ABSTRACT

The participant material masters from 14 modules in the "Facilitator's Guide to Staff Training for the Rural America Series" have been compiled in this document, to facilitate duplication. Items of interest may be duplicated in quantity by a variety of methods requiring a minimum of time, effort, and expense. All pages have been perforated, and the masters are presented in the same order and with the same as in each module. The participant materials are an integral part of each module; they provide guidelines for participant activities and serve as a way of reinforcing key concepts in the planning, development, implementation, and evaluation of comprehensive career guidance programs. Included in the materials are checklists, guidelines, questionnaires, simulation exercises with discussion questions, matching exercises, outlines, case studies, worksheets, summaries, and evaluation sheets. THE NATIONAL CENTER MISSION STATEMENT

The National Center for Research in Vocational Education's mission is to increase the ability of diverse agencies, institutions, and organizations to solve educational problems relating to individual career planning, preparation, and progression. The National Center fulfills its mission by:

- Generating knowledge through research
- Developing educational programs and products
- Evaluating individual program needs and outcomes
- Installing educational programs and products
- Operating information systems and services
- Conducting leadership development and training programs

FOREWORD

The National Center for Research in Vocational Education has been actively developing materials for the special guidance program needs of rural and small schools since 1975. During the ensuing period, a 16 volume set of career guidance program materials for rural and small schools entitled the Rural America Series was produced. The development and original production were funded by the U.S. Office of Education, Bureau of Occupational and Adult Education, Part "C," Vocational Education Act of 1963 as amended Research Legislation. Since its completion, the Rural America Series has enjoyed widespread national distribution with over 1,200 sets now in the field. In 1976-1978 the National Center in conjunction with Northern Michigan University was funded to test the planning process contained in the Series and to develop several supplemental materials.

One such supplement is the Facilitator's Guide to Staff Training for the Rural America Series. It consists of 18 separate modules of which this document is one. The Guide is designed to assist state department of education personnel, guidance supervisors, and guidance counselors in training others to understand and utilize the Rural America Series. Each module of the Guide may be used independently or collectively in staff development activities. All parts of the Guide have been thoroughly tested in state-wide workshops sponsored by the states of Florida, West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Arkansas, Kansas, Washington, Idaho, Wyoming, and the territory of American Samoa. Each workshop was carefully evaluated and suggestions from workshop participants were used to modify and improve the Guide.

This volume of participant materials assists the facilitator by providing ease of duplication of participant materials for any type of staff development activity. Items of interest may be duplicated in quantity by a variety of methods thus requiring a minimum of time, effort, and expense. This volume contributes to the effective use of the entire Guide. Together with the rest of the Guide, it should prove to be a valuable asset to the staff development of rural and small school counselors and educators as they plan, implement, and evaluate career guidance programs for their students.

INTRODUCTION

The participant material masters from all of the modules in the Facilitator's Guide to Staff Training in the Use of the Rural America Series have been placed in this packet. This has been done to facilitate the duplication of masters. All pages of the packet have been perforated to enable the facilitator to easily duplicate the masters. The masters are in the order and are numbered as in each module.

The participant materials are an integral part of each module; they provide guidelines for participant activities and serve as a way of reinforcing key concepts in the planning, development, implementation and evaluation of comprehensive career guidance programs. The facilitator is strongly encouraged to take advantage of these aids in teaching others to use and understand the Rural America Series. They are an excellent complement to the other instructional techniques (lectures, group discussions, and so forth) contained in the modules of the Facilitator's Guide.

Sharon Koblentz
13 years old

Who would have thought that the chemistry set Sharon got for her twelfth birthday last year would lead to this? Yet, here she was with her parents, waiting for the tour through the Exotique Perfume Factory to start.

Sharon was looking forward to seeing the perfume chemists at work. She was excited to read in the tour brochure that visitors would be able to observe employees at their jobs. Good thing that a guide would go along to answer questions. There was a lot to find out. What chemicals go into perfume? How is a new scent developed? Most important, how do you get to be a perfume chemist anyway? . . .

"Hey, Mom, how much longer before the tour?"

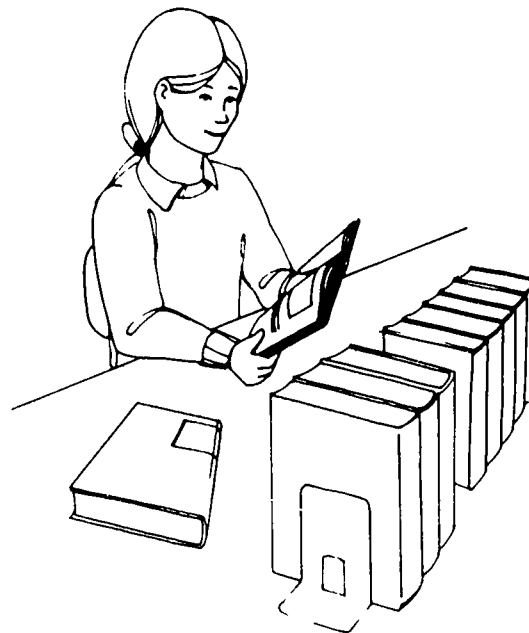

"Only 15 minutes by my watch, dear."

Sharon's parents exchanged smiles. They sensed their daughter's anticipation. It made going to the last Huntsville PTA meeting seem worthwhile. That's where they had brainstormed with other junior high parents, teachers and the school counselor to find ways of helping children in Sharon's class prepare for high school. Many concerns had been raised. For one thing, to help students pick high school courses intelligently, they would need an awareness of many different occupations and an understanding of how school could help prepare for them. It wouldn't be easy. Huntsville was a small community nestled deep in the Blue Ridge mountains. Boonesboro, the nearest town, was 50 miles away.

That fact figured prominently in the PTA discussion. How could parents help their children get the exposure to occupations that was needed? By the end of the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Koblentz were in agreement. They would take advantage of family vacations and trips to Boonesboro by encouraging Sharon to help plan things to see and do. In addition to developing her knowledge about careers and positive attitude towards high school, this strategy of family decision making would provide an opportunity for Sharon to accept responsibility—another important aspect of preparing for high school.

At their suggestion, Sharon had written to the Boonesboro Chamber of Commerce. Their information about local industries made her curious about the Exotique Perfume Factory. Further investigation in the library's encyclopedia made her aware that chemists play a key role in the production process. The thought of mixing perfume appealed a lot to Sharon. She could spend hours running experiments with her chemistry set. But how would she like to do it for a course in school? That remained to be seen . . .

Discussion Questions

1. What is the student problem described in this case study?
2. What complicates solving the problem? That is, what special feature(s) of the Huntsville situation must be considered?
3. What special feature(s) of the Huntsville situation can help solve the problem?
4. What strategy is chosen to solve the problem?
5. Describe Sharon's possible future.
6. Does this case study remind you of your own community? Describe why it does or does not.
7. How adaptable is the chosen strategy for use in your own community?
8. What other alternative(s) can you think of that might help solve the problem?

RURAL CAREER GUIDANCE WORKSHOP

Roy Fairchild closed his guidance office door and began to hum a familiar tune as he headed for the parking lot. In truth, he had something to hum about. After careful planning and conferring with teachers, parents, and community leaders, he could see Valley View Local's career guidance program beginning to take shape.

Roy was particularly pleased with student interest in career guidance activities. A recent poll he'd taken in the small rural high school perhaps showed why. Many of Valley View's youth had very high career aspirations and expectations. It used to be that only boys felt this way. Now, with the advent of women's lib, some of the girls were also fantasizing and expressing ambitious career goals—goals that, if achieved, might put them in positions of considerable authority and influence.

Therein lay a conflict that Roy had been wrestling with for several days. Take the group counseling with Doug Cloud and Wilma McGurdy, for example . . .

"One thing's for sure, Doug. You're not going to catch me washing diapers and cooking meals all day like my Mom. I'm going to get a job in Center City and make money—lots of it and . . .

"Geez, Wilma, cut it out, will ya? What's happened to you anyway? . . . going on about women's lib and all."

"Oh, no, you don't, Doug Cloud! I've got just as much right to want a career as you."

"Well, my Dad says that females are better off married and staying home with the kids. He thinks they should let men run things, and I agree because . . ."

It struck Roy that Valley View boys like Doug, heading for a career in industry, needed to learn adaptability to working well with and for women. And, in turn, Valley View girls like Wilma, aspiring to a profession, needed to become sensitized to the tactful use of power so as not to offend others working with and for them.

Then today in the faculty lounge, listening to Fern Whipple describe her success with role playing in speech class, Roy had an inspiration. Why not have Doug and Wilma's group role play different work situations? One of the girls, for example, could interview a boy—say, who had just been fired—for a new job. Another boy and girl could plan how to do a task cooperatively. A third possibility would be to have a girl evaluate a boy's work. And, of course, all students could benefit from practicing how to give suggestions to a person who is their boss. Reversing roles could facilitate the use of peer counseling.

Well, tomorrow Roy would have a chance to try out this technique. Would Doug and Wilma learn something about themselves and grow in interpersonal skills? Roy hoped so . . . leading happy lives, let alone achieving their American dream, might depend on it.

Mike Harper
14 years old

It hadn't been easy getting to know Mike Harper. Marge Vitale took a personal interest in all her English students and generally had good rapport with them. But she couldn't get to first base with Mike. She'd smile and ask how he was when he entered her classroom. She'd also write encouraging comments on his themes. When she'd try to draw him out in class discussion, Mike's typical reaction was to shrug his shoulders and stare at the floor. Then came the assignment to keep a daily journal . . .

" . . . We's poor, dirt poor. Ma sez we'll always be poor folks, now that the mining company's closed down and all's we got left to do with Pa gone is farm. Hate all that plowing, weeding, and feeding chickens. Couldn't hardly stand it but fer all the time off to shoot a few crows and hunt squirrel . . ."

"... My mind's made up. I'm gonna quit school when I get to be 16. Heck, what's the use of trying to learn history or algebra? Expect I'll end up taking care of Ma's farm with my big brother. Nuthin much else fer me here in Taylor's Crossing..."

"... Got me nuther war story today in the mail. Sure like to read about the Army in combat with the Nazis. Seems almost a miracle that Hitler didn't win!..."

Journal entries like these helped Marge Vitale piece together a picture of this husky boy with sad brown eyes. Perspective on Mike's aspirations, concerns, and interests was invaluable when it came time for the class's career exploration project. This project capitalized on senior citizen interest in kids. It called for each student to adopt for a month a "grandmother" or "grandfather" at the retirement village nearby. By spending time getting acquainted with these senior citizens and doing odd jobs for them, the students could develop helpful work attitudes and broaden their exposure to life role models. Mike's sense of career futility made him balk at first, but he agreed to participate in the project when Marge Vitale told him there was a retired soldier living at Fairhaven...

"I would've never guessed it, Mr. Witherspoon—that you used t'be a drill sergeant, I mean. In books and movies they're always big tough guys with lousy tempers. Why'd you leave the army to run a huntin' lodge?"

"Well, Mike, running a hunting lodge was something I decided as a kid I wanted to do. But since I was an orphan, I didn't have the money, so I joined the Army instead. Smart move too; saved up a nestegg and learned a lot about being in charge. After the war ended..."

RURAL CAREER GUIDANCE WORKSHOP

Lanh Binh Thieu
9 years old

"Welcome to Fowler Elementary! I hope you'll be happy here," said Mrs. Mueller, the principal, extending her hand.

Having received a nod from her father, Lanh Binh Thieu stepped forward and murmured "Th-thank you" as she shook hands with Mrs. Mueller.

"Now then, Lanh Binh. It says here you're nine years old . . ."

Fowler Elementary School didn't have a guidance counselor. The local township of mostly small truck farmers couldn't afford such a "frill." So when Mrs. Mueller had processed Lanh Binh's mid-year entry, she took the shy but attentive little girl by the hand and walked with her down the hall to Gil Sanchez's classroom.

Mrs. Mueller regretted that there was no special class to help Lanh Binh adjust to an American school. Fortunately, Gil Sanchez was a teacher who tried hard to address the individual development needs of students. His small class would help too . . .

"Here's what I've been able to find out, Gil. The Thieu family has just moved into the old Minoza farm—sponsored by St. Luke's Church. It's been hard to find a place where they could settle because the family is large. In addition to Lanh Binh and her parents, there are two cousins entering middle school, four brothers and an elderly grandmother at home—and another sister or brother on the way. Lanh Binh's father speaks English, but because of the limited exposure at the relocation camp, the children speak mostly Vietnamese."

"Guess I can handle that, Mrs. Mueller. I learned some good ways of dealing with language difficulties recently at an inservice program."

By involving his students in the effort to teach Lanh Binh English, Gil Sanchez sought to accomplish two things. First, he wanted Lanh Binh's English vocabulary to grow rapidly. In the process, he also hoped that students' curiosity about the young refugee would be transformed into acceptance. The plan was a good one, but for one problem. Lanh Binh lacked confidence in herself and seemed frightened by her classmates' eagerness to help. So Gil Sanchez decided it was time for Lanh Binh to be the subject of a Pow Wow. According to this class tradition, she would be observed all day by others in the class. Then, sitting in a circle with their Indian headbands in place, each classmate would have a chance to say something good about her. Finally, it would be Lanh Binh's turn to say what she liked best about herself.

"... I like the way you listened when I talked to you," said Joanne.

"And I like the way you waited for your turn in the lunch line without shoving," chimed in Jimmy.

"Well, I feel you make our class special," exclaimed David.

"Yeah, Lanh Binh. It's a lot of fun to . . ."

*Tom Sutherland
15 years old*

Brookfield is a quiet community. Aside from a few gas stations, a McDonald's, and the new district vo-tech school, it hasn't changed much in fifty years. Most of the families have lived in Brookfield for several generations because of the conviction that it's a good place to raise children. Oh, from time to time Brookfield has a problem or two, but word spreads quickly, and . . .

"Principal's office. Paul Difford speaking."

"Hey, Paul. This is Karl Margolis. I just heard from one of my teachers about the Sutherland boy--a real shame."

"Sure is, Karl. Tom's such a fine lad. Well liked too. Doc Sutherland called me this afternoon when he found out. He's fit to be tied."

"How many students were involved?"

"We don't know yet. But even if it's only two or three, we need to get all the kids involved in something constructive so, unlike Tom, they won't feel like turning to drugs for excitement. Any suggestions?"

"Glad you asked, Paul. Vo-tech students in our Service Club were talking about projects the other day. The idea came up to go around to schools in the district and show their hobbies. They thought they might be able to help kids pick a hobby to pursue in leisure time. Who knows, a hobby might keep Tom Sutherland and kids like him from getting bored."

"Sounds great, Karl, but for one thing. How can we transport them to all the schools? As you well know, our buildings are sprawled out all over the place "

"Hm-m-m, you're right. Have to give it some thought. Tell you what, I'll get back to you. Where there's a will . . ."

Two weeks later an old school bus with a new psychedelic coat of paint was parked behind the Brookfield Local High School. A loudspeaker over its door broadcast current rock music. Inside, colorful tables and chairs, arranged for small groups, focused attention on several hobbies—macrame, model building, stamp collecting, glass cutting, needlepoint, and others. In one corner sat two chess players, each intent on protecting his kingdom . . .

"How long have you been playing chess, Jerry?"

"Several years now. Got my first chess set on my twelfth birthday, Tom."

"No kidding! Sure is fun. Reminds me of playing football; you really have to think ahead. Wonder if I could start a chess club here at school—what do you think? . . ."

PRIORITIES QUESTIONNAIRE

Introduction

Several career guidance needs have been identified at our school following a survey of student achievement of important career guidance goals. We know that some changes should be made in our guidance programs to meet those needs. However, we do not know which of the needs should be met first. If you and others will answer this short questionnaire, we will be able to decide.

Instructions

Use this scale

Sometime	Before Too Long	Pretty Soon	As Soon as Possible	Right Now

Example

Need

Rating

1. Too many students are unable to list at least five skills they will need for employment.

If you think that this need should be addressed right now, you would put a 5 in the blank. If you think that the school should address the need sometime, you would put a 1 in the blank. If you think that the school should try to meet the need pretty soon, put a 3 in the blank. If before too long, put a 2. If as soon as possible, put a 4.

Directions: If a component of a behavioral objective is missing from any of the following statements, identify it on the line to the right of the statement. If nothing is missing, place a ✓ on the line.

STATEMENT

PART MISSING

Given a series of five occupational clusters, students will list from memory two occupations that are in each cluster.

Given a list of references students will know the appropriate sources for finding job openings.

Given job application forms, the students will fill them out correctly.

Students will list school courses and community experiences that relate to the occupations. The list will be reviewed by a counselor.

Given a list of 10 sources, students will identify those sources in which salary information can be found.

GENERATING BEHAVIORAL OBJECTIVES

SUBGOAL

The student can identify career skills of entry, maintenance, and advancement.

BEHAVIORAL OBJECTIVE

- A.
- B.
- C.
- D.

GOAL

Use skills necessary for securing, maintaining and/or advancing in various career pathways.

SUBGOAL

The student explains occupational pathways.

BEHAVIORAL OBJECTIVE

SUGGESTIONS

To write program objectives think about the following kinds of ideas:

1. WHAT are the major steps required for accomplishing the goals?
2. WHEN or how often do they occur?
3. WHO is responsible for doing the activity?
4. WHAT EVIDENCE demonstrates that the activity was completed?

GOAL

To assess the career development needs of students.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVE

- A.
- B.
- C.
- D.

CRITERIA FOR OBJECTIVES

IS THE OBJECTIVE

1. Important?
2. Logically related to the goal and subgoal?
3. Clearly written? Does it communicate a common idea to everyone?
4. Written in the ABCD format?

CASE STUDY

"GAIL"

Background

Gail transferred to Green Valley late in her freshman year. At that time the counselor met with her in order to attempt to assist her transition.

Counselor's impressions. When I first saw Gail she was dressed in a "frumpy" long dress. She was cute, pudgy, had a big smile and a bounce to her walk.

I tried to see if I could be of assistance to her but she laughed and said, "I don't think I need a 'shrink' yet—although I am a schizophrenic paranoid with a catatonic nature." I laughed and asked her if she knew what that meant. She did.

I tried to explain the developmental focus of the counseling program here, but she continued to insist she didn't need a "shrink." "I'll make it on my own, I always have."

We talked briefly about her course work. She was taking six credits at her former school and wanted to do the same here. Her grades or records hadn't been forwarded but she assured me laughingly, "I'm a genius so don't worry about it." So, I called one of the girls from class and asked her to show Gail around and usher her to classes.

Periodically I saw Gail in the hall. I'd ask her how things were going. Without exception she would respond, "Cool, cool—I still don't need a shrink."

Teacher Comments

Teachers were asked to comment briefly in writing about each student in their classes. The only instructions given were that they cite what they believed to be important and that they should not say anything they were not willing to say directly to the students or have interpreted to them.

French. Gail's a hard worker, quite and attentive. Through her hard work she does very well in French—a pleasure to have in class.

Geometry. Could be much better than she is. She seems bored. She seems to day dream a lot when lessons are explained. She has talent . . . if she'd use it.

Biology. Gail is one of the hardest workers in class. She is very exact in her work. Maybe too exact given the heavy load she carries. She should take time to have fun. She is very quiet and attentive.

English. Easily the most talented student I have had in some time. She has a marvelous vocabulary and writes extremely well. Sometimes her "street" talk turns me off. She also acts a little "stand-offish" at times and seems to be a leader of the "cut-ups." Perhaps she would benefit from independent study. She has a very "bubbly" personality.

World History. Gail is the top history student in class. She seems to excel with little effort. It also seems that she would like to get better acquainted with other class members, but doesn't know how. The "hip" talk and old fashioned dresses just don't seem to make it. Perhaps she tries too hard. To me she seems very likeable.

Home Economics. Gail does well enough in class but sometimes does not appear interested. When I talked to her about it she said, "I probably won't get married so I don't really need home ec." At other times she's just alive with enthusiasm.

Phys Ed. Gail is one who always shows improvement. She's a slow starter but always improves. Sometimes she seems shy. She should be more confident in herself though—this usually hinders her.

The above comments show both consistency and inconsistency. The counselor assumed that each of the teachers was a "good" teacher and planned to assist Gail to build on strengths and alleviate weaknesses. He was concerned that without further knowledge about Gail they might end up working at cross purposes. Therefore he provided them with additional information with which they could better assist Gail.

Self-Generated Data

Gail, like other students at the school, was asked to write a personal essay and fill out a biographical questionnaire each year. Both were designed to help the students think about themselves in ways which might be stimulating to them and at the same time provide staff with insights to better understand and assist them. The essay and questionnaire below were completed by Gail early in her sophomore year. Both are unedited.

SOPHOMORE ESSAY

Instructions

Everyone is affected by and has an effect upon his world. You have friends, and you are a member of a family, a school, a community, a nation, etc. All of these influence you, and you influence them. Try to identify and discuss the important influences on you, and try to identify ways in which you are influential. Include anything you feel is important.

I was born of a German set of parents. My mother is a paradox, rough and loving. Dad is all heart, tender, gentle, forbearing. My only sister is thirteen years older and looks something like Georgina—presently employed as full time mother and hobbist. [Old world teachings predominate at home, ideas of etiquette, knowledge, religion and love are very tight.] [Mother has a thing about the Bogey man and doesn't trust me as much as I'd like—BUT. . .do I deserve to be trusted?—probably not as much as I'd like.]

I had a terrible crush on one of my teachers who treated me like a human being when no one else did—and who's also like my father (figure?). Anyway, before meeting this Dude I was something like this: 4'8", 150 lbs, dirty, sloppy, dressed like a fat scarecrow—only points in my favor were my grades and they were slipping—He encouraged and cajoled until I had to try to be better. My only regret is that in time I even had to lie to him.

Hail! a bout of petty and major deceit in every area you can name—that all ended when our Pastor found me crying in the choir loft after being kicked out of a class. He bound up some old wounds, and I began to make progress.

I'm spoiled by American affluence, money doesn't mean much to me in terms of myself but I find I sometimes judge other people by it, which is worse as far as I see it.

9. What do you like to read best? Be specific about the nonfiction and fiction areas you read.

Nonfiction—Biographies

While the above provided the counselor with some added insights and perhaps by themselves could have helped teachers better understand Gail and her needs, he had a number of questions as well:

Inconsistencies

- No study halls, near straight A's, yet she said she did no homework.
- Gail referred to herself as fat, she wasn't, at most she's slightly plump
- Desire to be trusted at home but admission of deceit
- Her reports on courses in contrast to teachers

Issues teachers raised

- Shyness
- Acceptance by others

Consequently the counselor called Gail in for an interview. Below are excerpts from that interview:

- Gail: Well she decided to talk to you this time. I found out you're not a shrink after all.
- Counselor: (chuckling) You're afraid of shrinks but not me.
- Gail: No not really . . . I mean I'm not afraid of shrinks or you either. But there are a few things I'd like to talk over.
- Counselor: O.K.
- Gail: Well . . . First, if I don't get out of jail I'm going to break out !
- Counselor: JAIL. . . .
- Gail: Yeah. I just can't take sitting at home at night all the time while so much is happening. I'VE JUST GOT TO GET OUT.
- Counselor: And your parents won't let you.
- Gail: Right on. You'd think they think I'm going to run right out and sell my body.
- Counselor: They don't trust you and you think they can . . . and should.
- Gail: Oh . . . you did read my essay. Well that was really nothing . . . I was just trying it on for effect . . . being dramatic and kind of cryptic.
- Counselor: So you can be trusted and you're not deceitful.

Gail: Oh sometimes I tell little white ones but yeah I can be trusted at least on major things . . . I do tell a few stories. But I've got a good imagination and I've got to do something. I'm tired of sitting and reading all the time . . . Sometimes I do tell a little white one to escape for a bit. You know, tell them that I'm going to help clean the church, when I'm not . . . but go for a walk and get back early.

(Gail and the counselor continue to talk about home and her desire to have the opportunity to go out at night. He offers to talk to her parents, she is at once both excited about the idea and seemingly somewhat apprehensive.)

* * * * *

Counselor: Then, they are very proud of your school work.

Gail: Oh yes, Maybe I've given you a jaundiced picture. They are very loving and proud. Neither is very educated but they are both very bright. They both read a lot. They talk things over with me a lot too. Their values are just different. They are not impressed with money or outward appearances. Nor frivolity. But they do care about people . . . and God. They are very religious, very moral, and I guess they want to make sure I stay that way . . . They really love me a lot. A lot of the things they believe in I hope I do too. I am pretty religious . . . But I would like to do some of the other things kids do. And maybe dress a little different so I don't look so fat.

Counselor: So you really love your parents a lot—you respect their views.

Gail: (interrupting) Yeah but I wish they would do the same—I mean—trust me a little and at the same time trust themselves.

Counselor: Trust themselves?

Gail: Yes, I'm part of them (parents) I share their (parents') values—at least most of the time. I try to do my best in school and I'm very faithful in my religion . . .

* * * * *

Counselor: You said on the questionnaire that you don't do any homework.

Gail: Oh . . . that was another of my white ones. On the average I do two or three hours a night . . . I was just trying to be a little mysterious . . . you know, one of the few ways I get recognition is by being a top student. But to get it you can't let the others know you're a grind. You know . . . I try to be cool about it.

Counselor: And you really like all your courses and do your best at each . . . even geometry?

Gail: Well I probably work hardest at geometry. I don't like it. I'm not good at it. So I pretend I could be if I wanted to.

* * * * *

Counselor: You know you're really not fat.

Gail: Just . . . well I'm not obese. But I'm not petite like my Mom and Sis. And I sure look fat in the clothes I have to wear . . . You know at home they've always called me "chubby" or the German equivalent . . . but you really don't think I'm fat?

Counselor: No—but I agree those dresses don't do anything for you.

Gail: You know, if they did let me wear other clothes I don't even know what would look right.

* * * * *

Gail: I would like to have a boyfriend. But I guess he'd get tired of sitting around my house . . . for that matter I'd like to have some close girl friends, too . . . You know—to talk some things over.

* * *

Counselor: Well, that about wraps it up. I'm going to make an appointment with your parents. And I'd like to talk a few things over with your pastor and some of the teachers. Maybe I can help. Anyway, we'll give it a try.

Gail: Thanks . . . uh . . . even if it doesn't work out, thanks for talking. Thanks for trying. (laughing) You're pretty nice for a shrink.

Parent Interview

The counselor called Gail's parents and made an appointment to meet with them in their home. They seemed somewhat surprised at the request but willingly consented.

Home Visit. The _____ home was located at the outskirts of town. It had a very neat appearance—lawn obviously cared for, freshly painted, spacious but older. Inside the house was spotless if somewhat austere in furnishing. Book cases lined two walls in the living room. Outside of one picture of F.D.R. and one of J.F.K. all others were religious. Magazines were neatly stacked on two of the tables.

The counselor was greeted at the door by Gail. As soon as she introduced him to her parents she was excused to go to her room.

Gail's parents seemed somewhat ill at ease and concerned about the visit. The counselor assured them that Gail was not in any trouble but that parental visits were included in the normal course of events as part of the guidance program.

After the ice was broken the counselor encouraged them to talk about both Gail and themselves. The picture Gail had given of them appeared quite accurate. Both were much older than were the average parents of sophomores. Both were obviously proud of their daughter and extremely concerned about her welfare. Both were very concerned about what they termed the "religious and moral decline of America." Both were worried about Gail growing up in such a "crazy society with such mixed up priorities."

Later the counselor discussed Gail's desire for more freedom. They stated that there was a difference between freedom and license and that children Gail's age needed supervision. They further stated that many of the activities of youth in this culture were frivolous—that each person had a moral responsibility to fulfill his/her potential and games and parties did not contribute to that. However, they did agree that religious and educational activities would be permissible if supervised.

With as much tact as possible the counselor raised the issue of Gail's idea that she was fat. They chuckled, but agreed not to call her "chubby" any more. (They didn't realize that Gail didn't like it—to them it was a term of endearment.)

Clothes were also discussed. They stated, "Americans are overly concerned about outer appearance." They further stated that they would not waste God's resources on such frivolity. Gail's mother said she made Gail's clothes, "They are functional and decent." She did agree that Gail could make her own clothes as long as she wasn't extravagant and as long as they were modest.

The interview concluded with the parents thanking the counselor for his concern for their child's welfare. He left with the feeling the interview had gone well for Gail.

Have participants read Plans for Action.

The counselor carried through by coordinating efforts on Gail's behalf. The following activities followed.

Teachers. The counselor filled the teachers in on what he had learned. In turn he asked:

1. Would the English teacher encourage Gail to try out for the school play and for the school newspaper?
2. Would the history teacher who was also the debate coach encourage her participation in debate?
3. Would the home economics teacher help Gail select patterns appropriate to her physique which were also sufficiently modest? Also would she provide Gail with advice on grooming and dieting?
4. Would the phys. ed. teacher help Gail plan an exercise program?
5. Would one of the teachers be willing to start a literary discussion club and ask Gail to participate? (The librarian offered.)
6. Would all be sure to get Gail involved in class?

Community. (1) The counselor called Gail's pastor and asked about church youth activities and groups. He said several projects were in action. He also said he would talk to Gail and her parents about them.

(2) The counselor also called the woman in charge of the "candy strippers" and suggested Gail as a candidate. She also was most willing and said she'd be pleased to have Gail and would talk to her parents about the program.

Gail. The counselor called Gail in and told her what he had done. She acted very pleased but a little frightened. She assured him that her parents would not approve of all the activities but hoped they would some. She also said she hoped she could "do the job if I get the chance."

Conclusion Concerning Gail's Case

Gail's frustrations were not indicative of abnormality or abnormal adjustment. Yet if the actions taken had not occurred she may have experienced major difficulties. In this case the counselor moved into action—idiosyncratic action—in a pro-active, developmental and preventative manner. This, we believe, is what school counseling should be about.

STAFF DEVELOPMENT: DOING THE JOB

The term Staff Development presumes that all staff, not just faculty, can grow professionally by developing more positive attitudes, skills and understandings of the role of career guidance in the career development of all students. The following strategies can be useful in accomplishing total staff development, a basic support function of the career guidance program.

- Field trips to work sites
- Memos, house organs, newsletters, etc.
- Cooperative peer observation to develop positive attitudes
- Workshops, seminars, professional meetings
- Interaction with community members, e.g., committees, service clubs
- Continuing education
- Others

STAFF DEVELOPMENT: TECHNIQUES FOR WORKSHOPS

Sample Learning Activities

Brainstorming

In a brainstorming session, participants spontaneously express their thoughts about a specific problem. It is a let-yourself-go session that calls for ingenuity and creativity in seeking a solution to a problem. Brainstorming is used to elicit both numerous and novel ideas.

Case Study

The case study provides a description of a realistic situation that the workshop participants are encouraged to consider and for which they resolve problems as if they were personally involved. There are numerous problem situations related to planning, implementing, and evaluating career guidance programs that can be presented to workshop participants.

Demonstrations

Demonstration is the procedure of doing something in the presence of workshop participants to show them how to do it themselves or to illustrate a point. The workshop leader should be sure that the demonstration meets a necessary instructional need. The effectiveness of this instructional technique depends on participants having a clear view of what is being presented.

Group Discussions

There are two basic types of group discussion—structured and unstructured. Structured group discussions adhere to a topic or a problem which participants want to decide, solve, or conclude. This type of discussion is generally directed by the workshop leader.

Unstructured discussion provides for informal group sessions that move freely and adjust to the expressed interests of participants.

In-Basket

This technique is used to develop decision-making skills which focus on participants' abilities to set priorities and carry out tasks. Workshop participants are asked to assume the roles and responsibilities of specific staff members. They are provided written information in memo form about a number of tasks that they must complete. Workshop participants must determine which tasks they would attend to and in what order.

Role Playing

Role playing is an instructional technique in which workshop participants assume roles other than their own. During the workshop, structured settings are described and participants have the opportunity to express feelings, work out problems, and experience other persons' roles.

Objectives of a role playing situation are to suggest alternative solutions to a problem, to gain an understanding of another's feelings, or to gain an experience in new situations. The situation should be clearly presented to workshop participants.

Simulation

A simulation is a representation of significant or central features of reality that requires workshop participants to become actively involved in an experience rather than merely witness it. Simulation is a broad term and includes many techniques such as in-basket, case study, and role playing.

Symposium

A symposium consists of a group of brief presentations on various aspects of a particular issue or problem. Generally, after the prepared presentations, speakers participate in a panel discussion and/or answer questions raised by workshop participants.

Lists similar to the one above, for other staff members are included in the Staff Development Handbook, pp. 43-51.

SCHOOL—COMMUNITY COOPERATION

Community Relations

This involves the ongoing process of communicating with the community to promote people's awareness of school programs, needs, accomplishments, and problems. The primary purpose of a community relations effort is to gain community support and understanding of the schools and their programs. A variety of strategies may be employed in this communication process. Student involvement, in any or all of these strategies, makes them more effective and contributes additional labor and talent. Ideally, the communications process would involve many strategies.

Community Involvement

This is a series of activities which brings community members and/or organizations into direct contact with the students and/or the school program. Community involvement aims at using personnel, facilities, or materials to accomplish a specific task or tasks. Often its purpose is to solve a problem not being considered. Other purposes are to broaden student experiences or to provide additional services to the schools and, ultimately, to the community through improved education.

Green Valley School District has just completed a milestone in an exciting new aspect of education. Students in kindergarten through twelfth grades have gone a thousand places. They have heard 300 speakers. And these places are right here in the community. The speakers were you. Miss Martha Greenbottom's third grade class was all in attendance at the veterinary hospital last Tuesday and watched while Johnny Sweetcorn's pet pedigreed poodle gave birth to seven little pedigreed poodles. Silas Astronaut, one of the valley's largest farmers, visited the senior class last month, only twelve days after returning from the United States' first attempt to place a manned space vehicle on the planet Mars.

Are you aware of Green Valley School's program of Career Guidance? If you are not aware, would you like information? Would you be willing to participate in program development for the coming year? Green Valley is now asking for your help. In order to keep you better informed and to make next year more successful, call 486-3655 any evening this week. If you will leave your name and address, two or more members of the speech class will come to visit you at a convenient time to ask some questions which will assist your school in continuing with a bigger and better career guidance program in the school year 1977.

INTERVIEWER'S SCRIPT

1. Hey, coordinator (names) can you tell us what happened when you planned that new career guidance program in your district? Let's be more specific, were you assigned your role or did you volunteer for it?
2. Did you have any reluctance to assume this role?
3. Were you the only coordinator for this program?
4. Could you tell me something about your planning committee such as who its members were, and how the committee functioned?
5. Was your committee advisory in nature or did they take a more active role in planning?
6. To what extent has the postsecondary institution been involved in this planning effort?
7. Very briefly describe your needs assessment process.
8. That's quite interesting. Could you briefly describe for me your resource assessment process?
9. Yes, I agree. Based upon all these planning activities have you been able to develop a program plan and implement program activities?
10. Yes, I do. Let me ask you one final question. What now is your overall perception of your involvement in the career guidance program?

PROCEDURES USED IN THE FIELD TEST

ATTACHMENT I

Overall Questionnaire

The questionnaire that is provided at the completion of the workshop requests participants to indicate (1) how well the workshop assisted them in gaining a greater understanding of the concepts presented; (2) the success of materials, procedures, and organization used; and (3) what they liked least and most about the workshop.

The data obtained from the questionnaire can be tabulated and summarized by determining the percentage of participants who responded to each level of the rating for each appropriate question. The data obtained from this questionnaire can be used to reinforce the data collected throughout the workshop.

Observation Form for Profiles

Each small group was assigned a profile. When the small group leaders report to the total group on the nature of the problem and problem resolution, check whether the points listed below for the appropriate profile were mentioned in some form.

	Was the Idea Mentioned?
	YES	NO
PROFILE I
Nature of the Problem
The opportunity for expansion of occupational awareness of students in rural areas is limited because of geographic isolation and junior high students need assistance in preparing for high school.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
Problem Resolution
Encouraging students to take an active role in planning and participating in family activities.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
PROFILE II
Nature of the Problem
The attitudes and values of some students are stereotypic and are somewhat resistant to change.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
Problem Resolution
Group counseling activities such as role playing in which participants explore different attitudes and values.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
PROFILE III
Nature of the Problem
Some students have somewhat limited work habits and limited exposure to various life roles.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
Problem Resolution
Involve senior citizens in school activity to expose students to a variety of life roles.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>

Was the Idea Mentioned?
 YES NO

PROFILE IV

Nature of the Problem

Non-English speaking students often have a lack of self-confidence.

Problem Resolution

Involving class in self-awareness activity in which students express positive feelings about others.

PROFILE V

Nature of the Problem

Boredom of students causes them to turn to drugs.

Problem Resolution

Teaching students various hobbies by having certain students go around to schools in the district and show their hobbies.

How many of the groups correctly describe both the nature of the problem and the problem resolution in their case studies?

What percentage of the groups is this?
