FOREWORD

The increasing use of paraprofessionals in the educational setting and the acknowledged concerns regarding the appropriate roles they are called upon to fill have provided a major impetus for this publication. There have also been requests from a number of those in the field seeking guidance as to the more effective use of Educational Assistants.

That which follows is intended to suggest areas that are worthy of consideration by districts as they develop their own program for the utilization of Educational Assistants. In doing so, they are reminded that statutory guidelines, Oregon Administrative Rules and local board policy are the baseline from whence they start.

Suggestions and questions may be addressed to Jcyce Reinke, 373-7118.

I. "Educational Assistant" by Statute and by Administrative Rule

A. Defined

1. ORS 342-120(5) Educational assistant means a classified school employee who does not require a certificate to teach, who is employed by a school district or education service district, and whose assignments consist of and are limited to assisting a certified teacher in accordance with rules established by the State Board of Education.
2. OAR 587-37-005(7) The terms "teacher" and educational assistant refer to persons defined in ORS 342-120.

B. Authority to Employ

1. ORS 342-155 Educational Assistants and Intern Teachers.
A school district may employ Educational Assistants and Intern Teachers subject to the rule of the State Board.

C. Qualifications

1. OAR 581-37-006 Qualification of Education Assistants.
  - (a) Have a high school diploma or such knowledge and experience determined by the local district superintendent to be sufficient to function as an educational assistant.
  - (b) Have standards of moral character as required of teachers.

D. Assignment, Direction and Supervision of Educational Assistants

1. OAR 581-37-005(2) Supervision refers to responsibility for and management of the program staff of which administrators, teachers and assistants are members.
2. OAR 581-37-015
  - (a) The assistant shall assist a teacher only in a supportive capacity. The role of the educational assistant is adaptable to many support tasks and nothing in these rules should be interpreted as limiting assistants only to the performance of classroom duties.
Educational assistant tasks may include:
    - (1) Instructional Support — tasks performed by assistants to supplement students' basic instruction by offering students opportunities to practice and apply what they have learned.
    - (2) Clerical Support — tasks such as preparing materials, duplicating, and operating audiovisual equipment, which are primarily concerned with the physical arrangement of the learning environment, and
    - (3) Student Control — such duties as supervision of lunchroom and playground areas, assisting with fire drills, monitoring students in hallways, etc.
  - (b) Any assistant assigned to instruction-related activities shall work under the direction of the teacher assigned to that instruction station.
  - (c) A plan of supervision for the assistant shall provide for:
    - (1) Access to assistance and consultation

- (2) Regular monitoring of the assistant's performance to determine effectiveness of the assigned tasks and the effect on students.

E. Training of Educational Assistants

1. OAR 581-37-025 Districts employing educational assistants shall provide or arrange for suitable training for such personnel to prepare them to perform such functions as they may be assigned.

II. Educational Assistant Defined

A. General The definition of educational assistant begins with an identified need. The decision is to address the need through the addition of support personnel to assist the administrators and teachers responsible for the district's educational program. The title receives further definition by the specific assignment (Title I Migrant Assistant) and the list of duties and responsibilities (position expectations) of that assignment. The position description holds greater possibilities of addressing the needs of the teacher to whom the assistant is assigned if that professional was involved in its development.

B. Examples of Educational Assistant Definitions

1. Classroom Assistant. This position with teacher direction performs a wide variety of tasks assisting the teacher in the instruction, cafeteria and playground activities of elementary school and secondary students.
2. Health Assistant. Working under the direction of the school nurse, the health assistant is responsible for administering to minor health problems, assists with health screening clinics and monitoring health records for the students.
3. Library Assistant. This position does a variety of clerical tasks, library duties, including ordering periodicals, books and student supervision in a school library.

C. Other titles which define the role of the Assistant

1. Chapter I Assistant
2. Chapter I Migrant Assistant
3. Hearing Impaired Assistant
4. Library Technician Assistant
5. Special Activities Assistant
6. Transportation Assistant
7. Special Education Assistant (M.H./EHL/LRC/etc.)

III. Qualifications

The term "qualifications" for educational assistants is multidimensional and goes beyond the minimum OAR ruling of a high school diploma or equivalent and standards of moral character. A survey of position descriptions from a number of sources demonstrates the attention given as well as the variety of responses to the question of qualifications. The study the PMAC has made suggests that local districts give careful prior consideration of the needs to be met and the ends to be served by educational assistant positions as they establish the qualifications. This can range from the minimum acceptable to the most desirable.

That which follows is generic to the role of educational assistant. General areas are addressed as well as a few specifics for each of the areas. These are intended as idea starters. Additional information can be drawn from some of the sample job descriptions for specific positions in the appendix.

A. Education and/or Training

1. A high school education (diploma)
2. A GED certificate

B. Experience

1. Experience in working with the target population (handicapped — bilingual)
2. Work with youth in school or a youth organization, etc.

C. Office Skills — Ability to:

1. Type, file and keep records
2. Operate audiovisual equipment
3. Use a computer — word processor
4. Run copying equipment

D. Personal

1. Good health and neat appearance
2. Personal schedule adaptable to the needs of students
3. Ability to communicate effectively
4. Responds well to direction

E. Related to the Assignment

1. Assists in supervising students within the locale - classroom, playground, lunch room
2. Performs maintenance of supplies, equipment and classroom as directed
3. Uses the appropriate teaching method as trained and directed by the teacher to whom assigned
4. Knows and uses special programs such as Distar, ITIP, Assertive Discipline, etc.)

IV. Application and Hiring:

A. The Application

The application should, as a minimum, solicit in writing the following information:

1. Education/training
2. Work experience — employers
3. References

4. Competencies related to the position description
5. Personal interests/talents

As part of the application or as a separate document, the applicant should provide a written release for the district to conduct an employment and record check. A sample application form and record check are found in Appendices B and C.

B. Interview and Hiring

1. A position description which identifies the expectations of the position should be the basis for the discussion with and assessment of the applicant.
2. Other information that should be made available to the candidate includes an overview of the parameters of the position and the rights and responsibilities of the applicant, as seen in the context of the district personnel policies and Collective Bargaining Agreement.
3. During steps 1-2 above, the ultimate decision is better served if the teacher to be working with that employee is a part of the team conducting the interview and making the selection.

V. Training the Educational Assistant

Educational assistants need an ongoing training program to prepare them to assist effectively in the educational setting. The training program should be designed to meet the needs of both the beginning and experienced educational assistant. A basic planning process can be used to create a training program that specifically meets a district's needs. The process would involve these steps:

A. Needs Assessment:

1. Survey administrators, teachers, and educational assistants regarding what type of training is needed.

B. Planning

1. Outline a plan for addressing the training needs of new and experienced assistants in their various specialties.
2. Review position description expectations to determine general training areas.
3. Incorporate training areas recommended by the needs assessment respondents.
4. Include sessions that address health and legal requirements.
5. Develop a training schedule that accommodates both the needs of the assistant and the instructional program.
6. Provide an opportunity for appropriate groups to review the training plan and offer recommendations.
7. Provide instruction in productive ways to work collaboratively with adults.

C. Training

1. Instruct new instructional assistants thoroughly to prepare them for success. An outline of suggested training topics follows:

- (a) Orientation — A basic orientation to the district and the building should be conducted to acquaint educational assistants with: district and school goals; employment expectations - work hours, illness and accident procedures, dress, holidays, emergency information, benefits, collective bargaining contract, etc.; physical layout of the building; school policies and procedures regarding sign-in, phone use, lounge use, smoking, visitors, parking, security, etc.
- (b) Basic Job Training — A general training program can be established by the district to ensure continuity in basic job preparation for educational assistants. This training should address key areas of the position description as well as laws, rules, and regulations affecting the assistants.

What follows is the result of one district's needs assessment and planning process as it relates to educational assistant training. The David Douglas School District program is identified in the bibliography.

Session 1: The educational assistant is a member of the educational team - defining job responsibilities, building cohesive working relationships, communicating effectively and courteously, observing confidentiality, taking the initiative, observing the laws and rules (child abuse reporting, body fluid regulations, corporal punishment, etc.).

Session 2: The educational assistant helps manage the classroom — assisting with organization, learning school/classroom practices and procedures, giving directions, managing student behavior, controlling paperwork, contributing to the classroom climate, using time management.

Session 3: The educational assistant helps students learn.

Group A: Assisting in the classroom, techniques for working with small groups, ways to monitor and motivate student work, record keeping procedures, general instructional procedures;

Group B: Assisting in the lunchroom and playground, general rules and procedures, emergency procedures, monitoring techniques, motivating positive behavior, responding to inappropriate behavior, maintaining safety and health;

Group C: Assisting in the office and library/media center, equipment use, handling materials, special procedures, telephone procedures;

Group D: Assisting with special education students; handicapping conditions, special techniques, instructional programs.

- (c) Follow-up training: Specific training for new educational assistants can be conducted by the master teacher. The teacher can acquaint the assistant with procedures and practices unique to the specific job. Training for use of instructional programs could be done in the classroom or at the district level. The assistant should be given constructive feedback on performance especially throughout the first weeks of employment. It is advisable to offer a class or information to the master teacher on productive ways to work with assistants in the school setting.

2. Offer additional training to educational assistants throughout their careers.
  - (a) Advanced job training: After the educational assistant has had some on-the-job experience, another series of workshops should be planned to offer more detailed information on various aspects of the assistant's job responsibilities. These workshops should be designed to meet expressed needs. Application level activities are very helpful in this phase of training.
  - (b) Technological training: Instruction in using the computer will allow the assistant to better assist both students and teachers. This training can be accomplished at either the building or district level.
  - (c) Teacher and Assistant Workshops: Encouraging assistants to attend appropriate building and district sponsored staff development activities will help keep assistants informed and better able to effectively assist with the program.
  - (d) First Aid/CPR: Special sessions should be held for assistants to better prepare them for emergencies.

Whenever possible, integrated inservice courses should be offered allowing classified and certified staff to be taught together. A staff development handbook of available opportunities for personal and professional growth should be made available to all employees. A comprehensive staff development plan for classified and certified employees should include ongoing needs assessment, research and evaluation.

D. Evaluation

1. Each training activity should be evaluated by participants. The responses can be considered in planning future training activities.
2. The training program should be evaluated yearly by the educational assistants, the master teachers, and the administrators in order to assess its effects on the assistant's performance.

E. Recognition

1. Certificates of participation should be awarded to participants completing the training activities.
2. A record of completed training activities could be kept in the assistant's files.
3. Completion of training activities could be used as a criteria for job advancement.

Persons seeking a packaged program that school districts have found helpful may want to check the programmed training Paraprofessionals—Training for the Classrooms by the American Guidance Services. See reference in Bibliography. Locally contact Tigard School District Personnel Department.

VI. Assignment, Direction and Supervision of Educational Assistant

A. Assignment

Assignment speaks to two questions: to whom and to what. As the statutes dictate and the title identifies, the person fulfilling this role works for the teacher in a supportive capacity in whichever setting the students are involved during the school day. The tasks for the educational assistant, including taking direction from the teacher, may be as all encompassing as the teacher's total responsibility to a more narrow assignment as in a Chapter I Reading program.

The district, through its position description, and the teachers through the assistant's orientation, set up the expectation for assistance in the classroom. A look at the few position descriptions in the appendix, pages 13 to 21 could be of assistance to districts that have not addressed that need.

B. Direction

While it has been said before, it bears repeating — in instructional related activities, the assistant shall work under the direction of the teacher. This does not preclude building or department administrators from having input as to the nature of the activities being carried on, but it does mean that these contributions be directed at the teacher, not the assistant. Persons serving as educational assistants may not be assigned to plan instruction, evaluate instruction or assign grades.

C. Supervision

Supervision is an aspect of evaluation. At its best it is ongoing, informal and non-threatening and should contribute to the professional development of staff. It provides the opportunity for the educational assistant to seek advice and to be helped with problems. It includes regular monitoring of the assistant's performance to determine the effectiveness with which the assigned tasks are being carried out. Supervision, while informal, does operate best when there is a planned program. Things that should receive consideration are the following:

1. The Responsible Person(s)

Because supervision is such an important part of the formal evaluation that ultimately each district employee experiences, it could well follow that there should be several levels of responsibility for the supervision of the assistant. The direct, immediate, ongoing obligation is that of the teacher responsible for that particular instructional activity. Secondly, the building principal or department head having more than one assistant and being concerned with achieving program goals may monitor the work of the assistant to verify the teacher's assessment of that assistant. District board policy may also dictate the administrator's involvement.

2. Monitoring

The more obvious method is that of personal observation of the assistant in the instructional setting. The nature of the presentation, the reaction of the students all give clues as to the effectiveness of the person. Written reports, clerical efficiency, use of time, reactions of others in an informal setting, etc., are but a myriad of the ways by which judgments are formed.

3. Feedback

For ongoing supervision to be effective, the assistant should receive constant feedback on how the effort put forth is being perceived: praise where deserved, encouragement when needed, and change where required are all elements of that feedback. Where change is required, reasons should be forthcoming; the desired change should be identified and nature of assistance that will be made available should be stated.

VII. Evaluation

While the foregoing discussion on supervision has spoken to the ongoing evaluation that is part of the supervisory function, the formal evaluation for the purpose of establishing a written record of work performance is an established practice in most school districts.

The impetus of the statutes such as the right of reasonable notice of further employment, the right to a board of education hearing, civil rights laws, affirmative action, etc. has dictated that the actions of both the supervisor and the employee be on record.

The purpose of the evaluation program is to have both the supervisor and the employee assume responsibility for improving the organizational efficiency through improved employee performance. The development of an effective formal evaluation program should be the result of the combined contributions of administration, teachers and classified employees, and should be formally adopted as policy by the district board.

There is general consensus that the evaluation plan should provide for the following:

The Evaluators

While policy requires the final confirming authority be the principal or department head, the concurrence of the supervising teacher is recommended in the case of educational assistants.

Timeliness

The district may conduct employee evaluations at any time with the guarantee that the employee may request at least an annual report.

The Basis for Evaluation

Foremost in the appraisal of the educational assistant's performance is how well that person has measured up to the expectation of the position description.

The Evaluation

The evaluation itself may be in the form of a written narrative or a combination of a narrative and a checklist in which the various expectations of the position are rated with those graded as superior or commendable and those marked as deficient requiring additional supportive information. A version of the checklist in common use in many Oregon districts is found in Appendix D.

Opportunity to Respond

While employees are required to sign to indicate they have seen the formal evaluation, if they have objections to the report, they have a right to respond in writing. The response also becomes a part of the personnel file.

Plan of Assistance

Having determined that sufficient deficiency exists in an employee's performance, the district may decide to put the employee on a plan of assistance. Written notification should be sent to the employee outlining the delinquency, stating the improvement that is expected, and what the timelines are for that improvement to happen. Inherent in any plan of assistance is the commitment of help in the form of resources, and consultation on the part of the district.

Classified Employees Performance Evaluation Form

Policy on Performance Evaluation

Performance appraisal is an essential part of human resource management at this school district. An effective evaluation process is cooperative and continuous, requiring the partnership of the evaluator and the employee. Both parties share mutual goals: the maintenance of high standards of job performance, and the improvement of individual performance.

It is the policy of the district that all aspects of the employee's performance should be appraised; including job skills, productivity, personal qualities, and interpersonal relations. Evaluation of classified employees is one of the most important aspects of any supervisor's job.

Instructions to Evaluator

Please evaluate the employee on each performance standard listed in Section I. Indicate your assessment by placing a check mark on the continuum line at the point which best describes performance. If you mark in either shaded area, please be sure to write a specific explanatory comment in the appropriate space in Section II or III. Evaluators are encouraged to use Sections IV and V to identify employee goals.

Instructions

You are invited to make any written comments regarding this evaluation in Section VI, "Employee Comments".

Both evaluator and employee must sign the completed form. The form then becomes part of the employee's personnel file.
