken by the fall of the kingdom of Granada in 1492. Spain became a bulwark of Roman Catholicism.

Spain obtained a colonial empire with the discovery of America by Columbus in 1492, and with the conquest of the Netherlands and parts of Italy and Germany. Spain lost its American colonies in the early 19th century. It lost Cuba, the Philippines and Puerto Rico during the Spanish-American War in 1898.

RELIGIONS: Roman Catholic 92%

RACIAL AND ETHNIC GROUPS: Europeans 97%, (Spanish-Italians), Indians,
Mestizos, Arabs

GOVERNMENT: Federal Republic; Head of State: Raúl Alfonsín

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

Nomadic Indians roamed the Pampas when Spaniards arrived in 1515-16, led by Juan Díaz Solís. Nearly all Indians were killed by the late 19th century. The colonialists won independence in 1810-19, and a long period of disorders ended in a strong centralized government.

Large scale Italian, German and Spanish immigration in the decades after 1880 spurred modernization, making Argentina the most prosperous, educated and industrialized of the major Latin American nations. Social reforms were enacted in the 1920s, but military coups prevailed from 1930 to 1946, until the election of General Juan Perón as President.

Eva Duarte, Perón's second wife, effected labor reforms along with him, and after his death in later years, Isabel Perón, his third wife, became the first woman head of state in the Western hemisphere.

GEOGRAPHY:

Argentina is four times the size of Texas, second largest country in South America.

Location: Occupies most of the southern part of South America.

POPULATION: 5,883,000 (1983)

CAPITAL: La Paz

LANGUAGES: Spanish (Official)
Quechua, Aymara

RELIGION: Roman Catholic 95%

RACIAL AND ETHNIC GROUPS: Quechua 39%, Aymara 25%, Mestizo 25-30%,
European 5-15%

GOVERNMENT: Republic; Head of State: Hernán Zuazo, President

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

The Incas conquered the region from earlier Indian inhabitants in the 13th Century. Spanish rule began in the 1530's and lasted until August 6, 1825. The country is named after Simón Bolívar.

In a series of wars, Bolivia lost its Pacific coast to Chile, the oilbearing Chaco to Paraguay and rubber-growing areas to Brazil in 1879-1935.

In July 1982, a military junta assumed power amid a growing economic crisis and foreign debt difficulties. In 1982, the junta resigned and the Congress took power. The Congress elected Hernán Zuazo as President.

RACIAL AND ETHNIC GROUPS: Mestizo 66%, Spanish 25%, Indian 5%

GOVERNMENT: Republic; Head of State: Augusto Pinochet Ugarte, President

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

Northern Chile was under Inca rule before the Spanish conquest in 1536-40. The southern Araucanian Indians resisted until the late 19th century. Independence was gained in 1810-18, under José de San Martín and Bernardo O'Higgins the latter, as supreme director 1817-23, sought social and economic reforms until he was deposed. Chile defeated Peru and Bolivia in 1836-39 and 1879-84 gaining mineral-rich northern land.

Eduardo Frei Montalva came into office in 1964, instituting social programs and gradual nationalization of foreign-owned mining companies. In 1970, Salvador Allende Gossens, a Marxist, became president.

A military junta seized power September 11, 1973, and Allende's regime ended.

Tierra del Fuego is the largest island in the archipelago of the same name at the southern tip of South America. It was discovered in 1520 by Magellan and named the Land of Fire because of its many Indian bonfires. Part of the island is in Chile, part in Argentina. Punta Arenas, on a mainland peninsula, is a center of sheep-raising and the world's southern-most city.

Urban: 43%

CAPITAL: San José

LANGUAGES: Spanish

RELIGIONS: Roman Catholic

RACIAL AND ETHNIC GROUPS: Spanish (with Mestizo minority)

GOVERNMENT: Democratic Republic; Head of State: Luis Alvarez, President

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

Guaymí Indians inhabited the area when Spaniards arrived in 1502. Independence came in 1821. Costa Rica seceded from Central American Federation in 1818. Since the civil war of 1948-49, there has been little social conflict, and free political institutions have been preserved.

Costa Rica, though still largely agricultural in nature, has achieved a relatively high standard of living and social services, and land ownership is widespread.

Urban: 67%

CAPITAL: Havana

LANGUAGES: Spanish

RELIGIONS: Roman Catholic 42%

RACIAL AND ETHNIC GROUPS: Spanish, African

GOVERNMENT: Communist State; Head of State: Fidel Castro Ruíz,
President

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

Some 50,000 Indians lived in Cuba when it was discovered by Columbus in 1492. Its name derives from the Indian Cubanacan. Except for British occupation of Havana, 1726-63, Cuba remained under Spanish rule until 1898. A slave-based sugar plantation economy developed in the 18th century aided by early mechanization of milling. Sugar remains the chief product and chief export despite government attempts to diversify.

A ten-year uprising ended in 1878 with guarantees of rights by Spain, which Spain failed to carry out. A full-scale movement under José Martí began in February 24, 1895.

The United States declared war on Spain in 1898. After this, the United States defeated Spain in the short Spanish-American War. Spain gave up all claims to Cuba. U.S. troops withdrew in 1902, but under 1903 and 1934 agreements, the United States leases a site at Guantanamo Bay in the southeast as a naval base. United States and other foreign investments acquired a dominant role in the economy. In 1952, former President Fulgencio Batista seized control and established a dictatorship. Former student leader Fidel Castro assembled a rebel band in 1956; guerrilla fighting intensified in 1958. Batista fled in January 1, 1959 and in the resulting political vacuum Castro took power as Premier on February 16.

GEOGRAPHY:

CAPITAL: Santo Domingo

LANGUAGES: Spanish

RELIGIONS: Roman Catholic 98%

RACIAL AND ETHNIC GROUPS: Caucasian 16%, Mulatto 73%, Black 11%

GOVERNMENT: Representative Democracy; Head of State: Salvador Jorge Blanco

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

Carib and Arawak Indians inhabited the island of Hispaniola when Columbus landed in 1492. The city of Santo Domingo, was founded in 1496 and is the oldest settlement by Europeans in the hemisphere and has the ashes of Columbus in its ancient cathedral.

The western third of the Island was ceded to France in 1697. Santo Domingo itself was ceded to France in 1795. Haitian ruler Toussaint L'Ouverture seized it in 1801. Spain returned intermittently between 1803-21 as several native republics came and went. The popular government of Haiti was again in control from 1822 through 1844. The Dominicans proclaimed their independence in 1844, and this lasted until 1857. Between 1857 and 1861 political turmoil existed. Spain then regained control and ruled from 1861 to 1863.

The country was occupied by the U.S. Marines from 1916 to 1924 when a constitutionally elected government was installed.

In 1930, General Rafael Leonidas Trujillo was elected President. Later, Joaquín Balaguer was appointed by Trujillo in 1960. Juan Bosch was elected President later and was overthrown in 1963.

A provisional government supervised a June 1966 election in which Balaguer defeated Bosch. Balaguer was reelected in 1970-74.

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

Spain conquered the region which was the northern Inca empire in 1633. Liberation forces defeated the Spanish on May 24, 1822. Ecuador became part of the Great Colombia Republic but seceded May 13, 1830.

Ecuador had been ruled by civilian and military dictatorships since 1968. A peaceful transfer of power from the military junta to democratic civilian government took place in 1979.

Since 1972, the economy has revolved around its petroleum exports. Ecuador and Peru have long disputed their Amazon Valley boundary.

The Galapagos Islands, 600 miles to the west, are the home of huge tortoises and other unusual animals.

El Salvador became independent of Spain in 1821 and of the Central American Federation in 1839.

A fight with Honduras in 1969 over the presence of 300,000 workers created conflicts between both countries which were renewed in 1974.

A military coup overthrew the government of President Romero in 1979.

In May 1984 large numbers of the population voted José Napoleón Duarte as president.

Civil unrest continues.

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

The old Mayan Indian empire flourished in what is today Guatemala, for over 1000 years before the Spanish arrived.

Guatemala was a Spanish colony from 1524-1821; briefly a part of Mexico and then of the U.S. of Central America. The republic was established in 1839.

Since 1945, when a liberal government was elected to replace the long-term dictatorship of Jorge Ubico, the country has seen social reform and many changes.

Dissident army forces seized power in March 23, 1982 and pledged to restore an authentic democracy. A second military coup in 1983 has promised a complete return to democracy by 1985.

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

After three centuries of Spanish regimes, the people rebelled under Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla, Fr. Morelos y Payón and General Agustín Iturbide. Iturbide made independence effective September 27, 1821, but made himself emperor as Agustín I. A republic was declared in 1823.

Mexican territory extended into the present American Southwest and California until Texas revolted and established a republic in 1836. The Mexican legislature refused recognition but was unable to enforce its authority there. After numerous clashes, the U.S.-Mexican War (1846-1848) resulted in the loss by Mexico of the lands north of the Rio Grande.

French arms supported an Austrian archduke on the throne of Mexico as Maximilian I (1864-67) but pressure from the U.S. forced France to withdraw. A dictatorial rule by Porfirio Díaz presided from 1877-80 and 1884-1911.

The presidency of Luis Echevarría (1970-76) was marked by a more leftist foreign policy and domestic rhetoric. Some land redistribution began in 1976.

The coast of Panama was sighted by Rodrigo de Bastidas, sailing with Columbus for Spain in 1501, and was visited by Columbus in 1502. Vasco Nuñez de Balboa crossed the isthmus and discovered the Pacific Ocean in 1513. Spanish colonies were ravaged by Francis Drake in 1572-95 and Henry Morgan in 1668-71. Morgan destroyed the old city of Panama which had been founded in 1519. Freed from Spain, Panama joined Colombia in 1821.

Panama declared its independence from Colombia on November 3, 1903, with United States' recognition.

On November 18, 1903, Panama granted use, occupation and control of the Canal Zone to the United States by a treaty. By 1999, the Canal Zone will be controlled exclusively by Panama.

Spanish settlers did not begin replacing the indigenous Charru Indians until 1624. Portuguese from Brazil arrived later, but Uruguay was attached to the Spanish vice royalty of Rio de la Plata in the 18th century. Rebels fought against Spain beginning in 1810. An independent republic was declared August 25, 1985.

More than a third of the workers are employed by the State which owns, among others, the power, telephone, railroad, cement and oil-refining industries.

Uruguay's standard of living is one of the highest in South America.

HISTORICAL GLIMPSE

Columbus first set foot on the South American continent at the peninsula of Paria in 1498. Alonso de Ojeda (1499) found Lake Maracaibo and called the land Venezuela, or Little Venice, because natives had houses on stilts.

Venezuela was ruled by the military for most of the 20th century.

Venezuela helped found the Organization of Petroleum Exporting States (OPEC). The government nationalized the oil industry with compensation. Development has begun of the Orinoco tar belt, believed to contain the world's largest oil reserves. Oil accounts for 95% of total export earnings, and the economy suffered a severe cash crisis in 1983 as a result of falling oil revenues.

PART II: HISPANICS IN THE UNITED STATES AND HIGHLIGHTS OF FOUR MAJOR GROUPS

GENERAL OVERVIEW

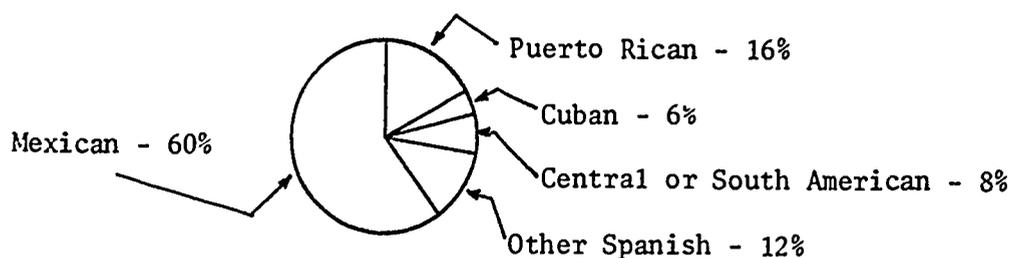

Hispanics are, after Blacks, the nation's largest minority. The number of Hispanics is increasing at such a rate that many predict that within a generation, Hispanic communities may outnumber those of the Blacks. Presently, five cities in the United States have Hispanics as their majority.

- . Laredo, Texas (91.5% Hispanic)
- . McAllen/Edenburg/Mission, Texas (81.3% Hispanic)
- . Brownsville/Harlingen, Texas (77.1% Hispanic)
- . El Paso, Texas (61.9% Hispanic)
- . Las Cruces, New Mexico (52.1% Hispanic)

The Hispanic population in the United States now numbers 14,608,673, but it is estimated that this figure is critically understated. Twenty major metropolitan areas have Hispanic populations of at least 100,000.

- . Los Angeles, Anaheim and Riverside, California have 2,755,914 Hispanics or 27.6% of the population.
- . New York City, parts of New Jersey and Connecticut have 2 million Hispanics or 11.7% of the population.
- . San Francisco, Oakland and San Jose, California have 660,190 Hispanics or 12.3% of the population.

MAJOR HISPANIC GROUPS IN THE UNITED STATES

MEXICAN AMERICANS

They are the largest and most prominent of the Spanish-speaking groups. The history of the Mexicans in the United States has been tied to the history of the Southwest. As the region grew, so did the influx of Mexicans-legal and illegal, permanent and temporary, daily and seasonal commuters, students and tourists.

During the beginning of the 20th century, completion of the railroads, expansion of cotton planting and irrigation of farmlands were led by the Mexican worker. Mexicans provided 60% of the common laborers. In California, today alone, over $4 billion of the State's annual income is produced by Mexican American farmworkers.

Before 1910, Mexicans were temporary laborers, but after the upheaval caused by the Mexican revolution, permanent settlers arrived.

World War II opened new opportunities for Mexican laborers in the Southwest as well. In 1942, 4,203 workers were recorded; whereas in 1964, 177,736 were identified as laborers.

Mexican Americans, after World War II, moved to fields other than agriculture. They worked in the aircraft industry, shipyards, and automobile assembly plants.

DEMOGRAPHIC DATA

1978 - 7.2 million persons of Mexican American descent lived in the United States.
90% reside in the southwestern states, originally owned by Mexico in the 19th century.

HISTORICAL INFORMATION RELATED TO THEIR IMMIGRATION TO THE UNITED STATES

1845 - 54 - Through the acquisition of land, Mexicans became Mexican Americans
1940 - First rural migration recorded

PUERTO RICANS

The United States acquired Puerto Rico from Spain at the end of the Spanish-American War in 1898. In 1917, Puerto Ricans were granted American citizenship.

In 1910, the Census Bureau recorded 1,500 Puerto Ricans and in 1930, 53,000 Puerto Ricans living on the mainland United States. As with other groups, Puerto Ricans came to the United States to escape chronic overpopulation and insufficient employment. The Depression and World War II cut the flow to the mainland from the island, but in 1945, the numbers increased.

Relatively inexpensive air transportation and an abundance of unskilled and semi-skilled jobs in New York City served as magnets in those days. As late as 1940 New York City had slightly more than 60,000 Puerto Ricans. By 1950, that figure had quadrupled. By the 1970's, there were more than 1.5 million scattered throughout the United States, with approximately two-thirds of these in the New York area. Other major centers for Puerto Ricans were Chicago, with approximately 80,000, and Philadelphia, with approximately 28,000.

Large communities of Puerto Ricans could also be found in Bridgeport, Connecticut; Rochester, New York; Dayton, Ohio; Boston, Massachusetts; Miami, Florida; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; and in numerous cities in New Jersey. California's population of Puerto Ricans is also large, but statistical data are inaccurate.

The Puerto Rican experience in migration is similar to that of the European immigrants. The tendency for settlement was more urban than rural. Puerto Ricans are classified as unskilled or service workers, clerical and sales, craftsmen and foremen. In addition, many Puerto Ricans are members of professional, managerial, and technical workforces.

In 1964, Puerto Ricans owned 6,000 small businesses in New York City.

DEMOGRAPHIC DATA

1980 - 2 million Puerto Ricans lived in the United States;
New York City has the largest population - 986,389.

HISTORICAL INFORMATION RELATED TO THEIR MIGRATION TO THE UNITED STATES

1910 - Puerto Ricans came to Loraine, Ohio to work in steel mills.

CUBANS

Cubans immigrated to the United States, fleeing from political policies in Cuba. The first immigrant group represented the elite of their society. Of this group, approximately seventy percent (70%) were professional, skilled, or white collar workers; forty percent (40%) had a college education.

Since Miami, Florida is the largest and closest city to Havana, Cuba, Cubans immigrated there first, beginning in 1959.

By the end of 1971, 350,000 Cubans lived in the Miami area. They owned one-third of the city's retail businesses, including sixty percent (60%) of Miami's gas stations, 20 cigars manufacturing plants and 30 furniture factories.

In Addition to the population which settled in Miami, over 80,000 Cubans has settled in New York City as of 1970.

Under the Carter administration in the early 1980's, approximately 100,000 Mariel-Cubans (boat people) of lower income status entered the United States.

DEMOGRAPHIC DATA

1977 - 681,000 Cubans arrive in the United States
Every state except Wyoming and Vermont registers Cuban residents.

HISTORICAL INFORMATION RELATED TO THEIR IMMIGRATION TO THE UNITED STATES

1831 - The first year of immigration to Key West, Florida is recorded.
1960 - 155,000 Cubans arrive during the year of the revolution.

ANNOTATIONS

Ninety-nine percent (99%) of the Cubans in the United States are urban dwellers. In 1970, Miami (Dade County) registered the largest population of Cubans. Forty percent (40%) lived in New York, New Jersey, Los Angeles, and Chicago.

DOMINICANS

Hispanic newcomers to the United States arriving in the 1960's and the 1970's, included the Dominicans. The Dominican population settled mostly in the New York City area.

Their main purpose for immigration was to avoid poverty in their homeland. The unemployment rate in the Dominican Republic in 1970 was thirty percent (30%).

An accurate count of Dominicans in the United States is unavailable since many have entered through Puerto Rico (where visas are not required) and later migrated to New York City undocumented.

DEMOGRAPHIC DATA

1980 - 300,000 Dominicans are counted. Still unaccounted for are the undocumented aliens.

Dominicans mainly reside in the Northeast, Florida and Puerto Rico.

HISTORICAL INFORMATION RELATED TO THEIR IMMIGRATION TO THE UNITED STATES

1930 - 61 - Unrestricted immigration was permitted to the United States.
1960 - 756 Dominicans entered the United States.
1965 - 9,504 Dominicans entered the United States.
1970 - 10,207 Dominicans entered the United States.

The number of entrants into the United States has increased and, by 1970, estimates registered 800,000 to one million undocumented aliens of Hispanic culture. Of these, 50,000 to 100,000 from Central and South America are in New York and New Jersey.

PART III: GLOBAL CONTRIBUTIONS AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF HISPANICS

CONTRIBUTIONS...A HISTORICAL OVERVIEW

- 1900 Xavier Cugat, the popular violinist and conductor, was born. Cugat, who appeared with the Cuban Symphony Orchestra at the age of six, toured the world as an accompanist for Enrico Caruso. GLOBAL CONTRIBUTIONS IN SPORTS

- . The 1984 Olympics, held in Los Angeles, California, saw 16 United States Hispanics compete for medals. Hispanics won 5 gold medals, 6 silver and 1 bronze. Never before in the Olympics have so many Hispanics competed for and won medals. Some attribute the increase to a variety of causes. Among them:
 - . the increase of Hispanics into middle class
 - . greater equality in training and coaching for less economically advantaged athletes
 - . many live in states with warm climates where youths are sports oriented
 - . U.S. Hispanic population has grown by several millions, 60% of which is under the age of 29
 - . some believe that as social conditions improve for Hispanics, so will their opportunities to be champions
 - . in addition to the U.S. Hispanics, Hispanics worldwide won a total of 19 medals: 3 gold, 8 silver and 8 bronze
- . Golf:
 - Lee Trevino, a Mexican American, has won the U.S. Open and British Open twice.
 - Nancy López, a Mexican American, was one of the leading money winners .
 - Unichi Rodríguez, Puerto Rican, has won major golf tournaments.
- . Baseball:
 - Baseball fans remember fondly #21 of the Pittsburg Pirates. Robert Clemente (1934-72), the Pittsburg Pirate outfielder, won four batting titles, was chosen the National League's most valuable player in 1966 and is in the Baseball Hall of Fame.
 - Fernando Valenzuela, pitcher for the Los Angeles Dodgers, won the Cy Young award in 1981 at the age of 21.
 - Alejandro Peña of the Los Angeles Dodgers was the leading pitcher in 1984.
 - There are at least fourteen Hispanic baseball players in the National League and at least eighteen in the American League.

In 1984, Willie Hernández a relief pitcher for the Detroit Tigers was chosen most valuable player of the American League and was awarded the Cy Young award.

. Boxing:

José (Chegüi) Torres, Heavyweight Ring Champion in 1965 and 1966, was the Commissioner for the New York State Athletic Commission in 1983, and was appointed chairman by Governor Cuomo in 1984. For decades, Hispanics have excelled in the world of boxing. Some of the all-time champions are:

Cruiserweight	Oswaldo Ocasio (Puerto Rican) Carlos de León (Puerto Rican)
Heavyweight	José (Chegüi) Torres (Puerto Rican)
Lightweight	Edwin Rosario (Puerto Rican)
Featherweight	Eusebio Pedroza (Panamanian) Wilfredo Gómez (Puerto Rican)
Jr. Lightweight	Héctor Camacho (New York)
Jr. Featherweight	Victor Callejas (Puerto Rican) Jaime Garza (Los Angeles) Richard Sandoval (Los Angeles) Alberto Dávila (Colombian)
Flyweight	Santos Laciari (Argentinean) Gabriel Bernal (Mexican)

. Horse Racing:

Hispanic jockeys have ridden winners of the Kentucky Derby. All time great Angel Cordero Jr. secured that title for Bold Forbes in 1976, and is also one of the leading jockeys for 1976, 1982 and 1983. In addition to Angel Cordero Jr., Jorge Velázquez won the Kentucky Derby in 1981, and J. Vázquez won it in 1980.

DID YOU KNOW?

- . Hispanics were the first to explore what is now the United States. By the time the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, Spanish explorers (Conquistadores) had explored much of the eastern and western coasts. By land, they had ventured into Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, Arizona and California.
- . Hispanics introduced oranges, now the largest fruit industry in the United States, as well as grapes, its nearest competitor. They also introduced barley, wheat, pomegranates, figs, sugar cane, alfalfa, lemons and other crops.
- . The cowboy, that popular American idol, has a Hispanic origin. Cowboy jargon such as: "lasso", "bronco", "corral", "lariat", and "mustang" are Spanish-derived words. The horse, itself, was brought to this country by Spaniards.
- . Hispanics have long recognized the importance of education to social progress. The first university in the Americas was established in a Hispanic country: La Universidad Autónoma de Santo Domingo was established in the Dominican Republic in 1538. In that same year, another university was established in Peru.
- . Oscar García Rivera was the first Hispanic leader to serve in the New York State Legislature. Today, there are two Hispanic members in the Senate and 5 in the Assembly: Angelo Del Toro is the Chairman of the New York State Blacks and Puerto Rican Caucus.
- . Puerto Ricans have been United States citizens since 1917. Their penchant for a democratic system of government is one of the highest among the nations of the free world. In Puerto Rico, 90 percent of those eligible to vote are registered, and 80 percent of those registered actually do vote.
- . The United States has the fifth largest Hispanic population in the Western hemisphere. It is estimated that by 1990, Hispanics will be the largest minority in the United States.
- . Hispanics are the fastest growing business sector in the country, representing a $60 billion market. There are over 250,000 Hispanic owned businesses which generate in excess of $12 billion in annual sales.

- . Hispanics have received the highest proportion of Medals of Honor of any minority group, through acts of bravery and dedicated defense of this nation in times of armed conflicts. The 65th Infantry Battalion of Puerto Rico has been immortalized in song for its bravery at a time when there was gross discrimination in the armed forces.

Many of the contiguous states once belonged to Spain and are Spanish-named states. For example:

Name	Meaning
Arizona	- little spring
California	- an imaginary island
Colorado	- red
Florida	- flowering easter
Montana	- mountainous
Nevada	- snow-clad
New Mexico	- land north of the Rio Grande
Texas	- friends and allies

- . In 1776 Spain provided the American colonists with arms to aid in their revolution.
- . 275 million people around the world speak Spanish. It is the fourth most widely spoken language in the world.
- . The best place to see Halley's Comet, when it reaches the Western Hemisphere in April 1986, is atop Machu Pichu, Peru.
- . Sheila E. is the daughter of percussionist, Pete Escobedo and was nominated for two Grammy Awards: "Best New Artist" and "Best Pop Vocal Performing Female."
- . Los Lobos, an East Los Angeles quintet released a popular album "How Will the Wolf Survive?"
- . "El Norte" written by Gregory Nova and Anna Thomas was nominated for an Oscar Award: "Best Screen Play Written Directly for the Screen."
- . Gabriel García Márquez, of Colombia, was awarded a Nobel Prize for Literature in 1983.
- . Alfonso García Robles, of Mexico, and Adolfo Pérez Esquivel, of Argentina, were awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1982 and 1980, respectively.
