ABSTRACT

The Supplemental Loans for Students (SLS) program provides market-rate loans to postsecondary students. This report presents information on SLS loan volume and default data for the 10 largest SLS lenders from nine guaranty agencies, for fiscal years 1987, 1988, and 1989. Data for both proprietary and nonproprietary schools and for both freshmen and nonfreshmen students are included. Findings show that the nine guaranty agencies' 10 largest lenders loaned a cumulative total of about $2.5 billion--of the $4.8 billion in SLS loans made by all lenders--during the 3-year period. The lenders' loan defaults amounted to $250 million during fiscal years 1987 through 1989. The report also includes a list of nine related General Accounting Office products. (JDD)

This report responds to your request for information on lenders participating in the Supplemental Loans for Students (SLS) program. This program provides market-rate loans to postsecondary students in addition to, or in lieu of, other financial aid, such as Stafford loans (formerly called guaranteed student loans) and Pell grants. Specifically, you requested SLS loan volume and default data for the 10 largest SLS lenders from each of the nine guaranty agencies¹ we reported on previously.² You asked us to provide, for each lender, data on the volume of loans made to students attending proprietary (trade) schools and other postsecondary education institutions, as well as information on the extent of borrowing by freshmen as compared with students in their second or subsequent years of schooling. In addition, you wanted to know the amount of SLS defaulted loans.

On December 14 and 21, 1989, we briefed your offices on the preliminary results of our analysis. This fact sheet summarizes the information provided.

Background

Loans under the SLS program are made by lenders, such as banks, credit unions, or savings and loan associations. Before students can receive an SLS loan, their schools must first determine their eligibility for a Stafford loan or Pell grant or both. These programs have more stringent eligibility requirements than the SLS program. If students are eligible for aid from either or both of these programs, they should first receive that assistance, which may reduce the amount they can borrow under the SLS program.

Under the SLS program, graduate and certain undergraduate students—generally those responsible for their own financial support—may borrow up to $4,000 per year, to a maximum of $20,000. Borrowers are eligible for SLS loans regardless of their income or assets, in comparison with Stafford loans and Pell grants, which are based on a borrower's financial needs and resources.

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 (Public Law 101-239) made several changes to the SLS loan program that generally became effective on January 1, 1990. For example, beginning on January 1, 1990, no SLS loans can be made to undergraduate students (except those already enrolled and receiving loans on the date of enactment of the act) attending schools that have default rates—as determined by the Department of Education—in excess of 30 percent.

SLS loans have variable interest rates, adjusted annually to take into account changes in Department of Treasury borrowing rates. For the 1989-90 award year, the interest rate was 12 percent. Repayment of these loans must generally begin within 60 days of the last loan disbursement for each year a loan is received.

The annual volume of new SLS loans was $711 million in fiscal year 1987, $2 billion in fiscal year 1988, and $2.1 billion in fiscal year 1989, resulting in a total of $4.8 billion during the 3 years.

Objective, Scope, and Methodology

In discussions with your offices we agreed to obtain the requested information for fiscal years 1987, 1988, and 1989 for the 10 largest SLS lenders from the nine guaranty agencies that we previously reported on in October 1989. Eight of the nine agencies provided actual data for each fiscal year. The California Student Aid Commission, however, provided actual data through June 30, 1989, and estimated data for the remainder of fiscal year 1989. We did not verify the accuracy of the data submitted by the guaranty agencies.

Defaults are listed by the lender originating the loan even though that lender may not have held the loan at the time of default. The lender may have sold the loan to another financial institution prior to default. In addition, the lenders holding the loans may have exercised proper care in servicing them prior to default. As such, loans that went into default do not indicate that lenders failed to adhere to any statutory or regulatory provision.

Seven agencies provided data on default claims they paid to the lenders during each of the 3 fiscal years listed by the year the claim was paid, rather than the year the loan was made. The Colorado and Nebraska agencies, however, provided default data based on the year that the loans were guaranteed. For example, the 1988 default data for these two agencies represent the loans they guaranteed in 1988, which have subsequently defaulted.

Our review of the data collected showed that six lenders (Bank of Horton, Citibank, First America Savings Bank, First Independent Trust Company, Mid-America Higher Education Loan Program, and Union Bank and Trust Company) with the same city and state address had their SLS loans guaranteed by more than one agency. For example, SLS loans made by the First Independent Trust Company were guaranteed by the California, Texas, and Higher Education Assistance Foundation agencies. We combined the loan volumes and default statistics of these lenders for summary purposes (see tables 1 and 2) in determining which lenders had the largest loan volumes and defaults.

Loan Volumes

The nine guaranty agencies' 10 largest lenders made a cumulative total of about $2.5 billion—of the $4.8 billion in SLS loans made by all lenders—during the 3-year period. The lender with the largest loan volume ($305 million) was the First Independent Trust Company, and the Dauphin Deposit Bank and Trust Company had the smallest volume ($429,368).

Five lenders accounted for about 40 percent ($1 billion) of the SLS loans made by the 10 largest lenders for the nine agencies. (See table 1.)

Table 1: Five Largest Originating Lenders of SLS Loans (Fiscal Years 1987-89)

Lender	Loan volume
First Independent Trust Company	$304,678,302
Bank of Horton	237,941,064
Norwest Bank of South Dakota	167,079,173
Citibank	163,928,225
Bank of America	126,345,161
Total	$999,971,925

Appendixes I and II present the amount of loans made by the 10 largest lenders for the nine guaranty agencies to students attending proprietary and nonproprietary schools and to freshmen and nonfreshmen students, respectively.

Default Volumes

The nine agencies' 10 largest SLS lenders had a cumulative total of about $250 million in loan defaults during fiscal years 1987 through 1989. The five lenders with the largest amount of defaulted loans had an aggregate of almost $150 million in defaults, about 60 percent of the total, over the 3-year period. These lenders are listed in table 2.

Table 2: Five Largest Originating Lenders With the Largest Amount of Defaulted SLS Loans (Fiscal Years 1987-89)

Bank of Horton	$66,829,820

Citibank	15,547,599
Total	$149,802,749

Appendixes III and IV show the amount of defaulted SLS loans for the nine guaranty agencies' largest 10 lenders. The information is presented for students who attended proprietary and nonproprietary schools and those who were freshmen and nonfreshmen students, respectively.
