ABSTRACT

These profiles of Adult Education for the Homeless programs funded by the McKinney Homeless Assistance Act are compiled from final reports submitted to the Division of Adult Education and Literacy, U.S. Department of Education, by the 50 states and from site visits by division staff. Data are reported for varying lengths of time for the first year of operation, really a 15-month period beginning in the summer of 1988 and extending to the fall of 1989. An executive summary offers a broad overview of the programs, outcomes, and recommendations for the future. State information is provided alphabetically by state. The information provided for each state includes some or all of the following: amount of grant expended (and percentage); number served; expenditures per learner; significant achievements; reason for leaving the program; educational techniques; and barriers to success. #### PREFACE

These profiles of Adult Education for the Homeless programs were compiled from final reports submitted to the Division of Adult Education and Literacy by the 50 States, and from site visits by members of the Division's staff. They draw a detailed picture of the major characteristics of each program that operated during the first year of authorization, which varied from State to State.

The Adult Education for the Homeless program was created by the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100-77) enacted July 22, 1987. In its first year, the program authorized $7.5 million, of which $6.9 million was actually appropriated to establish educational services for homeless adults.

Some States were able to begin providing services immediately, and therefore reported data for a 15-month period beginning in the summer of 1988 and extending to Fall of 1989. Other States encountered more difficulty in implementing programs, and operated programs for periods ranging from six to 12 months.

The profiles contained in this compilation were used as a basis for a publication titled "Education for Homeless Adults: The First Year." Issued by the Division of Adult Education and Literacy in December 1990, that publication also includes recommendations for future operation of Adult Education for the Homeless programs. Following is the Executive Summary from that publication. Copies are available from the Clearinghouse, Division of Adult Education and Literacy.

Questions concerning these profiles or the new publication should be directed to:

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The first year in which basic educational services were offered to homeless individuals produced promising practices and models as well as identifying barriers to success that must be addressed in subsequent years.

The first year of implementation was also characterized by wide diversity in almost every facet of program operation, including State approaches to service delivery, numbers and types of persons served, and the objectives of homeless individuals who participated.

· The Programs

The programs implemented by the States followed one of four approaches. The Development/Capacity-Building approach emphasized program structure and model-building. The Urban Focus approach was tailored to reach the maximum number of students in States with heavy urban populations, such as New York. The third approach, Services to Women, recognized the presence of women among the homeless, and tried to meet their special needs. The fourth, a State-wide approach, focused on developing a variety of class locations and instructional techniques.

The number of homeless individuals served nationwide totaled 18,000. More than half of this population was located in only 10 States. Texas served the largest number of homeless, reaching 2,326 adults. Alabama was second highest, serving 1,297 adults.

All races and ages were represented among the individuals served, but the most typical participant was white, male and 25-44 years of age. A total staff of 1,500 were used to implement the programs, of which one-half were volunteers. Of the staff that were paid, few worked full-time. Counselors, while comprising only 11 percent of total staff, were especially valuable in moving homeless adults toward self-sufficiency.

Operation of the programs revealed the major barriers to success. These barriers fell into three groups: personal difficulties, external barriers, and obstacles inherent to the program. Grouped under these headings were specific problems, such as substance abuse, shortage of shelter bed space, lack of childcare, and Federal funding requirements that were perceived as onerous.

Outcomes

The overall national results are encouraging, given the fact that this first-year experience was expected to be one of development, experimentation and learning.

More than 3,800 students, 20 percent of all participants, left a shelter or transitional housing and exited the program before completing sufficient instruction to reach their personal goals. However, only 450 of that number left the program due to lack of interest or because they perceived the instruction as unhelpful.

More than 500 adults earned a GED, and an additional 100 received some other type of adult diploma. Personal or economic objectives were met by many others, and included increasing employability, entering a training program, finding employment, or boosting self-esteem. Nationwide, 2,800 adults achieved this kind of personal objective, then left the program. This was especially true in the South, where over 1,100 persons followed this pattern.

A valuable outcome of the first-year program was identification of key elements contributing to the success of all programs, regardless of the approach used. These elements include:

- o Stable living environment for a minimum of 45 days.
- o Individualized instruction.
- o Well-trained volunteers.
- o Instruction related to practical tasks and everyday experiences.
- o Individualized educational plans.
- o Activities aimed at building self-esteem.
- o Networking with other local human services programs.

The Future

Future AEH programs hold substantial promise if the barriers to success can be recognized and addressed, and if the key elements are emphasized. Recommendations for greater future success include:

- o Increasing residential stability, ensuring that students will be living in the same place for at least 45 days at a time.
- o Developing and testing effective alternative curricula.
- o Providing ongoing training for all ABE teachers and volunteers working with homeless adults.
- o Offering comprehensive programs for women with children.
- o Developing non-traditional approaches to testing to measure more accurately the life skills of the homeless.
- o Prioritizing programs that target homeless American Indians, where appropriate, and
- Conducting formal evaluations of programs for the homeless.
