ABSTRACT

A brief summary is presented of the 1988 surveys of states regarding the legislative implementation of savings plans (mostly state and local tax-free bonds) and guaranteed tuition plans as methods of advance payment for college. The 10 states that have passed savings bills are listed, three of which (Illinois, North Carolina and North Dakota) have implemented their plans, and the 8 states that have passed guaranteed tuition bills are listed. A brief summary of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) ruling on the Michigan Education Trust is given. The status of the other states is also briefly summarized. The bulk of the report is a table giving the following summary information, where available, for each state: interest level (high, medium-high, medium, low-medium, and low); status; implementation; type of plan (savings, guaranteed tuition, and other); IRS status; and description or comments. SUMMARY OF THE 1988 SURVEY

Advance payment for college strategies tend to fall into one of two broad categories: savings plans (most of which involve the sale of state and local tax free bonds); and guaranteed tuition plans. States that have passed savings bills (date of signing in parentheses) include:

- Colorado (4/88), zero-coupon bonds
- Connecticut (7/88), general obligation bonds
- Illinois (9/87), general obligation bonds
- Iowa (5/88), capital appreciation bonds
- Kentucky (4/88), state savings fund plus an endowment fund
- North Carolina (7/87), revenue bonds
- ¹North Dakota (4/88), zero coupon bonds
- Rhode Island (6/88), combination bonds and state tax-free educational savings accounts
- Virginia (4/88), unit investment trust
- Washington (2/88), general obligation bonds

Three of these ten states have implemented their plans: Illinois (January 1988); North Carolina (fall of 1987); and North Dakota (June 1988). Washington plans to implement before the end of 1988.

Eight states have passed guaranteed tuition bills:

- Florida (7/87)
- Indiana (7/87)
- Maine (6/87)
- Michigan (12/86)
- Missouri (6/88)
- Oklahoma (7/88)
- Tennessee (5/87)
- Wyoming (2/87)

Michigan is considered the forerunner in this category, and most of the states have used the Michigan bill as a model for their own. These states have delayed implementation of their plans because of the uncertainty of the tax status of tuition futures accounts. Wyoming is the exception; by not exempting their program from federal taxes, they were able to begin selling futures contracts in August of 1987.

In the meantime, the IRS did send Michigan a ruling (dated March 29, 1988) which states that purchasers of contracts would not be taxed. Instead, the Michigan Education Trust (MET) would be taxed at the higher corporate rate, which MET hopes to offset with corporate deductions. (The qualified beneficiary may also have a tax liability when the contract is redeemed). Since the MET considers itself a not-for-profit corporation, it has applied for tax-exempt status.

Unfortunately, the IRS ruling was state-specific rather than blanket in nature as the tuition-guarantee states had hoped. This delayed implementation even further.

¹North Dakota actually did not need legislation; instead it passed a resolution authorizing the ND Industrial Commission to market some of its bonds for educational purposes.

Both Michigan and Florida intend to go on-line with their programs this August and September respectively. (Florida will request an IRS ruling; however, its legislation allows it to sell contracts before the ruling is received).

Of the states not mentioned above, some have legislation pending, some are studying the issue, and some have no current interest.

Pending:

- Georgia, Minnesota and Ohio have savings bills that are before their legislatures.
- Massachusetts has a combination savings bond and tuition certificate² bill pending.
- California has a combination bill pending that would both establish a college savings bond program with interest indexed to college costs and mandate a study of tuition guarantee plans.
- New Jersey and Pennsylvania each have tuition certificate bills before their legislatures.

Being Studied:

-The following states are studying the issue: Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, Texas and Wisconsin.

No Current Interest:

-Actually, all states are concerned about how their citizens will pay for their children's college educations. Several, however, do not wish to develop plans, programs or legislation at this time. They include: Alabama, Arizona, Delaware, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Maryland, Mississippi, Montana, Oregon, Puerto Rico, South Dakota, Utah and West Virginia.

Other:

- Nevada officially supports passage of a federal program, but may consider developing its own program if the former is not forthcoming.
- South Carolina may re-introduce an IRA-type proposal.
- Vermont is awaiting the outcome of federal proposals.
- Wisconsin, in addition to a study by the University of Wisconsin, may introduce a savings bond bill next session.

²Tuition certificates represent one method of guaranteeing tuition in the future. A certificate representing a certain fraction of a year's tuition at a university or college that is bought now is guaranteed to pay for that same fraction of a year's tuition at time of redemption.

			SAVINGS	GUAR TUITION	OTHER
MICHIGAN (high)	SIGNED 12/86	8/88		X		yes	Michigan Baccalaureate Education System Trust (BEST), Public Act No. 316. Applications accepted in Aug 88, contracts entered into in Sept 88. S&Ls will take payments & arrange for loans if needed. Approx prices: $1689/yr's tuition for a newborn; $2055/yr's tuition for a 10-yr old. This was the first of the tuition guarantee programs to be passed, & serves as a model for the majority of others. Guarantee is good at the 15 state universities, 29 community colleges. Contracts also available for community colleges alone (at a lower rate) or combination cc/university. Refunds: Original investment minus admin costs only or original investment plus interest minus admin costs, depending upon nature of contract. A refund may also be paid directly to an independent degree-granting Mich institution, the amount to be not less than the prevailing weighted average tuition cost at a state institution for the number of credit hours covered by the contract on date of termination. IRS NOTES: IRS ruling of 29 Mar 88: plan is tax-exempt to purchaser (altho there may be a minimal tax liability to the qualified beneficiary upon redemption of the contract). Mich Education Trust (MET) is tax liable at the corporate rate, but also benefits from corporate deductions, reducing net liability to an estimated 0-15%. MET has applied for tax exempt status based on the fact that it is a not-for-profit corporation.

Unless legally or otherwise disallowed, bonds may be redeemed for tuition certificates (not guarantees), payable at eligible ND institutions for tuition, fees, room & board within 3 years of maturity. Bonds must be used for tuition; however, in the event the qualified beneficiary cannot or does not wish to attend postsecondary education, they may be sold to other parties.
