ABSTRACT

This study was undertaken to determine the extent to which State Education Agencies (SEA) are involved in either mandating or recommending school library media personnel evaluation procedures or forms to Local Education Agencies (LEA). A survey instrument was mailed to all 50 SEA's with a 94% return rate. Well over half of the SEA's were involved to some degree in the evaluation process or will be in the very near future, but this involvement for most is in terms of quality control versus creation of evaluation procedures. While the best evaluation procedures incorporate sound and effective evaluation practices, the content validity of the evaluation instruments is weak and there is little sense of a cohesive role. Recommendations include a call for the national associations to determine and disseminate a professional role to aid SEAs who might be creating or revising evaluation instruments. Appendices contain the 15-item questionnaire; study cover letters; and sample evaluation instruments from Missouri, North Carolina, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, and Wisconsin. (Author/THC)

State Education Agencies and
The Evaluation of School Library Media Specialists:

A Report

Abstract

The purpose of this study was to determine the extent to which State Education Agencies (SEA) are involved in either mandating, or recommending school library media personnel evaluation procedures or forms to Local Education Agencies (LEA). A survey instrument was mailed to all 50 SEA's with a 94% return rate. Well over half of the SEA's were involved to some degree in the evaluation process or will be in the very near future, but this involvement for most is in terms of quality control versus creation of evaluation procedures. While the best evaluation procedures incorporate sound and effective evaluation practices, the content validity of the evaluation instruments is weak. Little sense of a cohesive role is evident. Recommendations include a call for the national associations to determine and disseminate a professional role to aid SEA's who might be creating or revising evaluation instruments.

State Education Agencies and
The Evaluation of School Library Media Specialists:
A Report

Introduction

The publication of A Nation at Risk (National Commission on Excellence in Education, 1983) acted as a catalyst for the development of teacher evaluation procedures, a phenomenon whose growth had already been stimulated by the accountability movement of the early 1980's. (See Phi Delta Kappa, 1984 for a collection of articles on this subject.) In increasing numbers, state legislatures became involved in mandating teacher evaluation procedures. More often than not, the State Education Agency (SEA) has been the vehicle through which the mandated evaluation has been designed and implemented.

The purpose of this study was to determine the extent to which SEAs were involved in mandating or recommending evaluation procedures and forms for School Library Media Specialists (SLMS) to Local Education Agencies (LEA). A further purpose was to examine these procedures and forms to answer the following questions:

1. Who was involved in designing the forms or procedures?
2. Are SLMSs evaluated differently from classroom teachers?
3. Who is involved in the evaluation procedure?
4. Are evaluators trained?
5. Are the roles of the SLMS clarified?
6. Is the evaluation based on library media program goals and objectives?
7. What library media program areas are evaluated?
8. What procedures are followed in the evaluation process?
9. Are evaluation procedures related to merit pay?

METHOD

Population

The population for this study was the 50 state supervisors of school library media services. This population was identified by using the School Library Media Annual 1985 (Aaron and Scales, 1985). The entire population was utilized for the study.

Instrument

An instrument was designed based upon the research questions previously identified. The questionnaire consisted of 15 questions which requested check off and/or open ended answers. No demographic information was collected as causality was beyond the scope of this study. (See Appendix A for a copy of the questionnaire.)

The questionnaire was submitted to several persons for comments on logic and readability and then was revised. The respondents were asked to forward any documents related to the SLMS evaluation process with the completed questionnaire.

Procedure

A cover letter was designed which introduced the study and requested participation. (See Appendix B) The letter, questionnaire, and a postage paid envelope were mailed to each of the respondents.

Four weeks after the initial mailing, a second mailing was made to those who had not responded to the first mailing. Finally, after another four weeks, an attempt was made to contact by telephone those who had not yet responded in order to solicit their participation in the study.

RESULTS

Forty-three or 86% of the questionnaires, were returned following the two mailings. Phone interviews, based upon the questionnaire, were conducted for four states. The total return rate was 94%.

Question #1. Does your State Education Agency (SEA) MANDATE an evaluation procedure or form to be used with school library media specialists? (Please check one or more replies.) PROCEDURE FORM NEITHER Thirteen State Education Agencies mandate a procedure for the Local Education Agencies to follow in evaluating school library media specialists.

Six SEAs mandate a particular form to be used. (See Appendix C for examples of forms and procedures.)

Of the 13 SEAs which mandate a procedure, 7 mandate only that a procedure be developed and implemented by the LEA. The SEA does, however, maintain the right of approval of the procedure in the majority of these cases.

There were seven respondents who indicated that their SEA currently neither mandates nor recommends an evaluation procedure, but included notes to indicate that evaluation projects were in some stage of development. Their comments can be summarized as follows:

A. Two states have passed bills mandating an evaluation of teachers, but development of the procedures has not been started.

B. Three states are in the process of developing their procedures. All expect completion and implementation in 1986.

C. In one state, a statewide evaluation procedure for teachers is in effect. SLMSs, however, are not part of the statewide process.

D. "To serve as an information exchange" is the role of the SEA in one state. This SEA collects SLMS evaluation procedures and forms from the districts within the state and makes them available to other districts. Out of 24 districts in this State, 12 use a form developed exclusively for evaluating the SIMS.

Question #2. Does your SEA RECOMMEND an evaluation procedure or form to be used with school library media specialists? PROCEDURE FORM
 NEITHER

Four SEAs recommended an evaluation procedure.

Four SEAs recommended a specific form.

Question #3. What is the main purpose of the evaluation?

 to improve performance

 to document decisions regarding personnel retention or termination

 to document decisions regarding the awarding of merit pay

 other (please describe)

14 to improve performance

 2 to document decisions regarding personnel retention or termination

 4 to document decisions regarding the awarding of merit pay

 2 other

The two respondents which listed the main purpose of the evaluation as "other" described the alternative reason as:

A. Improvement of the student learning experience.

B. To identify general role, share a philosophic base, and to specify types of service, activities, facilities, equipment and materials.

Question #4. If an evaluation procedure is mandated or recommended, please describe the steps in the procedure.

Summaries of the 9 mandated or recommended procedures are as follows (Several states have similar procedures. These have been combined into a single summary here.)

- PROCEDURE A.
1. SLMS who choose to compete for merit pay initiates the process,
 2. SLMS take a test on pertinent subject matter,
 3. SLMS assembles evidence to demonstrate performance of behaviors specified in a domain published by the SEA,
 4. A team of evaluators award a score to the SLMS based upon the supplied evidence.
 5. The scores from the test and the performance rating (each counting 50%) are combined, and
 6. The top 25% (based on the combined scores) of all teachers, including the SLMS are awarded merit pay.
- PROCEDURE B.
1. An instrument was developed at the state level to measure the possession of library media competencies.
 2. Each district establishes what the minimum score will be in each competency, and
 3. The actual evaluation takes place during the school's accreditation process.
- PROCEDURE C.
1. An annual plan is developed. It includes a job description, activities, and expected outcomes in each of the function areas specified,
 1. A pre-observation conference is held during which the purpose of the evaluation is discussed and the time and place of evaluation is set,
 2. A formal observation takes place using an instrument to collect information in an objective manner,
 3. A post-observation conference takes place,

4. An informal observation takes place to observe activities which do not lend themselves to formal observation (e.g. planning with teachers, working with students),
5. Indirect data collection takes place,
6. A performance approval plan is created; it includes a plan to help the employee improve performance. The plan contains objectives, strategies for achieving objectives, resource requirements, and completion dates, and
7. A summative appraisal/evaluation conference takes place during which the year's performance is reviewed, discussed, and summarized.

PROCEDURE D. During first year of service

1. An assistance committee is formed: it consists of an SEA representative, a SLMS from the district, and a teacher educator from an institution of higher education,
2. The committee assists in all matters affecting the performance of the position,
3. The committee evaluates SLMS using an SEA approved instrument during 3 observations,
4. The committee and SLMS meet and decide upon recommendations,
5. The committee chair and local school district representative make recommendations as to certification, and
6. Each SLMS is evaluated once a year following the 2nd year of employment.

- PROCEDURE E. 1. An orientation takes place during which the SLMS is informed by the principal of the purpose, instruments, and procedures which will be utilized in the evaluation,

2. A minimum of 2 observations are carried out by the principal using the approved instrument,
3. Either party may request a conference following the observation,
4. An improvement plan is written,
5. If the principal cannot provide an improvement plan for the SLMS, the SLMS is referred to an improvement team, and
6. If the SLMS cannot or will not remediate stated deficiencies, dismissal procedures may be initiated.

PROCEDURE F. Initial evaluation procedures are carried out by a statewide team to identify 3 levels of SLMS. After the initial identification SLMS who wishes to move up a level is evaluated using a predetermined instrument by a SLMS at the next higher level.

PROCEDURE G. State library association develops and/or obtains SLMS evaluation instruments and makes them available to interested school district through the SEA.

PROCEDURE H. The SEA develops guidelines on which LEAs design their respective evaluation forms/procedures. The SEA then approves or rejects the LEA forms/procedures.

PROCEDURE I. The SEA mandates that LEA must develop a policy and procedure, but the SEA has no further control or responsibility beyond this point.

Question #5. Does the evaluation procedure or form used with the library media specialist differ from that used with classroom teachers? YES NO

8 YES

6 NO

Several respondents reported that this was a local district decision and that they did not have the actual data at this time.

Question #6. Which personnel are involved in the evaluation of the library media specialist? (Check all that apply.)

library media specialist being evaluated

principal

library media supervisor

teachers

other school library media specialists

students

other (please specify)

17 LMS being evaluated

13 principal

7 library media supervisor

3 teachers

3 other SLMS

2 students

1 other

Since several procedures utilized teams to evaluate, and these teams would be determined individually for each evaluation, several respondents checked more than one category of evaluator.

Question #7. Is the evaluator(s) trained in the evaluation procedure and/or use of the form? YES NO

(If YES, please describe the training.)

9 YES 0 NO

Several respondents remarked that, while training of the evaluator had been mandated, the procedure was in the development stage.

Other comments indicate that this training might include three weeks initial training, a semi-annual inservice, one and one-half days of initial training period with an annual one day update thereafter, or no specific training. Most of the training described covered observation techniques and instruments to be utilized.

Question #8. Did the library media profession (librarian media specialists, supervisors, library media faculty in universities) assist in the design of the evaluation instrument or procedure? YES NO (If yes, please describe the assistance.)

11 YES 1 NO

Among the assistance described were the following:

- A. State library/media supervisor chaired the committee to design the instrument for evaluating SLMS,
- B. State school library media association developed the form,
- C. A committee composed of teachers, administrators, SLMSs, college professors, and SEA representatives developed the procedure,
- D. A library school class developed the instrument,
- E. A committee of 9 SLMSs developed form,
- F. A committee of 21 lay persons and educators, including 2 SLMSs, developed procedure and form.

Question #9. Does the evaluation include a clarification and/or description of the nature of the work to be performed by the library media specialist being evaluated? YES NO

(If YES, how is this accomplished?)

11 YES 3 NO

This clarification was accomplished mainly by the provision of a predetermined listing of competencies, behaviors, activities on which the SLMS would be evaluated. Only a handful of procedures allowed the SLMS being evaluated any opportunity to negotiate which role areas on which he/she would be evaluated. No procedures were identified in which the SLMS could completely negotiate the goals and objectives of the program.

Question #10. Is the evaluation based upon the established goals or objectives of the library media program? YES NO

(If YES, how is this accomplished?)

YES NO

As noted in the previous question, the establishment of goals and objectives as part of the evaluation process occurs seldomly. Furthermore, in these few cases, this determination is restricted by predetermined "function areas" deemed acceptable.

Question #11. Is an evaluation form mandated or recommended? YES NO

Does this evaluation form utilize a judgement perception scale as a method of evaluating? (e.g., The school library media specialist provides leadership to the school staff in selecting instructional materials. never seldom usually always)

YES NO

Question #12. Does the evaluation procedure measure actual output of the library media programs? (e.g., book circulation figures, library media in-service programs for faculty, production of instructional materials, curriculum committee assignments, etc.) YES NO

YES NO

Several respondents commented that, while actual output was not measured as part of the evaluation process, the evaluator would be aware of this performance, and this would influence his/her judgement.

Several respondents pointed out that the procedure used in their state required the submission of evidence by the SLMS being evaluated, and that this evidence would consist largely of such output.

Question #13. Please check any of the following areas which are covered in the evaluation:

- Promotion of reading (book talks, story hours, displays)
 - Broadening the literature experience (teaching units on folklore fantasy, etc.)
 - Teaching the use of the LMC (card catalog, indexes, atlases, Readers' Guide, encyclopedia, etc.)
 - Teaching critical reading/viewing skills
 - General collection development (books, periodicals, vertical file)
 - Instructional materials collection development (AV materials, programmed texts, etc.)
 - Professional collection development (for faculty to improve their skills)
 - Facilities management
 - Personnel supervision
 - Production of instructional materials
 - Instructional design consultation
 - Maintaining a positive atmosphere and rapport
 - Involvement in professional associations
 - Other (please specify)
- 7 Promotion of reading (book talks, story hours, displays)

8 Teaching the use of the LMC (card catalog, indexes, atlases, Readers' Guide, encyclopedia, etc.)

2 Other (please specify)

added:

1 Community resources to assist students

1 Arranging library displays to promote usage

1 Periodic assessment of school library program

Question #14. Is there a post-evaluation follow-up conference in the evaluation? YES NO

(If YES, please describe.)

7 YES 4 NO

Among the descriptions are the two following categories:

A. The conference is mandated by SEA policy, but it is up to LEA to design it.

B. The conference takes place only for an "unsatisfactory" rating, and then a team of "excellent" teachers and principals work with the SLMS to improve his/her performance.

Question #15. If your SEA is involved in mandating or recommending merit pay procedures for school library media specialists, please describe the involvement.

School districts in four states use the results of the evaluation procedure as a justification for merit pay decisions. Three other states are developing merit pay procedures and will include the SLMS. One state has developed merit pay procedures but these do not include the SLMS, only classroom teachers.

DISCUSSION AND RECOMMENDATION

Whatever the combination of forces which has caused the sudden demand for evaluation of teachers, these forces have been very effective. Well over half of the State Education Agencies are involved to some degree in the evaluation process or will be in the very near future.

The specifics of the evaluation procedure remain, largely, in the hands of the local education agency. This, perhaps, is a reflection of the traditional independence of the local school boards. The main purpose of the evaluation is, to improve instruction, rather than to support punitive action.

Evaluation Procedures

For those states where a specific procedure has been mandated or recommended, many positive characteristics can be noted. The majority of the procedures have recognized that, while the SLMS performs some tasks which are similar to the classroom teacher, there are enough additional tasks to warrant a distinctly different evaluation form. Furthermore, several of the better procedures recognize the fact that the SLMS cannot be adequately evaluated by direct observation while the SLMS is teaching a group of students. The observation process must also include techniques which capture one-to-one interactions between SLMS and teacher and SLMS and student.

Another encouraging characteristic of several of the evaluation procedures is that they are very systematic in nature and tend to reinforce positive behavior change on the part of the person being evaluated. These procedures involve the setting of goals within the prescribed function areas by the SLMS, the establishment of performance indicators and timelines, and the evaluation of the SLMS on the basis of whether these goals have been met. These procedures often allow for flexibility and the addition of locally generated material. In fact, the best procedures incorporate the recommendations found by Wise, et al, 1984 for effective teacher evaluation practices.

A further illustration of sound evaluation practice by the SEA is the fact that the SLMS is often involved in the evaluation practice from the start. This is done frequently through an orientation process.

A less encouraging aspect of the results from this questionnaire study concerns the training which the evaluators receive. While all of the respondents indicated that the persons doing the evaluation would be trained in the procedure, the duration of the respective training period seems to be inadequate. This is especially true in light of the complexity of some of the procedures utilized.

In summary, procedures meet all of the requirements of an effective and efficient evaluation system. These can serve as models for SEAs and LEAs which will be creating procedures in the near future.

Evaluation Criteria

The greatest disappointment engendered by the study results was the lack of content validity of the evaluation instruments utilized. While the instruments contained a wide variety of activities, there is no real sense of a cohesive role which can be gained from studying them.

This is probably due to a number of causes. Foremost among them is the fact that the library media profession has no clear role definition. As a profession we have developed by adding on various roles, a process complicated by the accelerating technological developments of the last two decades. Our current standards, which never really completed the diffusion process, are over ten years old.

Furthermore, there is a currently acceptable practice of validating an evaluation instrument by making sure it reflects what the practitioner is doing, essentially formalizing the status quo. Even the use of sophisticated statistical techniques such as factor analysis cannot bring a coherent order out of tasks as unrelated as those found on many of the evaluation instruments.

There are many dangers inherent in using nonvalid evaluation instruments.

Among these are:

While any evaluation procedure which includes effective incentives will create an initial increase in activity, unless there is a clear direction in which to move the results will be frustration and hostility.

The presentation to those outside of the profession of a listing of activities tends to formalize these as the role for the profession. It is distressing to think that principals, teachers, parents, and students view the role of the SLMS as embodied totally by the tasks listed in many of these instruments.

Recommendations

The emphasis on evaluation of teachers is a relatively recent phenomenon. There are many states and districts which have not yet determined the content of the SLMS's role. Additionally many of the states which have established a procedure allow for the revision of the functions under which the SLMS will be evaluated. Therefore, a great deal of benefit can still be gained from the creation of a clear role description for the SLMS.

Both AASL and AECT need to continue with all deliberate speed the process of determining and disseminating the role of the SLMS. Appropriate models exist which can be modified. It is essential, however, whatever model is accepted, that it be based upon a view of the purposes of the school library media program. Only once the purposes of the program have been established can a coherent instrument be designed which contains the tasks to be performed in order to realize those purposes.

September 25, 1985

Dear

As you are aware, the area of teacher evaluation has received an increasing amount of emphasis lately. This emphasis has occasionally manifested itself through formal action by state education agencies. Such actions have ranged from the provision of sample recommendation forms to the mandating of full-scale evaluation procedures which directly impact on merit pay decisions.

We believe that the field would benefit greatly from a study which collects state-of-the-art information regarding evaluation practices and how they relate to school library media specialists. We plan to disseminate the results of the study through presentations at AECT and AASL.

Would you please take a few minutes to complete the enclosed questionnaire and return it in the enclosed envelope by October 18? Would you also consider sharing with us any forms and/or procedural descriptions? We will not disseminate the specifics of what you send us, but rather report information in the aggregate.

Thank you in advance for your assistance.

Address

Dear Name:

We are undertaking a study to ascertain the current status of involvement by state education agencies in the evaluation/merit pay process for school library media specialists. Although we have had an excellent return of our questionnaire, we believe that 100% return is necessary to provide truly authoritative information in this area.

Enclosed is a copy of the questionnaire which was sent to you earlier in case the original was misplaced. We would very much appreciate your cooperation and believe that the results of our study might be of use to your agency. In order that we can compile the results of this survey by the first of the year, we would appreciate it if you could complete the questionnaire and return it to us by November 21. MEDIA SPECIALIST _____

EVALUATOR _____

SCHOOL _____

Mid-Year Evaluation Date _____

End- of- Year Evaluation Date _____

BACKGROUND OF THE INSTRUMENT

This instrument was developed in response to numerous requests from administrators, media specialists and others interested in media services for young people. It has been the result of a cooperative effort between the library/media consultants in the State Department of Education, district media coordinators, members of the South Carolina Association of School Librarians, and students and faculty in the College of Library and Information Science, University of South Carolina.

The instrument was designed to measure the job performance of the media specialist or the basic media professional in a school program.

INSTRUCTIONS

The primary purpose of job performance evaluation is to help the media specialist and his or her evaluator to develop an accurate picture of:

- A. What is expected of the media specialist
- B. How well the media specialist is meeting these expectations
- C. How the media specialist might improve in order to realize these expectations

This instrument may be used alone, as it is, or may be used in conjunction with other planning and evaluation processes. For example, it is suggested that the media specialists develop specific yearly and longer term objectives for the library media program. These should be considered in the evaluation process along with or in relationship to the descriptions included in this instrument. Some districts stress traits evaluation more so than is included in this instrument; these districts may find that by compiling both, a broader and a deeper understanding of the media specialist's job may be obtained.
