ABSTRACT

This guide for teaching literacy to adult English-as-a-Second-Language (ESL) students is intended as an aid for regular ESL teachers who must deal with different levels of literacy in the classroom. The guide is not a comprehensive curriculum, but is intended to be incorporated into a "survival" ESL curriculum. Because it contains competency-based literacy objectives, the guide would be most efficiently used along with a competency-based curriculum. For each competency-based topic of the ESL curriculum, the guide lists appropriate literacy objectives and procedures to be taught after the oral/aural objectives of the regular curriculum have been mastered. The guide contains a reference list of published materials used in teaching literacy, outlines a core curriculum, suggests general classroom techniques, and provides information on assessing ESL literacy. The core curriculum consists of skill sets at four levels: preliteracy and levels 1-3. At each level, activities are suggested and instructional materials suitable for copying are provided. For each activity, objectives, texts, supplemental materials, and procedures are outlined. A 52-item bibliography of teacher and classroom resources and a list of national literacy organizations are included. A list of publishers' addresses is appended. PREFACE

A Guideline for Teaching Literacy was written under a 310 Special Project Grant awarded to George Mason University by the Virginia Department of Education, Division of Vocational and Adult Education. A number of different people contributed to the Guideline, and the editor would like to acknowledge their help.

The first version of the Guideline was written by Jean Lewis (Chesterfield County ESL Program) and Tracy Kyriakeas (then teaching in the Fairfax County Adult ESL Program). They were also responsible for field-testing and did some revision. The editor and Michele Burtoff, as consultant, did extensive revision and re-writing. Other help was given by Don Ranard of the Center for Applied Linguistics, Melissa King of the Arlington Country ESL Program, and Jack Wigfield, Alemany Community College, San Francisco. Rena Baker and Wendy Rahm also offered advice and provided ideas and materials for some of the attachments. Gayle Belcher did the artwork and layout of the numerous attachments to the curriculum pages.

In addition, the editor would like to thank those programs in Virginia that field-tested the first draft of the Guideline, and provided suggestions for revisions: the City of Alexandria Adult ESL Program, Fairfax County Adult ESL Program, Chesterfield County ESL Program, Henrico County Adult ESL Program, Harrisonburg Adult ESL Program, and Virginia Beach Adult ESL Program.

Finally, we would like to express appreciation to the Division of Vocational and Adult Education for funding this Guideline. We are grateful to Maude P. Goldston, Associate Director of Adult Education, and to Horace Webb, area supervisor, for their encouragement, patience, and support.

The editor would very much like to hear from users of this Guideline. Please send comments and suggestions to her, Department of English, George Mason University, Fairfax, Virginia 22030.

This Guideline is not protected by copyright and may be reproduced in whole or in part. Any reproduction must, however, include a line giving full credit to the editor, George Mason University, and the funding source (a 310 grant from the Virginia Department of Education).

INTRODUCTION

A. BACKGROUND

Significant numbers of students in adult ESL programs need special literacy instruction. Typically, such students have a number of different profiles. Some do not know how to read and write in their own language. This group may include those who speak languages which are not written at all (preliterates such as the Hmong) or who are from societies in which there is little or no use of the written forms of their languages (non-literates such as many from rural Central America).

Other students may have only minimal reading or writing skill in their own language, but none in English. Such students, too, may need special literacy instruction, especially if the written form of their language does not use a Roman-based alphabet (e.g., Chinese, Khmer).

Ideally, an ESL program would offer separate, specialized literacy classes for these students. Those who speak languages written in a Roman alphabet could be taught basic literacy skills in their own language, since research has shown that literacy skills may be transferred. On the other hand, those who are already literate in a non-Roman or non-alphabetic language (e.g. Khmer or Chinese) could be taught the system of the Roman alphabet. And finally, pre-literate students could be given instruction in reading and writing readiness as well as in decoding strategies. Thus, all would have the skills and knowledge necessary to enter and succeed in regular ESL programs.

Unfortunately, however, the number of students requiring such instruction do not justify the cost. Moreover, qualified instructors are rare. As a result, "literacy students" are often placed in regular, beginning-level ESL classes, along with students who have higher levels of literacy (e.g., those who can already read and write in their own language, a language such as Spanish).

This is problematic for a number of reasons. The regular, beginning-level ESL class typically employs textbooks; the textbooks are meant to be read and studied at home. Thus, it is assumed that the student can already read in some language. The teacher then proceeds to concentrate on aural/oral skills and does not incorporate the literacy skills needed to interpret the textbook into the curriculum. Even if the teacher is aware of a literacy problem, most adult ESL teachers are not trained to deal with it. Moreover, many adult ESL programs have a definite time frame of instruction and a fixed limit on the number of times a student can repeat a given level.

These factors conspire against the ESL "literacy students", and they often do not do well in our ESL programs. They tend to repeat the lower level of instruction until they (1) are pushed ahead to a higher level for which they lack adequate literacy skills; (2) are forced to drop out because of "excessive" time in the program; or (3) drop out voluntarily, frequently because the program is not meeting their needs.

In short, we have to recognize that special literacy classes are a luxury that many adult ESL programs cannot afford, and accept the fact that the literacy students profiled above are grouped in classes with other beginners who have higher level literacy skills. Since this solution is problematic for literacy students, we thus must search for ways to help teachers deal effectively with this new level in their already multi-level classes -- the literacy level.*

This Guideline for Teaching Literacy to ESL students is designed as an aid for regular ESL teachers who must deal with different levels of literacy in their classroom. It is not a comprehensive ESL curriculum; it is meant to be incorporated into a "survival" ESL curriculum. The Guideline contains competency-based literacy objectives; therefore, it would be most efficiently used along with a competency-based adult "survival" ESL curriculum, such as the one developed by REEP. For each competency-based topic of the ESL curriculum (which concentrates on spoken English), the Guideline lists appropriate literacy objectives and procedures to be taught after the oral/aural objectives have been mastered. The literacy objectives are merely suggestions, to be taught only if they are appropriate for the individual students.

B. APPROACHES TO TEACHING LITERACY

All methods of teaching beginning reading can be classified into two basic approaches: synthetic and

*By "literacy level" is meant students who need special instruction in reading and writing. By referring to these students as making up a literacy level, we do not mean, of course, that they are all on the same level; there are in fact many literacy levels. See Section F.

The REEP Curriculum can be purchased for $16.50 from The Refugee Education and Employment Program, Wilson School, 1607 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, VA 22209.

analytic. Synthetic approaches begin with the small parts or pieces of the language (letters and sounds) and build to larger language units (words and phrases). Synthetic approaches are thus code-centered approaches which focus on teaching decoding skills with little emphasis on meaning. A prime example of this approach is, of course, the phonics method, which focuses on sound-symbol correspondence (i.e. "sounding out") as the key to reading. Another code-centered approach is the linguistic method, named for its originator, Bloomfield (a famous linguist). This method focuses on the recognition of frequently-occurring patterns in words, e.g. cat, bat, fat, rat, sat, hat. Again, meaning is not emphasized.

Analytic approaches on the other hand, begin with the whole language in context (words and sentences) in order to derive meaning. Analytic approaches are thus meaning-centered, and are therefore considered most appropriate for adult learners. One example of this approach is the whole-word, or sightword method, in which each word is taught in reference to its meaning. The words are most often presented on flashcards which are then used as labels for objects, if possible. Word shapes are also taught as an aid to recognition, and the learner practices both reading and writing the word. Another example of a meaning-centered approach is the use of language experience stories, which employ the learner's own words and ideas, thus allowing the learner an active role in the literacy process.

Then, how does a teacher decide which of these two major approaches is best to achieve success in literacy? The debate is as yet unresolved by teachers of reading, although current theory and practice tend to favor the meaning-centered approach. However, most practitioners of ESL literacy, facing the special challenge of teaching beginning reading to non-native speakers, have opted for an eclectic approach which can take advantage of the strategies of both approaches. Thus, in keeping with the state-of-the-art, this Guideline reflects an eclectic approach. It employs a basically meaning-centered approach which is supported by the teaching of selective decoding skills (i.e. phonics).

C. GOALS AND ASSUMPTIONS OF ESL LITERACY

What do teachers do when they teach literacy or literacy skills? A common definition of literacy is the ability to read, but reading ability can be found in varying degrees. Teachers need to be more specific, and above all, more realistic in defining their goals. A good goal for ESL literacy students may be the attainment of knowledge and skills needed to enter, and succeed in, a "regular" ESL class, i.e. a class that uses a textbook. In other words, one goal may be to teach students those skills necessary to continue to learn. When dealing with adult learners, it may be useful to keep in mind the adult educators' view of literacy. It is defined in functional terms--the ability to function in today's society. Functionally literate adults should be able to fill in all kinds of forms, read notices and advertisements, read and pay bills, find and perform jobs, etc.

Adult ESL students learning to read for the first time (in a second language, no less!) have the same needs and responsibilities as all adults in this society. Therefore, a functional definition for literacy is a practical and useful one for them. However, teachers must always be aware that adult learners are decision-making individuals who have different sets of priorities, and they should address these priorities as best as they can. Adults, unlike children, are not a captive audience. Thus, effective teachers of adults define, and re-define, their goals for every class, and inasmuch as possible, for every individual they face.

In setting goals, teachers must also have realistic expectations. Neither too much nor too little should be assumed. Adult learners may really want to learn to read, but they rarely have the luxury of time to accomplish their goal quickly and easily, if ever. They have jobs, families, and other adult responsibilities.

In addition, older ESL students often have poor physical health, including poor eyesight, which may greatly impede their progress. Therefore, progress must be measured on a different scale than usual. A lot of patience, repetition and practice are necessary, but at the same time, adult relations between teachers and students must always be maintained.

Unfortunately, though, most available print materials relevant to the skill level of the adult ESL student have been designed for children; they are generally inappropriate for adults. ESL teachers should take extreme care in selecting materials to use with "literacy level" students, as well as in setting realistic goals for them. Only then will "success" be possible.

D THE CORE CURRICULUM OF THE GUIDELINE

As the title of this work indicates, it is a literacy curriculum guideline. It is not meant to be a step-by-step guide to teaching literacy skills, but merely to serve as a guideline and a supplement to regular competency-based ESL instruction. It should be most useful to teachers of multi-level classes where students are at various stages in their reading and writing development.

Because it is a guideline, this work is also not intended to be used from cover to cover. Nor is it necessary that all objectives at a given level be taught. The Guideline is designed to be flexible to facilitate coordination with the specific topics and objectives in the regular ESL curriculum, and their order of presentation. Where there is no established competency-based ESL curriculum for the class, teachers may pick and choose topics/objectives depending on the time available in their programs and the needs or interests of their students.

The heart of the Guideline is the Core Curriculum. This consists of a Pre-literacy level and Levels 1, 2 and 3. (See below for discussion of levels.)

Levels 1 - 3 are similar. Each level contains a number of topics (e.g., clothing, transportation) for which there is a number of competency-based objectives. Each topic is presented on a separate page, following this format:

TOPIC:

OBJECTIVES:

TEXTS:

SUPPLEMENTAL MATERIALS:

PROCEDURES:

PHONICS ITEM:

OBJECTIVES: For each topic a number of learning objectives are listed. An attempt has been made to develop specific literacy objectives which are relevant to the topic and level, and which meet the needs and interests of adult students.

Remembering that this is not a comprehensive ESL curriculum, it is important to emphasize that oral/aural ESL objectives relevant to the topic and level should have been taught first, before proceeding to reading and writing skills. As Wayne Haverson has said, "In ESL literacy, the learner should read and write only the language that he or she comprehends."

It is impossible to say how long it will take to teach a particular literacy objective of a particular topic at a particular level. The length of time involved depends crucially on the individuals being taught (their backgrounds, emotional readiness, previous contact with concepts and vocabulary involved in the topic, degree of oral control of the material, how fast they learn, and so on). A suggested time frame is two to four hours per week per topic, per objective. The acquisition of literacy is a slow process, and constant review of previous material needs to be worked in with new material.

TEXTS: The list of objectives for each topic is followed by a list of commercially available texts which can be used to help teach the objectives. Specific page numbers are indicated for the teacher's convenience.

For most topics, where possible, more than one published text is given, so that teachers can use the text or texts available to them. The texts listed in the Guideline are the ones most commonly found in adult ESL classrooms where teachers employ a competency-based approach to instruction. Some are not literacy texts, but can be adapted for teaching literacy. (A complete list of published texts referred to in the Guideline can be found on pg. 12-13.)

SUPPLEMENTAL MATERIALS: Each curriculum page includes a list of supplemental materials which may be needed to teach the objectives. Supplemental materials may include supplies, pictures, readily-available forms (e.g., change of address forms from the post office), coins, and so on.

PROCEDURES: This section contains suggested procedures which can be employed to teach the objectives. The procedures listed in this section are referred to as "General Techniques" or "Specific Techniques". General Techniques are described and explained in a separate section near the end of the Guideline. Specific Techniques are explained on the curriculum page, and are employed to teach/practice specific objectives.

PHONICS ITEMS: This section of the curriculum page has been left blank, so that teachers can choose the specific phonics item they wish to teach with particular topics/objectives. A step-by-step procedure for teaching phonics is given in the General Techniques section of this Guideline.

Specific phonics items have not been included here for several reasons. First of all, there is no inherent order for presentation of the topics/objectives. Teachers are free to select topics/objectives in any order to meet the needs of their students. Although the ordering of competency-based objectives may not affect the student's ultimate success, the ordering of phonics items may. Phonics instruction needs to be presented in an orderly manner over a period of time.

Secondly, some teachers are better prepared to teach phonics than others. Teachers with no background in reading or phonics instruction might best ignore phonics at the earliest levels.

Thirdly, it is not clear that the extensive use of phonics instruction within the ESL literacy class is advisable anyway. To quote Donald Ranard ("Teaching Literacy to Adult Non-Native Speakers of English" in Haverson and Haynes):

Phonics instruction teaches the student to sound out new words. For non-literate students with little or no oral knowledge of English, this skill is of limited value. Reading, it must be remembered, is not merely to sound out written material. Reading is the ability to make the correct connections between written symbol and meaning.

It might be added that many successful native and non-native readers of English do not rely upon their ability to sound out words. In fact, studies have shown that it is only poor readers who rely heavily upon such a reading strategy.

Still, depending on considerations of class and teacher preparation, some emphasis on phonics may be helpful to the ESL learner. To quote Ranard again:

... phonics instruction is not without value. English, after all, uses an alphabet, which means its symbols stand for sounds ... Moreover, while phonics instruction may be of limited value in teaching non-English speaker to read new words, it can help them to visualize the written forms of words they learn to speak outside the classroom. I teach phonics in the form of short drills and exercises, lasting about fifteen minutes, but not until some of the words that are used as examples of the generalizations being taught, are words that the students already recognize.

ATTACHMENTS: For many of the topics, we have included "attachments" — other materials which can be used in teaching the objectives. These attachments include simplified forms, enlarged labels, and so on.

SIGHTWORDS: Following the curriculum page, which contains the five sections described above, and attachments, is a list of suggested sightwords relevant to the particular learning objectives. This "list" of suggested sightwords appears as a group of "flashcards" (i.e., they can be duplicated and cut up for use as flashcards). Please note that they are only suggestions; the teacher should not attempt to teach all of them (or at least, not all of them at one time), since students are only able to retain a few sightwords at one time. In addition, if teachers prefer to select words which are not listed, blank "flashcard" sheets have been provided here so teachers can make their own cards.

The sightwords of Level 1 are all given in capital letters. The sight words of Levels 2 and 3 are given in small letters. It is assumed that sightwords at a lower level will also be taught (or reinforced) at the higher levels.

NOTE ON PAGINATION: It should be noted that the sightwords and attachments are not paginated. This is to facilitate adding new material or sightwords, deleting, or re-ordering, to meet the needs of individual teachers.

The Pre-Literacy level follows a format similar to that of Levels 1-3, except for the fact that the units of this level are not topics, but skills. For that reason, phonics items and sightwords have been omitted.

It should be emphasized, that the four skills presented in the Pre-literacy level represent a minimum of reading readiness work for the pre-literate learner. Pre-literate learners, those from cultures in which literacy is rare or non-existent, may need considerable work and time to develop concepts such as same-different and top-to-bottom and left-to-right directionality.

Additional activities for working with such students can be found in Entry to English (Beal) or Breakthrough to Literacy (Mackay). (Complete references are given in the bibliography.)

E. GUIDELINE CONTENTS

In addition to this Introduction the Guideline contains the following sections:

1. Core curriculum: Pre-literacy Level, Levels 1, 2, and 3 (discussed above).
2. General Techniques: This section contains step-by-step procedures of general techniques which can be used to teach literacy skills. Teachers may refer to this section when teaching particular objectives. This is not an all inclusive list of teaching techniques, and teachers should feel free to use and develop their own.

This section contains descriptions for teaching/presenting: ALPHABET, NUMBERS, DICTATION, PHONICS, SIGHTWORDS, MATCHING, CLOZE, CONTENT QUESTIONS, LANGUAGE EXPERIENCE STORIES. In addition to these general techniques, some specific techniques are described within the curriculum, and should be used for teaching particular objectives.

3. Assessing ESL Literacy: This section discusses considerations and techniques for assessing ESL literacy skills. It also contains descriptions of three ESL literacy tests, as well as a complete copy of one literacy test.
4. Bibliography: The bibliography lists some of the known ESL adult literacy materials available and is divided into 3 sections - teacher resources, classroom materials, and addresses of major national literacy organizations.
5. Publishers' Addresses: The addresses of publishers of materials used in the Guideline or listed in the bibliography are given here.
6. Appendices

Appendix A contains Handwriting Activities Books 1-5, developed by the Center for Applied Linguistics. These are included in the unabridged edition of the Guideline only and are reproduced with permission of the Center for Applied Linguistics, Washington, D.C.

Appendix B contains Handwriting Activities Number Book 1 and Number Book 2 - On Time, developed by the Center for Applied Linguistics. These are included in the unabridged edition of the Guideline only and are reproduced with permission of the Center for Applied Linguistics, Washington, D.C.

F. LEVELS

The four levels of the literary curriculum (i.e. Pre-literacy and Levels 1 - 3) are described below.

Pre-Literacy: This level is designed for students who are totally non-literate, or who possess literacy skills in a non-Roman alphabet. At this level they will learn such literacy skills as identifying same or different, and distinguishing directionality (e.g. top-bottom, left-right). They will also learn to recognize, copy, and write the letters of the Roman alphabet as well as the numbers 1-100. In addition, they will be able to sign their name.

Level 1: This level is designed for students who possess minimal literacy skills in some language. Students at this level have mastered the skills described for the Pre-literacy level. At Level 1 they will learn to fill out the simplest of forms and read common sightwords which appear on basic signs and labels. They will learn to read the most common words contained in their (spoken) survival vocabulary. They will also learn to tell time, read and understand calendars, and read and understand price tags. They will be able to match visuals with appropriate sightwords. They will understand the concept of sound-symbol correspondence (i.e. phonics).

Level 2: Students at this level have mastered the skills and objectives described for the Pre-Literacy level and Level 1. At Level 2 students will learn to fill out more complex forms, as well as read more and different signs and labels. They will learn to read simple schedules and instructions as well as find major headings in the newspaper and yellow pages. When this level is mastered, students should be able to follow along in a simple textbook.

Level 3: Students at this level have mastered all the skills and objectives described for the Pre-literacy level, Level 1 and Level 2. At Level 3 students will extend their literacy abilities. They will learn to fill out all kinds of forms (including a medical history form and an employment application), use phone books and newspapers to get information, open and use a checking account, use and understand maps to give and follow directions, and even write short notes. When this level is mastered, the student should feel comfortable using a textbook.

G. USING THE GUIDELINE

As the title suggests, this Guideline is designed to guide the teacher in presenting and teaching literacy skills to adult learners in the context of an ESL class. In other words, it is not written as step-by-step procedures which must be followed to achieve "success." Each page of the core curriculum provides the teacher with well-defined literacy objectives and suggested materials and procedures for teaching those objectives. However, it is up to the individual teacher to decide when to introduce particular objectives and how best to teach them. To use this Guideline most effectively, however, the teacher should keep in mind the following:

- Always be sure that the students have oral/aural control over the material before introducing the literacy objective. In other words, integrate the literacy objectives into the ESL class; do not attempt to teach oral and written meanings at the same time. Literacy objectives should be taught only after the students can understand the material (or topic) aurally.
- Always stick to the objective. The literacy objectives have been carefully defined so that it is clear what is to be taught. In turn, it will then be clear to the students what is to be learned. In other words, do not go off on tangents, which will confuse students. The teacher will discover that the more precise the objective, the easier it is to teach it and evaluate whether or not it has been learned.
- Never think that the curriculum must be followed page by page, or that every single objective must be taught. The curriculum is written in terms of competency-based objectives which are not necessarily ordered. The teacher must decide when and what to teach, based on the needs and desires of the individual students.
- Always plan the literacy lesson in advance so that all the materials and texts needed to teach and reinforce particular objectives are on hand when needed. To plan in advance the teacher should carefully read the objective(s), consult the text(s), and consider the procedures. Good planning will avoid unnecessary confusion and misunderstanding on the part of the students.
- Do not expect immediate mastery of the objectives after they are introduced. The time needed for mastery will vary depending on the particular objective and the individual student. Repetition and re-cycling of material will be necessary.

CORE CURRICULUM

PRE-LITERACY

SKILLS:

SAME-DIFFERENT	16
DIRECTIONALITY	19
NUMBERS	20
ALPHABET	21

Note: The skills presented in this level represent a minimum of reading readiness work for the pre-literate learner. Pre-literate learners, those from cultures in which literacy is rare or non-existent, will need further work on concepts such as same-different and top-to-bottom and left-to-right directionality. For additional activities for working with such students, the teacher is referred to Entry to English or Breakthrough to Literacy. (Complete references are given in the bibliography.)

PRE-LITERACY

SKILL: SAME-DIFFERENT

- OBJECTIVES:
1. Students will understand the concepts of "same" and "different".
 2. Students will be able to identify shapes that are the same or different from other shapes.

TEXTS:

- A New Start Literacy Workbook 1, pp. 1-8
- A New Start Literacy Workbook 2, pp. 1-4
- Entry to English Book 2, pp. 1-3
- Passage to ESL Literacy, pp. 10-22

SUPPLEMENTAL MATERIALS: A number of objects that can be used to show the concept of the same or different, e.g. 2 pencils, 2 pens, 2 books, etc.
Teacher-made worksheets (see attachments for samples)

- PROCEDURES:
1. Specific Technique - Concept Same-Different
 - a. Teacher holds up 2 similar objects and says "same". Repeat this with other objects until students understand the concept.
 - b. Teacher holds up 2 different objects and says "different". Repeat this with other objects until the students understand the concept.
 2. Specific Technique - Identifying Same or Different Shapes (see pp. 17-18)

Instructions for Procedure 2
(Pre-Literacy Skill: Same-Different)

IDENTIFYING SAME OR DIFFERENT SHAPES

The pre-reading activities on the following sample worksheets are used to help the learner with visual discrimination. Note that the tasks become more difficult in each successive sample worksheet, forcing the learner to make finer distinctions. Once the learner can discriminate geometric shapes, letters of the alphabet are used to test discrimination. Please note that the objective is to teach "same-different"--not to teach the names of the letters of the alphabet. However, using the letters of the alphabet to practice visual discrimination passively introduces the letters which the students will soon learn.

The lines in these activities should be called "sentences" by the teacher or aide to acquaint the learner with the vocabulary which will be used in class later. It is not necessary to explain the concept of sentence at this time.

In working through these activities, the learner not only learns visual discrimination, but is also exposed to the concept of directionality. With the help of the teacher or aide, the learner will learn to "read" the symbols from left to right and from top to bottom. (Note: Make sure that the students are holding the worksheet right side up before you begin the activity!)

The directions for each sample worksheet change slightly, sometimes directing the students to put an X, others telling the students to CIRCLE or UNDERLINE, etc. Make sure the students follow the directions, since they are the most common directions given in filling out forms as well as in textbooks, and thus are a good preparation for the students.

Note that each worksheet asks for other information that adult learners need to know, such as NAME, ADDRESS, and TEL. NO. Not all pre-literate students will be able to fill in this information, but some will. If a learner shows interest in trying to fill in this information, the teacher or aide should help him/her. These requests for information passively introduce the learners to words to come (see Level 1, Topic 1).

A teacher or aide should lead these worksheet activities at the beginning until the learners are sure what is required of them. An overhead projector could be useful in this.

(These activities and worksheets are adapted from those designed by Judith Haynes, and are taken from "Teaching ESL to Illiterate Adults," a booklet produced in the series of Indochinese Refugee Education Guides, Adult Education Series #9, by the Center for Applied Linguistics. This booklet is currently available from the ERIC system. For complete reference, see the bibliography.)

PRE-LITERACY

SKILL: NUMBERS

- OBJECTIVES:
- *1. Students will be able to read and write independently 0-50.
 - *2. Students will be able to read and copy 51-100.

TEXTS:

Passage to ESL Literacy, pp. 2-4
A New Start Literacy Workbook 1, pp. 18-30
A New Start Student Book, pp. 4-5
Before Book Cng, pp. 1-4
Entry to English Book 2, pp. 25-31
Handwriting Activities Book 1 (included in unabridged edition of Guideline)

SUPPLEMENTAL MATERIALS: Number flash cards
Pencils
Anything available that can be counted, e.g. beans, paper clips, buttons
Game of Bingo (for oral number recognition)

- PROCEDURES:
1. General Technique - Numbers
 2. Specific Technique - Put pile of objects to be counted on students' desks and have students count them, group them by 5's, by 10's, etc., and write the numbers on paper.
 3. Specific Technique - Write a number on board and have students read it and then count out correct number of objects.

*These numbers should be taught in smaller sets (0-10, 10-20, etc.); this literacy activity should be taught only after the students have learned the concept of these numbers.

PRE-LITERACY

SKILL: ALPHABET

- OBJECTIVES:
1. Students will be able to read letters of alphabet both in sequence and out of sequence.
 2. Students will be able to copy and then write independently capital letters in manuscript.
 3. Students will be able to read, copy, and then write independently small letters in manuscript.
 4. Students will be able to sign their names (i.e. in cursive).

TEXTS:

Handwriting Activities Books 1-3 (included in unabridged edition of Guideline)

SUPPLEMENTAL MATERIALS: Alphabet flash cards
Lined writing paper (large-ruled)
Tactile letters
Tracing paper

- PROCEDURES:
1. General Technique - Alphabet
 2. Specific Technique - Write student's name in cursive on lined paper. Distribute tracing paper and have students practice tracing their signatures. Students should then practice copying their signatures without tracing paper.

Social Security Cards
Alien Registration Cards
Drivers Licenses
Magazine Subscription Forms
Teacher-made worksheets (see attached samples)

PROCEDURES:

1. General Technique - Sightwords
2. Specific Technique - Filling out forms (attached). Please note that the samples included here vary in difficulty. Some students will need to first practice copying on lined paper; others will be able to write on a single line. During this activity, the teacher or aide should be circulating to check the students' progress.
3. General Technique - Matching
Have students match the sightwords with specific information (e.g. city - Arlington, address - 1220 Wilson Blvd., etc.)
Use specific information that the students know.

LEVEL 1

TOPIC: CLASSROOM

- OBJECTIVES:
- *1. Students will learn to read simple questions words (e.g. who, what, where) and certain words for commands (e.g. listen, read, write).
 - *2. Students will learn to read the words for simple classroom objects.

TEXTS: Passage to ESL Literacy, pp. 79-84

SUPPLEMENTAL MATERIALS: Various classroom objects and materials, e.g. desk, chair, pencil, book, etc.
Labels and flash cards for classroom objects

- PROCEDURES:
- 1. General Technique - Sightwords
 - 2. General Technique - Matching
 - 3. Specific Technique - Play 20 Questions
 - a. All students have their own "pack" of sightword cards on desk top.
 - b. One student holds a classroom object/picture behind back.
 - c. Other students ask yes/no questions to identify.
 - d. Students hold up correct sight-word card when they know the answer.

PHONICS ITEM:

*The commands and classroom objects you choose to teach as sightwords should come from your classroom text, or a basic text that is used in your school. (Remember: Everything taught as a sightword should already have meaning and be in the students' aural/oral vocabulary.)

SUPPLEMENTAL MATERIALS: Large clock, watch
Calendar
Bean bag, ball, or other object for throwing

- PROCEDURES:
1. General Technique - Sightwords
 2. Specific Technique - Bean Bag Toss
 - a. Teacher says the name of a day of the week.
 - b. Teacher tosses bean bag to a student, who must then say the next day and hold up the appropriate sightword card.
 - c. That student tosses the beanbag to another student, etc., and follows instruction in "b".
 - d. Teacher may also follow this method for teaching the months.
 3. Specific Techniques - Calendar
Students will write in days of week on blank calendar form (attached).
 4. General Technique - Dictation
Have students write down (digital) clock time as you say it.

LEVEL 1

TOPIC: CLOTHING

OBJECTIVES: *1. Students will be able to read words for colors, sizes, and articles of clothing.
2. Students will match sightwords to actual articles of clothing (or visuals of clothing).

TEXTS: A New Start Literacy Workbook 1, pp. 83-92
A New Start Student Book, pp. 25-26
Before Book One, pp. 25-28

SUPPLEMENTAL MATERIALS: Clothing tags and labels for different sizes
Catalogues

PROCEDURES: 1. General Technique - Sightwords
2. General Technique - Matching
3. General Technique - Language Experience Story (see p. 31)
4. Specific Technique: Newspaper Ads
a. Hand out newspaper ads for clothing.
b. Students circle words from ads as teacher calls them out or writes them on the board.

PHONICS ITEM:

*Remember: This objective is to be taught only after the students have mastered these words orally/aurally; i.e. Do they understand them? Can they talk about or describe the different articles of clothing?

Instructions for Procedure 2
(Level 1: Clothing)

LEA: MY FRIEND

1. Pass out the picture of the girl (attached; however, you can use any picture).
2. Give the students colored crayons, pencils, or markers.
3. Review the names of the colors, using the crayons or markers themselves, or pieces of colored paper.
4. Have the students color the articles of clothing with colors of their choice.
5. Introduce or review the names for the articles of clothing, using the sightwords and the General Technique for teaching sightwords.
6. Have the students label the articles of clothing in the picture (students may need help).
7. Pass out the worksheet with numbered sentences (attached). Read the sentences about the picture out loud. Have the students repeat each sentence. (They will not be the same for all students, as students will not necessarily have chosen the same color for each article of clothing.)
8. Have students fill in the blanks. Use the blackboard or flashcards to indicate the correct words.
9. Pass out the "paragraph" worksheet (attached). Have the students fill in the cloze exercises.
10. Have the students copy the paragraph about their picture.

(This activity was developed by Tracy Kyriakeas.)

LEVEL 2

TOPIC: OCCUPATIONS

OBJECTIVES: 1. Students will be able to read the names of entry-level jobs/occupations as found in the want ads/classifieds.
2. Students will read and fill in information on a simple job application form.

TEXTS: English for Adult Competency Book 1, pp. 128-29, 135
English for Everyday Living Book 1, pp. 116-118, 120-122
English That Works Book 1, pp. 67-83

SUPPLEMENTAL MATERIALS: Visuals from English That Works Book 1 (for identifying jobs)
*Sample job application forms (samples attached)

PROCEDURES: 1. General Techniques - Sightwords
2. General Techniques - Matching
Students match words for jobs/occupations with visuals of the jobs.
3. Specific Techniques - Alphabetical Order
a. Write 4-5 jobs/occupations on board.
b. Give out sheet of simplified want ads (which are in alphabetical order).
c. Ask students to find and circle ads for particular occupations.
4. Specific Technique - Job Applications
Have students fill out simplified job applications. (See attached sample.)
Before doing this, be sure to teach the sightwords for occupations of students which are not otherwise covered in this lesson.

PHONICS ITEM:

*The sample forms attached will probably prove too difficult for most of the students. However, they should fill out what they can. The teacher should familiarize them with the unfamiliar parts.

LEVEL 3

TOPIC: INTERPRETING CHARTS AND MAPS/FOLLOWING DIRECTIONS, P. 2

3. Specific Technique - Maps
 - a. Teacher hands out simple street maps to groups of students and tapes copy of the same map to board. (An overhead can also be used.)
 - b. Using map at the front of the room, teacher demonstrates how to use cross streets to find a particular location, e.g. the school.
 - c. Teacher asks students to find other locations.

PHONICS ITEM:

LEVEL 3

TOPIC: INTERPRETING CHARTS AND MAPS/FOLLOWING DIRECTIONS

- OBJECTIVES:
1. Students will be able to read simple charts of age/temperature and show understanding by providing specific information when it is solicited.
 - *2. Students will be able to both give and receive written directions based on simple street maps.

TEXTS: English That Works Book 1, pp. 115-117, 122-123, 126-127
English for Adult Competency Book II, pp. 168-69
Lifelines Book 1, pp. 71-74

SUPPLEMENTAL MATERIALS: Teacher-made chart of the temperature for one year
Simplified maps of the local area

- PROCEDURES:
1. General Technique - Sightwords
 2. Specific Technique - Charts
 - a. Teacher should construct a graph or chart such as the one that follows.
 - b. Hand out copies to the class.
 - c. Using an overhead projector at the front of the room, have the students follow on their own charts as you explain the chart/graph.
 - d. Ask specific questions to individual students to check comprehension.

Example of Chart for Monthly Temperature

*Note: This objective assumes that the student can, of course, use a street map to follow oral directions.

Rates

This page gives rates for calls within Virginia which are in C&P's nearby long distance serving area.

Lowest rates — dial-direct one-minute rates

Dial-direct calls are those completed from a residence or business telephone without Operator assistance.

Dial-direct rates also apply on calls placed with an Operator from a residence or business phone where dial-direct facilities are not available.

On dial-direct calls you pay only for the minutes you talk. The initial rate period is one minute anytime of day or night.

Additional savings apply evenings/holidays, nights and weekends.

GENERAL TECHNIQUES

GENERAL TECHNIQUES

This section of the guideline contains step-by-step procedures for a number of general techniques which are referred to in the core curriculum. These techniques may be useful for teaching certain objectives given in the curriculum. These techniques are only suggestions for teaching; texts and other activities and materials should be used as well.

General Technique: Alphabet

The following is a procedure for presenting the letters of the alphabet to the students for the first time. Use only one set of letters (i.e. small or capital) initially. The procedure can be repeated for the other set of letters.

1. Buy or make a set of alphabet flashcards.
2. Starting at the beginning of the alphabet, hold up the flashcard and say the name of the letter.
3. Students repeat the name of the letter.
4. Say the name of the letter two more times. Students repeat each time.
5. Place the flashcard on the chalkboard ledge so students can see it. If there is no ledge, pin or tape the card on or near the board (i.e. the front of the room).
6. Hold up the next letter and follow steps #2-5.
7. After presenting 4 or 5 letters this way, print the letters (in sequence) and have students identify the letter. If they have difficulty, help them until they can identify the letter without a prompt from you.
8. Continue with the next 4 or 5 letters in the same way until the entire alphabet has been presented in sequence.
9. Hold up flashcards one by one, in sequence.
10. Hold up flashcards in random order to see if students can identify all letters out of sequence. (This will be more difficult).

Note: It may not be possible to present all the letters of the alphabet in one class period. Even if you can, it will probably take the students longer than one class to learn the alphabet. To practice the alphabet you may wish to use one or all of the following activities.

- Place the flashcards, in sequence, on the chalkboard ledge. Say a letter, and ask a student to give it to you.
- Randomly distribute the flashcards to the class. Ask each student to hold up the card(s) he/she has, and identify it (them).

- Using the names of the letters of the alphabet, give the students a dictation exercise. (See General Technique: Dictation.)
- Write a short word (that students have in their oral vocabulary) on the board. Ask a student to identify the individual letters (i.e. spell the word). Repeat with other short words.
- Have student match small letters with capital letters.

As the students learn to identify the letters of the alphabet by name, they will be motivated to write them. Capitalize upon this motivation, by allowing them time to copy the letter at various points in the lesson. Help them to learn to write the letters correctly by providing them with lined worksheets showing the stroke order of each letter. While they are practicing (i.e. writing) the letters, circulate around the classroom to check their stroke order, and to help individual students.

General Technique: Numbers

The following is a step-by-step procedure for presenting number symbols for the first time. Present only small sets of numbers at one time (e.g. 1-10). Repeat the procedure for other sets of numbers.

1. Buy or make a set of number flashcards. To reinforce the meaning of the numbers, you may also wish to make a set of "domino" flashcards, consisting of a number of dots.
2. Beginning with the numbers 1-10, hold up the first flashcard and say the number. (You can hold up the "domino" card at the same time to reinforce the meaning of the number.)
3. Students repeat.
4. Say the number two more times. Students repeat each time.
5. Place the flashcard on the chalkboard ledge (or at the front of the room) so students can see it. Point to the flashcard and ask students to identify the number.
6. Repeat steps #2-5 for each number in sequence.
7. After all numbers (in the set) have been presented, ask students to read the numbers in sequence.
8. Then, hold up the flashcards in random order and have the students identify the numbers out of sequence.

To practice the numbers, you may wish to use one or all of the following activities:

- Have the students match the "domino" flashcards with the number flashcards.
- Place number flashcards on the blackboard ledge in random order. Say a number and ask a student to give it to you.
- Give the students a dictation of groups of numbers, both in and out of sequence. (See General Techniques: Dictation.)
- Have the students copy the numbers. It would be helpful to provide them with lined worksheets that indicate the stroke order for forming each number.

General Technique: Dictation

Dictation is essentially a writing activity. It is used to check students' comprehension as well as writing/spelling ability. The teacher says something aloud (e.g. a letter, number, word, or sentence) and the students write down what they hear. To give a dictation, follow these steps:

1. Ask the students to take out a piece of paper.
2. Tell the students to listen. Say the item (i.e. letter, number, word, or sentence).
3. Students write what they heard. (Leave time enough for them to write.)
4. Repeat the item.
5. Continue with the next item, repeating steps #2-4. (Remember to tell students to skip lines between items.)
6. After you have dictated all the items in the activity, go back to the beginning and repeat each item once so that students can check their answers before the papers are collected (or corrected).

General Technique: Phonics

Phonics is an approach to teaching reading which emphasizes the sound-letter correspondence in words. Therefore, it is only useful to teach students to "sound out" letters which consistently have the same sound. In other words, the vowel letters, which can have a variety of sound values, do not necessarily lend themselves to a phonics approach. Thus, it is recommended that you begin phonics instruction with consonants which have a consistent sound value in initial position. For example, m, n, p, b, s, t all have a consistent sound value in initial position. Of course, if your students find phonics instruction useful, it can be used for "sounding out" letters in medial and final position as well.

There are a variety of ways to teach phonics. One way to teach phonics is outlined in a step-by-step procedure below.

1. Hold up a letter flashcard for the sound to be learned, and ask students to identify it by name. OR you may identify the letter by saying, "This is the letter m".
2. Then write the letter on the board and say again, "This is the letter m".
3. Hold up a visual of a "key" word which begins with that letter. The "key" word should be a word known by the students. For example, hold up a picture of a man, and say "This is a man".
4. Students look at the visual and repeat the "key" sentence/word after the teacher. This is done three times.
5. Then point to the letter on the board again, and say, "This is the letter m".
6. Then say: "The sound of the letter m is /m/ (or mmm) as in man".
7. Students listen and repeat.
8. Say a number of "key" words that begin with m, as you point to the letter on the board. For example, man, mop, miss, much. Be sure to use only words which are already known to the students.
9. Students listen and repeat as teacher models each word separately. This is done three times.

General Technique: Phonics (continued)

10. Ask students for words they know that begin with the sound of the letter m.
11. Write the words on the board, underlining the m.
12. Then tape the visual of the man on the board and write the word beneath it. Point to the word, say it, and underline the m.
13. Check that the students know the difference between the name of the letter and the sound of the letter by asking the questions: "What is the name of the letter?" "What is the sound of the letter?"

To practice sound-letter correspondences, you may want to use one or all of the following activities.

- Give each student a "flashcard" (or index card) with the letter that was introduced. Say a series of words (all should be a part of the students spoken vocabulary, if possible). Every time the students hear a word beginning with the sound they just learned, they hold up the card.
- Ask students to match letters (sounds) to visuals of words that begin with that sound.
- Have students keep a "log" of key words that begin with a particular letter/sound. For example, one page is devoted to m, another is for n, etc.
- Select a "word family" that appears in a topic you are teaching. For example, right when you are teaching directions. Write right on the board. Using the consonants that students have learned to "sound out," make different words and have the students read them.

Example: right
 sight
 light
 tight
 fight

General Technique: Sightwords

Sightwords are words which students have in their spoken vocabulary, but which have not yet been presented visually. Sightwords, as the name implies, are meant to be recognized on sight. Therefore, you must not overload the students with too many sightwords at once. Since the sightwords already have meaning (in spoken English) for the students, it is best to capitalize on that meaning as an aid to memory. There are various ways to present sightwords; one way is outlined in a step-by-step procedure below.

1. Say the sightword in the context of a meaningful sentence, or "key" sentence, if possible. (For example, if you are teaching what, you may say "What is your name?")
2. Students repeat the sentence.
3. Hold up a flashcard (large enough for the students to see) with the sightword on it, and say the word.
4. Students repeat. This is done two more times.
5. Hold up the card, and ask individual students to "read" the word.
6. Write the key sentence on the board, underlining the sightword.
7. Read the sentence aloud.
8. Students repeat. This is done two more times.
9. Point to the sightword, and say it aloud.
10. Students repeat.
11. Ask individual students to "read" the sentence, OR the sightword. (Indicate which one by pointing.)
12. Place the sightword card on the chalkboard ledge, or elsewhere at the front of the room.
13. Repeat steps #1-12 with other sightwords.
14. After all sightwords in that day's lesson have been introduced, call out the words individually in random order, and have a student choose the correct flashcard and give it to you.

General Technique: Sightwords (continued)

To practice sightwords you may wish to use one or all of the following activities:

- Give each student a set of sightword cards. (A set consists of the words taught that day.) Say a word and have students hold up the correct card.
- Write all "key" sentences on the board. Say a sightword, and have a student come up to the board and circle the correct word.
- Give students a worksheet with all the "key" sentences, but with a blank in the place of the sightword. Write all the sightwords on the board. Now say each "key" sentence (complete) aloud. Students must write/copy the correct sightword in the blank.
- Have students match sightwords with visuals. (This activity can only be done for sightwords whose meanings are easily depictable. e.g. a chair.)
- Have students copy the sightwords from personal sets of flashcards into their notebooks.
- Give the students a dictation, using the sightwords as the items. (See General Technique: Dictation.)

General Technique: Matching

Matching activities are used to practice students' understanding of relationships, all kinds of relationships. Some types of matching activities are:

- Matching words with pictures (visuals).
- Matching letters with pictures whose words begin with that letter.
- Matching items with categories (e.g. dress--clothing; milk--dairy)

Matching activities may be done individually, using worksheets, or they may be done as a class activity, using flashcards, pictures, etc.

General Technique: Language Experience Approach (Modified)

The language experience approach consists of developing a language experience story from the shared experience of the students. Language experience stories constitute a method for teaching reading to native English speakers, but it can be adapted for use with non-native English speakers as well. The basic premise of a language experience story is simple: Since the story is generated from the students (i.e. using the students' own words/vocabulary), and it is a story of their own real-life experience, the students not only will be motivated to read the story, but will also be capable of reading the story.

One way of presenting and using a language experience story in the classroom is outlined for you in a step-by-step procedure below. Please note that for maximum effect, it may take more than one class period to do this activity.

DAY 1

1. Choose a topic from a shared class experience (e.g. a field trip, a birthday celebrated in class, etc.) OR better yet, have the students choose the topic.
2. Encourage the students to tell the story. You may use "prompting" questions such as: "What did we do yesterday?" "Then what happened?" etc.

(Although a language experience story is traditionally done individually, i.e. each student tells his/her own story, it is usually too time-consuming in most classes. Therefore, in this version we are developing a "whole class" story. To maximize participation, go around the room, calling on each student to contribute to the story.)

3. Write down what each student says on the blackboard, or on a large pad of butcher paper at the front of the room. You may make corrections, especially structural ones, but take care to use the students' vocabulary, and not your own.
4. When the story is finished (it may consist of only 3-4 sentences), read the entire story to the class. Point to each word as you read; precision in pointing is important.
5. Re-read the first sentence, pointing to the words.

General Technique: Language Experience Approach (continued)

6. Ask a student to read that sentence, as you point to the words.
7. Repeat steps 5-6 with each sentence, until the entire story has been read.
8. Pick out the meaningful words in the story, or words that are relevant to the topic you are teaching. Underline them.
9. Read the underlined words as you point to them. Have the students look, listen, and repeat after each one.
10. Take the story home, type or write it up, and duplicate a copy for each student. Also, make sightword flashcards with the meaningful words from the story.

DAY 2

1. Teach sightwords from the story. (See General Technique: Sightwords)
2. Distribute copies of the story to each student.
3. Read the story aloud as the students follow along.
4. Ask individual students to read the story.
5. Ask students to copy the story.

To practice and reinforce the language experience story, you may wish to use one or all of the following activities.

- Distribute individual sets of sightwords from the story to all the students. (You may use 3x5 cards.) Write a sentence from the story on the board, leaving a blank in place of a sightword. Have students "fill in the blank" by holding up the appropriate sightword card. Repeat with other sentences from the story.
- Hold up a sightword flashcard and have students circle that word on their own copies of the story. (This is a type of matching activity.)
- A variation of the above activity: Say a sightword out loud, and have students circle the word on their own copies of the story.

- Make sentence strips (on large strips of paper or cardboard) for each sentence of the story. Use these strips as "flashcards". Read each sentence in sequence, and have the students repeat after each one. Then read each sentence out of sequence, and have the students repeat after each one. Then hold up each strip and ask the students to arrange the strips in proper sequence.
- Have the students buy a binder or folder in which to keep the story. (This may be a typed copy or one written in their own hand.) As more language experience stories are added, this binder or folder will constitute a "book" of materials that the student will really be able to read!

General Technique: Cloze (modified)

Cloze is a technique used in language teaching to check a student's reading proficiency; more recently it has been used to test a student's overall, or global, language proficiency. In a true cloze exercise, every Nth word (for example, every 5th word) is deleted from a reading passage, and the student is required to supply a correct word (or even the exact word) according to the context. However, in many lower-level ESL classes, modified cloze exercises are used for "fill-in-the-blank" activities. For example, only prepositions may be deleted, or only modal verbs. For the purposes of the literacy class, a cloze exercise may be constructed to practice and check sightwords that have been introduced.

A step-by-step procedure for constructing a cloze exercise for literacy students follows.

1. Choose a passage or sentence that is familiar to the students. This means that it is not only under oral control, but that they have seen it before (e.g. from a textbook, from class worksheets, from signs, from a language experience story, etc.).
2. Delete the sightwords that are being practiced, leaving blanks in their places.
3. Provide a list of sightwords that fit in the blanks. Include a couple of extra words as distractors, if you wish. (A much more difficult and challenging version is not to supply the sightwords at all. Do this only if the students can handle it.)
4. Ask the students to write the correct words in the appropriate blanks.

Note: This exercise may be put on worksheets and distributed to the class for students to work on independently. An alternative is to put the exercise on the blackboard and make it a class activity. In this case, ask individuals to come to the board and write the word in the blank.

General Technique: Content Questions

This is a technique to present and check comprehension of any written "text". The text may consist of a reading passage, a form, a schedule, a written dialogue, etc.

1. Read the "text" aloud as students listen.
2. Leave time for students to look at the text and "read" it to themselves.
3. Read the "text" aloud again as students follow along. As you read, stop periodically to ask students questions about the text. Questions may be asked about the meaning of words, general concepts, etc.
4. When the reading and questioning is finished, ask the questions again for the class to respond as a whole.
5. Direct students having difficulty to the particular part of the "text" that contains the answer.

ASSESSING ESL LITERACY*

ESL Literacy students offer special challenges for testers, because traditional methods of written testing cannot be used and oral testing alone does not reveal needed information. Some means of assessing literacy skills at intake are suggested below.

The most important information is probably to be found on personal information sheets. If these are completed by a bilingual counselor, they should contain information regarding:

- 1) educational level in the native language,
- 2) work experience,
- 3) previous specialized training,
- 4) previous ESL language and literacy skills training.

Intake testing should begin with an informal, individual oral interview in which the skills being tested increase in difficulty. Testing should be discontinued when the student becomes frustrated and unable to complete the tasks. Give an easy question or two to round out the oral test. Keep in mind that the student is under stress, and that all testing must be done in a friendly, relaxed manner.

During the oral interview, the tester can do some or all of the following as a literacy component:

1. Give the student a book upside down and check left-to-right directionality by requesting that the student open it.
2. If that task is successfully completed, the tester can check the student's knowledge of numbers by requesting s/he turn to a specific page.
3. Another test of literacy is to give the student a pencil and take note of how it is held.
4. Request that the student write his/her name or some other piece of personal information, and watch for any labored writing technique.

*This section is adapted from An ESL Literacy Resource Guide Jeffrey Bright, et. al., pp. 42-5, which was adapted and expanded from Cheryl Jibodh and Donna Meyer "Testing for ESL Literacy."

5. To check the student's decoding skills, isolate either a word or a letter from a page of writing and request that it be identified. Then write the letter a and say "a". Have the student repeat. Add m, p, t, or d in front of the a and ask the student to read the word. Watch the student's lip movement to see if s/he is at least trying to produce the word.
6. Dictation is another method by which literacy can be tested. Point to an object in the room (pencil, book, paper, table), say the name of the object, and have the student write it down. Spell the word if necessary. A more advanced form of this method would be to dictate a simple sentence in the past or present progressive tense. Have the student write it. Another method is to have the student attempt to fill out a form. These activities (dictation and form filling-out) should be only done with students who can at least write some English.

The following types of information may also help to determine the literacy level of ESL learners, and should not be overlooked:

- referrals from bilingual social workers or public aid,
- self-reports from the students themselves,
- reports from other students.

ESL Literacy Tests

1. The Ann and Ben Listening Test, developed for the Oregon Indochinese Refugee Vocational ESL Program, tests listening comprehension, identification of pictures corresponding to visual cues, and visual discrimination of pre-literate students. The results discriminate several levels of listening comprehension ability. It can be easily administered to a group by one teacher/ tester. Copies are $2.00 each, prepaid, from ESL Clearinghouse, Department of Adult Education, Oregon State University, Corvallis, OR 93331.
2. The HELP Test, The Henderson-Moriarty ESL/Literacy Placement Test by Cindy Henderson and Pia Moriarty, is designed to be administered individually to adult learners of English as a Second Language who have minimal or no oral English skills and who fall into one of the following categories:
 - (1) no reading or writing skills in any language,
 - (2) minimal reading and writing skills in the native language (generally, less than 4 years of formal schooling),
 - (3) reading and writing skills in a language that does not use the Roman alphabet.

The HELP Test has three components:

1. Intake information/first language assessment,
2. Oral English assessment (including reading and manipulative skills),
3. Written English assessment (including reading skills).

A flip chart format and functional reading skills (calendar, clock, appointments) make it easy to use and well-suited for ESL literacy learners. Answer sheets and plenty of supplies are included. This test is available for $9.95 from The Alemany Press, P.O. Box 5265, San Francisco, CA 94101.

3. A Literacy Placement Test was developed by Don Ranard for the Fairfax County Virginia Adult ESL Program and revised by the ESL staff of Chesterfield County, Virginia. This simple placement test is an objective test which is designed to give the ESL instructor an idea of the degree of English literacy a student may have. This test is reproduced on pp. 86-88.

4. Student reads and copies.

1. He is a student. _____

2. They eat rice. _____

3. I go by bus. _____

4. I live in the U.S. _____

5. This is my book. _____

5. Student reads aloud.

Tom is a student. He studies English. He studies every day. He studies in the morning. He studies from 9:00 to 12:00. He goes home after class. He goes home by bus.

A LITERACY PLACEMENT TEST, P. 3

6. For the student: Read the following paragraph silently and write answers to the questions in complete sentences.

The alarm clock rang. It was seven o'clock. Ann Jones jumped out of bed quickly. Then she washed her face and dressed. She was always late, so she did not have time for breakfast. She ran all the way to the bus stop and got there just in time to catch the bus. Ann never eats anything in the morning. She always says to her friends at school: "It's nice to have breakfast in the morning, but it's nicer to be in bed!"

1. What time did Ann Jones get up?
2. Was she early, or was she late?
3. Did she have time for breakfast?
4. Did she run all the way to the bus stop, or did she walk part of the way?
5. Did she just catch the bus, or did she miss the bus?
6. Does Ann Jones ever eat breakfast in the morning?
7. Does she prefer to have breakfast or to lie in bed?

BIBLIOGRAPHY FOR ADULT ESL LITERACY

This bibliography is intended to be a starting place for teachers who wish to learn more about teaching beginning literacy skills to adult ESL students. It is by no means complete.

This bibliography consists of three sections:

- I. Teacher Resources
- II. Classroom Resources
- III. National Literacy Organizations

To locate items referred to in this bibliography, the following information may be useful: Commercially published materials may be purchased from the publishers. The addresses of commercial publishers of material included here can be found at the end of this Bibliography. Articles in journals can be located in a local university library. Documents with an ED number can be read on microfiche or in institutions with an ERIC collection, or may be ordered from: ERIC Document Reproduction Service, P.O. Box 190, Arlington, VA 22210. (You need to have the ED number to order the document.) Addresses for obtaining other documents are given within the bibliographic entry itself.

- This is a workbook which gives practice in word matching. The first 22 pages contain word discrimination activities, and are recommended for ESL students. (The last 14 pages involve discriminating sentence sequences, and are not recommended for ESL students, since most ESL literacy students will not be able to read the sentences.)
