ABSTRACT

The booklet is an informational and educational tool designed to help a consumer do three things: (1) to communicate more effectively with those who provide the products and services he or she buys; (2) to locate sources of help; and (3) to resolve complaints in the most effective manner. The booklet contains two major parts. Part 1, "How To Be a Smart Consumer," features tips on how to get the most for one's money and avoid purchasing problems, gives steps for handling complaints and writing a complaint letter, and highlights special sources to contact when unable to resolve a complaint directly through the seller. Part 2, "The Consumer Assistance Directory," lists consumer offices in the public and private sectors that provide assistance with consumer complaints. An index of appropriate organizations or agencies arranged by subject and a section highlighting services for the disabled are included. The teacher's guide that concludes this document is intended to be used in conjunction with the Handbook but can be used without it also. The guide contains three sections: (1) two suggested teaching units with related support material (unit 1 covers purchasing and unit 2 deals with effective complaint handling); (2) a separate "Major Sources of Help" section that includes public and private agencies; and (3) suggested follow-up activities. While written for the secondary level, the guide is also useful for elementary and adult programs. (TRS)

Buyers and sellers alike should recognize the basic rights of consumers: the right to choice among products and services; the right to information enabling them to make sound purchases; the right to healthful and safe products; the right to be heard when products do not meet standards. Government at all levels will continue its responsible stewardship of consumer safety as well as its vigorous prosecution of illegal and deceptive practices. But in the final analysis it is the knowledgeable consumer and the responsible business person whose decisions will determine the success or failure of products and services in the competitive marketplace.

THE WHITE HOUSE WASHINGTON

Dear Consumer:

Consumers today deal in an increasingly global marketplace, replete with an endless number of domestic and foreign products. Our marketplace, without a doubt, is the most spectacular in the world, featuring an extraordinary variety of goods and wide choices in quality and cost. Consumers need reliable information for making intelligent purchasing decisions in that global marketplace based on their values, their resources, and the lifestyle they seek. Consumer information and education enable consumers to help themselves both in purchasing decisions and in effectively seeking restitution when problems do occur.

This process, in an increasingly complex marketplace, involves a relationship between buyer and seller that must be based on trust, good will, and free exchange of information. You, as the consumer, need information about products, credit, warranties, and many other important consumer services. No matter how excellent the quality of the product or service or how well informed and reputable the dealer, there will be times when human error occurs. That is why communication is so important. Ours is a free marketplace where both buyer and seller profit when buyers' needs are satisfied. One very effective way business and industry have tried to increase this satisfaction is by improving consumer complaint handling programs and communication channels.

This Consumer's Resource Handbook is an informational and educational tool to help you do three things: (1) communicate more effectively with those who provide the products and services you buy, (2) locate sources of help, and (3) resolve your complaints in the most effective manner. The Handbook contains two major parts. Part I, How To Be A Smart Consumer, features tips on how to get the most for your money and avoid purchasing problems, gives steps for handling your own complaint and writing a complaint letter, and highlights special sources to contact when unable to resolve your complaint directly through the seller. Part II, the Consumer Assistance Directory, lists consumer offices in both public and private sectors that provide assistance with consumer complaints. If you don't know which office to contact, check the index in the back of your Handbook, by subject, for the appropriate organization or agency. Also included is a section highlighting services for handicapped persons.

Let me also introduce to you our friendly assistant, Eubie Smart, who appears throughout the Handbook with consumer tips and reminders on resolving complaints. Eubie is a United States Office of Consumer Affairs trademark to help identify and symbolize our Office as a source of consumer education and information, services and assistance.

At USOCA special effort is directed toward providing national leadership to improve consumer education opportunities in schools, in communities, and in programs of business and government. We work with many of the public and private sector groups listed in this Handbook to encourage programs that provide the consumer with accurate information and effective education. We want to help people help themselves to gain knowledge, information and the skills for making informed choices in the marketplace.

Individual consumers will find the Handbook a handy reference tool. Educators may wish to use it as a source of information and ideas to develop innovative teaching units in their consumer courses. Consumer leaders in business and government will find it invaluable as a resource for locating other people who share mutual consumer education program objectives, and who may assist in resolving consumer complaints. We hope it is helpful to you and to the consumers we all serve.

If you have a moment, please share your thoughts with me on this Handbook and how it can be made even more useful to you.

Sincerely,

How To Be A Smart Consumer

Tips on How to Get the Most for Your Money and Avoid Purchasing Problems

Before Making a Purchase:

- Analyze what you need and what features are important to you.
- Compare brands. Utilize word-of-mouth recommendations and formal product comparison reports. Check with your local library for magazines and other publications containing consumer information.
- Compare stores. Look for a store with a good reputation and take advantage of sales.
- Check for any additional charges, such as delivery and service costs.
- Compare warranties.
- Read terms of contracts carefully.
- Check the return or exchange policy.

After Your Purchase:

- Follow proper use and care instructions for products.
- Read and understand the warranty provisions. Keep in mind that you may have additional warranty rights in your state. Check with your state or local consumer office to find out. A listing of these offices begins on page 40.
- If trouble develops, report the problem as soon as possible. Do not try to fix the product yourself as this may void the warranty.
- Keep a record of efforts to have your problems remedied. This record should include names of people you speak to, times, dates and other relevant information.
- Use the complaint procedures and Consumer Assistance Directory in this Handbook to find out how and where to get your problem resolved.

How To Handle Your Own Complaint

Even in today's complex marketplace, you should expect quality products and services at fair prices. When something goes wrong, however, you need to let the company know about your problem and try to resolve it with them. Not only is this the fastest way to get your complaint resolved, but it also gives the company a chance to keep you as a satisfied customer and gain new customers by learning from mistakes. Most companies welcome this opportunity, and it may help you avoid future complaints.

We recommend the following steps in handling your own complaint:

Identify Problem

Identify the problem, what you have done to resolve it, and what you believe would be a fair settlement. Do you want your money back? Would you like the product repaired? Will an exchange do?

Gather Documentation

Gather documentation regarding your complaint. Sales receipts, repair orders, warranties, cancelled checks, or contracts will back up your complaint and help the company solve your problem.

Go Back to Where You Made The Purchase

Contact the person who sold you the item or performed the service. Calmly and accurately explain the problem and what action you would like taken. If that person is not helpful, ask for the supervisor or manager and repeat your complaint. A large percentage of consumer problems are resolved at this level. Chances are yours will be too.

Allow each person you contact a reasonable period of time to resolve your problem before contacting another source for assistance.

Don't Give Up

If you are not satisfied with the response, don't give up. If the company operates nationally or the product is a national brand, write a letter to the person responsible for consumer complaints at the company's headquarters. If the company doesn't have a consumer office, direct your letter to the president of the company.

Writing a Complaint Letter

Where to Write

If you have already contacted the person who sold you the product or service or the company is out of town, you will need to write a letter to pursue your complaint.

For a listing of many corporate consumer contacts and their addresses, see page 7.

If you are unable to find the corporate consumer contact, first check in your phone directory to see if the company has a local office. If it does, call and ask for the name and address of the consumer contact, or if they do not have someone who handles this function, the name and address of the company's president. If there is no local listing, check Standard & Poor's Register of Corporations, Directors and Executives. It lists over 45,000 American business firms and can be found in most libraries.

If you don't have the name of the manufacturer of the product, check your local library for the Thomas Register. It lists the manufacturers of thousands of products.

What to Write

- Include your name, address and home and work phone numbers.
- Type your letter if possible. If it is handwritten, make sure it is neat and easy to read.
- Make your letter brief and to the point. Include all important facts about your purchase including the date and place where you made the purchase and any information you can give about the product or service such as serial or model numbers or specific type of service.
- State exactly what you want done about the problem and how long you are willing to wait to get it resolved. Be reasonable.
- Include all documents regarding your problem. Be sure to send COPIES, not originals.
- Avoid writing an angry, sarcastic, or threatening letter. The person reading your letter probably was not responsible for your problem, but may be very helpful in resolving it.
- Keep a copy of the letter for your records.
- The following sample letter will be helpful in writing to the company. Also refer to it if you write to other sources of assistance if you are unsuccessful in getting your complaint resolved directly with the company. Just remember, if you need to write a letter to a Better Business Bureau, government agency, trade association, or other source of assistance, give additional information about what you have done so far to get your complaint resolved.

Major Sources of Help

If you have failed in your attempt to get your complaint resolved directly with the person or company you did business with, there are other sources of help. Many are described in this section.

Industry Consumer Programs

What They Are:

Several industry associations can help you with consumer problems relating to their industry. These associations are formed by individual businesses which join together to assist with business problems and promote their industry. They usually offer consumer information and some handle complaints. Trade associations have been established in just about every field of business and consumer interest and number around 40,000 nationwide.

How to Reach Them:

Selected industry associations that handle complaints are listed on page 38. Many other trade associations have varying consumer functions. These functions are described in a directory entitled National Trade & Professional Associations of the U.S. and Canada and Labor Unions or other help directories. Check with your local library.

Industry Third-Party Dispute Resolution Programs

What They Are:

Special programs established by certain corporations and trade associations to help resolve problems between consumers and industry members are listed on page 37. If you have trouble with your car, a home appliance, a funeral director, or other products or services, there might be a third-party dispute resolution program to help you. But remember, this should not be the first step in solving a consumer complaint. Contact them only after you have been unsuccessful in getting your complaint settled by the local company or organization you originally dealt with.

What They Do:

In general, after receiving your complaint a staff person will probably try to resolve the complaint before it goes any further. If these staff persons acting as informal mediators cannot get the two sides to agree, they will refer your case to an independent person or panel that will then make a decision on your case. In some instances, this decision is binding and must be accepted by both the consumer and the business. In other cases, only the business is required to accept the decision. There are also programs where decisions are not binding on either party. Therefore, you should ask for a copy of the rules before you file your case with a third-party program.

Better Business Bureaus

What They Are:

Better Business Bureaus (BBBs) are non-profit organizations sponsored by private, local businesses. There are some 170 BBBs in the United States today. For a listing, see page 32. The services offered by BBBs vary from place to place. These include: general information on products or services, reliability reports, background information on local businesses and organizations, and records of companies' complaint handling performances. Depending on the policy of the individual BBB, it may or may not tell you the nature of the complaint against a business, but all will tell you if a complaint has been registered. Many of the BBBs accept written complaints and will contact a firm on your behalf. BBBs do not judge or rate individual products or brands, handle complaints concerning the prices of goods or services, or give legal advice.

BBBs offer binding arbitration to those who ask for it. The Council of Better Business Bureaus, which is sponsored by national businesses, also offers consumer education programs and reports on charitable organizations. The national Council is located at 1515 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, Virginia 22209

Media Programs

What They Are:

Local newspapers and radio-TV stations throughout the United States offer "Action" or "Hot Line" services where consumers with problems can get help.

These news media often get successful results for consumers because of their power and influence in communities, and because the possibility of publicity may encourage a merchant or business to take swifter action to resolve consumer problems. Some Action Lines, however, may not be able to handle every complaint received. They sometimes select the most severe problems, or those most representative of a number of complaints.

When your own personal efforts fail to produce the desired results, keep these "Action" resources in mind.

How to Reach Them:

To find these services, check with your local newspapers, radio and TV stations, or local library.

State, County and City Consumer Offices

What They Are:

If you are not satisfied with a company's response to your complaint (or if a response is never received), a local consumer office, if there is one in your area, is a good place to go with your inquiry or complaint. Local consumer offices can be particularly helpful since they can be contacted easily by phone or sometimes in person, and are familiar with local businesses and laws. Be sure to have copies of your sales slips, other sales documents, and all correspondence with the retailer and manufacturer when you contact your local agency.

If there is no local consumer office in your area, contact a state consumer office. State consumer offices are set up differently from state to state. Some states have a separate department of consumer affairs while others have a consumer affairs office as a part of the governor's office or attorney general's office, or both. These offices will either help you directly or refer you to the proper agency for assistance.

If you have a consumer problem with a business transaction occurring in a state other than where you reside, you should contact the state where you conducted your business, if possible. Many state and local consumer offices have a large selection of information and educational materials available. In addition, many states, counties and cities have a wide variety of other helpful community services, including social, family, youth, handicapped, day care, mental health, elderly, general health, recreation, family planning, alcoholism, nutrition, income maintenance, child support, food stamps and libraries. A listing of state and local consumer and other government offices begins on page 40 of this Handbook.

Occupational and Professional Licensing Boards

What They Are:

If you have a problem with professional or occupational services, you may be able to get help from a state licensing or regulatory board. There are an estimated 1,500 state boards which license or register more than 550 professions and occupations, including doctors, lawyers, nurses, accountants, pharmacists, funeral directors, plumbers, electricians, auto repair facilities, employment agencies, collection agencies, and electronic repair facilities.

What They Do:

State boards set licensing standards; set rules and regulations; prepare and give examinations; issue, deny or revoke licenses; bring disciplinary actions; and handle consumer complaints.

If you contact a state board for help, it will usually bring your complaint to the attention of its licensee and it will seek a satisfactory resolution to your problem. If necessary, the board may conduct an investigation and take disciplinary action against the licensee in the form of probation, license suspension or revocation.

Many boards will also have consumer education materials to help you in selecting a professional or tradesperson in their field.

How To Reach Them:

You can find out about a state licensing board by contacting your local consumer office. Some boards might also have regional offices in your area. Check your local phone book under state government offices or under professional listings. You can also ask professionals or tradespersons about the board responsible for their licensing or registration—in fact, you should ask to see a license or registration before you decide to use their services.

Federal Agencies

Some Federal agencies have enforcement responsibilities for specific consumer products and services and can handle individual complaints. Others take action for the benefit of the public as a whole, but are not able to resolve individual consumer problems.

However, each Federal agency listed under the Selected Federal Agencies section starting on page 67 has a mechanism for responding to consumer complaints and inquiries. Many Federal Agencies also have publications, fact sheets, and other information that may be helpful in dealing with marketplace problems. If you need help in determining where to go with your specific problem, check the Index at the end of this book or call the nearest Federal Information Center listed on page 75.

Small Claims Courts

What They Are:

If you have a complaint that you have not been able to resolve, consider going to small claims court. Court procedures generally are simple, inexpensive, quick and informal. Court fees are nominal, and you often get your filing fee back if you win your case. Generally, you won't need a lawyer. In fact, in some states, lawyers are not permitted. If you do live in a state that allows lawyers and the party you are suing brings one, don't be intimidated. The court is informal and most judges make allowances for consumers who appear without lawyers.

But remember, even though the court is informal, the ruling of the court must be followed, just like any other court.

What They Do:

These courts, as the name suggests, are for small claims. The maximum amounts that can be claimed or awarded differ from state to state.

If the party bringing the suit wins the case, the party who lost often will follow the court's decision without additional legal action. Sometimes, however, losing parties will not obey the decision. In these cases, the winning party may go back to court and ask for the order to be "enforced." Depending on local laws, the court may, for example, order property to be taken by law enforcement officials and sold. The winning party will get the money from the sale up to the amount they are owed. Or, if the person who owes the money receives a salary, the court may order the employer to garnish or deduct some money from each paycheck and give it to the winner of the law suit.

How To Reach Them:

Check your local phone book under your municipal, county or state government headings for small claims court listings. When you contact the court, ask the court clerk how to use the small claims court. Sit in on a small claims court session before taking a case to court to become familiar with its operation.

Legal Aid and Legal Services

What They Are:

Legal Aid and Legal Services offices help people who cannot afford to hire private lawyers, and who meet financial eligibility requirements. There are more than 1,000 of these offices around the country, staffed by lawyers, paralegals (people who have taken courses in legal assistance) and law students. All offer free legal services to those who qualify.

In some cities, both Legal Aid and Legal Services offices are federally funded. Legal Aid offices may also be financed by state, local, or private funding, or by local bar associations. The Legal Services Corporation in Washington, D.C., is funded by the Federal Government, and it, in turn, awards grants to local Legal Services programs around the country. Also, many law schools throughout the nation conduct law clinics, where students assist other lawyers as part of their training.

What They Do:

These offices generally offer legal assistance with problems such as landlord-tenant, credit, utilities, family issues such as divorce and adoption, social security, welfare, unemployment, and worker's compensation. Each legal aid office has its own board of directors that determines the priorities of the office and the kinds of cases handled. Therefore, the Legal Aid office serving your area may not handle all of the types of cases mentioned above. However, these offices should be able to refer you to other local, state or national organizations that can provide advice or help.

Private Lawyers

How To Reach Them:

If you need help in finding a lawyer, check with the Lawyer Referral Service of your state, city or county bar association. Local and state bar associations are usually listed in area telephone directories.

Since lawyers are now permitted to advertise, it is a bit easier to find one who fits your needs and your pocketbook. Check the Yellow Pages of the telephone directory or newspapers for these advertisements. If you have a complaint about an attorney or need further information, again contact your state, city or county bar association.

Private and Voluntary Consumer Groups

Private and voluntary consumer organizations are usually created to advocate various or specific consumer interests. In some communities they will help individual consumers with their complaints. To find out if such a group is in your community, contact your state or local consumer affairs office.

Consumer Credit Counseling Services

What They Are:

Counseling services provide aid to individuals having difficulty budgeting their money and/or meeting necessary monthly expenses. Many organizations, including credit unions, family service centers and religious organizations offer some type of credit counseling.

Another source of help is the Consumer Credit Counseling Services (CCCS), sponsored by the National Foundation for Consumer Credit and financially supported by banks, credit card companies, finance companies and other credit offering organizations.

What They Do:

The CCCS counseling program provides money management techniques, debt payment plans, and educational programs. In working out a debt repayment program individually tailored to a consumer's agreed upon ability to pay, a counselor takes into consideration the needs of the family and the requirements and needs of the creditor.

Consumer credit counseling programs are nonprofit and provide service either free or for a nominal charge.

How To Reach Them:

To find out if your area is covered by a CCCS, look in your local phone directory or check with the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, 8701 Georgia Avenue, Suite 601, Silver Spring, Maryland 20910.

Other Consumer Information

The Consumer Information Catalog lists more than 200 free or low-cost federal booklets on a variety of topics, many of which would be helpful in addressing consumer complaints or problems. Topics include: careers and education, child care, federal benefits, financial planning, gardening, health, housing, small business, travel, hobbies, cars, etc. This free Catalog is published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the U.S. General Services Administration, and may be obtained by sending your name and address to: Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Please note that some of the sources of help listed in the Consumer's Resource Handbook have a policy of declining complaints from consumers who have sought prior legal counsel.

PART II

Consumer Assistance Directory

Corporate Consumer Contacts

If you have tried to resolve a problem directly with the person with whom you originally did business but have been unsuccessful, the next step is to contact the company's headquarters. This section will help you find the address for the headquarters and, in most cases, the appropriate person to contact. Most listings include phone numbers. When there is an "800" (toll free) number, it is highlighted.

If you are unable to find the company's address in this section, Standard and Poor's Register of Corporations, Directors, and Executives, found in most public libraries, also lists the addresses of over 45,000 American business firms.

Throughout this section you will notice companies or brand names listed with an instruction to contact another company listed in the book. For example,

Wrangler Jeans
See Blue Bell, Inc.

Should you have a problem with a Wrangler product, correspondence should be directed to the consumer representative at Blue Bell, Inc., because Blue Bell produces the Wrangler line.

If you do not find the product name listed in this section, check the product's label for the name and address of the manufacturer. Various Federal agencies require manufacturers or distributors to disclose this information on the label. If you don't have the name of the manufacturer of the product, check your local library for the Thomas Register, which lists the manufacturers of thousands of products.

To save time and energy, don't forget—first take your complaint back to where you made the purchase. If you contact the corporate headquarters first, the representative will probably direct you back to your local retailer or business office.

Telephone Solicitations

1. Never give your credit card number over the phone unless you initiate the call.
2. Be cautious if the caller says an investment, purchase or charitable donation must be made immediately.
3. Ask who is in charge of the company or organization represented. Get specific names and titles.
4. Check with your state and local consumer protection offices and Better Business Bureau to see if any complaints have been filed against the organization.
5. Be wary of offers of free merchandise or prizes. You may end up paying handling fees greater than the value of the gifts.

Home Improvements

1. Be sure to get more than one estimate using the same specifications and materials.
2. Be sure you have a written contract that includes the contractor's full name, address, phone number and license number, a thorough description of the work to be done, the grade and quality of materials to be used, the agreed upon starting and completion dates, the total cost, and payment schedule.
3. Be sure to make a thorough inspection of the contractor's work before you make your final payment.
4. If you sign the contract away from the seller's regular place of business, such as your home, you will have a "Three Day Cooling-Off" period. This means you have the right to cancel your contract anytime before midnight of the third business day after you sign the contract. Be sure a copy of the "Notice of Cancellation" form is included with your contract.
5. Inquire whether the contractor has liability and compensation insurance to protect you from law suits in the event of an accident.
6. If the work requires a building permit, let the contractor apply for it in his name. If it is in your name and the work does not pass inspection, you will be responsible for any corrections that must be made.
7. Check with your county or city officials to see if the contractor is licensed and bonded. A bond will protect you against liens on your home if the contractor defaults with suppliers and subcontractors. Also check with state and local consumer protection agencies and the Better Business Bureau to see if any complaints have been filed against the contractor.

Consumers, Remember:

1. First, complain to the seller.
2. If that doesn't work, contact the company.
3. After that, contact an industry dispute program; the Better Business Bureau; or a local or state government office.
4. Finally, contact a trade association or Federal agency, as listed in the Index under specific complaint topics.
5. The last resort is a small claims court or private lawyer.

Automobile Manufacturers Corporate Contacts

If you have a problem with your car, first try to work it out with the dealer. If you and the dealer are unable to reach agreement, consider contacting a manufacturer's zone representative, many of which are listed in this section.

Used Cars

1. Read carefully the "Buyers Guide" in the window of the car if buying from a dealer.
2. Ask if the car is being sold "as is" (which means you must pay all costs for repairs) or has a warranty. Make sure you get the warranty in writing and that all verbal promises are included.
3. Comparison shop carefully for price, condition, and mileage of the model you are interested in buying. Compare for total cost the interest rates and other terms of finance agreements.
4. If you are non-mechanical, have a mechanic or other knowledgeable person look over the car for you.
5. If you are unfamiliar with the dealer, you may want to check with your state or local consumer protection agency or Better Business Bureau to see if there are any complaints against the dealership before you sign a contract.

Better Business Bureaus

Better Business Bureaus (BBBs) are non-profit organizations sponsored by local businesses. There are some 170 BBBs in the United States today. BBBs offer a variety of consumer education programs and materials, provide general information on companies, handle consumer inquiries, mediate and arbitrate complaints, and maintain records of consumer satisfaction or dissatisfaction with individual companies.

Mail Order

1. Watch out for exaggerated product claims or unrealistically low prices.
2. Check with your state or local consumer protection agency or Better Business Bureau before ordering if you are in doubt about the company.
3. Find out about the firm's return policy. If it is not stated, ask before you order. Many companies have toll-free phone numbers.
4. Complete the order as directed. If you leave out needed information such as your full address, your order may be delayed.
5. Keep a complete record of your order, including the company's name, address and telephone number, the items you purchased, the price, the date you mailed the order, and your method of payment.
6. Understand that, under Federal law, you have more legal protection if you order by mail than if you order by telephone.
7. If you order by mail, your purchase must be shipped or a notice of delayed shipment with an option to cancel must be sent within 30 days after the company receives your completed order.

Industry Third-Party Dispute Resolution Programs

Third-party dispute resolution programs have been established by the industries listed below to help resolve problems between consumers and industry members that they have been unable to resolve themselves. So remember, before you contact the industry-sponsored third-party resolution program, you should give the business with which you have the problem an opportunity to resolve the complaint. Most businesses are anxious to assure customer satisfaction. If this fails, third-party programs can be helpful.

Credit Cards

1. Keep a record of your card numbers, expiration dates, and the phone number of each company in a secure place.
2. Watch your card, whenever possible, after giving it to a clerk. Retrieve your card promptly after using it.
3. Take the carbons along with your credit card receipt. Void or destroy incorrect receipts.
4. Avoid signing a blank receipt. Draw a line through blank spaces above the total when you sign card receipts.
5. Open credit card bills promptly and compare them with your receipts.
6. Report promptly and in writing any questionable charges to the card issuer.
7. Never give a credit card number to a telephone solicitor unless you have initiated the call.
8. Never put your card number on a postcard or on the outside of an envelope.
9. Sign new cards and destroy unwanted cards as soon as they arrive.
10. Keep infrequently used cards in a secure place.

State, County and City Government Consumer Protection Offices

Listed below are consumer protection offices which are part of state, county and city governments. Some are located in governors' offices, state attorney generals' offices or mayors' offices. Check in your state to see which office can help resolve complaints, furnish information or helpful publications, or provide other services. As a general rule, the first place you should go for help with a consumer problem is the local office nearest your home. Since most offices require that complaints be in writing, you might save time by writing, rather than calling, with your initial complaint.

Timesharing

1. Consider the true value of the "gifts" and "awards" used to promote vacation timeshare sales. Remember, it may not be a "free" gift if you must drive a long distance and endure a high-powered sales pitch. Promotional gifts can be of poor quality.
2. Check out the seller, developer, and management company with your state or local consumer protection agency or Better Business Bureau. Does the company have a record of complaints? What is its reputation for completing work as promised? Does it manage the facilities properly?
3. Do not act on impulse or under pressure. Carefully read the contract and any other written documents before you sign anything.
4. Be sure everything the salesperson promised orally is written into the contract.
5. Check with your state or local consumer protection agency to see if state law provides you with a "cooling-off" period during which you can cancel the contract and get a refund.

Health Clubs

1. Check out the health club carefully. Visit during hours when you would normally use it to see if it is over-crowded during that period. Check whether the facilities are well maintained and clean.
2. Ask when you will be able to use the club. It may be open all week, but limited to men or women on certain days.
3. Ask what qualifications or training the employees have.
4. Read the fine print in all contracts or special offers. You may be committing yourself to a long-term contract. Make sure that spoken promises or conditions are made in writing.
5. Find out if there is a time period in which you can change your mind and get your money back (cooling-off period). Ask also about the refund policy for cancellations.
6. Ask your state or local consumer protection agency or Better Business Bureau if they have received any complaints about the club. Find out also if you have any protection under state law should the club close unexpectedly.

State Insurance Regulators

Each state has its own laws and regulations governing all types of insurance and has a commissioner or other official responsible for enforcement. If your problem is not resolved by the insurance company (keep in mind that company decisions, such as claim denials—can be appealed within the company), contact your state insurance regulator for help. Many insurance departments also provide consumer information helpful in making wise insurance buying decisions.

State Utility Commissions

State utility commissions largely regulate the rates consumers pay for gas, electricity, intrastate telephone service, intrastate household goods moving, and, in some states, intrastate water and transportation rates. (Interstate rates for these utilities and services are regulated by the Federal Government.) Many state utility commissions offer complaint handling services, and will sometimes conduct investigations if numerous complaints are received on a particular utility matter.

In addition, some states have appointed utility consumer advocates who investigate consumer complaints involving utilities, represent consumers who file formal complaints with state utility commissions, investigate utility service where warranted, and represent the interests of consumers in rate proceedings of state utility commissions. To find out if your state has such an advocacy office, contact the National Association of State Utility Consumer Advocates, c/o Florida Public Counsel, 202 Blount Street, 624 Crown Building, Tallahassee, Florida 32301, Telephone (904) 488-9330.

State Weights and Measures Offices

Weights and measures offices enforce weights and measures laws and regulations to ensure that commercial transactions are fair and accurate. These offices check the weights of packaged products and the accuracy of weighing and measuring devices such as supermarket scales, gasoline pumps, taxicab meters, and rental car odometers.

Contact your weights and measures office if you believe you have purchased a short-weight package or think a weighing or measuring device is inaccurate. The following offices are part of state governments. It is possible that your county or city also has a weights and measures office. Local offices can often be located in the city or county government sections of your telephone directory under headings such as "weights and measures," "standards," "consumer protection," or "consumer affairs."

Door-to-Door Sales

1. Make sure you are dealing with a legitimate company by asking for proper identification from the salesperson.
2. Keep a copy of any sales agreement. Be sure your copy has the company's complete name, address, phone number, the name of the salesperson, and details of the sale including correct date.
3. You will have a three day "cooling off" period which means you have the right to cancel your contract any-time before midnight of the third business day after your sign the contract. Get a copy of the right-to-cancel notice with your contract. (This rule only applies to purchases over $25.00 made away from the seller's regular place of business.)

Selected Federal Agencies

The following is a list of Federal agencies that handle major areas of consumer complaints and information. In some cases, you are encouraged to contact the nearest office of the agency before the headquarters office. When that occurs, the listing will give you information on how to do so. If you are unsure about which Federal agency to contact, refer to the Index under the topic heading most closely describing your area of concern. The Index will give you the agency to contact as well as other sources of assistance listed in this book.

Health Fraud

1. If claims sound too good to be true, they probably are. Be especially cautious about ads offering "miracle cures" that are available only from one source.
2. Check with your doctor, pharmacist, or other health professionals before buying unfamiliar or unusual health care products or programs. For instance, so far, medical science has found no cure for arthritis.
3. If you are attempting to lose weight without exercising, you must reduce your caloric intake. If you want to "tone up," you must exercise. Be wary of products, devices, or programs that promise unrealistic or easy results.
4. Be aware that fraudulent health-care products can rob you of more than your money. They can steal your health and even your life by detouring you from appropriate health care treatment.

Military Commissary and Exchange Contacts

Complaints should be referred to this office only if they cannot be settled at the local or regional level. Services for Handicapped Persons

Operator Services

Hearing and speech impaired people who use a Telecommunications Device for the Deaf (known as TDD or TTY) can get help with calls made from a TDD to a TDD by using the following service:

TDD/TTY Operator Services 800-855-1155 (toll free)

The TDD operator can help you if you have Telecommunications Devices for the Deaf to make:

- Credit card calls (if you have a telephone credit card)
- Collect calls (calls paid for by the person you are calling)
- Third number telephone calls (calls billed to a number other than the one you are calling to or from)
- Third number telephone calls (calls billed to a number other than the one you are calling to or from)
- Person-to-person calls (calls to a specific person)
- Calls from a hotel or motel
- Calls from a coin phone (only credit card, collect or bill to third number calls)

The TDD operator can also help you:

- Get the number if you have a problem with a call
- Get assistance for problems with calls
- Get telephone numbers that you cannot find in the telephone book
- Report problems with your telephone

The TDD operator cannot interpret voice to TDD or TDD to voice.

Remember, most calls made with the help of an operator are more expensive. So dial calls yourself when you can to save money.

Federal TDD Numbers

Many Federal departments and agencies have telephone numbers for your use if you have a Telecommunications Device for the Deaf (TDD).

Contracts

1. Never sign anything you do not understand.
2. Be sure that what the salesperson promises is what the contract says.
3. Don't sign a contract if a promoter or retailer is reluctant to let you have another person review it first.
4. Never sign a contract with unfilled spaces. Draw lines through blank spaces.

Index

This alphabetical index will help you find the right organization to contact about your complaint. First look for the specific topic—such as Automobile Insurance—that you're having a problem with. Under that topic heading, you'll find listed one or more contacts, followed by the Handbook page number where you'll find their address. The contact most likely to help you is listed first. If you get no satisfaction, then go on down the list to the next, and so on. Most common topic areas are listed here. Sometimes, an entry will tell you to SEE another entry for the list of contacts. SEE ALSO references direct you to other topics that may be related to your problem and may help you pinpoint the right contact. The index also lists all the sections in the Handbook, individual trade associations, and Federal Government agencies and their subdivisions.

The Federal Consumer Affairs Council was established by Presidential Executive Order 12160 in 1979. In 1981, President Ronald Reagan appointed Virginia H. Knauer, his Special Adviser for Consumer Affairs, Chairperson of the Council. The Council consists of the consumer affairs directors of some 41 Federal agencies—executive branch agencies as well as independent regulatory agencies. It meets quarterly for policy coordination briefings and discussions of administrative developments and concerns relating to Federal consumer activities. In addition, under President Reagan, the Council has begun to address the information needs of Federal consumer affairs specialists in critical consumer issue areas through formal training programs.

A SUGGESTED TEACHER'S GUIDE TO THE CONSUMER'S RESOURCE HANDBOOK

PROLOGUE

This suggested Guide, while useful in its present form, can be better utilized with the Consumer's Resource Handbook (CRH), published by the United States Office of Consumer Affairs. The Handbook—a consumer assistance manual—contains over 2000 governmental, voluntary and business offices that regularly help individual consumers with marketplace problems; and provides available toll-free (800) and Telecommunications Device for the Deaf (TDD) numbers for further assistance. It also includes guides for purchasing decisions in 12 areas.

This Teacher's Guide contains:

- Two suggested teaching units, each with related support material. Unit I treats purchasing, Unit II deals with effective complaint handling.
- A separate Major Sources of Help section (pp. 4-5) which relates to both teaching units, and
- Suggested Follow-up Activities.

While the Guide is written for the secondary level, it will also be useful for elementary and adult programs.

All support material and the sources of help section are from the Handbook and have been incorporated verbatim into this Guide to enable its use—on selected activities—by teachers without ready access to the Handbook. However, teachers are encouraged to obtain the Handbook, as use of the Guide with all Handbook sections can stimulate development of teaching units across a broad range of subject areas. Our intention is that the teacher will creatively adapt, for local use, the objectives and activities suggested here. Additionally, teachers may wish to incorporate elements of measurability to facilitate evaluation procedures.

One free copy per request of the Consumer's Resource Handbook (1986 edition) is available from: Handbook, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, CO 81009. There is a charge for two or more copies of CIC publications. Since these materials are in the public domain, there is no restriction on reproduction.

UNIT I: SEEKING PURCHASING INFORMATION

Objectives:

Upon completion of the unit the student will be able to:

- Identify steps to follow in making effective purchase decisions.
- Apply comparison shopping techniques to local marketplace situations.
- Identify and explain the role of a variety of organizations in the private and public sectors that assist consumers. (See Major Sources of Help, pp. 4-5 of this Guide.)
- Obtain appropriate product and service information to support purchasing decisions.

Activities:

The following activities are suggestions only. Teachers are urged to be innovative in developing others.

- Assign or have students identify a planned consumer purchase and develop a plan for obtaining and evaluating pre-purchase information.
- Have students choose an item to "shop" for, justify and make a purchase decision. Devise a grid to record and evaluate information from at least 3 sources.
- Have individual students, or groups, contact (letter, phone, visit) various organizations to inquire about procedures for responding to consumer concerns. (See Major Sources of Help, pp. 4-5 of this Guide and CRH, pp. 32-53, 67-75.)
- Role play a situation in which a consumer questions a seller about product or service information. Have class act as a jury to judge extent to which questions will enable effective decision making.

SUPPORT MATERIAL: TIPS ON USING MONEY WISELY AND AVOIDING PURCHASING PROBLEMS

Before Making a Purchase:

- Analyze what you need and what features are important to you.
- Compare brands. Utilize word-of-mouth recommendations and formal product comparison reports. Check with your local library for magazines and other publications containing consumer information.
- Compare stores. Look for a store with a good reputation and take advantage of sales.
- Check for any additional charges, such as delivery and service costs.
- Compare warranties.
- Read terms of contracts carefully.
- Check the return or exchange policy.

After Your Purchase:

- Follow proper use and care instructions for products.
- Read and understand the warranty provisions. Keep in mind that you may have additional warranty rights in your state. Check with your state or local consumer office to find out. A listing of these offices begins on page 40.
- If trouble develops, report the problem as soon as possible. Do not try to fix the product yourself as this may void the warranty.
- Keep a record of efforts to have your problems remedied. This record should include names of people you speak to, times, dates and other relevant information.
- Use the complaint procedures and Consumer Assistance Directory in this Handbook to find out how and where to get your problem resolved.

SPECIAL NOTE: In addition to Units I and II in this Guide, teachers may also wish to develop objectives and activities around the 12 guides for purchasing decisions which are contained in the Handbook. They begin on page 17 with telephone solicitations and continue with home improvements (p. 22), used cars (p. 31), mail order (p. 36), credit cards (p. 39), time sharing (p. 53), health clubs (p. 58), car repairs (p. 61), door-to-door sales (p. 66), health fraud (p. 72), warranties (p. 75), and contracts (p. 82). A suggested objective and activity for these areas is:

- Describe or apply the purchasing guidelines from one or more of the above 12 topics to a planned purchase for self or family.
- Have students write a skit based on one of these purchasing topics and perform for class, club, school assembly or adult group.

UNIT II: EFFECTIVE COMPLAINT HANDLING

Objectives:

Upon completion of the unit the student will be able to:

- Identify the basic steps for resolving consumer complaints.
- Identify and explain the elements of an effective complaint letter.
- Identify and define the role of state and local agencies and organizations that provide assistance to consumers in resolving marketplace disputes. (See Major Sources of Help, pp. 4-5 of this Guide.)
- Explain how refund and exchange policies differ and serve as a base for seller's action on resolving disputes.

Activities:

The following activities are suggestions only. Teachers are urged to be innovative in developing others.

- Have students talk with parents or friends about ways they have resolved marketplace disputes. Compare experiences to the steps below for effective complaint handling.
- Have students prepare a complaint letter for a given consumer problem (sample format, CRH, p. 3). Evaluate letters containing poor procedures. Compare in graphic displays for school bulletin boards.
- Assign students to visit or write to various agencies regarding complaint procedures (CRH, p. 40 for listing). Then identify a consumer problem and develop a plan to resolve it. Discuss in class.
- Have students prepare interview questions then visit different stores to inquire about refund and exchange policies. Report to class through role play.

SUPPORT MATERIAL: STEPS FOR HANDLING COMPLAINTS AND WRITING AN EFFECTIVE LETTER

Even in today's complex marketplace, you should expect quality products and services at fair prices. When something goes wrong, however, you need to let the company know about your problem and try to resolve it with them. Not only is this the fastest way to get your complaint resolved, but it also gives the company a chance to keep you as a satisfied customer and win new customers by learning from mistakes. Most companies welcome this opportunity, and it may help you avoid future complaints.

We recommend the following steps in handling your own complaint:

Identify Problem

Identify the problem, what you have done to resolve it, and what you believe would be a fair settlement. Do you want your money back? Would you like the product repaired? Will an exchange do?

Gather Documentation

Gather documentation regarding your complaint. Sales receipts, repair orders, warranties, cancelled checks, or contracts will back up your complaint and help the company solve your problem.

Go Back to Where You Made The Purchase

Contact the person who sold you the item or performed the service. Calmly and accurately explain the problem and what action you would like taken. If that person is not helpful, ask for the supervisor or manager and repeat your complaint. A large percentage of consumer problems are resolved at this level. Chances are yours will be too.

Allow each person you contact a reasonable period of time to resolve your problem before contacting another source for assistance.

Don't Give Up

If you are not satisfied with the response, don't give up. If the company operates nationally or the product is a national brand, write a letter to the person responsible for consumer complaints at the company's headquarters. If the company doesn't have a consumer office, direct your letter to the president of the company.

Where to Write

If you have already contacted the person who sold you the product or service or the company is out of town, you will need to write a letter to pursue your complaint.

For a listing of many corporate consumer contacts and their addresses, see page 7.

If you are unable to find the corporate consumer contact, first check in your phone directory to see if the company has a local office. If it does, call and ask for the name and address of the consumer contact, or if they do not have someone who handles this function, the name and address of the company's president. If there is no local listing, check Standard & Poor's Register of Corporations, Directors and Executives. It lists over 45,000 American business firms and can be found in most libraries.

If you don't have the name of the manufacturer of the product, check your local library for the Thomas Register. It lists the manufacturers of thousands of products.

What to Write

- Include your name, address and home and work phone numbers.
- Type your letter if possible. If it is handwritten, make sure it is neat and easy to read.
- Make your letter brief and to the point. Include all important facts about your purchase including the date and place where you made the purchase and any information you can give about the product or service such as serial or model numbers or specific type of service.
- State exactly what you want done about the problem and how long you are willing to wait to get it resolved. Be reasonable.
- Include all documents regarding your problem. Be sure to send COPIES, not originals.
- Avoid writing an angry, sarcastic, or threatening letter. The person reading your letter probably was not responsible for your problem, but may be very helpful in resolving it.
- Keep a copy of the letter for your records.

Major Sources of Help

If you have failed in your attempt to get your complaint resolved directly with the person or company you did business with, there are other sources of help. Many are described in this section.

Industry Consumer Programs

What They Are:

Several industry associations can help you with consumer problems relating to their industry. These associations are formed by individual businesses which join together to assist with business problems and promote their industry. They usually offer consumer information and some handle complaints. Trade associations have been established in just about every field of business and consumer interest and number around 40,000 nationwide.

How to Reach Them:

Selected industry associations that handle complaints are listed on page 38. Many other trade associations have varying consumer functions. These functions are described in a directory entitled National Trade & Professional Associations of the U.S. and Canada and Labor Unions or other help directories. Check with your local library.

Industry Third-Party Dispute Resolution Programs

What They Are:

Special programs established by certain corporations and trade associations to help resolve problems between consumers and industry members are listed on page 37. If you have trouble with your car, a home appliance, a funeral director, or other products or services, there might be a third-party dispute resolution program to help you. But remember, this should not be the first step in solving a consumer complaint. Contact them only after you have been unsuccessful in getting your complaint settled by the local company or organization you originally dealt with.

What They Do:

In general, after receiving your complaint a staff person will probably try to resolve the complaint before it goes any further. If these staff persons acting as informal mediators cannot get the two sides to agree, they will refer your case to an independent person or panel that will then make a decision on your case. In some instances, this decision is binding and must be accepted by both the consumer and the business. In other cases, only the business is required to accept the decision. There are also programs where decisions are not binding on either party. Therefore, you should ask for a copy of the rules before you file your case with a third-party program.

Better Business Bureaus

What They Are:

Better Business Bureaus (BBBs) are non-profit organizations sponsored by private, local businesses. There are some 170 BBBs in the United States today. For a listing, see page 32. The services offered by BBBs vary from place to place. These include: general information on products or services, reliability reports, background information on local businesses and organizations, and records of companies' complaint handling performances. Depending on the policy of the individual BBB, it may or may not tell you the nature of the complaint against a business, but all will tell you if a complaint has been registered. Many of the BBBs accept written complaints and will contact a firm on your behalf. BBBs do not judge or rate individual products or brands, handle complaints concerning the prices of goods or services, or give legal advice.

BBBs offer binding arbitration to those who ask for it. The Council of Better Business Bureaus, which is sponsored by national businesses, also offers consumer education programs and reports on charitable organizations. The national Council is located at 1515 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, Virginia 22209

Media Programs

What They Are:

Local newspapers and radio-TV stations throughout the United States offer "Action" or "Hot Line" services where consumers with problems can get help.

These news media often get successful results for consumers because of their power and influence in communities, and because the possibility of publicity may encourage a merchant or business to take swifter action to resolve consumer problems. Some Action Lines, however, may not be able to handle every complaint received. They sometimes select the most severe problems, or those most representative of a number of complaints.

When your own personal efforts fail to produce the desired results, keep these "Action" resources in mind.

How to Reach Them:

To find these services, check with your local newspapers, radio and TV stations, or local library.

State, County and City Consumer Offices

What They Are:

If you are not satisfied with a company's response to your complaint (or if a response is never received), a local consumer office, if there is one in your area, is a good place to go with your inquiry or complaint. Local consumer offices can be particularly helpful since they can be contacted easily by phone or sometimes in person, and are familiar with local businesses and laws. Be sure to have copies of your sales slips, other sales documents, and all correspondence with the retailer and manufacturer when you contact your local agency.

If there is no local consumer office in your area, contact a state consumer office. State consumer offices are set up differently from state to state. Some states have a separate department of consumer affairs while others have a consumer affairs office as a part of the governor's office or attorney general's office, or both. These offices will either help you directly or refer you to the proper agency for assistance.

If you have a consumer problem with a business transaction occurring in a state other than where you reside, you should contact the state where you conducted your business, if possible. Many state and local consumer offices have a large selection of information and educational materials available. In addition, many states, counties and cities have a wide variety of other helpful community services, including social, family, youth, handicapped, day care, mental health, elderly, general health, recreation, family planning, alcoholism, nutrition, income maintenance, child support, food stamps and libraries. A listing of state and local consumer and other government offices begins on page 40 of this Handbook.

Occupational and Professional Licensing Boards

What They Are:

If you have a problem with professional or occupational services, you may be able to get help from a state licensing or regulatory board. There are an estimated 1,500 state boards which license or register more than 550 professions and occupations, including doctors, lawyers, nurses, accountants, pharmacists, funeral directors, plumbers, electricians, auto repair facilities, employment agencies, collection agencies, and electronic repair facilities.

What They Do:

State boards set licensing standards; set rules and regulations; prepare and give examinations; issue, deny or revoke licenses; bring disciplinary actions; and handle consumer complaints.

If you contact a state board for help, it will usually bring your complaint to the attention of its licensee and it will seek a satisfactory resolution to your problem. If necessary, the board may conduct an investigation and take disciplinary action against the licensee in the form of probation, license suspension or revocation.

Many boards will also have consumer education materials to help you in selecting a professional or tradesperson in their field.

How To Reach Them:

You can find out about a state licensing board by contacting your local consumer office. Some boards might also have regional offices in your area. Check your local phone book under state government offices or under professional listings. You can also ask professionals or tradespersons about the board responsible for their licensing or registration—in fact, you should ask to see a license or registration before you decide to use their services.

Federal Agencies

Some Federal agencies have enforcement responsibilities for specific consumer products and services and can handle individual complaints. Others take action for the benefit of the public as a whole, but are not able to resolve individual consumer problems.

However, each Federal agency listed under the Selected Federal Agencies section starting on page 67 has a mechanism for responding to consumer complaints and inquiries. Many Federal Agencies also have publications, fact sheets, and other information that may be helpful in dealing with marketplace problems. If you need help in determining where to go with your specific problem, check the Index at the end of this book or call the nearest Federal Information Center listed on page 75.

Small Claims Courts

What They Are:

If you have a complaint that you have not been able to resolve, consider going to small claims court. Court procedures generally are simple, inexpensive, quick and informal. Court fees are nominal, and you often get your filing fee back if you win your case. Generally, you won't need a lawyer. In fact, in some states, lawyers are not permitted. If you do live in a state that allows lawyers and the party you are suing brings one, don't be intimidated. The court is informal and most judges make allowances for consumers who appear without lawyers.

But remember, even though the court is informal, the ruling of the court must be followed, just like any other court.

What They Do:

These courts, as the name suggests, are for small claims. The maximum amounts that can be claimed or awarded differ from state to state.

If the party bringing the suit wins the case, the party who lost often will follow the court's decision without additional legal action. Sometimes, however, losing parties will not obey the decision. In these cases, the winning party may go back to court and ask for the order to be "enforced." Depending on local laws, the court may, for example, order property to be taken by law enforcement officials and sold. The winning party will get the money from the sale up to the amount they are owed. Or, if the person who owes the money receives a salary, the court may order the employer to garnish or deduct some money from each paycheck and give it to the winner of the law suit.

How To Reach Them:

Check your local phone book under your municipal, county or state government headings for small claims court listings. When you contact the court, ask the court clerk how to use the small claims court. Sit in on a small claims court session before taking a case to court to become familiar with its operation.

Legal Aid and Legal Services

What They Are:

Legal Aid and Legal Services offices help people who cannot afford to hire private lawyers, and who meet financial eligibility requirements. There are more than 1,000 of these offices around the country, staffed by lawyers, paralegals (people who have taken courses in legal assistance) and law students. All offer free legal services to those who qualify.

In some cities, both Legal Aid and Legal Services offices are federally funded. Legal Aid offices may also be financed by state, local, or private funding, or by local bar associations. The Legal Services Corporation in Washington, D.C., is funded by the Federal Government, and it, in turn, awards grants to local Legal Services programs around the country. Also, many law schools throughout the nation conduct law clinics, where students assist other lawyers as part of their training.

What They Do:

These offices generally offer legal assistance with problems such as landlord-tenant, credit, utilities, family issues such as divorce and adoption, social security, welfare, unemployment, and workers' compensation. Each legal aid office has its own board of directors that determines the priorities of the office and the kinds of cases handled. Therefore, the Legal Aid office serving your area may not handle all of the types of cases mentioned above. However, these offices should be able to refer you to other local, state or national organizations that can provide advice or help.

Private Lawyers

How To Reach Them:

If you need help in finding a lawyer, check with the Lawyer Referral Service of your state, city or county bar association. Local and state bar associations are usually listed in area telephone directories.

Since lawyers are now permitted to advertise, it is a bit easier to find one who fits your needs and your pocketbook. Check the Yellow Pages of the telephone directory or newspapers for these advertisements. If you have a complaint about an attorney or need further information, again contact your state, city or county bar association.

Private and Voluntary Consumer Groups

Private and voluntary consumer organizations are usually created to advocate various or specific consumer interests. In some communities they will help individual consumers with their complaints. To find out if such a group is in your community, contact your state or local consumer affairs office.

Consumer Credit Counseling Services

What They Are:

Counseling services provide aid to individuals having difficulty budgeting their money and/or meeting necessary monthly expenses. Many organizations, including credit unions, family service centers and religious organizations offer some type of credit counseling.

Another source of help is the Consumer Credit Counseling Services (CCCS), sponsored by the National Foundation for Consumer Credit and financially supported by banks, credit card companies, finance companies and other credit offering organizations.

What They Do:

The CCCS counseling program provides money management techniques, debt payment plans, and educational programs. In working out a debt repayment program individually tailored to a consumer's agreed upon ability to pay, a counselor takes into consideration the needs of the family and the requirements and needs of the creditor.

Consumer credit counseling programs are nonprofit and provide service either free or for a nominal charge.

How To Reach Them:

To find out if your area is covered by a CCCS, look in your local phone directory or check with the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, 8701 Georgia Avenue, Suite 601, Silver Spring, Maryland 20910.

SUGGESTED FOLLOW-UP ACTIVITIES

- Have students write thank you letters to businesses, agencies, or others who supported class activities.
- Share and publicize the class learning experience: Reports to administrators, summary of highlights to those from community who participated, or feature articles or interviews with local media.
- Through class discussion or written reports, have class members evaluate activities in terms of what worked well, or what did not work as expected. Examine reasons why, and make suggestions for needed changes in their own approaches—or those of others—to making effective decisions and handling consumer problems.
- Bring attention to consumer education materials or information by using USOCA's character, "Eubie Smart"—pictured throughout the Consumer's Resource Handbook—as an attention getter and continuity symbol for consumer education.
