ABSTRACT

This book is intended as a resource for teachers and curriculum developers who select textbooks for secondary English courses. It includes a compilation of 32 factual textbook reviews obtained from the application of review instrument, which was based on the California "Model Curriculum Standards: Grades Nine through Twelve, English Language Arts" and the "English-Language Arts Framework for California Public Schools: Kindergarten through Grade Twelve." The instrument described in the book was applied to selected English composition/grammar and reading/literature textbooks. The book suggests that the resulting reviews can be used by teachers as a screening device to reduce the number of books they review and pilot studies they conduct; thus educators will have more time to do in-depth reviews of two or three textbooks which appear to match their course requirements and their students' academic needs. The book also states that the review instrument can be adapted by districts to reflect their own English objectives and test results. Every review in the book includes two parts and a publisher's description (which appears in the Appendix)--a section which depicts the extent to which the emphasis on content and process is given to each of the topics in the textbooks reviewed, and a section which includes topics on content and processes which might be found only in teachers' editions. The book does not make assessments regarding the quality of the books reviewed, but rather provides information which teachers may find useful in making quality judgments and selecting specific textbooks for English programs. PREFACE

The message of this document is that factual information about English composition/grammar textbooks and reading/literature textbooks can be a useful resource to secondary teachers engaged in textbook selection. The textbook review that was conducted was based on the following resources: Model Curriculum Standards: Grades Nine Through Twelve, English-Language Arts and a draft of the English-Language Arts Framework for California Public Schools: Kindergarten Through Grade Twelve. The findings are factual in the sense that only the extent of coverage (in relation to the resources named above) was noted. There was no attempt to evaluate the quality of the material or its presentation. Nonetheless, this review will assist teachers by reducing the number of textbooks which require an in-depth evaluation.

A steering committee met in early 1987 to develop a factual review instrument, based on the resources named above. Trained textbook reviewers then applied the topics in the review instrument to selected English textbooks. The steering committee and the textbook reviewers shared a vision of how important textbook selection procedures are to a comprehensive secondary English program. We wish to pay special tribute to those two groups, which generously gave us the benefits of their professional knowledge, their energies, and their time. The individuals are named in the acknowledgments. We also wish to express our gratitude to the school districts that supported teacher participation in both groups by granting release time.

English is the second content area for which we have developed a review document. We have learned by doing. Your constructive suggestions are welcome. If you find the information in this publication helpful in selecting English composition/grammar or reading/literature textbooks, we would like to know. Please send your responses to the Office of Curriculum Framework and Textbook Development, California State Department of Education, P.O. Box 944272, Sacramento, CA 94244-2720.

INTRODUCTION

Secondary Textbook Review: English is a resource for teachers and curriculum developers who select textbooks for secondary English courses. This publication includes a compilation of 32 factual textbook reviews obtained from the application of a review instrument. The review instrument was based on the Model Curriculum Standards: Grades Nine Through Twelve, English-Language Arts and the English-Language Arts Framework for California Public Schools: Kindergarten Through Grade Twelve. This instrument was applied to selected English composition/grammar and reading/literature textbooks. The resulting reviews can be used by teachers as a screening device to reduce the number of books they review and pilot studies they conduct. Consequently, educators will have more time to do in-depth reviews of two or three textbooks which appear to match their course requirements and their students' academic needs. The review instrument can also be adapted by districts to reflect their own English objectives and test results. Textbooks not included in this document could also be reviewed by applying the instrument used for these reviews to other textbooks.

Textbooks That Were Reviewed

Thirty-two factual reviews of secondary English composition/grammar and reading/literature textbooks are compiled in this document. An informal survey of the 20 largest school districts in the state revealed the textbooks most used in classrooms. Five English composition/grammar textbooks and six reading/literature textbooks, top-ranked according to usage, were reviewed. This restriction was necessary because of limited funding. Consequently, this document does not include all of the English textbooks in use in California secondary classrooms.

Over 400 publishers nationwide received a copy of the survey, along with copies of the Model Curriculum Standards and a draft of the English-Language Arts Framework. The publishers were invited to review these publications and were then asked to nominate those textbooks that they believed best reflected the philosophy and practices explained in the Model Curriculum Standards and the English-Language Arts Framework. After the publishers' nominations had been studied, a decision was made to include some new materials not widely used in California classrooms at that time. Those textbooks were then included in the review process.

Each publisher provided students' and teachers' editions for grades nine and eleven. Targeting the focus to two specific grade levels was necessary because of limited funding.

How the Textbooks Were Reviewed

The Steering Committee developed a review instrument based on the Model Curriculum Standards and the English-Language Arts Framework. (For information on ordering these two publications, see pages 165 and 166.) Every review includes two parts and a publisher's description, which appears in the Appendix. This material is described in the paragraphs that follow.

Part I

This section provides two types of information about each textbook. The first depicts the extent to which the emphasis on content is given to each of the topics in the textbooks reviewed. The second depicts the extent to which the emphasis on process is given to each of the English topics. Topics for both content and process were extracted from the Model Curriculum Standards and the English-Language Arts Framework. In effect, the topics highlight the English core curriculum. For every specific topic, the "extent included" in each book is identified by applying the following definitions:

Substantially means that this aspect is represented by many examples.

Moderately means that this aspect is represented by occasional examples.

Present means that this aspect is represented by a single example.

Not present means that this aspect is not represented.

Part II

This section includes topics on content and processes which might be found only in teachers' editions.

Appendix

Each publisher's description in the Appendix contains three sections. In Section A, each publisher describes the textbooks being reviewed and the intended audiences for those books. Section B includes additional information about the literary works reviewed. Descriptions of teachers' editions and resource materials, as well as supplementary materials available for sale, are also found in this section. If the textbooks have abridged selections, the titles are listed in Section C.

Considerations in Using This Document

Teachers and others who are involved in textbook selection and who are using this document need to keep two considerations in mind. First, the intent of this review process is to present factual information about the English composition/grammar textbooks and reading/literature textbooks reviewed. It is not the intent of this process to make assessments regarding the quality of those books. Teachers are the ones who work with the course requirements and plan the instructional program, while taking into account students' motivation and interests, literary backgrounds, comprehension levels, and other significant factors that influence learning. Teachers study all of this information and more as they make quality judgments about specific textbooks.

Second, the same factual review instrument has been applied to both the English composition/grammar textbooks and to the reading/literature textbooks. Generally, the English composition/grammar books include parts of literary works, while many of the reading/literature books include some whole works. This review process does not differentiate between the two approaches.

As a final note, the educators and publishers who have invested their expertise and time in developing this document will feel that their efforts have been rewarded if teachers find this information useful in selecting textbooks for English programs.

INFORMATION FROM THE PUBLISHER

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

Grades nine and eleven

This literature-based composition series focuses on integrated language arts. The developers of the series are W. Ross Winterowd, who is the Bruce R. McElderry Professor of English at the University of Southern California; and Patricia Murray, Director of Composition at De Paul University in Chicago.

English: Writing and Skills is a writing and grammar program that is committed to students' success. The writing process at all grade levels is taught in Chapter One and is then applied to all modes of writing appropriate for each grade level. Prewriting, writing, and postwriting activities are provided.

The "Writing Section" includes cross-references to the "Grammar/Usage Section." Specific models are provided to assist students with these concepts. "Sentence Combining" lessons appear on tinted pages in the "Writing Section."

Literature is the cohesive force in English: Writing and Skills. Outstanding models selected from literature and an appropriate questioning strategy are used extensively in each chapter on writing. Models from literature are used in the "Grammar/Usage Section" as examples of good writing.

Listening, speaking, spelling, using the dictionary, developing vocabulary, and understanding the history of language are other skill areas presented in English: Writing and Skills. Teachers' support materials include an annotated teacher's edition, a teacher's resource binder, and computer software.

INFORMATION FROM THE PUBLISHER

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

Foundations for Learning: Language is an integrated curriculum that develops students' abilities and self-confidence in reading, writing, listening, speaking, and critical thinking. Literature is an integral element. Each textbook/thinkbook unifies selected readings, composition text, grammar text, and workbook in a manageable format. The curriculum, designed for a broad range of students' abilities, utilizes students' own experiences and resources and collaborative learning. Students start with language awareness and the ability to read and write narrative and description, advancing to exposition, analysis, and persuasion. Learning is cumulative. Students build their command of the reading and writing processes, unity and coherence, notetaking, summarizing, and research skills.

Grade nine

Language 1: Narrative and Description

Outcomes: Students develop narrative and descriptive responses to personal experiences, literature, and other sources.

Objectives: Students are able to understand language variety, spoken and written; to develop critical reading, recognition, and writing of effective narrative and description; and to acquire library reference skills.

Grade eleven

Language 3: Analysis

Outcomes: Students develop analytical responses to works of literature and various forms of expository text.

Objectives: Students are able to apply the reading and writing processes to literature and advanced exposition and to generalize from personal experience as a point of reference when they are analyzing and writing analytically.

Grades nine and eleven

The teacher's manual for each of the Foundations' books supports the role of the teacher as a professional. The manuals for Language 1 (ninth grade) and Language 3 (eleventh grade) are designed to help teachers think through the purpose of each chapter and plan lessons to achieve these objectives. Each reading, activity, and assignment is referenced and discussed in summary and in detail. In addition, manuals are a source for professional development. They provide the rationale for a particular approach and suggest supplemental ideas and materials. They also inform about research and theories in language learning, especially in composi-

Grades nine and eleven

Foundations for Learning: Language provides a total, systematic, and logically sequenced program, integrating instruction in listening, speaking, reading, and writing. No other book is required.

Teachers are encouraged to elaborate on and supplement the text. To facilitate this approach, Foundations provides for each grade level a Literature Guide: Supplementary Core and Extended Readings. The Literature Guide is based on suggestions for literature contained in Model Curriculum Standards: Grades Nine Through Twelve. The Literature Guide links core and extended readings to specific activities and assignments, providing these readings a curricular context and related speaking, listening, and writing activities. It also applies Foundations' methodology: reading process (prereading, reading, and rereading), active comprehension, experiential learning, collaborative learning, and development of conceptual knowledge—concepts applicable to any literary text.

INFORMATION FROM THE PUBLISHER

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

Grades nine and eleven

Glencoe English is a comprehensive and flexible program of composition, speech, and grammar. The language skills are presented in a balanced, developmental program that progresses in depth and maturity from year to year. The section on scope and sequence for grades nine through twelve in the front of the teacher's annotated edition outlines the progressive sophistication of the series. The textbook for each grade is intended for students reading at, or slightly below, that grade level.

Grade nine

The authors of Glencoe English for grade nine, Yvonne Kuhlman and Joyce Bartky, have had wide experience as English teachers in junior and senior high schools.

Grade eleven

The authors of Glencoe English for grade eleven are experienced as high school English teachers in the Bellevue, Washington, public schools. Donna M. Hughes has also been an English consultant and forensic director. Louise K. Lowry, now an assistant principal, was a former English department chairperson. Richard W. Clarke has taught English and speech at both high school and college levels.

Literature-Based Composition is a high school composition program based on selected literary works and designed to help students read literature with greater understanding of content, values, and style. Students use techniques from literary works to shape and express their own ideas and to learn to write more fluently and effectively. The authors, Helen C. Lodge and Richard W. Lid, are California educators with wide experience in teaching, writing, working with student teachers, and developing in-service staff development programs in composition.

The teacher's manual for Literature-Based Composition contains complete daily lesson plans, an answer section, and an introduction detailing the philosophy and instructional approach of this textbook. Four resource sections also appear: "Adapting Literature-Based Composition to a One-Semester Course," "Evaluating Composition," "Peer Editing and Revision," and "Integrating Grammar into Your Program."

3. Description of the teacher's resource materials

Grades nine and eleven

Each teacher's resource binder for grades nine and eleven contains additional materials correlated to the pupil's book for that grade level, including a complete working program, three separate sets of overhead transparencies with follow-up work sheets, 25 or more composition assignments for each composition chapter in Glencoe English, work sheets and evaluation checklists for grammar and speech, and a comprehensive guide to holistic evaluation. Also included are composition assignments (writing across the curriculum) geared toward disciplines and content areas other than English, lessons and work sheets on the history of the English language, and language and vocabulary development work sheets designed to meet the needs of limited-English-proficient students.

Grade eleven

For Literature-Based Composition see the response to item two.

4. Description of other supplementary textbooks or instructional materials available for sale

Grades nine and eleven

An activity book is available for each level to provide additional practice exercises in grammar, usage, mechanics, and composition for students who need to develop these skills.

A test booklet is available for each level as a convenience for teachers. The student's test booklet contains all the diagnostic pretests.

The Customized Test Base is an easy-to-use computer program that allows teachers to create customized tests in grammar, usage, and mechanics correlated with each student's textbook. The program prints out a test master ready to be reproduced for students' use and a teacher's copy, which includes answers and a cross-reference to the lesson being tested. This program is available for Apple II and IBM computers with 64K memory.

Grades nine and eleven

Literature-Based Composition is designed for a one-semester or one-year composition course. This textbook integrates literature and composition by using longer literary selections to teach specific techniques than appear in the Glencoe English textbook.

Effective Speech contains instruction in speech communication organized around its major functions in life: to inform, persuade, and entertain. Citizenship skills, interpersonal communication, and contest speaking are also covered. The program includes a teacher's resource binder with overhead transparencies.

INFORMATION FROM THE PUBLISHER

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

Grade nine

Adventures in Reading is a literature anthology for average students that is suitable to their level of maturity. First-rate authors provide a mixture of traditional and modern literary works. The textbook contains comprehensive instructional material providing extensive and systematic treatment of skills and knowledge about literature; introductions, notes, critical biographies, and discussion questions; instruction in close reading and writing about literature; vocabulary exercises; a glossary; and a guide to literary terms and techniques. The textbook contains four-color illustrations used for visual appeal and as aids to instruction.

Fannie Safier is formerly a teacher of English in the New York City schools. She has been editing and preparing textbook instructional material for nearly 20 years. She is currently Executive Editor of Secondary English for Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc.

Grade eleven

Adventures in American Literature, a literature anthology for average students, contains the same features as Adventures in Reading. The selections, however, are by American authors only and are arranged chronologically. Biographical data are more extensive than in the ninth grade textbook, and unit introductions contain both literary and historical information.

Francis Hodgins, Professor of English at the University of Illinois in Urbana, and Kenneth Silverman, Professor of English at New York University, are both specialists in American literature.

INFORMATION FROM THE PUBLISHER

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

Grades nine and eleven

The literature textbooks in this series are Cascade, for average ninth grade students, and Emblem, for average eleventh grade students. Both textbooks contain high-interest, appealing, teachable selections that allow for a range of students' maturity levels within each grade. All literature in Emblem is by American authors.

Students read selected fiction, poetry, drama, and nonfiction containing a balance of mystery, adventure, fantasy, fact, and real-life experiences. In both textbooks selections by classic and contemporary authors are organized according to theme.

"Close Up" (comprehension) questions, "Activities," and questions on literature skills, reading skills, and "Word Attack" follow the selections. Careful, systematic development of skills with examples and exercises are provided. Composition activities appear throughout the book and in a writing supplement that treats stages of the writing process. Each thematic unit ends with review quizzes, "Composition" activities, and "Before Going On," which contains a flexibility skill (e.g., skimming, scanning, or reading for a purpose) that the students apply to an essay that follows.

The reading specialist for both textbooks is Richard J. Smith, Professor of Curriculum and Instruction at the University of Wisconsin. The literature consultant is Max F. Schulz, Professor of English at the University of Southern California. Both textbooks have been widely class-tested and reviewed.

INFORMATION FROM THE PUBLISHER

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

Grade nine

Warriner's English Grammar and Composition, Third Course, Liberty Edition, is for average students. It presents writing as a recursive process, consisting of prewriting, writing, revising, proofreading, and writing a final version. These steps are made clear and manageable, and they are related to varied writing, from sentences and short paragraphs to longer compositions. The book helps students to incorporate the critical thinking skills of analysis, observation, classification, synthesis, evaluation, and application into composition. The grammar, usage, and mechanics sections help students understand the structure of the English language and the norms of its standard usage and to relate these concepts to specific writing situations. Chapters on spelling and vocabulary, study and reference tools, and speaking and listening are included.

Grade eleven

Warriner's English Grammar and Composition: Fifth Course, Liberty Edition, for average students, contains the same features as the Third Course. However, it treats several topics in greater depth, such as the research paper and persuasion, and introduces new material appropriate to eleventh grade students, such as writing critical reviews and taking college entrance examinations.

John E. Warriner taught English in junior and senior high schools and in college. He is the chief author of the English Grammar and Composition series.

INFORMATION FROM THE PUBLISHER

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

Grades nine and eleven

The Focus on Literature series is designed to increase students' understanding and appreciation of literature; to acquaint them with classic works of their literary heritage as well as with good contemporary writing; and to improve their skills in reading, thinking, discussing, and writing.

Without omitting the familiar classics of British and American literature, this series includes several excellent selections from Europe, Asia, South America, and Africa. Many of these pieces have rarely or never been anthologized, although they are considered classics in the literary traditions of their own countries.

A special composition program provides fine literature as models for student writing. Students develop their abilities in vocabulary, critical analysis, and discussion.

Editors for this series are Philip McFarland, Chairperson of the English Department at Concord Academy in Massachusetts; Francis Feagin, former English Teacher at Albany High School, Albany, Georgia; Samuel Hay, Chairperson of the Communication and Theater Arts Department at Morgan State University, Baltimore, Maryland; Stella Lui, Associate Professor of Education at Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan; Frank McLaughlin, Associate Professor at Fairleigh Dickinson University, Rutherford, New Jersey; Norma Wilson, English Department Chairperson at West High School, Torrance, California; and Marcella Johnson, Instructional Supervisor and Specialist in Communications for the Instructional Planning Division of the Los Angeles Unified School District.

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

Grades nine and eleven

The goals of Houghton Mifflin English: Grammar and Composition are to enhance students' understanding of the structure, function, and usage of the English language and to apply that understanding in writing and speaking; to develop the ability to use the writing process to write effectively and independently on a broad range of topics and for a variety of purposes and audiences; and to improve language-related skills.

The third and fifth courses are intended for ninth and eleventh grade students of average ability and above. Provisions have been made throughout the program, however, for adapting the material for students of varying abilities.

Authors for this series are Ann Cole Brown, Lecturer in English Composition and Literature at Northern Virginia Community College in Alexandria, Virginia; Jeffery Nilson, former Teacher of English at the Wixon Middle School, South Dennis, Massachusetts; Fran Weber Shaw, Assistant Professor of English and Coordinator of the Writing Center at the University of Connecticut, Stamford; Richard A. INFORMATION FROM THE PUBLISHER

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

Grades nine and eleven

Building English Skills is designed to teach students who are reading on or above grade level the skills needed to express ideas clearly: writing, thinking, and understanding of mechanics. The series teaches writing as a recursive process of thinking, rethinking, writing, and revising. It offers comprehensive coverage of grammar, usage, and mechanics and provides abundant practice exercises. Activities in composition and grammar are consistently interwoven to show students the practical application of grammar in writing. The series provides in-depth coverage of related communication skills, including speaking and listening, critical thinking, study and research, and life skills.

The authors of the series were the staff of the Writing Improvement Project, which was composed entirely of teachers and directed by Joy Littell, Editorial Director of McDougal, Littell & Company.

A 1989 edition is available for grades nine through twelve.

INFORMATION FROM THE PUBLISHER

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

The Art of Composition moves developmentally from simple writing structures and assignments to more advanced ones. Each chapter is organized as follows: a principle or skill to be developed, exercises to develop skills, a reading assignment, questions that stimulate discussion, writing assignments, prewriting questions, and self-evaluation exercises. Each lesson is structured to promote the application of the writing process. Each writing activity has "Before You Write" and "After You Write" procedures. "Readings for Writers" illustrates the principles and skills being developed.

Literary works include fiction and nonfiction from the eighteenth century to the present. Diverse selections represent a range of writers: men and women, famous and less well known, professionals and beginners.

INFORMATION FROM THE PUBLISHER

A. Publisher's Description of the Textbook and the Intended Audience

Grades nine and eleven

The Macmillan Literature Series consists of anthologies for teaching literature. Each level provides outstanding, high-quality literary selections that encourage students to read literature; motivational strategies to help students of all abilities to read, understand, and enjoy literature; features and questioning strands to develop thinking and writing processes; three levels of discussion questions and two kinds of composition assignments to challenge students of all abilities; and students' materials and teachers' aids to save time and energy.

George Kearns, General Adviser and Writer, is Director of the Expository Writing Project in the English Department of Rutgers University, New Jersey.

Grade nine

Understanding Literature, the grade nine textbook, continues to develop the study of literary types and techniques that build analytical skills needed for students to appreciate high-quality literature. This anthology offers an extensive number of short stories, nonfiction pieces, poems, two novels, and three one-act plays in addition to Romeo and Juliet.

Grade eleven

American Literature introduces students to a chronological study of major periods in history. An illustrated introduction and a time line begin each unit and place the works in an historical perspective. "The American Voice" helps students define major themes and concepts. The anthology also includes many short stories, poems, and essays as well as Our Town and The Red Badge of Courage.

PWR: Macmillan Literature Composition Software--The Prewriting-Writing-Revising Process, containing software for each grade, is an outgrowth of the process approach to writing practiced in the Macmillan Literature Series for grades seven through twelve; but the software can be used independently.

The two-disk package for each grade includes (1) a tutorial and separate word processor; and (2) programs for "Writing About Literature," "Creative Writing," "Writing About Social Studies," and "Writing About Science." The programs have been designed to be used by students of all abilities. There are built-in help screens, supplied selections and data, as well as open-ended assignments.

5. Indicate other textbooks or instructional materials, which, used together with the textbooks submitted for this process, would result in a total program, integrating instruction in listening, speaking, reading, and writing.

Grades nine and eleven

The students' anthologies paired with the teacher's support materials offer opportunities for a whole-language curriculum. Reading is stressed in end-of-unit essays as well as in the feature "Model for Active Reading," the three-level questioning strategy, the "Literary Focus" feature, and footnotes and vocabulary aids. Writing is addressed in the many post-selection dual composition assignments and in the "Writing About Literature Handbook," which stresses prewriting, writing, and revising. Listening and speaking are practiced in many of the "Additional Projects" suggested in the teacher's manual.

Additionally the Macmillan English textbooks for these grades offer extensive practice correlating with Macmillan Literature's approach to reading, writing, listening, and speaking. The ancillaries for Macmillan English include many blackline masters for evaluation of writing, listening, and speaking.
