ABSTRACT

This document profiles 150 Fede al benefit programs that provide cash on noncash assistance to persons demonstrating need or who qualify for benefits as a result of either contributions made by them or on their behalf or military service. These programs spent more than $400 billion in Federal tax dollars in fiscal year 1983, excluding administrative costs, or about 49% of the United States budget. Estimates for these programs for fiscal year 1986 are nearly $450 billion. The document identifies 150 programs, and for 91 selected programs, it (1) provides financial and other related data; (2) describes their purposes, who is eligible for them, and the benefits available; and (3) identifies the Federal agencies that administer them and the congressional committees that oversee them. These programs come under the income security function of the Federal government. They help meet the needs of people by incuring against loss of income resulting from retirement, disability, death, or unemployment of a wage earner, and by assisting the truly needy who are unable to provide for themselves. PREFACE

Federal benefit programs—How many are there? What are they? What kinds of benefits do they provide? Who qualifies for them? Who administers and oversees them? And how much is the federal government spending on them? These are questions on the minds of many persons today, both in and out of government. This staff study is an attempt to answer these questions.

Most of the programs profiled come under the income security function of our federal government. As such, they help meet the needs of individuals by insuring against loss of income resulting from retirement, disability, death, or unemployment of a wage earner, and by assisting the truly needy who are unable to provide for themselves. The income security function includes retirement and disability programs for federal civilian and military personnel, railroad employees, and coal miners. It also includes the social security and unemployment compensation programs, and a wide range of food, housing, and cash assistance programs. Other federal benefit programs, outside the income security function but closely related to it, include those that (1) contribute to meeting the nation's health care needs, such as Medicare and Medicaid; (2) provide home energy assistance; (3) meet the special needs of our nation's veterans and their survivors; and (4) provide education, training, and employment assistance and social services.

FEDERAL BENEFIT PROGRAMS: A PROFILE

OVBRVIEW

NEED FOR A PROFILE

The lack of a profile of federal benefit programs became apparent in GAO's review of the verification techniques used by agencies when clients applied for benefits under these programs. report on this review is entitled "Eligibility Verification and Privacy in Federal Benefit Programs: A Delicate Balance" (GAO/HRD-85-22, Mar. 1, 1985). In order to complete that review, GAO found that it needed to develop such a profile. Discussions with congressional staff and program managers suggested that the profile GAO developed may be useful to them also. Consequently, GAO is making this document available to a wider audience.

This document is designed to provide an overview of the federal penefit programs that serve individuals directly. It demonstrates the extensiveness and magnitude of the federal benefit programs that affect the lives of most Americans.

ORGANIZATION OF THE PROFILE OF FEDERAL BENEFIT PROGRAMS

The profile is presented in four chapters:

Chapter 1 -- The Inventory

Chapter 2 -- Program Financial Data

Chapter 3 -- Program Descriptions

Chapter 4 -- Congressional Committee Program
Responsibility

Chapter 1 --The Inventory

The inventory is comprised of 150 benefit programs that provide cash and noncash assistance to persons who demonstrate need or otherwise qualify for benefits as a result of contributions made during employment or military service. More than $400 billion was obligated in fiscal year 1983 for these programs, or about 49 percent of the United States Budget.

Needs-based programs

of the 150 programs, 95 are classified as "needs-based." Needs-based programs provide cash and in-kind benefits to low income, needy and/or distressed individuals who neither financially contribute to the programs nor render service in return for the benefits received. If the individual can show sufficient "need," he or she may be eligible for a number of different programs and benefits. Collectively, the 95 needs-based benefit programs comprise the public "welfare" system.

Insurance-based programs

The remaining 55 programs in this inventory are classified as "insurance-based" programs. These programs provide benefits to individuals who financially contributed to the programs, normally through payroll deduction, or on whose behalf contributions are made, or who have served in the military. Insurance-based programs generally supplement an individual's standard of living, and benefits are paid in some cases without regard to the client's income or wealth.

Counting the programs

Some groups might define "benefit program" or "needs-based and insurance-based programs" differently, which would change some of the programs making up the inventory. For example, the inventory includes several loan programs. Although not all persons qualifying for loans under some of these programs are considered needy, most of the loan recipients are categorized as needy.

Chapter 2 --Program Financial Data

Forty-two needs-based and insurance-based programs had federal obligations of over $1 billion each in fiscal year 1983. The total for these programs was $379 billion that year, as compared to an estimated $435 billion for fiscal year 1986. (See figures 1 and 2 for fiscal year 1983 obligations and estimated fiscal year 1986 obligations in current and constant dollars.) The 42 programs accounted for more than 92 percent of the $409 billion total fiscal year 1983 obligations of the 150 programs in the inventory.

Chapter 2 compares actual program obligations for fiscal years 1982 and 1983 for the programs identified by number in chapter 1. (Fiscal year 1983 obligations were the most current financial data available when GAO compiled the data.) This comparison is displayed in two formats. The first is by program category (i.e., cash, food, housing, etc.). The second is by responsible federal agency.

Also included in chapter 2 is a listing, by program category, comparing fiscal year 1982 program obligations to "units served." Units served is a description of either those receiving benefits or of the benefits provided, such as meals served or housing subsidies awarded.

Chapter 3 -- Program
Descriptions

Chapter 3 contains descriptions of the programs identified by number in chapter 1. The descriptions provide the user of this report with short, simple references as to what the programs are all about. Information such as the responsible federal agency, percent of federal funding, level of government (federal or state) at which a program is administered, legal authority for a program, and a program's regulations, is provided. Where applicable, a Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance (CFDA) reference number is provided. Also included are brief narratives of each program's purpose, eligible persons, and benefits available.

Chapter 4 --Congressional Committee Program Responsibility Finally, chapter 4 identifies the congressional committees having primary legislative oversight responsibility for the program identified by number in this inventory. Committees of both the United States House of Representative and the United States Senate are provided for each program.

PROGRAM FINANCIAL DATA

THE INVENTORY AND HOW IT RELATES TO THE FEDERAL BUDGET

In fiscal year 1983, national budget obligations totaled about $840 billion. By comparison, fiscal year 1983 obligations for the 150 federal benefit programs in the inventory (including those identified with an asterisk (*) in chapter 1) totaled about $409 billion or nearly half of the fiscal year 1983 federal budget.

Fiscal Year 1983 Total Federal Budget Obligations

Total FY 1983 Budget Obligations $840 billion

FINANCIAL DATA OVERVIEW

The inventory contains more needs-based than insurance-based programs. However, insurance-based program obligations in fiscal year 1983 exceeded those for needs-based programs by over $245 billion. On a percentage basis this breaks down as follows:

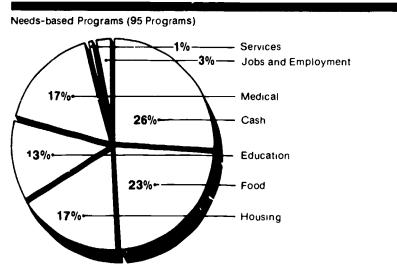

Percentages of Needs-based and Insurance-based Program Obligations in FY 1983

Programs are displayed throughout the inventory, for the most part, by program category. Most of the insurance-based program obligations, 81 percent, represent cash assistance, while the needs-based program obligations are distributed among several program categories, as shown below and on the next page.

ORGANIZATION OF FINANCIAL DATA

The financial data sections consist of three major subparts. Each subpart lists all programs which are identified by number in the chapter 1 inventory section. The layout of the financial data sections is as follows:

- A comparison of FY 1982 and FY 1983 program obligations by program category.
- A comparison of FY 1982 and FY 1983 program obligations by federal agency.
- A comparison of FY 1982 program obligations to units served, such as recipients, meals, and housing subsidies.

Within each section, needs-based programs are listed first followed by the insurance-based programs.

Our major sources for the financial information presented in this chapter were the 1983 and 1984 editions of the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance (CFDA) and the United States Budget Appendix for fiscal years 1984 and 1985. In addition, agency officials were contacted to corroborate or obtain program financial data not readily identifiable from the listed sources.

PEDERAL BENEFIT PROGRAMS: A PROFILE

CHAPTER 3 -- PROGRAM DESCRIPTIONS

Washington Post reprinted by permission of the D.C. Public Library

PROGRAM DESCRIPTIONS

On the following pages, we have provided descriptions for 54 needs-based and 37 insurance-based programs. Each category is addressed separately, with needs-based programs discussed first and insurance-based afterwards.

We have formated the descriptions in a way that will provide a quick and easy understanding of the various programs. description is broken into three narrative sections. The first section is program purpose, and here we give a general overview of each program. Second, eligibility requirements are addressed and, third, program benefits. In addition to purpose, eligibility requirements, and benefits, other pertinent information is cited, including the responsible federal agency, the legal authority for the program, the governing federal regulations, program administration, and percent of federal funding. A word of clarification is needed for "program administration." Program administration refers to the level of government or the organization level that is involved in the day-to-day activities of administering a program. When "state" is shown for program administration this means that a state, county and/or loca! government is involved in administering the program.

In the program "benefits" section we attempted to use fiscal year 1983 benefits, since our inventory includes only programs active through fiscal year 1983. However, when fiscal year 1983 benefit data were not readily available, we substituted benefit data for another time period and so noted it.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

A number of sources were used in compiling our program descriptions. The first major source was the 1983 and 1984 editions of the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance. Another source, one used exclusively for needs-based programs, was the Congressional Research Service report entitled "Cash and Non-Cash Benefits for Persons With Limited Income: Eligibility Rules, Recipient and Expenditure Data, FY 1981-83." For insurance-based programs, a Social Security Administration report called "An Analysis of and the Interrelationships among Selected Income Maintenance and Related Programs" was also very helpful. Other sources used were program laws and regulations. In addition, program officials were frequently contacted.

ABBREVIATIONS

We attempted to avoid abbreviations; however, in some cases we found it necessary. When addressing program regulations and descriptions, "CFR" refers to Code of Federal Regulations and "CFDA" refers to the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance.

CHAPTER 4 -- CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE PROGRAM RESPONSIBILITY

Washington Post reprinted by permission of the D.C. Public Library

CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE PROGRAM RESPONSIBILITY

We identified the United States House of Representatives and United States Senate committee(s) having primary legislative responsibility for the 91 programs identified by number in the inventory. A specific committee within the House and Senate, respectively, is assigned legislative responsibility for each federal program. In some instances, this responsibility is shared between two or more committees. We recognize that other committees play an important role in some of these programs. However, if they are not charged with primary responsibility, they are not included in this profile as the responsible committee.

Identification of committee responsibility should be helpful to program administrators and program users/recipients desiring to suggest legislative program changes in hopes of closing loopholes, eliminating abuses, reducing red tape, etc. The programs are listed in alphabetical order by program category with a division between needs-based and insurance-based.
