ABSTRACT

The North Carolina End-of-Course Testing Program was established to provide student, school, and school system information about achievement in high school courses. This report presents the results of the 1988-1989 U.S. History End-of-Course Test. Four forms of the test were administered within each classroom. Each form consisted of a core test of 60 common items, and an additional 40 items. Core scores from this 1989 test were compared with the previous year's scores (the first year the U.S. History Test was given). Students scored an average of 70% correct on the core test, an increase from the first year. Males continued to score higher than females, and white students made slightly larger gains than other ethnic groups. Children of parents educated beyond high school scored higher than others. There was some variance in scores by educational region. Average scores for school systems ranged from 32.8 to 46.7. Statewide, 73 students achieved a perfect score, and less than three percent missed no more than three test questions. Achievement across all goals appears to be consistent, indicating that teachers are covering all major periods of history and are not concentrating on a few areas at the expense of others. (AS)

FOREWORD

U.S. History is one of the requirements for graduation from high school in North Carolina. Student performance was first assessed by the Department of Public Instruction in the 1987-88 school year. It is currently the only high school social studies course tested in the End-of-Course Testing Program, and therefore performance on the U.S. History Test is an important indicator of social studies achievement in North Carolina high schools. Statewide, the average U.S. History score increased by 2.1 points since the initial administration last year. If the gain in achievement were interpreted on a letter grade scale, the increase would be close to half of a letter grade.

The End-of-Course Testing Program was established in 1985-86 to provide comparative information about student performance and curricular information about school and school system performance on the goals and objectives outlined in the Standard Course of Study and the Teacher Handbook. By assessing student achievement in this manner, state and local educators can determine the degree to which students are meeting the expectations set forth in the Standard Course of Study.

ABSTRACT

The North Carolina End-of-Course Testing Program was established to provide student, school, and school system information about achievement in high school courses. The first Algebra I End-of-Course Test was administered in 1985-86. Algebra II and Biology were added to the testing program in 1986-87 and U.S. History was added in 1987-88. Geometry and Chemistry were added in 1988-89. Other high school courses will be added in future years.

Highlights of the 1988-89 U.S. History results are as follows:

- The average score on the 60-item core test was 42.0 or 70.0 percent correct, a gain of 2.1 raw score points over the 1987-88 average. On a letter grade scale, the increase would be close to half of a letter grade.
- Average scores differed by sex, parental education, ethnic group, grade level in school, and anticipated final course grade.
- Males scored 1.3 points higher than females, but females narrowed the gap from the previous year.
- Gains were made by all ethnic groups, with white students making slightly larger gains than any other ethnic group.
- On average, students whose parents were educated beyond high school scored 4.8 to 8.6 points higher than students with less educated parents.
- Average scores varied by educational region, with the Southeast, Central, North Central, Northwest, and Western Regions scoring at or above the state average. The Northeast, South Central, and Southwest Regions scored below the state average.
- The range of average scores for school systems was 13.9 raw score points, from a low of 32.8 to a high of 46.7.
- Twenty school systems had average scores at or above 44.0 and six had average scores of 46.0 or above.
- Thirty-five school systems had average scores less than or equal to 40.0 and two had average scores below 34.0.
- Seventy-three of the 66,862 students who took the test achieved a perfect score, and 1,726 students missed no more than 3 test questions.
- Achievement across all goals appears to be consistent, indicating that teachers are covering all major periods of history and are not concentrating on a few areas at the expense of others.

Schools and school systems can identify strengths and weaknesses in their instructional programs by examining relative performance on the goals and objectives measured by the 360 items administered in 1987-88 and 1988-89.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Development of a comprehensive report of student and school system performance in Geometry requires the effort of many individuals. We would like to thank Andrew McEachern for his careful reading of the report to verify accuracy of numbers and statements; Kevin Kirby for producing the plots; George Stubblefield for producing many of the tables; and Faye Atkinson and Stephanie Moultrie for ensuring that the final copies were made, collated, and distributed.

Introduction

North Carolina has developed six end-of-course tests and is in the process of developing additional end-of-course tests within a number of subject areas. The purposes of the tests are twofold:

- 1. The tests provide information about each individual student's performance relative to that of other students in North Carolina.
- 2. The tests provide information about school and school system achievement on the subject area goals and objectives specified in the Standard Course of Study and the Teacher Handbook.

The development of all the end-of-course tests will require many years of effort. End-of-course tests are the final product of a process which includes: curriculum development and review; statewide curriculum surveys; test specification; the writing, review, and field-testing of a large pool of test items matched to objectives in the Teacher Handbook; test construction using selected items from the pool; and review, field-testing, and equating of different forms of each test. Several forms of each end-of-course test are developed so that the same tests are not administered in subsequent years.

Based on statewide enrollment patterns and recommendations made by two commissions on education, the subject areas chosen for initial test development were Biology and Algebra I. Item pools for these two courses were built in the spring of 1985. The results of the item development phase indicated that the Algebra I items were sufficient in quality and quantity to merit building end-of-course tests. Additional Biology items and an item bank for Algebra II were developed during the 1985-86 school year, including field-testing in selected sites in May of 1986. In addition to Algebra I, both Biology and Algebra II End-of-Course Tests were administered statewide at the end of the 1986-87 school year. Since then, tests in additional courses have been added to the End-of-Course Testing Program at the rate of one or two a year. The State Board of Education's schedule for development of end-of-course tests through the 1991-92 school year is displayed in a chart on the final page of this report.

Although end-of-course tests for different subject areas will vary in length, 110 minutes will be sufficient for administration of the multiple-choice tests in all subjects. The State Board of Education requires that end-of-course tests be administered during 110-minute periods within the last 10 days of school, and recommends that they be administered during final exam periods. In order for scores to be returned to school systems prior to the end of the school year, the proofs portion of the Geometry Test is administered during regular class periods in the spring. Also, when implemented in 1991-92, the English II essay test may be administered during the spring for scoring to occur prior to the end of the year.

The first North Carolina U.S. History End-of-Course Test was administered at the end of the 1987-88 school year. Four forms of the U.S. History Test were administered within each classroom. Each form consisted of 60 common items (the core test) and 40 variable items. On one form the 40 variable items were new field test items intended for future use. In 1988-89, three additional forms were administered, including a new, statistically equivalent core test. Average core scores at the initial administration of the test in 1988 provide a baseline with which to compare subsequent performance. Statewide performance on the combined set of 360 items administered in 1988 and 1989 provides a standard to which school and school system achievement of goals and objectives can be compared.

Characteristics of U.S. History Students

Other North Carolina testing programs assess achievement in basic subject areas of an entire cohort or class of students. End-of-course assessments are different in two ways. First, some of the courses are offered to students at different grade levels. Second, some courses are not required of all students; the students who do take the courses are a subgroup of the total student population.

Table 1 compares certain characteristics of U.S. History students with the population of all enrolled students. The top portion of the table provides the distribution of U.S. History students at various grade levels compared with the average daily membership in those grades. U.S. History is a required course for graduation which typically is taken in the eleventh grade. Approximately 87.2 percent of the 66,862 students who took the U.S. History test were in the eleventh grade. The 9.1 percent of U.S. History students who are in the twelfth grade are primarily transfer students or students repeating the course.

The second section of Table 1 compares the ethnic composition of U.S. History classes with the ethnic composition of K-12 pupil membership. The ethnic distribution in U.S. History is similar to the ethnic distribution in overall student membership. Finally, Table 1 compares parental education levels of U.S. History students with parental education levels of students in the eighth grade statewide.²

²Teachers recorded education level of the most educated parent of eighth-grade students taking the California Achievement Tests in 1988-89. U.S.History students recorded education level of their most educated parent.

Student Performance on the Core Test

Summary scores for the 1989 core test are presented in Table 2. In 1989, the average score for the 66,862 students taking the core test was 42.0, or 70.0 percent correct. This score is 2.1 raw score points higher than the average score at the initial administration in 1988. Gain, in achievement were made by males and females, all ethnic groups, and by students with all parental education levels. See the Appendix for the 1988 and 1989 state percentile distribution.

Group achievement on tests, whether for schools, school systems, or the state, is usually reported using summary numbers such as the average or median which indicate typical performance for the group. One number, whether it is the average or the median score, provides limited information about performance. Box and whisker plots are graphs which describe not only typical performance, but also the performance of most of the students by showing the spread of scores. Box and whisker plots allow the comparison of the high and low scores for different groups as well as the middle scores.

Figure 1 shows how to interpret the box and whisker plots using statewide U.S. History scores for 1989. The box represents the middle 50 percent of scores with the median represented by a horizontal line inside the box. An 'x' inside the box shows the location of the average (mean) score. The whiskers extend up to the 90th percentile and down to the 10th percentile. The entire figure shows the range of the middle 80 percent of scores. As can be seen in Figure 1, the middle 50 percent of U.S. History students answered between 36 and 49 (inclusive) items correctly. Approximately ten percent of the students scored above 53 and ten percent scored below 29.

Table 2 also shows average performance on the 60-item core test by sex, parental education, ethnic group, and grade in school. Figures 2 through 4 show the distributions of U.S. History scores by various groups using box and whisker plots.

Average performance for males was slightly higher than average performance for females, and the range of scores for females was slightly narrower than the range for males. On average, white students and 'other' students scored higher than American Indian students and black students. The average score and score distribution increased as parental education increased.

Anticipated Final Grades and Scores on the Core Test

U.S. History teachers were asked to record each student's anticipated final grade on each answer sheet after the test was administered. Final grades were recorded for 65,767 of the 66,862 U.S. History students. Table 3 gives the average scores for various grade groups on the core test and the percentages of students who were to receive the various grades for 1989. A consistent difference of 4.2 to 4.5 raw score points was observed between score averages for different anticipated final grades. This pattern is an indication of test validity in that the results parallel the grading practices of teachers. The average for 'C' students was similar to the statewide average for 1989, placing these students in the middle of the score distribution.

Table 3

Average 60-Item Core Scores by Anticipated Final Grade and Percentage of Students Receiving Each Grade*:
U.S.History End-of-Course Test: 1989

A	50.4	12.3
В	46.1	23.5
C	41.8	30.3
D	37.6	23.8
F	33.1	10.1

Box and whisker plots for the score distributions for each letter grade are displayed in Figure 5. The plot illustrates the spread of score points within letter grades and overlap in distributions across letter grades. For example, while the typical 'D' student scored well below the typical 'C' student, more than 25 percent of 'D' students received an above average core score. In addition, the range of scores decreases as grades increase from 'F' to 'A'.

Average Performance on the Curriculum Test

Table 4 shows statewide average performance on the 1989 180-item curriculum test and the 18 goals of the U.S. History curriculum. Performance on more objectives can be reported by combining average performance on the 180 items measured in 1988 and the 180 items measured in 1989 (see Table 5). Average scores for goals reported in Table 5 include items measured in both 1988 and 1989. Objectives are reported if measured by at least four items. Goal and objective scores yield important information about performance within specific areas in the curriculum. The average percentage correct of all items measured was 65.2.

The U.S. History curriculum is intended to be balanced so that at least half of instructional time is devoted to the twentieth century. The number of items in the core measuring each goal reflects this balance so that approximately 50 percent of the items measure Goals 1 through 12 and 50 percent measure Goals 13 through 18. Average performance for the first twelve goals is similar to that of the final six goals, an indication that instruction has been paced to reflect this balance.

Average performance was lowest (58.4 percent correct) on the 16 items which measured knowledge of exploration and discovery from the pre-Columbian period, but was greater than 60 percent correct on the three goals concerned with colonial and revolutionary America (Goals 2 through 4) and 79.1 percent for goal number 5 which is concerned with development of the constitution. The next two goals cover the late eighteenth century and the first half of the nineteenth century and focus on major trends, events, and problems of the "new nation" along with the development of both nationalism and sectionalism. Average performance on these two goals was 62.0 and 64.1 percent correct, respectively.

Goals 8 and 9 cover the overpowering of nationalism by sectionalism which resulted in the Civil War and the reaffirmation of the power of the national government by the end of the Civil War and reconstruction. Average performance scores were 68.1 and 67.2 respectively for these two goals. Instructional attention is turned to the industrial and business developments of the late 1800s and the settlement of the west in Goals 10 and 11. Goal 12 focuses on the late nineteenth century as a time of great social, political, and economic change and unrest. Average performance on these three goals was approximately 66 percent correct.

The first topic for the last half of the course is American foreign policy through World War I (Goal 13). Average performance on this goal was 66.0 percent, which is about the same as the average for all items. Average performance was 72.8 percent on Goal 14 in which students are taught about the "time between wars" as a period of isolationism, rapid social change, and both economic prosperity and despair. Lower average performance, 58.4 percent, occurred on Goal 15: "know the major causes, events, and results of World War II."

The final three goals cover trends and events since 1945. Performance was lower (60.9 percent correct) on the goal dealing with foreign policy (Goal 16). Average performance was above 65 percent on the final two goals covering social, economic, political and technological change since 1945.

Statewide performance across all U.S. History goals and objectives shows areas of strength and areas in which improvement is needed. However, given the broad scope of the U.S. History curriculum, average performance on the goals is consistent, indicating that in general, teachers are covering all major periods of history and are not concentrating on a few areas at the expense of others. As schools and school systems examine their own performance on these goals and objectives, they can identify patterns of strengths and weaknesses relative to statewide performance.

U.S. History Core and Goal Performance in Educational Regions and Public School Systems

Table 6 presents average performance on the 60-item core test, the 180-item curriculum test, and the 18 goals of U.S. History for the eight educational regions. Average core scores between educational regions differed by no more than 2.8 raw score points.

Average performance on the U.S. History test for the public school systems is listed in Table 7. School systems are arranged by educational region.

U.S. History Box and Whisker Plots of Core Scores for Educational Regions and Public School Systems

State Percentile Tables for 1988 and 1989

Tables 8 and 9 give summary statistics, the score distribution, and state percentiles for 1988 and 1989.
