ABSTRACT

This directory was produced by the Restitution Education, Specialized Training, and Technical Assistance (RESTTA) program to facilitate and promote the dissemination of information about restitution and community service programming, and to facilitate professional interaction among persons with professional interests in restitution and community service. It contains names, addresses, and descriptions of 296 juvenile restitution and community service programs located throughout the United States. Data includes information on the types of services provided, when the programs and particular service components began, and where they are situated administratively. Details about program operations are contained in brief narratives provided by the programs. Six of the programs listed were designated as National Models by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention. The introduction to the directory discusses background issues, states represented, types of restitution, age of programs, and the organization of the directory. Following a short listing of programs and their identifying characteristics, descriptions of restitution programs are provided alphabetically by state, and by cities within the states. The directory concludes with a description of RESTTA and RESTTA services and a list of restitution resources which includes RESTTA consortium members, federal juvenile restitution contact, and RESTTA technical assistance providers listed by state. Preface

This National Directory of Juvenile Restitution Programs was produced by the Restitution Education, Specialized Training, and Technical Assistance (RESTTA) program, and is distributed by the Restitution Resource Center of the Juvenile Justice Clearinghouse in Rockville, Maryland. It contains names, addresses, and descriptions of 296 juvenile restitution and community service programs located throughout the Nation. The descriptions include information on the types of services provided, when the programs and particular service components began, and where they are situated administratively. Generally, details about program operations are contained in written narratives.

The purpose of this Directory is to facilitate and promote the dissemination of information about restitution and community service programming. Persons in any State who wish to start a restitution program or add specialized components can find at least one other program in their own State, with staff members who can be helpful to them. More specialized technical assistance can be obtained from professional providers. A roster of technical assistance providers will be found in the back of the Directory.

It is also hoped that this Directory will facilitate professional interaction among persons with professional interests in restitution and community service. Statewide restitution associations already exist in North Carolina, Minnesota, Ohio, and Wisconsin, and plans are in progress for others in Texas and Pennsylvania. As this Directory goes to press, efforts are underway to establish a national restitution association.

Six of the programs listed in this Directory were designated as National Models by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention and have served as Host Sites in the RESTTA training program. They are the Earn-It Program in Quincy, Massachusetts; the Juvenile Restitution Project and Work Release Center in Ventura, California; the Juvenile Restitution Program, Inc., in Charleston, South Carolina; the Juvenile Restitution Program in Dallas, Texas; the Judgment Restitution Program in Upper Marlboro, Maryland; and the Restitution and Community Services Work Program in Waterloo, Iowa. These programs have provided hands-on training and technical assistance to hundreds of judges, prosecutors, probation officers, restitution counselors, and other juvenile justice professionals who have visited their jurisdictions.

It is not known for certain how many juvenile restitution programs exist in the United States, but it is clear that this Directory does not list all of them. In collecting information, 378 programs were reported, but only 296 submitted completed data forms. Researchers at Oklahoma State University, where the Directory was assembled, estimate the actual number of programs nationwide at about 500. We are hopeful that these programs will appear in future editions of the Directory.

Acknowledgments

The editors of the Directory, Jean Shumway Warner and Vincent Burke of the Policy Sciences Group at Oklahoma State University, wish to thank the many restitution program contacts throughout the United States who provided the information. The effort to produce a directory of this type could not have been successful without their cooperation.

They also express their appreciation for assistance received from other members of the Policy Sciences Group who worked on the project: their director, Dr. Anne L. Schneider, and Mary Clifford, Disa McEwen, Rexann Helms, Stella Hughes, Sally Estus, Patricia A. DiCerbo, and Connie K. Westerman.

All errors of omission or commission are regretted. Any errors discovered should be reported to the editors for correction in the next edition. Their telephone number is 405-624-5173.

Introduction

Background

One of the most profound changes in juvenile justice during the past decade has been the phenomenal growth in the use of restitution as a sanction for juvenile offenders. Many of these restitution programs are described in this Directory.

Every State and the District of Columbia has at least one program described here (see Table 1). Most offer both community service restitution and financial restitution (see Table 2), while smaller numbers provide for victim-offender mediation or other victim services. Financial restitution and community service restitution are almost equally common; 84 percent of programs reporting handled monetary orders and 90 percent handled community service. Seventy-five percent have both types. Victim service components are offered by 28 percent of these programs; 23 percent offer victim-offender mediation.

Age of Programs

Only two restitution programs responding to the Directory survey indicated that they were established before 1960 (see Table 3); only 16 were established during the 1960's. Restitution is truly a product of the 1970's and 1980's. More than half of all programs in the Directory were established between 1980 and 1986.

The oldest financial restitution program identified through the RESTTA survey was established in 1945 in Bartow, Florida. The oldest community service program, located in Pierre, South Dakota, traces its origin to 1965. Of the financial components described here, 56 percent were established in the 1980's, as were 64 percent of the community service components.

Most victim-offender mediation components are even more recent, with the earliest identified here tracing its origin only to 1972. Seventy-eight percent of the victim-offender mediation programs were started in the 1980's.

Organization

Programs were asked to identify the administrative unit in which the restitution program was located (see Table 4). As has been true throughout the history of restitution programming in the United States, there are many different kinds of administrative and organizational arrangements. The most common is for the restitution program to be administered by probation (35 percent). This is usually a probation department within the judicial branch of government (29 percent), but in 6 percent of the jurisdictions an executive-branch probation office handles restitution. Another 8 percent report to the court as well as to probation.

Nonprofit organizations operate a surprisingly large percentage of the restitution programs. Nonprofits describing themselves as "private" nonprofits operate 12 of the programs; an additional 9 percent are administered by nonprofits describing themselves as "public" nonprofits. An additional 26 percent of the programs report directly to the court. (About 10 percent of the programs in the Directory did not respond or were classified as "other".)

Figure 1 presents the overall growth of restitution programs and components since the 1960's; Figures 2 and 3 graphically display the percentages of programs that include particular restitution components, and the administrative locus of programs included in the Directory.

Purpose and Organization of the Directory

The purpose of this Directory is to provide a listing of all known restitution programs and a brief description of their most salient characteristics, as well as the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of program directors. One of the remarkable aspects of the growth of restitution programming in the United States has been the corresponding growth of an informal network of restitution programs and persons interested in learning from each other about the effectiveness of restitution as a sanction for juvenile offenders. This Directory is designed to foster such a network.

In the body of the Directory are the names of the programs, listed alphabetically by State. The program descriptions were written by program personnel and submitted for inclusion. These have been edited only slightly to conform to established style requirements.

Methodology

This Directory does not include all of the restitution programs in the United States, but considerable effort was undertaken to find and include all of them. These efforts began in fall 1984 and continued over the next 3 years, with surveys being sent to all known restitution programs, to random samples of juvenile courts, and to all persons who had contacted RESTTA indicating an interest in restitution. In August 1986, a Directory Data Form requesting verification and updated information was sent to all restitution programs that had previously responded to the survey. Several followups were used to obtain data; those programs that eventually returned the Directory Data Form are included here.

Description of Restitution Programs Listed by State and City

Explanation of Directory

Data are presented by line in the following order (if information was not provided, the line is skipped):

1. Name of the sponsoring agency.
2. Mailing address (street or box number).
3. Jurisdiction.
4. City and ZIP code.
5. Name and title of contact person and telephone number:
If a second contact person was listed, this information will be listed on the next line.
6. Name of the restitution program.
7. Year components were established:
This line presents the year(s) in which each of four possible program components was established. If the program does not offer that service, hyphens (----) are listed in the place of the starting date. If the precise year was not known, 9999 was entered; if "in the 1970's," was entered, the entry shows 9970. Components are always presented in the following order: financial (monetary) restitution, community service restitution, victim-offender mediation, and victim services. A line "9999 9982 1984 ----" means that the program orders financial restitution but does not know when the service began; added community service "around 1982" and victim-offender mediation in 1984, and does not offer other victim services programs.
8. Other component(s) offered and year established:
Respondents were given the opportunity to list two other types of program components that they provide in addition to the four types listed above. From information given by the program, these other components or services were summarized into general categories such as "job readiness/skills training" or "moneys" (such as fees and fines). (Grouping the responses allowed some analysis of the data.) These categories are listed along with the year the component was established (if given).

9. Program administered by:

Options provided were: court, probation located in the judicial branch, probation located in the executive branch, correctional institution, public/nonprofit, private/non-profit, and "other (specify)." If "other" was checked, the explanation was placed into one of several additional general categories. "Public/nonprofit" and "private/non-profit" are listed as defined by the individual programs; laws concerning nonprofit status vary by State.

10. Program description:

Respondents were invited to provide a description of their program as they would like to have it presented in the Directory. They were encouraged to limit the description to 200 words. If the respondent left this section blank, we have entered the phrase "No program description provided."

In 1984, the Greenlee County Probation Department's restitution work was implemented with funds appropriated by the Arizona State Legislature. Youthful offenders involved in crimes where monetary loss is incurred by the victims are required to make restitution. Youth who are unable to find employment in the private business sector are required to work in the community under the supervision of the department's program coordinator. Hours are established by dividing the total dollar loss amount by $2.50 an hour earned by each offender. One hundred percent of earnings is paid to the victim. The community service program is operated the same way, as is the restitution work program, with the exception that established hours are set for offenses and no monetary payment is received.

PROBATION-JUDICIAL

Progressively Increased Consequences (PIC-ACT) is an alternative program for nonadjudicated youth, who are first- to third-time misdemeanor offenders. The youth are assigned restitution to victims, community service hours, and counseling or education. The intent of this program is to deter youth from future contact with law enforcement officials and the judicial system. The Santa Cruz County PIC-ACT program began in 1984 and is a State-funded program.

The Juvenile Restitution/Monetary Assessment System was implemented by State law in 1984. Youth committed by county court are ordered to pay a set restitution or assessment amount. While institutionalized, the youth pays two-thirds of any money earned to offset her/his restitution balance and her/his cost of incarceration. Upon community release, the youth is placed under a condition of parole that requires a varying percentage of all money earned to be paid to the committing court that ordered the restitution.

Founded in 1979, the City of Tempe Youth Diversion Program was created to divert first offenders under the age of 18 from the juvenile justice system toward more positive and responsible behavior. First offenses eligible for diversion are shoplifting, curfew violation, running away, and possession of alcohol. Overseen by the City of Tempe Community Services Department, Youth and Family Services Division, this community-based diversion program operates in cooperation with the Tempe Police Department, Tempe City Court, Maricopa County Juvenile Court, and other youth diversion programs, police departments, and city courts within the county. Youth participate in an individualized program that usually incorporates community service work at nonprofit organizations. Other non-fee services offered through Youth and Family Services, including individual and family counseling, tutoring, an employment program, and community education workshops, may be incorporated into the program and taken advantage of by the youth and his/her parents. The Tempe Youth Diversion Program hopes to intercept the juvenile offender at an early stage in order to avoid the possibility of further progression to more serious offenses. A longitudinal study of this program, which tracked participants for a 12-month period after their initial contact, found the recidivism rate to be reduced by 50 percent.

In operation since 1984, the Pay-A-Debt program emphasizes restitution through mediation as the central technique in the resolution of suitable delinquency referrals. This program brings victim and juvenile together before volunteer mediators, who, under careful direction, assist the juvenile and victim to agree upon mutually satisfactory resolution. Participation is voluntary for both parties. The program has obtained commitments from local businesses to provide employment at least through completion of restitution. Besides financial restitution, all Pay-A-Debtors must contribute their time to community service; the hours, too, are worked out in the mediation. Pay-A-Debt is one of many alternatives available to the adjudicated delinquent through our probation department.

Organized in early 1985, Youth Bridge, Inc., Juvenile Restitution Program is primarily a community service work program. In fiscal year 1985-86, over 2,000 hours and $9,000 in labor were provided to communities in this program. Nonprofit agencies supervise some offenders, while others are supervised in a crew that works one day a week. Program emphasis is on accountability, responsibility, developing good work habits and characteristics of "good employees," making a positive experience from a negative situation, and doing a good job for the community. The program maintains a checking account to monitor the payments of offenders who work and must pay large fines, primarily DWI. Emphasis is on the offender earning the money. Counseling is provided by Youth Bridge, Inc., restitution staff to offenders working in the crew. Staff provides assistance in locating jobs and other casework-type activity.

The "Pay the Piper" project, or community service program, is a symbolic restitution program designed to help rehabilitate juvenile offenders. Children aged 10 to 17 convicted of both misdemeanors and felonies participate in a minimum of 24 hours of work at various governmental, public, and private nonprofit agencies. The program is based on the premise that people need to accept responsibility for their actions. Although there is no counseling involved in the program, it has been proven to be a viable alternative to probation or incarceration.

The Community Restitution Program sponsored by CSP, Inc. was started in 1978. It is primarily concerned with juvenile property offenders under age 18 and victims of crime. The restitution program gives the young offender an opportunity to take responsibility for his/her action without going through the juvenile court system. The juveniles are assigned to make financial restitution to victims and to complete volunteer service hours in the community. Local citizens, through participation on volunteer restitution hearing boards, become involved in assigning restitution standards for the youth in their community. The juveniles are referred primarily from the local police departments in Orange County. In fiscal year 1985-86, 1,011 youthful offenders paid $37,950 in financial restitution to 863 victims. These offenders also donated 19,244 hours of community service.

Specialized juvenile supervision caseloads were established in the fall of 1985 with the primary goal of ensuring victims' rights through enforcement of court-ordered restitution and holding juveniles accountable for their actions. Juvenile offenders aged 16 and over owing $300 to $1,000 are placed in caseloads not exceeding 74 cases. Services are provided for victims only; victim assistance is provided through appropriate referrals. Voluntary victim-offender mediation is provided. While the emphasis is on compliance with court orders for restitution to victims, program provisions are made for job search preparation, job readiness, and job finding.

Founded in 1977, project RETURN is a program of the Boys Club of San Gabriel Valley. It is designed to assist in the successful return of youthful offenders to the community. Community service restitution is one of its components. RETURN provides screened and supervised worksites and work-service opportunities, self-directed job-search training, and supportive services to youth and young adults. Supportive services include drug and alcohol counseling, crisis intervention, and sponsorship to schools and training programs. RETURN operates on a 7-day-a-week basis to provide opportunities and resources on weekends, when youth are out of school and available.

For several years, for many juveniles, the court has ordered community service hours as a condition of probation. Frequently it is up to the juvenile to find a program where he/she can perform the work. Over time, and with the assistance of the Department's Resource Deputy, staff have become more skilled at matching youngsters with resources. In September of 1986, we placed the first juvenile in a job where he is earning money to make financial restitution to a victim. It is our plan to expand this program, provided financial assistance is located, to assign staff to the development of resources.

JUVENILE COMMUNITY SERVICE PROGRAM
---- 1969 ---- ----
PROBATION-EXECUTIVE

Founded in 1969, the Contra Costa County Juvenile Community Service Program was designed when a juvenile court judge became dissatisfied with the available range of dispositions. He strongly believed offenders needed to personally return something to the community they offended in order to learn respect for life and property. Each year over 800 boys and girls perform such tasks as litter control, gardening, trail construction, and road maintenance. Work is performed for government agencies and a "user fee" is collected from these agencies, which helps defray program costs. Program participants are usually under 18 years of age and are normally supervised in groups of eight by specially trained counselors, who provide counseling directed at assisting youth to become more constructive in their behavior. In addition to providing a disposition alternative for the juvenile court, the program accommodates first and less serious offenders without judicial order. A new component allows for the referral of minor probation violators without a formal court order. During 1985, the JCSP operated 657 work crews, which provided the county with over 30,000 hours of community service work.

Shasta County Probation places a high priority on the collection of restitution for victims. While we do not have a "program" as such, each minor owing restitution is required to pay a minimum per month regardless of income. Shasta County Probation does operate a Victim/Witness Assistance Program, which provides a full range of services for victims of violent crime, including application for State reimbursement; transportation to doctors, dentists, etc.; and assistance in securing community resources.

PROBATION-EXECUTIVE

The Ventura County California Juvenile Restitution Program started in 1978 as part of the National Restitution Program. In 1985, RESTTA selected the program as one of six outstanding programs in the country. As a Host Site, the program provides intensive onsite training. One unique feature is a residential program with 24 beds. This is a nonsecure residential program for chronic juvenile offenders. The agency also provides intensive probation supervision for offenders leaving the institution and for those placed directly on probation by the court. The program is operated by the corrections services agency, offers both financial and community service restitution, and helps victims develop financial loss statements. The institutional program focuses on job readiness and job search preparation. The school program emphasizes emancipation and independent living skills. The total program focuses on juvenile accountability. Reimbursements to individual victims and community service work are vital to symbolize that the victim and the community need to be repaid for the youth's delinquent act(s). In 1985, $85,000 was paid to the victims and 55,000 hours of community work were completed.

The Tulare County Juvenile Court orders monetary restitution to the victim in all cases where there is a monetary loss and where the offender has the ability to pay. When the offender is not placed in a custodial program, he may be ordered to participate in a community service program. This program is operated jointly with the Tulare County Department of Education. For the period September 1985 through August 1986, juvenile participants worked a total of 33,942 hours. In addition, the Tulare County Probation Department operates a Victim Assistance Program funded through the State of California.

Workout LTD is a nonprofit rehabilitation and victim restitution program for juvenile offenders in El Paso County 4th Judicial District. Youth are court-ordered into the program and placed on staff-supervised work projects for private businesses or community service work projects for public organizations or needy individuals. Fifty percent of all wages earned by the client are paid directly to the youth's victim by Workout LTD. Workout LTD was incorporated in 1974 and receives its funding from grants from the Department of Institutions, the Department of Social Services, the United Way, private contributions, and revenue-generating work projects. During fiscal year 1985-86, 576 youth were served and $55,000 in restitution was collected.

Begun in 1980, the Minor Offenders Program (MOP) seeks to provide 300 youth charged with a first- or second-time misdemeanor or a first-time nonviolent felony with the opportunity to complete community service instead of proceeding to court. The child is placed with the victim if appropriate; if not, the child completes his/her work at a nonprofit organization. The child is given a 90-day contract to complete, with restitution of $150 monitored. If the child is unable to pay, we try to arrange work with the victim at $3.35 an hour to pay off the debt. Hours are commensurate to the severity of the offense. Begun in 1984, the Youth Offender Program addresses a population of 150 repeat or violent offenders. These youth are aided in completing community service hours as ordered by the court. The youth spend their time on public works projects, with 8 hours of credit granted to each child for a wilderness experience. Day groups are supervised by male/female teams and do not exceed a ratio of one to five. Workcrews are run each Saturday during the school year, with an additional midweek group for the unemployed dropouts or suspended youths. Summer crews are run three times weekly.

Since 1980, the Partners Program, a nonprofit youth-serving agency, has supervised youth referred by the Mesa County Probation Department and the State Division of Youth Services in the payment of monetary restitution. Job sites are developed in the private and public sectors, including work crews for the State Parks Department and the U.S. Forest Service as well as the Job Training Partnership Act. At least 75 percent of the earnings are paid to the victims. A community service component was established in 1985 as an alternative to detention or commitment to the State Division of Youth Services. Both the restitution and community service components are used as sentencing resources for the juvenile court. In fiscal year 1985-86, 106 youthful offenders paid back $16,000 and 26 youth performed community service work as an alternative to detention. The program is supported by donations and the State Division of Youth Services.

Established in 1975, the Arapahoe County Juvenile Diversion Program was created to provide an alternative to court proceedings. It provides psychotherapy to first-time offenders. Conditions of diversion often include restitution and community service. The program collected $15,787.05 in restitution for calendar year 1985.

The Diversion Program run by Garfield Youth Services works with youth between the ages of 6 and 18 who are referred because of a violation of the juvenile code. All youth must participate in community service hours and/or restitution. If the victim is interested and willing, he/she is asked to participate in victim-offender mediation. GYS runs a recycling program as a way for younger youth to earn money. Other jobs are secured through private referrals and the Job Training Partnership Act.

Founded in 1982, the Enfield Community Service Program was developed to serve as an alternative to the more traditional methods of criminal case processing. Overseen by the Social Service Department of Enfield, the program is a cooperative effort between the courts, probation department, law enforcement agencies, and the Town of Enfield. All Enfield youths 18 and under are eligible. The Enfield Community Service Program develops worksites, places appropriate referrals, and monitors their hours. A written service completion summary is sent to the referring agency. In fiscal year 1985-86, 148 participants donated approximately 3,100 hours of volunteer service to the community. The value of this service, if computed by the minimum wage scale of $3.35 per hour, is $10,447. This is a meaningful contribution to public and private nonprofit agencies--especially in these times of limited staff and resources.

The Volunteer Center administers a court program used by the Juvenile and Superior Courts of Stamford and Norwalk, as well as the Family courts, to allow community service as a form of restitution in certain criminal cases. Three to four hundred juveniles and 700 to 800 people over the age of 16 use it per year. Usually it is used by a first offender and results in an eventual dismissal.

The purpose of the project is to hold adjudicated youth who owe court-ordered restitution accountable for their actions. Juveniles are provided with job readiness training, placed in paid community service jobs, and closely monitored to ensure compliance with restitution. In addition, program staff conduct restitution investigations to assist judicial officers in determining the amount of restitution due the victim. The program is staffed by two full-time Family Court employees and volunteers who conduct job readiness training and monitor cases.

COURT

Founded in 1945, the Polk County Juvenile Restitution Program was established as a deterrent to juvenile crime and a solution to help recover losses for the victim. Overseen by the Clerk of Courts, the program has been most effective as partial payments are accepted, thereby providing the juvenile, rather than the parents of the juvenile, the ability to reimburse the victim. The earliest records available indicate that with 1,290 delinquent offenses, an average of $3,000 was collected annually. The 1985 figures reveal 4,000 delinquent offenses with an average of $60,000 annually being directed by the Court and an average of $30,000 collected. Our program allows youths up to age 19 to pay through the Court; at that time jurisdiction is lost. However, payment is allowed provided that regular payments are continued. Should payment not be made on a regular basis and the youth has reached the age of majority, a lien is placed against him/her in favor of the victim, with interest to accumulate. The Restitution Program staff is then no longer involved with collection and disbursement of funds.

An alternative to court involvement, it provides sanctions for youths who break the law. As a resource for children who are exhibiting negative behavior, it accepts referrals from the counselors of the State of Florida's Department of Health and Rehabilitation Services. This program is operated by local providers under contract with the State of Florida. In District XI (Dade County), the main provider is the Office of the Dade-Miami Criminal Justice Council and its two sub-providers: (1) the University of Miami's School of Education and Allied Professions and (2) the Family Intervention Program of the Dade County Department of Youth and Family Development.

Since 1981, the Dublin Court Service's Community Control/Symbolic Restitution Program has provided community sanctions for delinquent youths. The program is mandatory for all youths adjudicated delinquent and has three components. Youths requiring close supervision are assigned to the group community work component. In this component, a group of juvenile offenders work on a regular basis under the supervision of the symbolic restitution supervisor. Duties consist of picking up trash on the streets and other public areas, and maintaining the grounds around the Court Service office. Youth who show initiative and dependability are assigned to independent work sites under the supervision of other agency personnel. Such agencies include the police department, fire department, and parks and recreation departments. Youths 16 and older who show good habits in the symbolic restitution program are referred to local employment assistance resources. During fiscal year 1986, 35 youths worked approximately 1,500 hours of symbolic restitution.

The Clayton County Juvenile Restitution Program was formally established in 1979 under a grant from the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention. As the program was developed, an experimental research design was put into place as part of an intensive evaluation to be conducted by the Institute for Policy Analysis in Eugene, Oregon. The findings of the study have been described in publications of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention. Since its inception, the program has focused on victims who have suffered property damage or loss or personal injury. After a thorough investigation by the juvenile court's restitution officer, juveniles may be ordered to repay victims in monetary terms. When this is not possible, youngsters may be ordered to complete a certain number of community service hours. The overall goal of the program is to ensure that victims receive restitution, address the issue of offender accountability, and enhance community support for the juvenile justice system.

The Symbolic Restitution Program in Floyd County is designed for juvenile offenders to "pay back" the community-at-large for their delinquent acts. As a condition of their probation, offenders are assigned a specific number of hours of community service to perform without financial compensation. Generally, the number of hours assigned ranges from 80 to 200, depending on the offense and history of the juvenile. Examples of the work performed for the community include general maintenance and exterior painting at the Rome-Floyd Humane Society, grounds maintenance at Northwest Georgia Regional Hospital, interior painting at the Floyd County Training Center, participation in the Rome Clean Community Campaign, and grounds maintenance at the Cerebral Palsy Center. The Victim Restitution Program in Floyd County is utilized for those probationers whose offense resulted in loss of property or damage to the victim; monetary restitution is ordered to compensate the victim for the crime. Generally, this program is designed for juveniles who are too young to be employed in the private sector, yet must pay restitution as a condition of probation. The offender is paid $2.25 per hour to perform work in nonprofit organizations and governmental agencies.

Funding for this program lasted 3 years, at which time Elmore County chose to fund it and expand the program into the adult court system as an alternative to incarceration. A diversionary program was also created by which juveniles, particularly "first-time offenders," are given the opportunity to circumvent a court appearance and participate in a Community Service Program for minor offenses. In 1985, 93 juvenile cases were diverted, alleviating the court's heavy load. These programs are a cooperative effort between the courts, the prosecutor's office, law enforcement, and the schools.

The Kane County Community Restitution Service Program was originally created to provide a means for juvenile offenders to return symbolic restitution to the community. The program began in 1979 and expanded to include adult offenders in 1982. It is currently utilized by the juvenile court for supervision, probation, and diversion cases, and it is also used as an alternative to incarceration for adult misdemeanor and traffic offenders who are unable to pay fines. Adult probation utilizes the program as well, with each intensive supervision offender required to complete 130 hours of community service. In fiscal year 1985, over 60 nonprofit organizations in Kane County were provided with unpaid labor through the CRS program. A total of 749 offenders from juvenile, adult, and municipal courts were ordered to perform public service work through the program, and 23,545 hours were worked in the community by these offenders.

The Sangamon County Juvenile Restitution Initiative, established in 1986, is a three-part program encompassing the monitoring of both court-ordered and preadjudicatory financial restitution, youth employment assistance, and community service restitution. The overall purpose of the program is to make the use of restitution a more viable disposition for the court. This is accomplished by: (1) providing an increase in the payment of restitution to victims through closely monitoring all payments and taking appropriate followup measures; (2) providing job-seeking training and an employment referral service to juveniles owing restitution; and (3) offering the community a system of symbolic repayment for juvenile crime by sending juvenile offenders into the public, nonprofit business sector to provide gratis labor. Ultimately, through participation in any, or all three, phases of the Restitution Initiative, juvenile offenders will be learning a valuable accountability lesson--that they themselves are responsible for their actions.

The Victim Assistance and Restitution Program (VARP) was developed in 1983 by the Juvenile Division of the Lake County Court Services Department to be responsible for all victim services and restitution casework. VARP cases include those diverted from formal court proceedings as well as those in which the offender has been adjudicated. The VARP program is unique in its orientation toward victims. Eligibility for the program is based on victim losses and need for victim services, rather than the characteristics of the offender. Although restitution advocacy is the primary service to victims, other victim services such as case tracking and referral are also offered. At the time restitution is ordered or assigned, VARP counselors work in conjunction with probation officers to monitor payments and provide assistance to minors in meeting their restitution obligations. Counselors also provide employment search information and job lead toward this end. Alternative restitution such as mediation, public service, and victim service are also explored and implemented where indicated. Since the program's inception in November 1983, minors have paid a total of $106,495.02 to victims to reimburse them for their losses.

The Victim Offender Reconciliation Program utilizes trained volunteer mediators to resolve criminal conflicts in face-to-face meetings with victims and offenders. Facts and feelings are aired, and a restitution contract is negotiated and signed by all parties. VORP staff monitor cases and contract fulfillment, and recruit and train community mediators. In 1985, $7,838 in monetary restitution was paid to 52 victims. The Community Service Restitution Program provides work as a jail alternative. Offenders work 6 hours at a nonprofit agency for every day they would have spent in jail. CSRP staff do intake, placement, and worksite monitoring. The potential cost benefit to Elkhart County in 1985 was $169,025. A community garden, which is planted and harvested by offenders and provides over 300 bushels of vegetables for the elderly and needy, is an annual summer worksite. The Juvenile Reparation Program currently being developed will be a comprehensive program that may utilize VORP, CSRP, and continuing education.

Financial restitution has been a part of Allen Superior Court Family Relations Division's juvenile probation program since 1975. The program was expanded to include community service work in 1979. The restitution/community service work program is overseen by the juvenile probation department. It has become an integral part of the probation function and is used at all levels of the court process. Community service work or financial restitution is often used as a form of adjusting a case at an informal level. This allows the juvenile to accept responsibility for his/her behavior and suffer consequences without acquiring a formal juvenile record. However, community service work/restitution may be ordered as part of or as total disposition at a formal court hearing. Individuals under 18 years of age may participate in the program. The juvenile's involvement largely determines whether community service work is ordered. The Juvenile Probation Department has 19 work sites available on a continuing basis and additional seasonal work sites. The worksites are made available through the Parks Department and the Fort Wayne Police Department. The community service work/restitution program provides the court with community service for young defendants.

Porter County PACT operates two restitution programs as part of a multiprogram community corrections agency. The Community Service Restitution Program, established in 1977, is designed to be an alternative to incarceration. Offenders are given the opportunity to perform 6 hours of unpaid labor for each day of a jail sentence, which is then suspended. The program began exclusively for adults but has gradually expanded to allow juveniles to participate. In fiscal year 1986, 684 adults and 65 juveniles were referred. Eighty-five percent successfully completed their assignments. The Victim Offender Reconciliation Program began in Porter County in 1983. VORP arranges face-to-face meetings between victims of crime and offenders with the primary goal of bringing emotional healing to both victim and offender. The secondary goal is to negotiate mutually acceptable restitution agreements where the offender can "make things right" with the victim. Restitution may be monetary or work for the victim, or may take other forms. Most meetings are mediated by trained community volunteers. Most referrals are from juvenile probation after admission of guilt but before final disposition. Most offenders have been charged with felony offenses. Sixty percent of cases referred come to meetings, 95 percent of meetings result in contracts, and 80 percent of contracts are fulfilled.

Story County Juvenile Court Services administers a restitution program for juvenile offenders through funds from the Iowa Judicial Branch. Juveniles are required to reimburse victims either by funds obtained on their own or by working at community service jobs, receiving compensation at the rate of $2.75 per hour. The victims receive a check from the county auditor after all community service hours have been worked.

The program was founded in 1978 through the cooperation of Des Moines/Louisa Counties in the Eighth Judicial District and the South Iowa Area Crime Commission. There were three goals established: to compel juveniles to accept responsibility for their actions, assist victims with losses, and reduce recidivism of offenders. The program has provided alternatives/diversions from official court action in most cases and has brought great public support through work that juveniles have done through restitution/community service. Through the years, the moneys came from both public and private sources. In 1985, the State of Iowa Judicial Department assumed full financing of the program. Additionally, the State enacted a State Juvenile Victim Restitution Program in which moneys were targeted for wages of juveniles. The program's effectiveness was evaluated from 1979 to 1981. The recidivism rate for juveniles in the program was 19 percent. In Des Moines County alone, there were 328 referrals. Restitution was made to victims in the amount of $865; juveniles worked 3,725 hours of community service. Currently, the program is in operation in the 14 counties of the Eighth Judicial District of Iowa.

The creation of the Juvenile Restitution Program in 1979 has been a positive venture between the Polk County Board of Supervisors and the 5th Judicial District Juvenile Court. The Program was created to assist both juvenile offenders and victims and the community to become "whole" as a result of an offense committed by a juvenile. The focus of the program, which has proven to be 86 percent successful, was to establish an alternative to incarceration for young offenders and increase a sense of responsibility and accountability for their misbehavior. The Iowa legislature has allotted funds each year for young people to earn who have difficulty finding jobs to pay their restitution. Those earning legislated funds may choose to keep 25 percent and pay 75 percent or pay all 100 percent toward their restitution. Those who have jobs of their own pay 50 percent of their net income under contractual agreement. Since 1979, over $92,000 has been paid to victims and 51,000 hours of community service was performed at the value of the minimum wage, $3.35 per hour or $170,859. We currently process over 600 youth per year with one full-time and one part-time staff person in seven counties of the District.

The 3rd Judicial District Juvenile Court Services Restitution Program was officially started in July 1984. The program has three parts. Juveniles are first given a chance to pay the restitution with their own funds. Should this not be possible, they are then given the opportunity to be employed at State expense at nonprofit organizations, with 75 percent of their earnings going to the victim and 25 percent retained by the juvenile. The third component consists of a Community Services Program in which juveniles are assigned to work hours at a nonprofit organization without pay.

Established in 1977, the Black Hawk County Juvenile Restitution and Community Services Work Project (CSWP) programs are administered by the Juvenile Court Services office and involve financial restitution, community service work, and victim services. Restitution is pursued on every offense that has documented loss. Restitution and community service work are required as a sole sanction, as one condition of an out-of-court settlement, or are ordered by the court. Juveniles between 12 and 18 years old who are unable to pay restitution complete a 4-hour Job Skills Workshop and work at State-subsidized job placements to facilitate victim repayment. Juveniles on the State Restitution and CSWP programs work on crews of 5 to 6 youth per supervisor and may be promoted to a job site that provides direct supervision. An Outreach Program ensures completion of restitution from juveniles placed outside the community. Annually, over 300 referrals are made to each program with average collection of $37,000 and 92 percent of monetary cases paid in full. Hours worked for the community average 11,600 annually. Victim services include assistance in documenting loss, providing information on the juvenile court process, and assistance in filing civil court action as necessary.

Over 1,800 local participants, primarily minor and first-time offenders, have been involved with this project since inception. Funded by Henderson County fiscal court, the city commission, and the United Way, this program has seen the total number of offenders reduced by approximately 300 between 1982 and 1985 with recidivism reduced from 20 to 6 percent. Involvement, Inc., is managed by a seven-member volunteer board; the program employs seven part-time employees with an annual budget of $18,000. Involvement, Inc., was selected as the best district/fiscal court project in the State of Kentucky in 1985 by the Kentucky Justice Cabinet and Kentucky Juvenile Justice Commission.

Juvenile Court Diversion, established in April 1985, is an alternative to the already overwhelmed court system. This federally funded program is the first of its kind for juveniles in Oldham County. Through this project, it is believed that antisocial behavior can be corrected more effectively by rehabilitation counseling than by formal proceedings in the courts. Thus the Diversion Program, which focuses on nonviolent misdemeanor offenders, adds a new and useful tool to the juvenile justice system. Once in the program, the youth is required to attend counseling sessions and complete the assigned community service hours. Once the youth has successfully completed the program, the court will dismiss the charges against him/her. In the first year of operation, 67 youth were served.

In 1976, the Division of Juvenile Court began restitution/ community service as a positive program designed to hold appropriate youth accountable for their delinquent acts while giving them the opportunity to pay back the victim in a material way, or the community, for the violation of its laws, in a symbolic way. Adhering to the concept of accountability, the court works to accomplish a reduction of the incidence of delinquent acts through program participation. In the past 3 years youthful offenders before the court have been ordered, on average, to perform 2,800 community service hours and pay $30,000 in restitution per year.

Founded in 1979, the Orleans Parish Juvenile Court Restitution Program was created as a way to modify the behavior of juveniles who have been adjudicated delinquent by requiring that some form of restitution be made by such juveniles either to the victim(s) in particular or to the community in general. The program is funded by the City of New Orleans and the juvenile court. Appropriate juveniles are referred to the program by the sentencing judge, who orders participation in the program as a condition of probation. The restitution ordered may be in the form of monetary payments or of an ordered number of hours of unpaid community service. In fiscal 1984-85, 343 youthful offenders paid back to crime victims $14,712.99 in actual money and $16,134.75 in unpaid community service hours. In 1985, 110 more juveniles participated in the program as compared to 1984. The program operates with a staff of three persons.

Overseen by the Director of Juvenile Court Services, the program is a cooperative effort between the courts and the local district attorney's office. All youth between the ages of 13 and 17 are eligible. Juveniles who are unable to compensate victims monetarily for damages are required to perform symbolic restitution in the form of community service work at supervised worksites such as neighborhood parks and playgrounds. In 1985, 93 youthful offenders paid back to crime victims $8,533.15 in actual money and performed $3,522.40 hours of community service work.

Baltimore County's Juvenile Community Restitution Program is a coordinated effort by the Baltimore County Police Department (Youth Division), the State Juvenile Services Administration (Region III), and the Baltimore County State's Attorney's Office to reduce recidivism among juveniles adjudicated delinquent on nonviolent, theft-related offenses. This is accomplished through a unique mixture of preventive, clinical, and community service options specifically designed for the target population and made available to the juvenile court as a dispositional supplement to probation. The program provides intensive counseling services and closely monitored community service to approximately 80 delinquent youths per year.

Established in 1982, the Judgment Restitution Program (JRP) was created to provide a means for juvenile crime victims to be compensated for out-of-pocket losses up to $5,000 in each case. Functioning under the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court, the program interfaces with the Juvenile Services Administration, the State's Attorney's Office, the Office of the Public Defender, and other interested agencies to repay juvenile crime victims for medical and property offenses through the juvenile criminal court system without the victim having to civilly pursue the collection effort via the ordeal of civil suit. All youths under 18 are eligible. Approximately 800 juvenile cases a year are processed through the JRP and approximately $250,000 is collected or programmed for collection on an annual basis. As of October 1986, over $1.3 million had been processed. The program was recognized in 1986 by the National Association of Counties as one of the outstanding restitution programs in the Nation. Since 1983, the program has served as a model program for the U.S. Department of Justice's Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP). In 1984 the program was expanded into the adult arena and currently collects adult fines, Driving While Intoxicated (DWI) fees, roadwork moneys, and other adult collections ordered by the District and Circuit Courts in addition to the ongoing juvenile collection effort.

This program is an intricate part of the function of the Probation Department within Quincy District Court, with its major goal focusing on defendant accountability. In the 11 years of operation, the "Earn-It" program has collected thousands of dollars from its defendants. In 1984-1985, over $350,000 in restitution was collected and paid back directly to victims, and 45,235 hours of community work service were performed by 831 juvenile and adult offenders. The Victim Services Program includes face-to-face meetings between victims and offenders, focusing on the determination of restitution. The Job Development Program enables unemployed defendants to make monetary restitution by means of job placement in the private sector, while the Tourniquet Sentencing Program incorporates an intensive supervision alternative sentencing measure for high-risk juvenile offenders.

COURT

Muskegon County Juvenile Court instituted the Community Service Program in 1983 with youthful offenders (between the ages of 14 and 17 years) doing volunteer work in nonprofit agencies to repay the community for some of the inconvenience caused as a result of their law violations. This program was also extended to include criminal traffic offenders. The Victim Restitution Program was added in 1985. Grants were obtained to pay probationers the minimum wage while working in nonprofit agencies until they have earned enough money to repay their victims. The remaining aspect is Direct Pay, in which the family or child has the ability to make restitution. All moneys are handled between the child and victim; a receipt must be submitted to the court.

When restitution is ordered, an investigator--usually a volunteer--determines the ability to pay (including available insurance) and negotiates a payment schedule to be approved by the court. Our Community Work Service Program is payback to the community, and is ordered in almost all probations, whether or not there is victim restitution. This CSW ranges from 20 to as much as 160 hours, and is performed for qualifying nonprofit organizations, such as the Salvation Army, the Library, the Humane Society, Parks and Recreation, etc.

In 1984, an adult restitution program was established based on the success of the juvenile program. The primary focus is one of accountability to the court, community, and oneself. Program content includes community service, financial restitution, victim services, and self-restitution projects. An information/educational session was created within the juvenile program to increase awareness of the decisionmaking process. Staff from law enforcement, county attorneys, probation and MCF-St. Cloud participate in the structured program. The program, entitled the "Awareness Seminar," helps to create an atmosphere of thought and healthy decisionmaking.

At the direction of the juvenile court, the Dakota County Court Services Department initiated a restitution program in 1979. Services were expanded countywide and to most property offenders in 1980. The purpose of the program was to provide a useful and effective disposition alternative for the court in dealing with juveniles committing acts which would be illegal if they were adults. The Program has varied components, including community work service, monetary restitution collection, victim-offender meetings, victim contact and assistance, paid summer work crews, and minimal job assistance. About half of the referrals come from the diversion program (minor offenses seen by Court Services rather than a judge) and the remainder are court-ordered, including felony offenders and repeat offenders. In 1985, over $38,000 was collected from 286 cases. Approximately 6,500 hours of community service were performed during the same time period. Projections for 1986 are that over $40,000 will be collected to be disbursed to victims. Efforts are currently under way to improve the efficiency of the program and to initiate new components, especially related to paid job positions and community service work.

The Four County Restitution Program established in 1981 serves the District Courts of Benton, Kanabec, Mille Lacs, and Sherburne counties of central Minnesota. The Program emphasizes serving the victim, as demonstrated by the victim-offender restitution conference in which the victim's loss is determined and the method of repayment is defined. The Restitution Coordinator also monitors offender restitution payments and dispenses payments to the victim. Delinquent restitution accounts are reported to the court for further disposition. Public, nonprofit, and charitable community service worksites are utilized in each of the four counties.

The focus of the program has been to pay back victims, perform community service, and make active steps toward self-improvement. The Court Services Department uses reality therapy and transactional analysis methods to require responsibility in youthful offenders. The program makes no distinction between juvenile and adult offenders. Court Service Officers are considered "Sentencing Specialists" and are given great responsibilities in formulating sentences that fit the crime committed and the offender's specific character disorder.

It began as a program to reimburse victims and their insurance companies for their losses due to delinquent acts. Youths under age 18 are eligible. After a youth is ordered to pay restitution, we work out a payment according to his disposition in a manner that is agreed upon by the youth, his counselor, and the restitution coordinator. We consider school and work schedules as well as age and employment possibilities. In 1985 we collected $16,203. Since the program was started through the end of 1985, this court has collected and disbursed $130,000.

Overseen by the Cape Girardeau County Juvenile Center's Probation Program, Operation Payback utilizes community agencies and private businesses as worksites for youth enrolled in the program. All youth between the ages of 12 and 17 are eligible. Through a grant from the Division of Youth Services, Operation Payback is able to pay a youth up to $50 for work performed in the community if restitution is owed. Additional moneys must be earned by the youth through some other source. From January 1, 1985, to July 31, 1986, 121 offenders paid back to crime victims $2,605.48 in actual money and worked 1,384 hours of community service.

Developed in 1983 with the help of the Junior League of St. Louis, Payback is currently operated by one staff member, whose salary is paid through St. Louis Juvenile Court funds. Currently, six nonprofit agencies employ Payback youth aged 14 to 16. Of the 120 juveniles placed at job sites, 83 percent have completed their restitution order; all of their earnings of $16,110 were forwarded to the victims of their crimes. The Monsanto Company has awarded Payback two $10,000 grants used solely for juvenile salaries. Future funding is being sought to expand the program to include a community service component.

The 13th Judicial District Court Services has a restitution program consisting of monetary payments. It is our goal to hold kids accountable for their actions and reimburse the victims for losses. When a case is referred that involves restitution, the victim is contacted regarding the extent of damages and cost estimates are requested. When the youth appears for his hearing, he is informed of the damages and his responsibility in repaying this money. A payment plan is set up. The restitution worker maintains contact with the offender to monitor monthly payments and also with the victims to keep them informed of progress. When the money is collected in our office, it is then forwarded by us to the victim. If payment is not made after repeated attempts by the restitution worker, a formal hearing before the judge will be scheduled, or the victim will be advised to pursue the matter through Small Claims Court. We are a county office and are under the County Commissioners and the Youth Court District Judge.

The restitution program in Gallatin County was established in 1974, when the Montana State Youth Court Act was revised. It is administered by the 18th Judicial District Youth Probation Office and involves financial restitution, community service work, and the victim compensation program. During the last 10 years, we have averaged over $8,000 in monetary damage and close to 5,000 hours in community service work completed. Restitution is pursued for every offense where there is a loss to the victim and where the offender has the ability to repay. When there is a monetary loss the youths are encouraged to find employment and make payments to our office, which are then forwarded to the victim. Community service is also ordered in many cases, with nonprofit service organizations supervising the offenders. Restitution is never guaranteed in Youth Court; however, whenever possible it is a condition of the probation and is collected. The victims compensation program is a State-run program. Benefits are paid to victims of criminal acts when bodily injury or death is a result of the act. Six percent of all fines assessed or bails forfeited on offenses involving a victim provides revenue for this program.

In response to a need for providing juvenile offenders (who are unable to pay restitution) with a constructive experience as a consequence of inappropriate behavior, the court is expecting the receipt of a grant to initiate a community service project that will begin in December 1986. All youths between the ages of 10 and 18 will be eligible for both programs.

The Restitution and Community Service Program of Dodge County began in 1984 and was designed to enable the juvenile or adult offender to have input into their own sentencing. The offender is given the opportunity to work out a restitution contract, whereby he/she agrees to pay back the victim, pay back the community (through community service), and make self-improvement goals. Once all three parts of the contract are completed, the offender is released from the court's jurisdiction. The goal of the Restitution and Community Service Program is to hold the offender accountable for his/her actions. The responsibility is put back on the offender, and if the offender does not successfully complete the restitution contract, the original sentence is imposed. Over the past 2 years, 94 percent of all restitution ordered was paid to the victims, in the total amount of $16,088. In addition, almost 4,000 hours of community service were completed. The savings to the community notably exceeds the cost of the program.

The Juvenile Probation Department Work Program is designed to emphasize the fact that minors can and should be held responsible when they have broken the law. Repaying the community in the form of meaningful work is one method of holding youngsters accountable for their behavior. This program provides an alternative to incarceration and formal probation, as well as an additional disposition for the court, the Traffic Masters, and probation officers. It is most recently used as a method of disposition for youths who have committed minor offenses, but can be used for more serious offenses. A voluntary, informal agreement is used for placing youngsters in this program. When the youth and parents agree to this alternative disposition, it is understood that formal charges will not be filed unless the youth fails to adhere to the terms of the agreement. The Work Program not only serves as a deterrent to further misconduct, but incorporates therapeutic qualities as well. Each participant is evaluated daily on his/her individual work habits, attitude, initiative, trustworthiness, and ability to accept and respond to supervision. In addition to this evaluation, all participants receive individual field counseling regarding their specific offenses.

Referrals to the program of first-time offenders are made by the Juvenile Officer of the Rochester Police Department or the Rochester District Court. Participation in the program is entirely voluntary. Offenses of criminal mischief and shoplifting constitute over half of the referrals made in 1985-86. An individual contract is made with each youth by a committee of community volunteers. Recommendations include restitution, community service work, letters of apology, or research. In fiscal year 1985-86, $3,016.70 was collected and 743.5 hours of community service work were completed. Once a contract is successfully completed, a youngster is released from active participation in the program. Supportive services can be provided to a youngster and the family after termination for as long as necessary to increase the youth's chances of success.

As an alternative to formal court proceedings, the Family Court has Intake Service Conferences (ISC) and Juvenile Conference Committees (JCC). The philosophy is to divert first and minor juvenile offenders from the formal system to avoid the stigma associated with a court proceeding. The juvenile and family are invited to discuss the offense and associated issues. Based on the information gathered, the JCC or Intake Officer recommends a method of disposing of the complaint, which may include community service or monetary restitution. Followup is also required to insure compliance and final dismissal. While many JCC's made community service available through a liability agreement with local governing bodies, it was not universally available until 1984. Since that time guidelines and referral procedures have been implemented, with the JCC's utilizing local governmental agencies and nonprofit organizations as placement sites. ISC referrals for placement are made through a cooperative agreement with the Essex County Probation Department.

Founded in 1985, the Tompkins County Probation Department Community Service Restitution Program serves adults. The restitution collection aspect currently also serves juveniles. We hope to soon expand our community service to juveniles as well. Staffing is accomplished with probation personnel via 50-50 funding between the county and State. We have a supervised weekend work component that is a very successful alternative to incarceration. We consider our CSR Program to apply to juveniles because New York State defines "adult" as age 16 and over.

During 1984, the New York City Department of Probation and a Bronx Family Court judge, in cooperation with the New York City Parks and Recreation Department, initiated a pilot program to test the viability of a community service sentencing project in the Family Court system. The goal of the program is to provide a constructive work-related adjudicatory option in the Family Court, consisting of unpaid community service as a condition of ACD, probation, or conditional discharge for those youth charged with felonies and misdemeanors. The program participants include youths under the direct supervision and guidance of a probation officer. The groups are assigned to a local park and meet on alternate Saturdays for 4 hours. Their activities include general cleanup of the grounds and facilities. This model has enabled us to provide the youngsters with close supervision and a setting for the probation officer to better assess the youth's needs and strengths. This has resulted in a decrease in arrest rates and more appropriate referrals to community service agencies.

The Court Referred Volunteer Program officially began on February 1, 1981, when the first director of the program was hired. The Program was designed to provide community service, as mandated by the courts or local probation personnel, to persons (primarily youthful offenders) in order to prevent or decrease their incarceration, placement on probation, and re-entry into the criminal justice system. The program is of threefold service: to the offenders, who are given constructive short-term work, often in a new environment, under the supervision of good work role models; to the agencies, who receive a certain number of hours of labor to do needed tasks; and to the courts and the probation departments, who utilize this new and organized way to effect alternative sentences for offenders.

The Juvenile Work Restitution Program began in January 1986, serving youths 10 to 16 years old who have been ordered to perform community service work. Logical consequences are taken into consideration when placing a juvenile at a jobsite. Those who have vandalized schools are placed at schools to clean up the damage done. Those juveniles who have a personal victim are required to write a letter of apology to their victim as part of their community service work. Certificates are given to those who successfully complete their hours; they are encouraged to use the certificates as proof of their volunteer experience in looking for a summer job. In the 6 months since the JWRP has been in operation, 29 youths have entered the program and 23 have successfully completed 685.5 hours. Two youths have been terminated unsuccessfully; both were sent to training school. The amount of money saved the community (youth hours plus volunteer supervisor hours x $3.35) is $4,592.86.

The Pitt County Juvenile Services Restitution Program was established in January 1982 under the direction of the Juvenile Services Office. It is designed to provide the vehicle whereby juvenile offenders are readily held accountable for their behavior. The program encourages the juvenile offender to reflect on his/her behavior and accept responsibility for misconduct. It enables the juvenile to "make whole" the victim by performing age-appropriate community service at selected worksites. The program attempts to lessen the adversity felt by victims of delinquency and to increase their confidence in the juvenile justice system. The program is designed to strengthen ties between the juvenile and the community. It provides an opportunity for the community to become directly involved in redirecting the energies and motivations of troubled youth into productive activity.

Surry Friends of Youth, a nonprofit community agency, began a juvenile restitution program in 1982 that assists juvenile offenders 15 years of age and under who have been ordered to perform community service hours or pay monetary restitution. Juveniles enter the program as a result of a diversion from adjudication in juvenile court. Referrals into the program may be made by attorneys, prosecutors, judges, law enforcement officers, or juvenile court counselors at any point in the legal and judicial process. In the community service program, juveniles are required to perform between 40 and 200 hours. Juveniles are placed at public and private nonprofit agencies such as libraries, day care centers, police departments, hospitals, and churches. Youths who are paying monetary restitution are required to pay at least 50 percent of their earnings to the victim. In order to successfully complete the requirements of the program, the individual must attend school or work in gainful employment, refrain from any involvement in criminal activity, and attend weekly survival skills/education groups. The program is currently funded through a combination of Federal, State, and local government moneys.

Founded in 1981, the Moore County Juvenile Restitution Program was created as a court referral receiving agency to provide work sites for adjudicated juveniles to earn funds to repay victims for the youths' destructive behavior and repay society through community service work. Overseen by Sandhills Mental Health Center, the program is a cooperative effort between DHS/CBA, Moore County Juvenile Court, and Sandhills Mental Health Center. Juveniles between the ages of 7 and 15 are served through the program. The program is funded by DHS/CBA with a 30-percent county match. Juveniles are paid minimum wages for their monetary restitution, with 50 cents of the hourly wage being retained in a contingency fund for the juvenile upon completion of the program. Non-completion results in forfeiture of contingency funds toward satisfying obligations to the victim. Community service work is performed as directed by the court. Work sites include a wood cutting site, where firewood is cut, split, and sold on the open market; and a 7-1/2 acre farm where a variety of vegetables are raised and sold on the open market or donated to the needy.

Administered by local county government and funded by a combination of Federal, State, and local funds, the program strives to teach accountability to youth through community services/monetary restitution, mediation, and job skills training. In fiscal year 1985-86, 116 youthful offenders performed 3,705 hours of community service work for nonprofit and government agencies. Another 47 juvenile offenders paid monetary restitution of $7,096 to victims to compensate their losses. Some 50 or more clients were given training in job-seeking skills or in job placement. These figures represent the juvenile court's response to the local community's cry for responsible intervention with delinquent youth.

Anson County's Focus Restitution Program, begun in 1983, is a victim reconciliation/community retribution program that features victim participation in the restitution process. The juvenile offender "fulfills the obligation" incurred by his/her offense by completing supervised work service hours for the victim or for community nonprofit agencies/organizations or senior citizens. Designed for all youths under 18 years of age, the program is a cooperative effort between the courts, juvenile probation officers, and Anson Youth Services, the coordinating agency. Victim participation in designation of appropriate tasks is a primary objective. Guardians/parents should not pay restitution costs, since they did not commit the offense. The youth makes reparations for what she/he did by giving up his/her free time to complete work service hours. The program, established in 1983, is funded entirely by a one-time grant of $12,000 by the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, Winston-Salem. Funds are allocated for part-time coordination and supervisor, mileage, supplies, equipment, and materials needed for the work assignments. Each client and staff member is insured.

The Northeast Central Juvenile Court has had a monetary restitution program since 1976. The restitution program was expanded in 1980 to include a community service option. Any juvenile referred to the Court is eligible to be involved in the restitution program. In 1985, 57 juveniles were involved in the monetary restitution program and 20 other juveniles were involved in community service placements. In 1986, the major share of restitution was paid directly to victims of juvenile crimes (individuals and businesses, 67 percent). Since formal statistics have been kept on the program, juvenile offenders have paid back over $61,000 to the victims of their crimes.

Established in 1976, the Child Responsibility Project offers the opportunity for a young offender "to pay back" for the crime committed. Youth perform restitution activities at the minimum wage rate until the amount owed is paid. A limit of $600 per offense is set on the amount of restitution a youth may pay back. The youth receives no money for the services performed at the restitution site. Payment is made directly to the victim. The project is currently funded by a youth service grant through the State of Ohio. The target group for the project is 12- through 17-year-old youths who have committed an offense resulting in property damage, theft, or personal injury. During 1985, 323 youths were referred to the project, with 318 successful completions. Payment to victims reached $44,000, resulting from 15,196 hours of no-cost labor by project youth.

Founded in 1979 by Judge Robert J. Moore, the Youth Responsibility Project is a community-based system of rehabilitation services. It establishes an alternative to dealing with juvenile offenders and provides supportive services for youth referred to the court. The service is designed to assist youth in learning responsibility and building positive self-esteem through interaction with adult volunteers in the community. The service stresses community involvement and encourages work sites outside the normal organization of the court to participate in order to enhance the youth's feeling of belonging to the community and his/her feelings of worth in performing a service valuable to the community, not solely as punishment for him/her. In fiscal year 1986, 572 youthful offenders paid back to crime victims $10,775 in actual money; 24,679 hours of community service work were performed. Since its inception in 1979, over 2,500 participants have completed 105,400 hours of community service and $55,375 in damages have been repaid. This has been accomplished through a network of 190 volunteer job sites throughout this county and the seven surrounding counties within this project.

Since its inception in 1977, the Lucas County Juvenile Restitution Program (JRP), has offered offenders the opportunity to make amends to the victims of their crimes, as well as the community. A unique aspect of the Restitution Program is the operation of supervised work crews. A wide variety of community service projects are completed by these crews at Toledo Area Metroparks, schools, churches, and various other public service agencies each year. Youth referred to the program are held responsible financially for the losses or damages they have caused. Based on financial ability, the youth either pays the debt, works on a program job crew to earn the money, or both. Youth are also referred to the program for "symbolic restitution" or public service work. Through July 1, 1986, over 4,500 youth have successfully completed the program and have returned over $400,000 in restitution to victims. Additionally, JRP work crews have performed over 176,000 hours of public service work in Lucas County.

Youth and Family Services of Canadian County, Inc., in conjunction with Canadian County Court Related and Community Services, administers the Canadian County Restitution Program. This Program involves an 8-week group counseling session for the offender, victim-offender mediation, and monetary or community service restitution. All youths under the age of 18 are eligible for the counseling program, while youths through the age of 18 participate in monetary or community service restitution. Since its inception in 1978, youthful offenders have repaid in excess of $42,000 for crimes committed.

The Garfield County Juvenile Restitution Program was started on January 1, 1985, to give the courts another tool to use as a means of rehabilitating young offenders and to help recover some of the monetary losses to the community. The program is based in the Garfield County Juvenile Office and is administered by the Juvenile Restitution Officer, the court, law enforcement agencies, DHS, and the district attorney's office. The program budget includes a $2.00 per hour reimbursement to employers who hire through the program. Community service is growing as an alternative for those juveniles who for various reasons cannot obtain employment. In the first 17 months of the program, 151 cases have been opened, and 80 have been paid in full, totaling $13,211.69 in restitution. The program has been received throughout the community with interest, enthusiasm, and appreciation from victims, parents, civic leaders, employers, and professional agencies.

Established in 1978, the Juvenile Employment Restitution Program was designed for youth aged 14 to 18 who frequently commit crimes that damage or destroy public and private property. A large percentage of these youth are from economically disadvantaged families and have little or no means of restitution. Without some other course of action, the punishment available to the courts is confinement. It is believed that confinement leads the individual further into the life of crime. The Juvenile Employment Restitution Program provides a subsidy to pay youths a salary while working off their restitution order. Youths in 74 Oklahoma counties are eligible for the job subsidy. Worksites approved for youth employment are any nonprofit organizations such as: city hall, county commissioners, water plant, rescue mission, police department, State Highway Department, public school, and courthouse. Types of work youth can do include: cleanup work in buildings; maintenance of grounds and yards; clerical work, including operation of office machines; and errand and delivery work by foot, bicycle, or public transportation.

The Oklahoma County Juvenile Bureau Restitution Project is located within the Juvenile Division of the District Court of Oklahoma County (population 568,933). Both monetary restitution and community service work are utilized with adjudicated delinquents, and made a part of their court-ordered probation plans. The Restitution Project consists of a supervisor, three restitution officers, and a secretary/bookkeeper. Restitution officers provide full restitution planning and victim services, including establishing the amount of monetary loss and working with community service sites as well as performing the traditional tasks of a probation officer. Juveniles are encouraged to assist in finding their own community service work sites and in developing their own probation plans in an effort to make them even more responsible for their behavior by taking ownership in the requirements imposed upon them as a result of that behavior. Since the project's founding in 1980, 812 juveniles have paid $69,500 in restitution and have completed 6,100 hours of service work within the community. During the 1984-85 fiscal year, 103 juveniles paid $8,140 in monetary restitution.

Founded in 1977, and primarily aimed at 74 nonmetro counties, the Oklahoma Department of Human Services (DHS) Victim Restitution/Offender Responsibility Program helps victims recover losses resulting from juvenile crime and holds juvenile offenders under 18 more accountable for their delinquent behavior. It is a cooperative effort between the courts, district attorneys' offices, law enforcement agencies, and DHS. Since 1978, payments to victims have totaled $1.7 million. These payments have been in the form of monetary restitution, as well as community service work in the community. Offenders have also reimbursed victims for losses sustained by providing direct service in lieu of monetary restitution. Wage subsidies are available to public sector and private nonprofit employers willing to employ offenders owing restitution. Seventy percent of the wages earned by the offender must be paid to the victim. Where possible, victim-offender mediation conferences are used to develop restitution agreements. Assisted by a trained mediator, the victim and offender develop a restitution plan designed to hold the offender accountable for his/her behavior and address the loss incurred by the victim. The goal of the face-to-face meeting is to personalize the crime and sensitize the offender to people.

The program is administered locally by the unit of the Department of Human Services known as Court Related and Community Services. It is a cooperative endeavor between the court, district attorney's office, law enforcement, and DHS. All youth offenders under age 18 are eligible. Restitution agreements are reached at voluntary, prosecutor, and judicial levels. Both monetary and community service restitution are used. CRCS uses job counseling, individual and group referral to job placing agencies, and a subsidized job program for those unable to obtain employment. A voluntary victim-offender mediation program has been implemented.

The Victim-Offender Reconciliation Program of Benton County (VORP) is a community-based, nonprofit organization that involves volunteers from the community in the resolution of conflict between victims and offenders. The criminal justice system does not provide a way to resolve the victim's crime-caused fees, hostility, and alienation. Even with current types of sentencing, property offenders rarely understand the real human costs of their actions upon their victims. VORP provides a unique opportunity for attitudes and stereotypes between victims and offenders to change during a face-to-face meeting. The meeting is facilitated by a trained volunteer who assists the victim and offender in sharing facts and feelings about the case; together they work out a restitution agreement. During 1985, victims received $2,282.83 in restitution payments; the offenders as part of the agreement also completed 614 hours of work for the victims or as community service. Because each person has a greater sense of fulfillment and commitment to their restitution plan, 91 percent of the restitution contracts are completed as compared against a State average of 40 percent.

The Community Service Program at the Lane County Juvenile Department has been in existence since March 1981. It was originally funded to provide two diversionary programs to hold youthful offenders accountable for admitted law violations while limiting their involvement in the juvenile justice system. It was soon expanded to also include a preponderance of adjudicated youthful offenders. In both situations the child is assigned a specific number of community service hours to complete, based on the offense committed. Twenty or more youth per month are placed with community organizations, including day care facilities, alcohol and drug rehabilitation centers, charitable organizations, and public and private nonprofit organizations. Job-site supervisors at the community work sites are responsible for onsite supervision of youth and assignment of productive, nonhazardous tasks. Youth are insured by the county for any accident that might occur on the job. When the child has completed his/her assigned number of community service hours, he/she is responsible for reporting back to the program coordinator with the Agency Certification Form. A copy of this form is kept on file with the community service record and the original is included in the child's court record. The program also includes other secondary components.

Washington County Juvenile Department Restitution and Victim Services was started as a formal program in October 1985. The goal of the program is to provide a consistent and coordinated approach to assessment, monitoring, and enforcement of restitution and community service orders for juvenile offenders. A related goal is to assist victims toward a better understanding of the juvenile justice process and to better respond to victims' needs by providing information, support, access to the process, and input into results of court action in their cases. Restitution and Victim Services places youth in one of 40 community service worksites doing an average total of 200 or more hours of voluntary service in lieu of or as an adjunct to monetary restitution requirements. Juveniles work with local youth employment programs to obtain jobs that enable them to repay an average total of $2,400 to $3,000 per month to local victims. Through this program, victims are assisted in recovering stolen property, requesting restitution of the court, attending court hearings, and accessing community resources for dealing with problems related to their victimization.

Founded in 1973, the City of Portland Youth Service Center (YSC) system was created as an alternative to the juvenile justice system and as a preventive resource for youth aged 10 to 18. The YSC receives 5,000 referrals annually, including 1,500 youth from the juvenile justice system. During 1984-85, 196 victims were compensated and 4,999 hours of community service were performed to repay for juvenile crime. In 1983, the YSC developed the Neighborhood Accountability Board Program, which brings together repeat offenders with their victims and trained neighborhood boards. When appropriate, the boards develop formal written contracts with juvenile offenders and their parents to apologize to and repay victims, provide community service, or participate in training programs. Presently, over 50 trained volunteers serve on boards locally. Last year, of the 93 youth who appeared before the boards, 84 completed their contracts. In addition to diversion services, the Youth Service Center provides a variety of support service available to all youth aged 10 to 18 in Portland.

This community service program was founded in 1973 as an alternative treatment and token restitution vehicle, with the focus on individual responsibility for juvenile offenders in the Portland metropolitan area. The Court maintains approximately 350 placement resources, plus a weekend court-supervised program for the many demanding supervision problems. The program is administered by a Court Referee, who negotiates work contracts and monitors performance for judges and Court Counselors. New restitution components developed in 1986 pay juveniles the minimum wage from donated funds from the private sector to do community enhancement projects. Dollars earned at the minimum wage are split 60/40 between the victim and the youth. Youth may work a maximum of 100 hours on a Saturday work crew supervised by court group workers. Local boys' and girls' clubs are involved as co-implementers of the program.

The Community Alternative Work Service (CAWS) Program began in 1981 and involves juvenile offenders doing volunteer work at nonprofit organizations in the community. The volunteer work may be either a condition of their probation or may be in lieu of their being placed on probation supervision. In either case, the youthful offender is being held responsible for his/her delinquent actions. The CAWS II Program began in January 1985 and also entails juvenile offenders performing volunteer work in the community. The CAWS III Program was created to help reimburse victims of juvenile crime. The Juvenile Probation Department over the years has managed to collect fine moneys from those juveniles who were charged with summary offenses by local magistrates. The fine moneys collected were used to set up a work fund for the CAWS III Program. When a juvenile successfully completes assigned work hours in the program, money is forwarded to the victim in the form of a restitution payment. Since the program's inception, 29 juveniles have completed the program, which resulted in $6,985.79 being sent to victims.

The Beaver County Juvenile Probation Department, in conjunction with the Beaver County Court of Common Pleas, developed a Restitution and Community Service Program in 1985. The program provides the opportunity to hold juvenile offenders accountable and responsible for their actions, and at the same time benefit the community by providing a volunteer workforce. Community service is a part of almost every recommendation to the court. Violent offenders and those convicted of offenses that may pose a threat to the safety of others are excluded from the program. Juveniles are assigned from 10 to 50 hours of work, without compensation, in a nonprofit or public institution.

The Payback Program in Centre County is a joint effort of the Centre County Probation Department and Community Alternatives to Criminal Justice, Inc., (CACJ) to address the problem of victims suffering uncompensated losses at the hands of a criminal offender. The purpose of the program is to obtain employment for unemployed offenders, who are responsible for paying restitution to their victims. Job sites are located in various areas of the private sector by either co-coordinator Thomas J. Young of the Centre County Probation Department or Ms. Bonnie Stewart of the CACJ. Once employed, a percentage of the offender's net pay is deducted and forwarded to the Probation Department, which in turn reimburses the appropriate victim(s). Once the restitution is paid in full the client is no longer officially part of the program but may maintain his/her employment if the employer and client consider it mutually advantageous. Referrals are initiated from individual probation officers to Mr. Young, who works in conjunction with Ms. Stewart on job placements. The program is available to both adult and juvenile offenders.

The Columbia County "Earn-It" Program became fully operational on November 1, 1982. The primary objective of the program is to increase the collection of court-ordered restitution and to provide a community service alternative to those juveniles unable or unwilling to pay fines. The primary objectives are threefold. First, to continue a restitution collection percentage of 90 percent. Second, to continue the established mechanism of assigning community service to juveniles who fail to pay fines lawfully imposed by District Magistrates. And finally, to enhance public awareness and business support through increasing individual business participation. In 1985, from the 84 youths referred to "Earn-It," a total of $1,760 of restitution and fine money was collected and 1,142 hours of community service were completed.

The Erie Earn-It Program was started in 1981 to provide juvenile offenders with a job to make restitution to the victims of their crimes. These jobs are both part-time and full-time positions that they may keep once their debt is paid. The juveniles undergo an intense 12-hour orientation session that stresses proper job attitude and attire. Staff work closely with the clients on job applications, resumes, and interviewing skills through the use of video equipment and professional volunteer interviewers who are interested in the program and the juveniles it serves. From October 1981 through December 1985, Earn-It workers earned $120,000, with approximately 75 percent being returned to their victims. In 1986, the Erie Earn-It Program incorporated an order to secure a contract with the county administration for the daily cleaning of the Erie County Court House. This contract will provide Earn-It with additional income of $5,000 per month and will provide previously unemployable youth with an opportunity to work and secure training in the janitorial field while making restitution. In addition to employing 75 juveniles, Earn-It will also serve as a volunteer site enabling juveniles to perform community service hours assigned by the Juvenile Court.

Probation staff locate and arrange jobs through private and public employers for youth who have been properly screened and referred to the program. Up to 75 percent of the youths' earnings can be repaid to the victim(s). Since 1983, alleged delinquent youth who do not owe financial restitution have been assigned to community service work as a means by which they can be held accountable for their offense. The Community Service Program has been responsible for the successful completion of more than 5,200 hours of work during the past 3 years. A subsidized restitution component for unemployed or difficult-to-employ youth is being considered.

Founded in 1983 as a supplement to an existing Volunteers in Probation Program/Parole Program, the Lancaster County Volunteer and Community Services in Probation and Parole Program was created to hold offenders accountable for their actions and to provide community agencies with needed assistance. The Volunteer and Community Services Office is a separate probation office specifically charged with supervising all Community Service Orders. Community Service is ordered as a condition of probation for all nonviolent offenders 14 to 18 years of age; Community Service does not alter the amount of restitution due. Community Service is ordered in the following situations: (1) in lieu of fines for summary (status) offenses, (2) as a condition of Informal Probation, (3) as a condition of Consent Decree Orders, and (4) as part of Juvenile Court Orders. (The program also has an Adult Community Service component.) The Community Service Program currently services approximately 250 government or social service agencies throughout Lancaster County. In fiscal year 1985, 325 juvenile offenders completed approximately 12,500 hours of Community Service (cost benefit = $41,875). The development of a Financial Restitution component is being reviewed at this time.

The Union County Community Service Program for Juveniles is designed to deal with those juveniles who have delinquent fines to pay, have committed an offense against the community, and have restitution that need not be paid in cash. The juveniles work for nonprofit organizations within the community. The amount of time a juvenile spends working is determined by the court, based upon a recommendation from the probation officer or the district magistrate. This system has worked very well for us and for those families that are indigent and unable to satisfy their debt in any other manner.

The Delaware County Juvenile Court has an array of restitution services under its Community Relations Unit. Monetary restitution, up to a legal limit of $300, has been gathered for many years. In 1981, the Court began a small community service work program that has now expanded to involve approximately 200 clients doing 4,000 hours of work each year at over 100 nonprofit sites. A victim services unit fills the informational and counseling needs of court victims at each step of the proceedings. Victim-offender mediation and the securing of paid jobs to enable clients to earn money for restitution are two new services begun in 1985-86.

In the course of conducting a presentence investigation/social summary, the Pike County Probation Department contacts the victim for a statement of loss and victim impact statement. The victim is requested to itemize the loss and deduct the amount covered by insurance or items held by the police. Other significant information may include physical or psychological harm and related expenses. Thereafter the defendant/juvenile's capacity to earn and ability to pay is assessed against the extent of injury suffered by the victim and the type of payment that will best serve the needs of the victim and the ability of the defendant/juvenile. Court-ordered restitution is enforced as a condition of probation/parole.

The Community Service Program was established in April 1984. The program was designed to hold juveniles accountable for their actions by completing service hours within their communities. The juveniles work at numerous nonprofit agencies throughout the county. The program is overseen by the Juvenile Probation Office. All youth between the ages of 14 and 18 are eligible. The amount of service hours is determined by a matrix that includes the seriousness of the crime (felony, misdemeanor), age, etc. The Community Service Alternative Program was established in June 1986 to accommodate juveniles that commit Summary Offenses. These juveniles are assigned hours in lieu of a fine by the District Justice. Instead of paying impersonal fines, the juvenile must work in the community as a diversionary sentence. Since the inception of both programs, over 700 juveniles have completed approximately 25,000 hours of service to Berks County agencies. The programs have also assisted juveniles in finding part-time and full-time employment and utilized out-of-school suspensions and snow days as Community Service work days. They are well received by the community's parents and law enforcement officials.

The Victim Restitution Program was officially established in Somerset County in 1986. However, Somerset County has always made every effort to order and collect monetary restitution involving juvenile crimes. The Victims Restitution Program assists in recovering any monetary loss sustained as a result of a juvenile crime, through order of the court. The program further provides the victim with a clear understanding and awareness of the judicial process. The program is operated in conjunction with VOICE (Volunteer Offender in Community Employment). VOICE provides the courts with a valuable sentencing alternative for juvenile offenders. Through VOICE, juvenile offenders are able to work off fines and court costs by means of community service.

The Northumberland County Juvenile Court Services Agency's Community Service Program was established in 1972 as an attempt to hold youth accountable for a variety of actions causing them to be referred to the court. The program relies heavily on the use of volunteers throughout the county, who serve as supervisors of the youth working at various nonprofit and government agencies. Court-referred youth can also participate in subsidized employment in order to meet financial restitution obligations when deemed appropriate. In conjunction with additional programming available to the court, many youth leave the program and are able to find full-time, unsubsidized work in the private sector. During 1985, 117 youth performed over 10,000 hours of community service work. Additionally, during the same period of time, over $12,200 in restitution, fines, and costs were collected.

To date, financial restitution has not been a program component. Development of an Earn-It program has been initiated, which will provide a means for unemployed youth to make financial restitution to victims.

Juvenile offenders are referred for a specified number of hours of work by the Tioga County Court of the District Justices. They are then placed with a municipality, a nonprofit corporation, or an organization providing services to meet human needs. These services are provided at no cost to the community and increase public involvement and awareness of the criminal justice process.

The Juvenile Restitution Program, Inc., (JRP) began in 1978 as part of a federally funded nationwide initiative and was incorporated as a private nonprofit organization in 1981. Offenders between the ages of 10 and 17 are referred to JRP from Family Court for completion of unpaid community work service or paid restitution to their victims. Since 1978, youngsters have worked 87,000 hours of community service as symbolic restitution, and have earned $35,000 in order to repay their victims. Community service clients are placed at one of 100 public agency job sites. Monetary restitution clients are responsible for finding their own paying jobs. Seventy-five percent of the youngsters referred complete their restitution successfully. Each youngster completes a 17-hour pre-employment skills curriculum before beginning the restitution job. The South Carolina Department of Youth Services provides major funding for JRP through a contractual agreement. All other juvenile restitution programs in South Carolina are administered by DYS through its probation department. Additional funding for JRP is provided by Trident United Way and Charleston County.

The South Carolina Department of Youth Services initiated a statewide juvenile restitution program in 1980, which has rapidly developed into an effective alternative within the State juvenile justice system. The restitution program is administered through each of the agency's 46 county offices. These programs are accountability oriented, encompassing community service and financial restitution for both diverted and adjudicated offenders. The South Carolina Children's Code provides for a $500 monetary limit on restitution orders. DYS's restitution programs emphasize employee skills training and personal responsibility. Youth referred to these restitution programs learn to be accountable for their behavior, and are also given the opportunity to learn job skills and develop self-esteem. Probation staff in each county monitor youth ordered to perform community service and financial restitution. They work closely with the work site to ensure completion of community service hours and assist youth in finding their own jobs to repay victims' financial restitution. DYS staff have over 500 community work sites statewide in which to place offenders who have community service hours. In fiscal year 1985-86, 1,900 youth were ordered $172,600 in financial restitution and 57,800 community service hours.

Early in the 1970's, Judge Marshall Young, District County Judge for the County of Pennington, the Pennington County Board of Commissioners, and other Rapid City-area residents thought there was a definite need for a program that would benefit victims of crime and delinquency. Information in regard to such programs was obtained and a request for Federal funding for a pilot Victims Assistance Program was prepared. The application for funding was submitted to the South Dakota State Crime Commission, requesting LEAA funds. In 1973, this application was funded by the SDSCC, and in October 1973, the Pennington County Victims Assistance Program was initiated at the Juvenile Court level in the county of Pennington. In July 1975, the program came under the direction of the South Dakota Unified Court System, with partial funding from the Pennington County Board of Commissioners. The program at present obtains partial funding from the Pennington County Board of Commissioners and therefore is a joint venture of the Unified Court System--7th Circuit Court and the Pennington County Board of Commissioners. In fiscal 1985, 161 juveniles paid restitution of $22,196.04 and completed 4,555 hours of community service.

The program is a symbolic restitution program for children who commit unruly or delinquent acts. Arrangements were made with over 200 government and public and private nonprofit agencies to have children participate in volunteer work at over 320 job sites. In 1984, the Youth Employment Seminar (YES) was added to the program. YES teaches youth the basic skills necessary to obtain and keep a paying job. Once a youth completes his/her community service obligation, he/she is invited to attend a 1-day seminar. In 1985, 707 children participated in the community service program, providing taxpayers and agencies with services valued at over $95,367.95.

The Taylor County Juvenile Probation Department has been involved in collecting monetary restitution since 1978. The majority of restitution cases are worked on a voluntary supervision basis, with the amount of restitution determined by the amount of the victim's claim, the child's ability to pay, and other rehabilitative concerns. In 1985, we collected $14,196 in monetary restitution. Although not a primary component, community service is also utilized when appropriate, particularly when offenses such as criminal mischief are committed against public property. This is particularly successful with offenses against school property. Community service will be greatly expanded in the future.

In 1963, when Charles W. Hawkes was appointed Chief of Jefferson County Probation Services, he began requiring that records be kept of the restitution being paid. The program does not have an official name. There is no written manual describing the program. The program is structured so that the Intake Officers, upon receiving a new case, will send a letter to the complainant requesting written estimates of the loss, damages, or medical bills. If there is loss, damage, or medical bills, and the complainant does provide a written estimate, the Intake Officer will then recommend that the restitution be paid. If the juvenile is placed on Court Probation, then the restitution payment is ordered by the judge as a probation requirement. These payments are made at the probation office and are disbursed to the complainants by the bookkeeper of the Adult Probation Department. If the juvenile is placed on Voluntary Supervision, then the restitution payments are made directly to the complainant by the juvenile. The Probation Officer will verify receipt of the payment. A victim services component has been used since 1980, but usually only at the request of the victim. The majority of these victims are businesses or schools who request the juvenile to clean up or repair the damages. Community service restitution has been used sparingly since 1984, usually only when a government agency or nonprofit organization is the victim.

The Dallas County Juvenile Department's restitution program was implemented in 1981 under the name of Dallas County Juvenile Restitution Program. The program was renamed Operation Payback in 1985. The program began with a community service component and has since grown to include other types of restitution as well as victim-offender mediation. Restitution requirements, whether for diverted or adjudicated youths, are tailored to the needs of the youth and designed to enhance the rehabilitation process. Accordingly, the offense does not play a predominant role in defining the juvenile's restitution plan. In Operation Payback, any youth who satisfactorily completes his/her restitution obligation is considered to be a success. In fiscal year 1985, approximately 210 youth successfully completed their obligations. During this period of time, $22,717 was paid to victims, 14,400 hours of volunteer work were completed on community service restitution, and 75 hours of direct service work were completed.

Since the beginning of the program, more than $143,797 has been ordered for payment. The Community Service Restitution Program began in 1982. Youths placed in the program are referred to the Red Cross for placement in organized volunteer activities. The objective of this volunteer service contract is for youths to develop a sense of responsibility for self and community by becoming involved in a volunteer assignment based in their community. This provides youths with the opportunity to reintegrate with the community in a more positive role as a Red Cross volunteer and to receive positive reinforcement through volunteer recognition.

The CSR program is administered solely by the Juvenile Department. At present, all CSR participants are adjudicated offenders who must comply with the CSR program as a condition of probation; however, we will also include "Informal Adjustment" participants in the program. In fiscal year 1985-1986, participants provided approximately 1,733 hours of community service, which could be translated to a dollar figure of $5,805.55 (total hours x minimum wage). NYS's Restitution program, the first in Texas, was founded in 1981 as a "Court Alternative." Referrals are received from the Richardson Police Department. The successful key to the program is the face-to-face mediation meeting between the juvenile offenders and victims, in which they draw up a Plan of Restitution Contract to repay for damages incurred. There is a choice of direct monetary payment, replacement in the form of work, or community service replacement. Above these three types of restitution, each juvenile is required to complete community service hours as a "payback" to the community. The program is run by volunteers and one part-time coordinator.

The CSR program was implemented because many of the juveniles in Guadalupe County did not have money to pay their restitution, nor the work experience to earn the money. The CSR program is a cooperative undertaking between the Guadalupe County District Court, the Guadalupe County Juvenile Probation Department, and various government and private nonprofit service agencies. Young offenders provide partial or total payment to the victim of the delinquent act through monetary restitution, community service restitution, or victim service restitution. In addition, the Community Resource Officer conducts community awareness presentations to inform and educate the community about restitution and juvenile delinquency.

The Bowie County Juvenile Court was founded in 1972. The probation staff collects restitution from juvenile offenders on a voluntary basis when necessary and practical. Informal probation is also used as a method of obtaining victim compensation by written agreement over a 6-month period of time. If formal restitution is necessary, it is ordered by the District Court under requirements of the Texas Family Code. In 1985, the Bowie County Juvenile Court collected $3,168.07 in restitution through these three methods. To date, community service in lieu of restitution has not been used.

It has been our policy to put juveniles that have stolen or destroyed property on probation. One of the terms of probation is that juveniles pay from their own money, not their parents' money, for the stolen or damaged property. If they do not have the money, and cannot find a job, we find them a job. This program has worked well.

When the Utah Division of Youth Corrections was founded in 1981, the Utah State Juvenile Court had an effective restitution program in effect for several years. The Juvenile Court judges routinely order restitution in cases where the victim can be contacted and an estimate made of the losses suffered. While the Juvenile Court had money from fines available to pay youth for community service work, it was never enough to assist all youth. Youth Corrections youth frequently owe large amounts of restitution, so more funds were needed. The 1983 legislative session passed legislation allowing for use of part of the money collected from parents for their children's care while in the custody of the State. The youth work in secure care facilities, in group homes, and in the community. Staff keep records of the hours worked on special projects (normal chores don't count toward this program) and the victims receive payment at the rate of $3.00 per hour worked. Moneys paid out through this program started at $61,000 in 1984 and rose to $102,000 in fiscal year 1986.

The Salt Lake City 2nd District Court Restitution Work Program was started in 1973. The purpose of the program is to aid victims of crime as well as to provide a meaningful and worthwhile rehabilitation work program for youth who have no other means of taking care of their obligation. Liaison with victims is also an important component of the program. The State Juvenile Court is responsible for the administration of the Restitution Work Program. All youth under 18 are eligible. The Juvenile Court receives 25 percent of fine moneys to operate the program; the juveniles are placed at public agencies and on community service group work projects. We are currently looking at work placement in the private sector. Job skill training and victim-offender mediation are other areas being considered for expansion. In 1985, approximately 1,581 juveniles received the opportunity to work off their obligation through this program. These juveniles worked 26,427 hours, which amounts to $79,280 monetarily. Restitution sent to victims amounted to $36,320 and fines worked off totaled $42,960. Over the last 6 years approximately $30,000 per year has been sent to victims through this program.

Utah Law 78-3a-39 (7) (8) provides that the court may undertake restitution and encourage the development of employment or work programs. In 1985, $381,092 in formal court-ordered restitution was returned to victims and $509,536 in restitution was ordered. Utah law allows the court to withhold up to 25 percent of the fines it orders for a restitution work fund to pay otherwise unemployable youth for community service to compensate their victims. In addition to restitution, over 90,000 hours of community service were completed by youth under court order. Youth committed to Youth Corrections for more restrictive care do not escape previous restitution orders; Utah law allows Youth Corrections to continue restitution collection efforts with a funded restitution program.

The Chittenden County Court Diversion Program is a voluntary alternative to the formal court process for first-time offenders, both juvenile and adult. Cases are referred after probable cause has been determined in court. Each candidate must meet with a Review Board of community citizens. If accepted for participation, the participant must make an apology to the victim, make restitution, and perform community service work. Other components of a contract may include a tour of the Correctional Center, alcohol or drug counseling, research (such as how shoplifting affects consumers), or a job search. The Program is confidential, cost-effective, locally controlled, and responsive to the needs of victims, offenders, and the community at large. It holds first offenders responsible for their unlawful behavior in a way that helps deter future unlawful activity. The Program is partially State-funded, but also relies heavily on private and local fund-raising activities. In fiscal year 1986, 229 juveniles returned over $8,700 to victims and worked more than 2,250 community service work hours. The recidivism rate has remained at 7 percent. Approximately 96 percent of juveniles referred to the Program successfully complete their contracts.

Established in 1978, this is now one of 13 community-based projects in Vermont. It is administered by a private nonprofit organization that contracts with the State for the provision of services. First-time offenders may participate voluntarily in lieu of formal court action. A Citizen Review Board examines each case and, after interviewing the offender, determines the conditions of acceptance into the program. A contract is designed to address the needs of the victim, the offender, and the community. Successful completion of the contract leads to the dismissal of charges in the court. Nonacceptance into the program or failure to complete the contract results in the resumption of formal court intervention.

Project staff provide counseling and crisis intervention, and work with a network of other city agencies and community nonprofit organizations in placing participants on job sites. Under supervision in public service jobs, the youth exchanges his/her services as an alternative to detention, a condition of probation, or a diversion alternative. The project serves youths between the ages of 13 and 17 who reside in Alexandria; they are referred by the courts, the city, or the police department. Program participants perform a diversity of services at a variety of work sites throughout Alexandria. Tasks vary from clerical work to park maintenance. CSP staff place youth in assignments based on their skills, background, and interests.

COURT

The Arlington County Juvenile Court's Restitution Program began in 1979 with the idea of holding the juvenile offender responsible for his/her actions while concurrently compensating the victim for his/her losses. The youth, not the parents, is held accountable for reimbursement of the victim. The program's focus is to help the offender find a job within the private sector of the community and commit the youth to paying an agreed upon percentage of his/her income through the court to the victim as a condition of probation. The court averages approximately $10,000 per year in restitution disbursement. The Community Service Program, initiated in 1982, provides the court with an alternative to formal petitions at the intake level or an alternative sentence in cases that go to court. Also, community service hours may be ordered by the judge in combination with other options. In fiscal year 1985, 3,500 hours of community service work were completed by youth in Arlington.

Youngsters who fail to complete the number of hours ordered are subject to a show cause rule and are returned to court to answer to the judge.

It has been expanded to include some second-time offenders and more serious offenses. Services are provided to nonprofit organizations and county/city governments. Juveniles are referred to the program by intake officers and the courts. In fiscal year 1985-86, 260 juveniles donated approximately 13,000 hours to the community. The Hampton Court Service Unit has a Community Work Alternative Program (CWAP), which was in its planning stages during the latter part of 1980 and began in January 1981. The program was created to provide a new resource to the Hampton Juvenile Court and Court Service Unit. Emphasis is placed on appropriately referred youths, both court-ordered and voluntary, who can derive a benefit from the program by learning responsibility and accountability. The program's primary goal is to impact the number of children who reactivate into the court system. These children are placed on selected community sites to work a prescribed number of hours, depending on the particular offense. During calendar year 1985 more than 7,700 community hours were provided to the City of Hampton. In a random sample study at the end of the 1985 calendar year, statistics indicated that 58 percent of the youths who successfully completed CWAP had not returned for further delinquent offenses.

In July 1983, the decision was made to assign a Probation Officer to coordinate the program. This program has a multiple intent: (1) It is an effort of the Court Service Unit to have a concrete alternative to the traditional disposition of juvenile cases. (2) It is a gesture of restitution on the part of the juvenile; it holds him accountable; it is a direct consequence of unlawful behavior. (3) It is an effort by the community to help its youth develop into useful citizens. From July 1, 1985, through June 30, 1986, 150 juvenile offenders performed over 3,000 community service hours at over 50 agencies and government agencies.

Monetary restitution and community service have been a part of the Juvenile Court's sentencing options for many years. In the late 1970's, community service became a formalized process that has resulted in the development of over 350 worksites in King County. The Department of Youth Services also offers both a job-finding program for youth and funds for subsidized job slots in the private sector. The Prosecuting Attorney's Office for King County has had an active Victim Assistance Unit since 1980, offering direct service to victims. In 1983, the first Victim Offender Reconciliation Program (VORP) came into existence and is funded and managed by a nonprofit cooperative, independent of both the Juvenile Court and Prosecuting Attorney's offices.

The Victim/Witness Assistance Unit (VAU) serves as the liaison between victims and the juvenile justice system, furnishing victims with information, support, advocacy, and assistance in obtaining restitution. Created in 1980 by the Prosecuting Attorney's Office, the VAU is located in the Juvenile Court building with access to records and decisionmakers on cases. A staff of victim advocates provide comprehensive services, which include: notification of case status and sentencing date, facilitating application for Crime Victims Compensation, presentation of the restitution claim to the court, troubleshooting problems with court-ordered restitution, getting property released and witness fees paid, and referral to community resources. Since restitution is often the most tangible indication to the victim that both the court and offender are being responsive and responsible, the VAU concentrates most of its attention on the ordering and collection of restitution. Restitution is always sought in full. The VAU believes that since the juvenile offenders have until the age of 21 to pay restitution, the means will exist, if not currently present, to pay towards the victim's loss. In one of the best collection years, 1984, juveniles paid $132,288 in restitution.

The program continues through a cooperative endeavor between the Rock County Juvenile Probation Department--which provides staff, office space, and equipment--and the Rock County Department of Social Services--which provides wages for Project clients. The Project is attached to and serves Circuit Courts II and VI. To date, over 400 young offenders have enrolled in the program; they have returned to their victims over $175,000 in restitution. Clients are required to pay two-thirds of the gross amount of each paycheck to restitution, and all deductions are taken from their third. The Project emphasizes responsibility for actions and accountability to victims.

Founded in 1978, the Chippewa County Juvenile Restitution Program was created in an effort to help recover losses resulting from juvenile crime. Restitution is made through monetary compensation, community service work, or direct work for the victim. Youth are assisted by the program coordinator in locating a worksite where they can work to fulfill their restitution obligation. The youth's progress in the restitution program is then monitored until obligations are completed. Victims of juvenile crimes then receive either full or partial reimbursement for losses and damages incurred.

The Vilas County Juvenile Restitution Project is a rehabilitation youth program designed to assist juvenile offenders in meeting their court-ordered restitution obligations and to emphasize offenders' responsibility for their actions and accountability to their victims. The 2-year-old project is administered by the Vilas County Juvenile Intake Office for the Vilas County Circuit Court. The primary objective of the restitution project is to give assurance to the community that juvenile offenders will be held accountable for their actions through involvement in a restitution obligation. The project will assist offenders in finding employment and applying salaries toward repaying their victims, working directly for their victims until the restitution obligation is satisfied, or doing volunteer work in the community. Each offender will be involved in a behavior contract with the Project, which will clearly outline the restitution obligation, behavioral expectations, and responsibility to employers, to the community, and to the victim. Offenders will be assisted by the Project in obtaining a permanent job after the restitution obligation has been successfully completed.

Founded in 1985, the Youth Services Restitution Program is a work experience program that provides juvenile offenders with an avenue to make amends to the community and to their victims. The goal of the program is not only to assist youth in meeting their restitution obligations, but to provide youth with an opportunity to become responsible and productive members of the community. The program stresses offenders' responsibility for their actions and accountability to their victims. It is our hope that through a positive rehabilitative experience youth will be diverted from future involvement in the justice system. The program works with youth, aged 14 to 18, who have monetary restitution or community service work. The Youth Services Restitution Program will subsidize wages in the public sector up to 100 percent and can offer a partial subsidy to the private sector.

After they begin working, 90 percent of the youth's paycheck is applied toward the restitution he/she owes. In 1985, 91 youth offenders, who participated in the Juvenile Offender Work Program, completed a total of 2,037 community service hours; $9,746.36 was paid in monetary restitution by the 33 youth who participated in the Juvenile Restitution Project.

Brown County's Restitution Program began in 1979 and joined the Family Service Association in August 1982. It is designed to help juvenile offenders become responsible and accountable for their offenses. Youth between the ages of 14 and 18 are referred to the program by either the Juvenile Court Judge or Juvenile Court intake staff. Many youth referred require special attention because of school problems related to truancy or poor academic performance, alcohol or drug abuse, or emotional and family problems. The Juvenile Restitution Coordinator conducts an initial in-home assessment with each youth and his/her family to determine these special needs and to explain the details of the program. This year, referred youths have an option to take part in a voluntary employability skills training component, which has been added to provide an additional rehabilitation aspect to the program. In 1985, 99 youths repaid $15,811 in restitution and completed 181 community service hours.

Founded in 1977, the Kenosha County Community Service Work Program was organized to help recover losses resulting from juvenile crimes. Overseen by the courts, the program is a cooperative effort between the District Attorney's Office, law enforcement agencies, and social services. All youths under age 18 are eligible. In 1980 the Federal Government selected Kenosha County as a pilot project. A Juvenile Restitution Program was created as a way to repay monetary losses resulting from crimes. Monetary restitution requires youth to pay 75 percent of their earnings to their victim. Job subsidies are available for youth experiencing difficulty obtaining a job. The community service program is used as a component. In fiscal year 1984-85, 215 youthful offenders paid back to crime victims $11,601.87 in actual money and $8,820.55 in community service (a symbolic figure used for hours of community service worked figured at minimum wage.)

It has always been the goal of this project to decrease juvenile delinquency through a controlled program by providing employment opportunities to court-adjudicated youth who are ordered to make restitution to victims who suffer loss or damage to public or personal property. A summer employment component allows the staff to strengthen interpersonal and employment skills and provide direct followup services when court orders are complied with. The project also provides reciprocal courtesy supervision to restitution projects that serve Native American youth.

The Youth Restitution Program, Inc. (YRP) began in 1978 as a response to community concerns over the rising costs of teen vandalism. It was established through the cooperative efforts of community agencies, the Dane County Department of Social Services (DCSS), and the Dane County Juvenile Court. Referrals to YRP are made by social workers from DCSS after a juvenile has been ordered by the court to make restitution. Once accepted into the program, the juvenile is assigned to an individual counselor, who matches the participant's interests and skills to the needs of a particular job site. Since its inception, YRP has assisted over 1,000 juveniles in taking responsibility for illegal behavior while providing them with a positive exposure to the world of work. These youthful offenders have performed over 60,000 hours of work while fulfilling court-ordered obligations of restitution or community work service, and have returned more than $112,000 to the victims of juvenile crime. The agency's historic successful completion rate of 90.2 percent is a strong indication that the program's philosophy of accountability is working.

The Manitowoc County Juvenile Restitution Program serves youths aged 12 to 18 who are referred by the Department of Social Services after they have been adjudicated delinquent or a consent decree or informal agreement has been entered with restitution or community service ordered. The primary purpose of the program is to make youths accountable for their actions by repaying victims or the community. It is also hoped the work experience will provide discipline and develop good work habits and respect for the property of others. Youths are helped to find their own jobs in private nonprofit agencies, but private sector hiring of youth is also encouraged. In the 6 years since its inception, the average number of youth in the program per year has been about 100, restitution paid annually is about $10,500, and community service work done is about 1,200 hours.

After the State revision of the Children's Code in 1978 and establishment of the Juvenile Court Intake under the auspices of the Circuit Court, Clark County Juvenile Court Intake made collecting monetary restitution an important part of the job. Voluntarily and informally, Clark County collects between $3,000 and $5,000 per year in restitution. Only occasionally does a juvenile opt not to pay his/her obligation. The Court is then utilized to assure collection. As small as Clark County is, the restitution "program" is strong and gets the job done.

Winnebago County, population about 138,000, began its Juvenile Restitution Program on a small scale in 1982. In February 1984 the first full-time coordinator was hired, allowing the program to expand substantially. The years 1982 and 1983 combined saw less than 100 referrals, but this has increased to about 400 juveniles per year currently. The program deals with all three types of restitution--monetary payments, direct service and community service. The program is a positive, experiential approach to dealing with juvenile delinquents. It attempts to divert young people from costly future involvement in the justice system. Juvenile offenders ages 12 through 18, either by court order or by informal agreement, make repayment in amounts ranging from $50 to $800. Each youth is placed with a private sector employer to earn restitution or with a nonprofit agency to complete community service. There is no wage subsidy. Statistically, the program is quite successful. Over 95 percent of the juveniles complete their restitution in the time prescribed. The community has begun to understand the positive impact this type of program has on the youth and on the community.

The Columbia County Youth Restitution Program was developed in 1982 by Lutheran Social Services through a contract with the Department of Social Services. The Program was developed so that adolescents would be held accountable for their delinquent actions. The Youth Restitution Program works with adolescents from 13 to 17 years old who have been ordered to pay monetary restitution or work community service hours. We have had success setting our youth up at private sector as well as public sector job sites. If a youth is able to find his/her own job, he/she is asked to pay 50 percent of the paycheck to the YRP. If LSS employs a youth, through a small usage subsidy budget, 100 percent of the money must go to the victim. The Youth Restitution Program is presently a half-time position serving 40 to 45 adolescents per year.

The Youth Services Project is designed to make early identification of juvenile youth offenders or delinquent-prone children, 14 years old or younger. The schools are a primary resource for identification of these youths. The purpose of the program is to reduce the number of out-of-home placements of delinquent youth. Through early identification, intervention, and a prevention program, we hope to decrease the delinquency problem of Burnett County. Program components are: (1) Restitution/Work Projects (restitution is made in three ways: community services, monetary compensation, and direct work for those offended); (2) Counseling/Volunteers (the focus of counseling juveniles is to establish behavior modification by setting short- and long-term goals. Volunteers are used as positive role models to demonstrate and teach positive concepts. Senior citizens are used to enrich grandparent role models); (3) Recreational (objectives in attaining behavior modification goals are reinforced by various kinds of recreational activities).

The goals and objectives of the Douglas County Juvenile Restitution Program are dual in nature. The primary goal is the provision of an alternative sentencing option to the court. The secondary goal is the provision of victim compensation or community service through the efforts of the youth ordered to participate in the program. These goals are met through the monitoring of unpaid community service hours, unpaid victim service hours, or the performance of work hours to earn victim compensation payments that are sent directly to victims upon the youths' completion of the hourly requirement for case closure. Working with a target figure of 150 youth per year, the program averages a yearly return of $10,500 to victims and provides the community with an average of 750 unpaid hours of service performed by program participants, worth approximately $2,500 when computed at the minimum wage.

The Waukesha County Restitution Program is a rehabilitation work experience program designed to assist juvenile offenders in meeting their court-ordered restitution obligation and to emphasize to offenders responsibility for their actions and accountability to their victims. The program is funded under Wisconsin's Youth Aids Program. Services are provided by the Wisconsin Correctional Service through a contract with the Waukesha County Department of Social Services. It operates under judicial policies of the Juvenile Court Judge. The primary objectives of the restitution program are to provide youth with an experience in responsibility and accountability by assisting them in making restitution for damage or loss caused by their offenses, and to provide victims with repairs or monetary compensation for their losses. The program offers encouragement to the youthful offender in successfully meeting his/her restitution obligation. The program will assist offenders in working directly for their victims until the restitution obligation is satisfied, finding employment and applying wages toward repaying their victims, and doing volunteer work in the community.

In 1980 the Waushara County Restitution Program began within the county Social Services Agency. A contracted Youth Services Specialist was employed to coordinate the program. The primary objectives are to provide youth with an experience of responsibility and accountability by assisting them in making restitution, and to provide repairs or financial compensation to the victims of the crimes. Restitution can be financial, community service hours, or direct victim service, agreed upon by an informal agreement or by order of the court via a consent decree or full delinquent adjudication. There are no financial or hour limitations. A minimal amount of subsidy money is available for juveniles who are difficult to place in jobs. In such cases, all moneys are given toward restitution. If a job is secured by the youth, the youth pays 50 percent of the gross. If the program finds the job, the youth pays 75 percent of the gross toward restitution. In this rural county of 18,000, the restitution program is seen as a necessity in juvenile court. In 1985, 31 referrals were made. There were no unsuccessful terminations and 25 successful terminations, collecting $1,948.53 and completing 617.5 community service hours.

Established in 1979, Project Payback is a county-wide, community-based program used by intake workers and judges as an alternative disposition for juveniles involved in offenses that result in the need to pay restitution. Payback is a program of both intervention--in a delinquent act already committed--and prevention--of further involvement--by holding youth accountable and teaching positive, alternative habits. Project Payback serves an average of 60 youth per year, aged 12 to 17, referred primarily for monetary restitution. Pre-employment skills, positive work habits, monitoring of work progress and restitution payments, and followup of clients' recidivism are all important program components. Youth are encouraged to seek private employment but often subsidized placements are necessary (and available) for youth in need of experience and supervised training. In 1986, over $10,000 in restitution will be collected and returned to victims. Beginning in 1987, an uncompensated community service component will be added, providing supervised crew work to 8 youth per month in various community agencies. Project Payback is coordinated by Nova Services, Inc., a private, nonprofit agency, through a contract with the Washington County Department of Social Services.

In addition to meeting restitution obligations, young people gain experience in the world of work, receive close supervision on the job, and begin to accept more responsibility for themselves. In addition to receiving full or partial compensation for losses, the victim has the knowledge that the young offender is being held accountable for his/her actions. Since its inception in 1980, the restitution office has averaged $12,000 collected for about 100 victims, owed by 70 young people. About 500 hours of community service hours were performed. Funded by Campbell County, the Department is integrally involved with the court system, law enforcement, the county attorney, and other human services agencies. There are three full-time employees. Probationers are required to pay restitution in cash. Fines and attorney's fees can generally be paid in cash or worked off at a community job site at the rate of $4 per hour. In addition, community service hours are frequently ordered by the court. In fiscal year 1985-86, there were 173 juveniles on probation. The total amount paid or worked off by the probationers during the 12-month period was $47,217 ($6,359 in restitution and the rest in fines, fees, and community service work).

About RESTTA and RESTTA Services

The Restitution Education, Specialized Training, and Technical Assistance (RESTTA) program is conducted through a grant from the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, U.S. Department of Justice, to a consortium of organizations comprised of the Pacific Institute for Research and Evaluation, Oklahoma State University, and the National Center for State Courts. It was organized to promote and improve the use of restitution and community service as dispositions or conditions for diversion for juvenile offenders.

RESTTA is a comprehensive, full-service program designed to provide hands-on, expert assistance to organizations or jurisdictions in any phase of a restitution project, from the initial decision to begin planning a program all the way through auditing, data collection, and evaluation. The RESTTA program brings together information and techniques developed through research and the practical experience of professionals in restitution and community service programs throughout the Nation.

RESTTA faculty and technical assistance providers include judges, restitution program administrators and counselors, researchers, legal experts, and others with the knowledge and skills needed to help make restitution work in any community or jurisdiction. A list of technical assistance providers follows this section.

The services provided by RESTTA include general and specialized training for individual jurisdictions, groups of counties, States, or national regions; information exchange and training workshops at an annual national conference; sponsorship of intensive training and demonstrations at designated "host sites"; original publications and audiovisual materials; dissemination of information through the National Restitution Resource Center; and onsite technical assistance to help implement or improve restitution programs. Specific components of the RESTTA program are discussed below.

Technical Assistance

Technical assistance is available to organizations or jurisdictions who, with the approval of the local juvenile court judge, wish to design and implement a restitution program, or improve one that already exists. The central features of the technical assistance delivery system include a cadre of more than 100 professionals in 26 States, the District of Columbia, and Canada; a simple application procedure; rapid turnaround of requests; and followup evaluation to ensure client satisfaction. In the first 30 months of the RESTTA program, onsite technical assistance was delivered to approximately 400 jurisdictions in 47 States. Applications for technical assistance can be obtained from Dr. Gordon Bazemore, Pacific Institute for Research and Evaluation, 1777 North California Boulevard, Walnut Creek, CA 94596. His telephone number is 415-939-6666.

Training in Restitution Programming

The training component of the RESTTA program is designed to fill any need, from the provision of a single speaker at a general conference with other sponsors to a national 4-day annual conference. Typical programs sponsored by RESTTA include statewide and regional seminars that feature RESTTA faculty for a national perspective and local experts to discuss problems and procedures unique to their area. A model curriculum, containing lecture notes, audiovisual materials, and group exercises in 18 separate restitution areas is available to assist States and local jurisdictions in planning seminars and selecting speakers.

RESTTA also supports and sponsors workshops conducted by designated "host sites" in which particular models of restitution and community service programming are explained and demonstrated. At these sites, participants will be able to see "real life" examples of leading program models in action, learn how implementation issues have been resolved, and collect program descriptions, forms, and other materials for planning and enhancing their own programs.

Information on any aspect of the training program can be obtained by contacting Dr. Peter R. Schneider, RESTTA National Coordinator, Pacific Institute for Research and Evaluation, Bethesda, Maryland. His telephone number is 301-985-0301.

Annual Juvenile Restitution Conference

In RESTTA's Annual Conference on Juvenile Restitution, justice system professionals from throughout the United States come together to share information and learn the latest techniques on how to make restitution a successful experience for all concerned parties. The conference features nationally recognized speakers, panels, and workshops. The workshops are conducted by the Nation's leading experts in various facets of restitution, and comprise a training track for conference participants.

The First Annual Conference in 1987 in New Orleans included workshops on the following topics:

- Data Management and Evaluation.
- Victim-Offender Mediation.
- Juvenile Offender Employment Strategies.
- Legal and Liability Issues
- Public/Private Partnerships.
- Victim Assistance Services.
- Restitution and Intensive Probation.

The Annual Conference on Juvenile Restitution helps chart a course for juvenile restitution in America, while fostering the growth of the restitution network.

Publications and Audiovisual Materials

The RESTTA program has originated a broad range of monographs and audiovisual materials touching upon virtually every aspect of restitution and community service programming. Topics covered in the Monograph series include offender employment assistance, victim-offender mediation, del evaluation procedures, program management auditing, legal issues, model policies and procedures, urban restitution issues, restitution in correctional settings, and national trends in restitution programming. Some of these monographs are accompanied by a videotaped demonstration or presentation.

Videotapes of presentations by RESTTA faculty on a wide variety of restitution issues and topics also are available. The eight videotapes were created to help judges, probation officers, and restitution counselors with practical information synthesized from research and experience. Each 1-hour videotape in the series was recorded live and unrehearsed before an audience of juvenile justice professionals. The presenters are the Nation's leading experts in their fields.

Tapes include:

- Approaches to Restitution Programming--Anne L. Schneider, Policy Sciences Group, Oklahoma State University.
- Program Components and Processes--Andrew Klein, Chief Probation Officer, Quincy (MA) District Court.
- Managing Restitution Programs--H. Ted Rubin, Institute for Court Management of the National Center for State Courts.
- Restitution: Does It Work? Research Findings and Their Policy Implications--Peter Schneider, RESTTA National Coordinator, Pacific Institute for Research and Evaluation.
- Legal Issues in Restitution Programming--Howard Feinman, Attorney at Law.
- Victim-Offender Mediation--Gary Howard, Dallas (TX) Juvenile Department and Andrew Klein, Quincy (MA) District Court.
- Measuring Program Success: How To Get Useful Evaluations for Your Juvenile Restitution Program--Anne L. Schneider, Policy Sciences Group, Oklahoma State University.

- Management Information Systems: Strategies and Choices for Juvenile Restitution Programs--Keith Bumsted, National Center for State Courts.

The eight tapes are available separately or as a set. An order form is included at the back of this Directory, or you may contact the National Restitution Resource Center, Box 6000, Rockville, MD 20850. Their toll-free telephone number is 800-638-8736.

Guide to Juvenile Restitution

In addition to the materials described above, RESTTA has produced a comprehensive Guide to Juvenile Restitution. The 168-page Guide is organized around the dozens of decisions and actions that ultimately influence the success of restitution and community service programs. Sections prepared by the Nation's leading experts on restitution discuss options for resolving questions of philosophy and goals, organizational structure, case processing, and other issues. The Guide does not promote any particular restitution program model or approach; rather, it attempts to provide managers with the information they need to make the right decisions for their localities. It includes sections on program models, restitution research, offender employment, program management, and evaluation procedures and contains an extensive bibliography.

Restitution program managers and juvenile court personnel will find the Guide particularly helpful in developing, expanding, or improving their programs. To order, see the form at the back of this Directory, or contact the National Restitution Resource Center at the address above.

National Restitution Resource Center

As part of the RESTTA program, the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention supports a National Restitution Resource Center, operated through the Juvenile Justice Clearinghouse in Rockville, Maryland. All of the materials and publications described above, including the Guide to Juvenile Restitution, the forthcoming Monograph series, and the National Restitution Training Series, are available through the Resource Center. The Center also distributes an annotated bibliography on restitution and serves as a clearinghouse for all RESTTA publications and information. For dates of upcoming conferences, publications, and information on all aspects of the RESTTA program, call the National Center toll-free at 800-638-8736.

Ask About The National Restitution Training Series on Videotape

Each 1-hour program consists of a live, unrehearsed presentation before an audience of practitioners. The programs give current, practical information on various facets of juvenile restitution by the Nation's leading experts.

Use them to train your staff, orient volunteers, and introduce restitution to court officials, community leaders, or the media.

Order the complete set and receive a $50.00 discount as well as a free copy of the Guide to

Juvenile Restitution—the leading practitioners' handbook in the restitution field. The Guide to Juvenile Restitution shows how to develop, implement, and manage juvenile restitution programs, based on a variety of existing programs.

Each videotape costs $50.00 for VHS or Beta, or $65.00 for 3/4-inch format. Additional copies of the Guide to Juvenile Restitution are $12.50 each. The complete set of eight tapes plus the free copy of the Guide is $350.00 for VHS or Beta, $480.00 for 3/4-inch.

Topics in the series are:

- A. Approaches to Restitution Programming (NCJ 100135)
- B. Program Components and Processes (NCJ 100136)
- C. Managing Restitution Programs (NCJ 100137)
- D. Restitution: Does It Work? Research Findings and Their Policy Implications (NCJ 100138)
- E. Legal Issues in Restitution Programming (NCJ 100139)
- F. Victim-Offender Mediation (NCJ 100140)
- G. Measuring Program Success: How to Get Useful Evaluations For Your Juvenile Restitution Program (NCJ 100141)
- H. Management Information Systems: Strategies and Choices for Juvenile Restitution Programs (NCJ 100142)
- I. Entire Restitution Training Series (all eight tapes, postage, handling, and a free Guide to Juvenile Restitution) $350.00 VHS or Beta, $480.00 3/4-inch
- J. Guide to Juvenile Restitution (NCJ 98466), $12.50
