ABSTRACT

This annual report of the Advanced Job Skills Training (AJST) Project describes the methodology used to develop competency-based training for child protective services (CPS) specialists who are in their first 24 months of employment. The project's steering committee determined that AJST was an inappropriate point to begin developing CPS specialists skills and agreed to revise Basic Job Skills Training (BJST), to redefine the time spent in the BJST classroom, and to increase the role of the CPS supervisor in measuring the competency of the CPS specialist during the first 24 months of employment. In the former BJST classes, new CPS specialists spent three weeks at a centralized training center. This requirement has been eliminated. The project identified the skills required for tasks performed by CPS specialists and revised the training curriculum accordingly. Plans are being made to conduct a pilot test of the revised curriculum in two DHS administrative regions. A training evaluation form and the agenda of the CPS BJST are appended. (RH)

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Innovations in Protective Services is the collective name of seven projects funded by P.L. 93-247 state grant money and conducted by the Texas Department of Human Services (DHS). The seven demonstrations, designed to test ideas for improving services to children in need of protection, are listed below:

- o Multidisciplinary Institute for Child Sexual Abuse Intervention and Treatment;
- o Project Amistad (Friendship), a Joint Venture between DHS and Family Outreach;
- o Family-Centered, Home-Based Intervention for Protective Services Clients;
- o Child Protective Services Case Management;
- o Child Abuse and Neglect Prevention;
- o Advanced Job Skills Training; and
- o Automated Performance Tracking and Productivity Improvement.

Overall objectives established for the seven projects are to develop innovative child abuse and neglect programs using volunteers and private agencies; to strengthen the quality of services for child abuse and neglect through competency-based and specialized training programs; and to develop models and program designs for planning and delivering child abuse and neglect services and for allocating resources.

Priorities from DHS's long-range plan for child protective services (CPS) provided the basis for selection of the projects to be demonstrated, and project results will be used in planning improvements in CPS service delivery systems.

The project reported on in this document, Advanced Job Skills Training (AJST), focuses on teaching recently hired CPS specialists the advanced elements of service delivery in this field. AJST will be given within the first 24 months of employment. The project recognizes the need for unit supervisors to be involved in the staff development process. Training will be integrated more closely with experience on the job.

Copies of this and other reports on the 93-247 projects can be obtained by writing to Project Support and Utilization Section; Office of Research, Demonstration, and Evaluation; Texas Department of Human Services; P.O. Box 2960 (MC 504-E); Austin, Texas 78769.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Texas Department of Human Services wishes to acknowledge the contributions of a number of people who participated in the development and implementation of the Advanced Job Skills Training Project and who contributed to the project reports.

Cindy Wingate, project director, had major responsibility for day-to-day operations; Jan Huber, staff development specialist, developed curricula, training objectives, and performance measures to be used in training new child protective services (CPS) specialists; Kay Love, program specialist, served as program liaison with the Protective Services for Families and Children (PSC) Branch in headquarters. Special appreciation is accorded to regional liaisons--Jay Bohner, Carla Boisvenue, Carole Bowdry, Barbara Grissett, Reidar Hansen, Kathryn Hibbert, Laura Betty Mora, Susan Skaer, Roulene Wagonseller, Frank Wright, and Larry Wright--who served on the advisory committee and conducted the analysis of required tasks that eventually became the competency model for CPS specialists.

From the Office of Research, Demonstration, and Evaluation (ORDE)--headed by Assistant Commissioner Suzette Ashworth, Ph.D.--efforts were contributed by several members of ORDE's Research and Demonstration Division, which is administered by Kent Gummerman, Ph.D. Project Developer Barbara K. Richardson prepared the original grant proposal, and Project Specialist Lucretia Dennis-Small provided support to the project, prepared reports to the funding source, and arranged for nationwide dissemination of project results. Nicholas Constant and Phyllis Jamar of the Technical Communications Unit contributed to the high quality of project documents.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Advanced Job Skills Training (AJST) Project was conducted in the Protective Services for Families and Children (PSFC) Branch at DHS's headquarters in Austin. This annual report, a process evaluation, describes the methodology used to develop competency-based training for child protective services (CPS) specialists who are in their first 24 months of employment.

The Office of Field Management asked regional administrators to nominate members from their regions to serve on a steering committee that reviews and comments on project activities.

During the project, the steering committee members determined that AJST was an inappropriate point to begin developing CPS specialist skills. The committee agreed to revise Basic Job Skills Training (BJST), to redefine the time spent in the BJST classroom, and to increase the role of the CPS supervisor in measuring the competency of the CPS specialist during the first 24 months of employment. In the former BJST classes, new CPS specialists spent three weeks at a centralized training center. This requirement has been eliminated.

The project identified the skills required for tasks performed by CPS specialists and revised the training curriculum accordingly. Plans are being made to conduct a pilot test of the revised curriculum in two DHS administrative regions.

BACKGROUND AND ORIGIN

On May 9, 1983, a formal statement of DHS's staff development process, known as the Managed Staff Development Model (MSDM), received executive approval. MSDM has three components--Basic Job Skills Training (BJST), Advanced Job Skills Training (AJST) and Individualized Staff Development (ISD)--each of which must be completed before the next component is started.

- o BJST teaches essential skills to new staff members; it is given in the first six weeks of employment. BJST was developed and first used in 1981 and evaluated in 1982.
- o AJST will teach job skills needed beyond entry level and will be given between the 6th and 24th months of employment.
- o ISD is an ongoing part of DHS's performance evaluation process; the CPS specialist and his or her supervisor determine individual training needs and how to meet them.

During fiscal year 1985, the Protective Services for Families and Children (PSFC) Branch conducted the first year of a two-year federally funded project to develop administrative procedures and the curriculum for advanced training in child protective services (CPS). The Advanced Job Skills Training (AJST) Project began developing a standardized framework for improving the ability of CPS specialists to provide a high quality of service to abused and neglected children and their families.

Both BJST and AJST are competency-based--that is, based upon the skills, abilities, and knowledge needed to perform a task or job. BJST was taught at only two locations for the entire state (Houston and Arlington). The 1982 evaluation of BJST indicated that too much content was included in the first three weeks of training and that there was no system to facilitate follow-up training in the regions.

AJST will be more decentralized; it will be given throughout the state by regional staff development specialists or, in some cases, by the CPS unit supervisors. Unit supervisors will be more closely involved in the staff development process; they will ensure that workers integrate training into the job and that they develop further skills through their job experience.

PROJECT OPERATIONS

OBJECTIVES

The AJST Project will complete DHS's Managed Staff Development Model (MSDM) for the CPS staff. The project will identify the competencies needed and will prepare a curriculum. The resulting training program will guide CPS workers in developing their abilities to give a high quality of service to families with abused or neglected children. To accomplish this goal, the following objectives were set:

1. to establish a steering committee for regional and state office input, review, and comment;
2. to establish an AJST administrative plan that includes (A) preparing a pamphlet explaining MSDM as it is developed for CPS specialists, (B) developing a training reporting system, and (C) delineating roles and responsibilities among state office and regional program and support staff;
3. to establish a competency-based model for training and evaluating CPS specialists;
4. to establish learning objectives and performance measures based on the competencies, including a test for exemption from training;
5. to establish curricula;
6. to establish systems to validate, evaluate, update, and revise competencies, learning objectives, performance measures, and curricula content;
7. to establish training-for-trainers curricula; and
8. to establish procedures for a pilot test.

STEERING COMMITTEE

In October 1984, the project director was hired. She established the statewide steering committee by asking each regional administrator of services to nominate a representative. Each of the administrative regions selected one person to serve on the committee, which held its first meeting on November 27-29 in Austin. Headquarters in Austin was represented on the committee by one person each from PSFC, the Staff Development (SD) Division, and the Personnel Division.

ADMINISTRATIVE PLAN

Early in the first year, offices participating in the project-- PSFC, Personnel, SD, and the Office of Research, Demonstration, and Evaluation (ORDE)--met to discuss the administrative plan (Objective 2), which contained three subobjectives:

- A. preparing a pamphlet explaining how DHS's staff development model was developed for CPS specialists;
- B. developing a way of reporting on whether trainees have achieved the desired competencies; and
- C. clarifying the roles and responsibilities of the various offices involved in the project.

At the meeting, participants worked out agreements that fulfilled Subobjective C. Throughout the first project year, headquarters staff facilitated the project by providing consultation and technical assistance to regional program staff. Regional program staff reviewed and revised competencies, learning objectives, and performance measures. They also provided input into curriculum content and revisions to BJST.

Participants in the meeting also agreed that Subobjective A could not be achieved until the end of the project's second year.

The project achieved Subobjective B during its first year by developing the training evaluation form shown in Appendix A.

COMPETENCY-BASED MODEL FOR TRAINING

During the project year, steering committee members and the project staff reviewed and revised a draft of the competency model. As competencies were agreed upon, the project staff analyzed them to find the kind of training required. Learning objectives and performance measures were developed by steering committee members.

The project staff devised a method for evaluating CPS specialists' competency on DHS's standardized job tasks. An evaluation form--"Trainee Objective Attainment Record" (see Appendix A)--will be used by the supervisor, regional staff development specialists, and the BJST trainer to certify a trainee's competency on materials presented in BJST. The BJST Agenda (Appendix B) for the centralized classroom training also was developed.

EXEMPTION FROM TRAINING

During its first year, the project decided to use previously developed tests to exempt CPS specialists from BJST. The process for administering these tests will be developed during the project's second year. A test for exemption from AJST will be developed during the next project year.

AJST CURRICULUM COMPONENTS

The AJST curriculum will be completed during the project's second year. The curriculum has these components:

- o identified learning objectives;
- o identified performance measures;
- o structured learning experiences (administered by each region); and
- o resource materials (books, articles, self-instructional packages, and curriculum packages available to regions).

The learning objectives and performance measures will be developed from recommendations made to project staff by the 10 regional steering committees. The structured learning experiences will take place in the regions and will be conducted by CPS supervisors and staff development specialists. Resource materials will be prepared by project staff. However, regional staff will be allowed to substitute their own resource materials to achieve any of the learning objectives.

Revised BJST will be presented to its first group of trainees beginning September 30, 1985.

SYSTEMS TO VALIDATE AND REVISE CURRICULA

During the first year of the project, systems that validate, evaluate, update, and revise competencies, learning objectives, performance measures, and curricula content were discussed with steering committee members. The committee and project staff agreed that such systems were needed and decided to establish them during the project's second year.

TRAINING FOR TRAINERS

The training-for-trainers curricula will be developed by the project staff at headquarters in Austin. In October 1985, CPS supervisors, staff development specialists, and program staff designated by the regions will receive training on the changes in the BJST curriculum.

REVISIONS IN BJST

The following revisions in BJST will go into effect in September 1985:

- o Responsibility for training will be shared by the unit supervisor, BJST trainer, and regional trainer.
- o Centralized classroom time will be reduced to 10 days.
- o BJST will be expanded to include some on-the-job (OJT) experiences both before and after the classroom training. OJT will be provided by the unit supervisor and/or the regional CPS trainer. At some time during the trainee's probationary period, she or he will receive court-related training. Also, the videotaped interview on investigation of child abuse will be provided to those who need it.
- o Procedures are planned for "testing out" of BJST. Until the procedures are developed, supervisors will continue to request waivers for those staff members who do not need the centralized classroom training.
- o As soon as a new CPS specialist is hired, regional trainers and the state office scheduling coordinator will be notified immediately so that the supervisor can receive training materials to prepare the new employee for BJST classroom training. The new hire will be assigned to BJST within the first six weeks of employment.

- o Supervisors, program directors, and regional staff development specialists will receive the training-for-trainers curriculum at state office.

PILOT TEST

Three DHS regions--6 (Austin), 9 (San Antonio), and 3/12 (El Paso)--volunteered to pilot test the BJST curriculum. Regions 9 and 3/12 were selected to participate. The pilot test will start with the September 30 BJST training session. Throughout the test, the project staff will conduct consultative visits to pilot sites to give technical assistance and monitor progress.

UTILIZATION AND DISSEMINATION

During the project year, a flyer explaining the AJST concept and the project's goals and objectives was developed and distributed to headquarters PSFC branch staff members, regional directors for Services to Families and Children, CPS program directors, and the steering committee members. The project was discussed at the staff development conference in August 1985.

Quarterly progress reports were sent to DHS administrative staff members and regional personnel.
