II. BRAILLE INSTRUCTION COURSES

A. THROUGH VOLUNTEER GROUPS

Training courses in literary, mathematics, music, and foreign-language braille are available from qualified instructors in local volunteer groups. Students completing local instruction are eligible to apply for certification by the Librarian of Congress. Volunteers Who Produce Books, a biennial directory of established volunteer groups throughout the United States that produce reading materials in braille, is available from:

Reference Section
National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped.

"The Challenge of Braille" is a videocassette training program for potential volunteer braille transcribers. This videocassette provides a brief history and introduction to braille and describes the National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped (NLS) braille transcription course, emphasizing the work and rewards involved in becoming a Library of Congress certified braille transcriber. The program is available on loan from NLS. Video equipment is not provided. Duplication of the videocassette is permitted but the original copy must be returned to NLS. To borrow "The Challenge of Braille" contact:

Equipment and Materials Maintenance Coordinator
National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped.

B. THROUGH CORRESPONDENCE

FOR SIGHTED PERSONS

Adults who are interested in becoming braille transcribers but are unable to arrange training through local volunteer groups or individuals may enroll in a correspondence course in literary braille offered by the National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped (NLS). Successful completion of this course results in certification as a braille transcriber by the Librarian of Congress. Certified literary braillists are eligible for enrollment in correspondence courses in music and mathematics braille, also offered by NLS. Instruction manuals and codes are provided at no cost; braille writing equipment and paper must be supplied by the student. Further information on instruction is available from:

Braille Development Section
National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped.

FOR BLIND PERSONS

Skilled braille readers who are interested in becoming braille proofreaders may enroll in a correspondence course in braille proofreading offered by the National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped (NLS). Successful completion of this course results in certification as a braille proofreader by the Librarian of Congress. Instruction manuals and codes are provided in braille at no cost; braille writing equipment and paper must be supplied by the student. Further information on instruction is available from:

Braille Development Section
National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped.

Free courses on reading and writing braille are available from:

Hadley School for the Blind.

C. THROUGH COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

Colleges and universities with special education programs may offer transcribing courses as part of their curriculum. Inquiries should be made directly to individual colleges and universities. An annual listing of colleges and universities offering courses in education of the visually handicapped, deaf-blind, multi-handicapped, and in orientation and mobility is available from:

Association for Education and Rehabilitation of the Blind and Visually Impaired.

BRaille WRITING; EQUIPMENT AND SUPPLIES

The equipment listed in this section is currently available for purchase. For latest price information and descriptions of products, request catalogs from the sources listed.

A. BRaille WRITERS AND ACCESSORIES

This section includes devices and supplies for the manual production of braille. Current information about computer hardware, software, and related equipment for producing braille electronically may be requested from the Reference Section, NLS, where this information is updated frequently.
