ABSTRACT

A project developed a model program philosophy and curricula for postsecondary marketing programs to establish a consistency among Missouri institutions offering these programs. Project activities included a research review; analysis of the scope of offerings of current postsecondary marketing education programs; development, administration, and tabulation of a consensus instrument; development of course outlines based on consensus agreement of "core courses" for postsecondary marketing education programs; and development of a scope of offerings for postsecondary marketing education programs to facilitate articulation. Postsecondary instructors reached consensus on the mission of marketing education, a mission statement, a program identification title (Marketing Management), basic course prefix titles, and the vocational application of the curriculum through marketing internships. Core and support courses were identified. Specific course outlines, scope of the program offerings, and sample articulation agreements for both vertical and horizontal articulation were developed. (Following the 17-page report are these appendixes and attachments: outlines for core courses; sample internship instructional management plans; sample articulation agreements--postsecondary institution to postsecondary institution and secondary level to postsecondary level; project procedures; eight references; consensus instrument; and glossary.) ABSTRACT

TITLE: A Model Philosophy and Program for Post Secondary Marketing and Mid-Management

Programs in Missouri

PRINCIPAL INVESTIGATOR: Clifton L. Smith

University of Missouri-Columbia

PROJECT GOAL: To develop a model program philosophy and curricula for post secondary marketing education (marketing/mid-management) programs for the purpose of establishing a consistency among institutions offering these programs in Missouri.

OBJECTIVES: (1) To develop a model program philosophy for post secondary marketing education (marketing/mid-management) programs in Missouri. (2) To design a model instructional program at the post secondary level. (3) To develop a model instructional program at the post secondary level that delineates specific course outcomes. (4) To develop a scope of offerings for post secondary level marketing education (marketing/mid-management) programs for purpose of articulation.

PROCEDURES: To implement the project design, the following activities were conducted: (1) a review of previous research was conducted; (2) the scope of offerings of current post secondary marketing education programs were analyzed; '3) a consensus instrument was developed, administered, and tabulated; (4) course outlines were developed based on consensus agreement of "core courses" for post secondary marketing education programs; (5) a scope of offerings for post secondary marketing education programs was developed for the purpose of facilitating articulation.

RESULTS AND FINDINGS: The specific results and findings from this project were: (1) consensus was reached on the Mission of Marketing Education (which revalidated the national mission statement); (2) consensus was reached on a Mission Statement for Post Secondary Marketing Education programs in Missouri; (3) consensus was reached on a program identification title: Marketing Management; (4) consensus was reached on basic course prefix titles; (5) specific courses were identified as "core courses" for the program: Principles of Marketing, Principles of Sales Promotion, Principles of Salesmanship, and Principles of Management; (6) specific courses were identified as support courses: Introduction to Business, Economics, Legal Aspects of Law (Business), and Accounting Principles; (7) consensus was attained on the vocational application of the curriculum through the use of Marketing Internships; (8) specific course outlines and scope of the post secondary marketing education program offerings were developed; (9) sample articulation agreements for both vertical and horizontal articulation are provided.

FINAL PRODUCT: The final product from this project is a model program philosophy, core courses, support courses, marketing internships and scope of offerings for post secondary marketing education programs in Missouri. In addition, articulation agreements for both vertical (secondary to post secondary) and horizontal (post secondary to post secondary) articulation are provided.

RECOMMENDATION FOR FURTHER ACTION: Post secondary institutions offering marketing education programs should review the findings of this project for the purposes of state-wide realignment of curriculum offerings. Each post secondary marketing education program should then identify specializations that could be effectively offered at a specific institution. The development of state-wide articulation agreements, to include both vertical and horizontal articulation, should be considered to allow secondary students to articulate to post secondary institutions and post secondary students to articulate between institutions for the purposes of completing a specific specialization.

INTRODUCTION

Education for marketing is achieved through teaching the discipline of marketing. Such education is accomplished through a program of Marketing Education which is offered by various institutions within the educational structure of the State of Missouri. As the marketing sector of the Nation's economic structure becomes more complex, the need for personnel primarily educated for marketing occupations becomes more crucial. Individuals and businesses look to the educational institutions of the State to meet the needs of of this growing occupational area.

The Marketing Education Program

The marketing education program presents a scope and sequence of instruction through various education institutions. The incruction is designed to meet the continuing needs of individuals throughout their occupational careers.

Marketing Education is designed to provide programs and services for youth and adults with career interests in marketing. The following is the nationally accepted mission statement for Marketing Education:

"The mission of Marketing Education at the prebaccalaureate levels is to develop competent workers in and for the major occupational areas within marketing, assist in the improvement of marketing techniques, and build understandings of the wide range of social and economic responsibilities which accompany the right to engage in marketing businesses in a free enterprise system." (Samson, 1980)

Accompanying the mission statement developed by Samson, six premises essential to Marketing Education were developed and serve as guidelines regarding instruction, programs, personnel, and community involvement throughout public education:

- 1. The discipline of marketing is the content base for all instruction.
- 2. Instruction will be offered to any personnel and in whatever setting necessary to meet community needs.

- 3. Programs will deliver a range of instruction covering functional skills, career competency development, operational management, and entrepreneurial development.
- 4. Instruction will stress application to and direct involvement with marketing businesses and be carried out by a variety of methods.
- 5. Professional personnel in the field of Marketing Education will have training in marketing, in Marketing Education, and business experience in marketing.
- 6. Where offered, Marketing Education will be considered an integral part of the institution's educational program with direction and counsel coming largely from a business community advisory group.

The program is people centered, offering instruction for (1) high school students, (2) postsecondary students (including adults), and (3) adults either employed or unemployed.

High School Students. High school students served by marketing education are most frequently in the 10th, 11th, or 12th grades. These students have an interest in the field of marketing. The instruction is vocational in nature, but has transferability to other disciplines, and may use internships (cooperative education) for vocational application.

past the usual high school age, normally, at least 18. The upper age limit is indefinite, but the larger part of the post secondary group is in the mid to late 20s. The majority of this group would take instruction leading to a 2-year associate degree or similar recognition of completing a formal program of studies. The program of study prepares the student in both breadth and depth in the various competencies necessary for marketing primarily at the middle management level.

Adults. Adult training or retraining is designed to meet the needs of adults who are employed or unemployed, but whose circumstances preclude regular full-time school attendance. Marketing Education for adults provides a range of learning opportunities from short courses to advanced curriculums.

Post Secondary Education

Post secondary institutions have many different names—junior colleges, community colleges, technical institutes, and divisions of four year-colleges. The name of an institution does not necessarily reflect its nature. Each type of institution tends to have distinguishing charactericites which affect the type and quality of education programs it may conduct.

Increased demand for personnel with middle level management skills, greater occupational specialization, and advancing technology make the postsecondary institution a logical choice for offerings in marketing education. Post secondary marketing education has several characteristics which distinguish it from marketing education conducted at the secondary level. Post secondary marketing education:

- 1. Serves a student population from a large geographic area.
- 2. Follows a collegiate schedule of classes with special flexibility to permit appropriate application of learning.
- 3. Provides instruction in marketing functions, product area, or business.
- 4. Provides instruction which leads to specialization in a marketing function, product area, or business category.
- 5. Provides instruction leading to supervisory and management competencies.
- 6. Utilizes businesspersons from a wide range of marketing interests and from a wide geographic area for advisory and resource purposes.

In addition to these characteristics each post secondary institution will have special features peculiar to its own philosophy and aims.

CURRICULUM FOR POST JECONDARY MARKETING EDUCATION

Post secondary institutions in Missouri have had great flexibility in the Marketing Education (Mid-Management) curriculums it may have offered. Because of this flexibility, post secondary marketing education (mid-management) curriculums have been found to have considerable variation and a lack of uniformity.

Uniformity in curricula among educational institutions has long been a difficult task to manage. Resistance to uniformity has been voiced in statements about regional differences, academic freedom, local control, coordination, and cooperation—just to name a few.

When the term articulation is used, educators believe in working with vertical articulation (secondary to post secondary) and horizontal articulation (within the institution)—but little articulation among institutions occurs or has occurred. Marketing educators, at both the secondary and post secondary level, have been addressing this problem since 1980 where a need to standardize curriculum was indicated at a national conference (Vail Conference, 1980). This was reinforced in 1984 at the National Marketing Education Curriculum Conference.

marketing education (mid-management) programs differ from institution to institution with no common base in philosophy or curriculum. To provide continuity among institutions offering these programs, a need existed to develop a model that delineates the scope of offerings, the level of offerings, and the methods of vocational application. Continuity among these institutions offering these programs needs to be established to successfully effect the improvement of these programs and to provide for a smooth transisition for the purpose of articulation.

The primary concern of this project was the development of a two year, post secondary marketing education (mid-management) curriculum which leads to an associate degree, diploma, certificate, or similar recognition of successful completion. Such a curriculum encompasses approximately 60 to 66 semester hours of formal study. Instruction is designed to develop competencies for middle level marketing occupations. The marketing internship (cooperative education method) is used to provide vocational application of classroom instruction.

A curriculum describes the important components of what is to be taught and determines the relationships of these components to each other and to the outcomes desired. A curriculum also provides a consistent framework of values and the priorities for dealing with these values in the teaching-learning situation.

Each of the following concepts represents a component of what is to be taught or a value concept regarding the post secondary Marketing Education (Mid-Management) curriculum:

1. While the focus of post secondary curricula is on middle management and specialist levels of employment, this is only a part of the total program. Curriculums designed to pepare for entry career positions in marketing are provided by secondary schools and may also be offered by post secondary institutions. Positions at top management levels in marketing are generally attained by baccalaureate degree preparation.

- 2. Students enrolling for post secondary Marketing Education (Mid-Management) programs are usually high school graduates. They have selected an occupational objective in the field of marketing and have an aptitude for the work in their area of interest. The student should have the competence of the average or above average high school graduate. Students lacking competence in the basic skill prerequisites should be given an opportunity to make up any: deficiencies.
- 3. The content of the courses in the curriculum is based upon the objectives for which the curriculum is designed. Individuals completing a curriculum should be able to function in middle level positions within the occupational field of marketing. Qualifications essential for successful performance within the field of marketing and at the mid-management level must be obvious to potential employers.

STATEMENT OF THE PROBLEM

The overall goal of the project was to develop a model program philosophy and curricula for post secondary marketing education (mid-management) programs to establish a consistency among institutions offering these programs in Missouri.

OBJECTIVES AND FINDINGS

The specific objectives and findings of the project were:

Objective Number One: To develop a model program philosophy for post secondary marketing education (mid-management) programs in Missouri.

Findings: In order to develop a model program philosophy, post secondary marketing instructors were asked to reach consensus on (1) the Mission Statement of Marketing Education and (2) a Mission Statement of Post Secondary Marketing Education (Mid-Management) Programs in Missouri. Consensus was reached on the Mission of Marketing Education (which revalidated the national mission statement developed by Samson in 1980):

"The Mission of Marketing Education at prebacalaureate levels is to develop competent workers in and for the major occupational areas within marketing, assist in the improvement of marketing techniques, and build understandings of the wide range of social and economic responsibilities that accompany the right to engage in marketing in a free enterprise system."

In addition, consensus was also reached on a Mission Statement for Post Secondary

Marketing Education (Mid-Management) programs in Missouri:

"The Mission of the Post Secondary Marketing Education program is to introduce students to the broad field of marketing—both in content and careers; provide them with academic experiences in product planning, pricing and distribution, market research, advertising and sales promotion, and selling techniques; and be able to perform basic marketing functions in marketing occupations such as retailing, wholesaling, transportation and service businesses."

in addition, consensus was reached on the program identification title: MARKETING MANAGEMENT. The adoption of a consistent program identity title will enable programs to more accurately identify their mission within the post secondary institution.

Objective Number Two: Design a model instructional program at the post secondary level.

Findings: In order to develop a model instructional program, basic course prefix/suffix titles needed to be established. Post secondary marketing instructors reached consensus that basic courses be titled as Principles (of Marketing).

As agreed upon by the postsecondary marketing instructors, a common core of courses/content could and should be developed for postsecondary Marketing Education programs (including those which are specific occupationally based, i.e., Fashion Marketing; Hospitality Marketing). After reviewing a cumulative list of courses, instructors indicated whether that course should be included in the core. The courses identified are listed below.

Marketing Core Courses

Marketing

Sales Promotion (Advertising & Visual Merchandising)

Salesmanship (Selling)

Management (Supervision)

Based upon the consensus of the post secondary marketing instructors, four common courses were identified as being a part of the common core. Based on the common core, a definition for each course was developed.

Principles of Marketing: Marketing foundations represent the basic skills and understandings of the marketing concept and the business environment and management systems within which it is implemented. Concepts include functions of business, ownership structures, marketing functions and concepts, channels, management functions, budget considerations, business operations, and specialized applications of business operations.

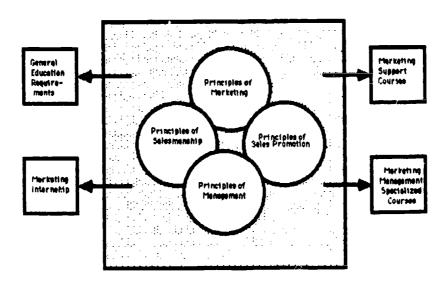

Principles of Sales Promotion: The promotion function refers to communicating information about products, services, image, or ideas to influence consumer behavior. Topics include the communication process, the marketing-communications mix, promotion planning, and managing the promotion function.

Principles of Salesmanship: The selling function refers to responding to consumer wants and needs through planned, personalized communication to influence purchase decisions and ensure customer satisfaction. Topics include understanding customers, the processes and techniques of selling, the ethics of selling, time and activity planning, product/service knowledge, supporting activities, and managing the selling function.

Principles of Management: Management involves the development, control, and evaluation of employees. Topics include training techniques, supervisory skills, communication with subordinates, employee morale, job satisfaction, and developing a management philosophy.

Core Courses for Postsecondary Marketing Management Programs

Post secondary marketing instructors also reached consensus on a set of courses that would serve as support courses for the core courses. The following courses that would serve as support courses within the core are listed below.

Support Courses

Introduction to Business

Economics

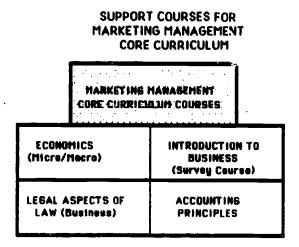

Legal Aspects of Law (Business)

Accounting Principles

Additional courses were suggested, but consensus was not reached on whether the topics identified should be either a separate course or integrated within the core curriculum courses.

These included: Mathematics Applications in Marketing; Computer [micro] Applications in Marketing; and Marketing information Management (Marketing Research).

in addition, consensus was attained on the vocational application of the curriculum through the use of Marketing Internships (cooperative education method). This method is primarily focused upon providing the student with an opportunity to experience, explore, and achieve occupational application of the various competencies learned through classroom instruction.

Marketing internships requires that the student be employed in a selected marketing or marketing-related aspect of a business firm on some regularly planned basis. Two common means of arranging this employment was found: (1) regular part-time employment concurrent with classroom instruction, and (2) periodic full-time employment blocked between periods of classroom instruction. Course credit was given for part-time and for periodic marketing internships.

Certain specific conditions exist when the internship is used to provide the vocational application of classroom instruction to actual job situations. Attainment of competence can be achieved through different organizational patterns, but each should meet the following criteria:

- 1. The institution, usually through the Marketing Management instructor(s), selects and approves the businesses which provide laboratory instruction and planned occupational experiences.
- 2. The occupational experience is based upon clearly defined instructional goals, as indicated on instructional Management Plans (IMPs), to be attained through the cooperative effort of the institution and the business firm.
- 3. The business and the institution jointly develop an educational plan which assigns responsibilities within the firm and describes the sequence of instruction and experience.
- 4. The student has regularly scheduled employment in the business for which he/she receives a salary.
 - 5. The student receives credit for the occupational experience.
- 6. Regular progress reports and evaluative sessions are held by a member of the Marketing Management staff with the student and representative(s) of the business.

The Marketing Internship should compose six semester hours of credit in the post secondary Marketing Management program and be divided into two courses (i.e. Marketing Internship I and Marketing Internship II) with each course resulting in three semester hours of credit. In relationship to the number of hours of employment and credit earned, each institution should meet a minimum requirement, and in most instances, one hour of credit is equal to 54 hours of instruction. Thus, a three semester hour internship would equate to 162 hours of employment within a business. Students should have specific assignments, reports, and experiments as outlined in the Instructional Management Plan utilized by the Marketing Management program. The Instructional Management Plan should differentiate between the first Marketing Internship and the second Marketing Internship in terms of the learning experiences expected of students. The first Marketing Internship should consist of career substaining (career entry) learning experiences, while the second Marketing Internship should consist of marketing specialist (supervisory/managerial) learning experiences.

The suggested curriculum pattern for the post secondary Marketing Management program would be composed of the following: Marketing Management Core Courses (12 semester hours), Support Courses for the Marketing Management Core Courses (12 semester hours), Marketing Management Internship (6 semester hours), General Education Requirements (15–18 semester hours), and Specialization Courses for Degree Program (15–18 semester hours). Refer to Figure 3.

be composed of 60 to 66 of credit. This would require a minimum of four semesters of full-time enrollment by the student.

Objective Number Three: To develop a model instructional program at the post secondary level to include courses that delineate the following:

- A. Name of the course
- B. Persons for whom the course is intended
- C. The over-all purpose of the course
- D. Specific instructional objectives for the course
- E. Subject matter topical outline for each course
- F. Suggested text(s) and reference materials for each course
- 6. Suggested testing applications for each course
- H. The plan of vocational application for each course

Findings: Based on the consensus of the core courses for post secondary Marketing Management, outlines of each core course were developed and reviewed. Refer to Appendix A for specifics concerning each course.

Objective Number Four: To develop a scope of offerings for post secondary level marketing education programs for purposes of articulation among post secondary institutions.

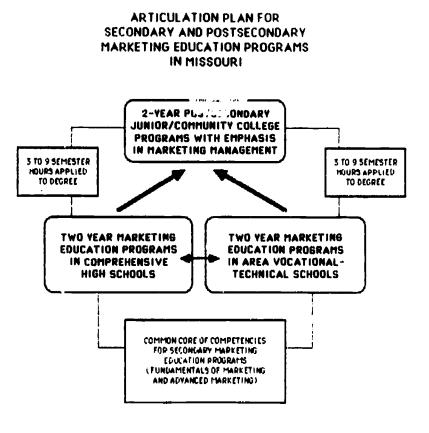

Findings: Based on the development of core courses for the Marketing Management program, the identification of support courses for the Marketing Management core courses, and the specification of the Internship component of the Marketing Management program, a scope of offerings by post secondary institutions was identified. The scope of offerings consists of Marketing Management "specializations" which would enable a student to have instruction within a specific marketing function, product area, or business category. Such "specializations" could be: Retailing, Management, Hospitality Management, Fashion Marketing, Industrial Marketing, Real Estate, or other areas deemed appropriate by the institution and state agencies.

Upon adoption of the core for Marketing Management programs, students would have the cvailability of enrolling in the core courses, support courses, and ganeral education requirements at one post secondary institution and then "articulating" or transferring to another post secondary institution that may offer the specialization that fits the students career aspirations within marketing. Articulation agreements between post secondary institutions within the State would need to be completed in order to assist in this arrangement. This type of articulation agreement would eliminate the duplication of academic specializations in Marketing Management, but the availability of a core Marketing Management program would be offered at each post secondary institution. This in turn would also assist those secondary marketing education students who wish to articulate to a post secondary institution, and the articulation agreements between secondary and post secondary institutions would designate the core courses a student would be able to receive "credit" for at all post secondary institutions.

POPULATION

To gather the information needed for this project, the seventeen post secondary institutions in Missouri offering marketing education (mid-management) programs responded to written requests and personal interviews to provide relevant program information and assistance. Refer to Appendix B for a listing of Post Secondary Institutions offering marketing education (mid-management) in Missouri.

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Conclusion Number One: Based on the consensus of post secondary instructors, the national marketing education mission was appropriate for describing the activities of post secondary programs and that the mission statement developed for post secondary marketing education programs in Missouri is appropriate in describing the activities of program.

Recommendation Number One: Post secondary institutions offering programs in marketing education should adopt the mission statement developed and utilize this mission statement in publications and activities concerned with the program.

Conclusion Number Two: Based on the consensus of post secondary instructors, a common title to describe the post secondary marketing education programs is appropriate.

Recommendation Number Two: Post secondary institutions offering programs in marketing education should adopt the program title of "Marketing Management" as the umbrella identifier and that speciality titles be utilized in reference to specializations under the Marketing Management program title.

Conclusion Number Three: Based on the consensus of post secondary instructors, courses under the program area of Marketing Management should have a basic course prefix/suffix.

Recommendation Number Three: Post secondary institutions offering programs in "Marketing Management" should adopt the common prefix of "Principles of..." to identify core courses within the curriculum sequence. This will provide a commonality of courses among post secondary institutions.

Conclusion Number Four: Based on the consensus of post secondary instructors, a common core of courses/content can be identified and utilized by all post secondary programs in "Marketing Management."

Recommendation Number Four: Post secondary institutions offering programs in "Marketing Management" should realign their curriculums to offer the four specific courses identified as core courses: Principles of Marketing, Principles of Sales Promotion, Principles of Salesmanship and Principles of Management. Each of these core courses should be offered on a 3.0 semester credit hour basis.

Conclusion Number Five: Based on consensus of the post secondary instructors, a common core of support courses can be identified and utilized by all post secondary programs in "Marketing Management."

Recommendation Number Five: Post secondary institutions offering programs in "Marketing Management" should realign their curriculums to offer the four specific courses identified as support courses: Introduction to Business, Economics, Legal Aspects of Law (Business), and Accounting Principles. Each of these support courses should be offered on a 3.0 semester credit hour basis.

Conclusion Number Six: Based on consensus of the post secondary instructors, the vocational application of the curriculum through the use of Marketing Internships (cooperative education) is appropriate.

Recommendation Number Six: Post secondary institutions offering programs in "Marketing Management" should realign their curriculums to offer Marketing Internships as the vocational application of the curriculum and that the following pattern and criteria be adopted:

- 1. The Marketing Internship be composed of six (6) semester hours of credit and be divided into two courses: Marketing Internship I and Marketing Internship II. Each Marketing Internship course should be offered on a 3.0 semester credit hour basis.
- 2. The number of hours of employment for the Marketing Internship be equated to the number of hours of instruction required for credit. In most institutions, this would equate to 162 hours of employment within a business for three semester hours of credit (1.0 semester hour of credit is equal to 54 hours of instruction).

3. That Instructional Management Plans be utilized and that learning experiences in the Marketing Internship correspond to the sequence of career substaining during the first internship and marketing specialist during the second internship. Refer to Appendix C for suggested Marketing Internship materials. (NOTE: Additional Instructional Management Plan learning experiences can be obtained from the Instructional Materials Laboratory (IML) at the University of Missouri-Columbia).

Conclusion Number Seven: The development of a "core curriculum" for post secondary "Marketing Management" programs will enable specializations within a specific marketing function, product area, or business category.

Recommendation Number Seven: Upon adoption of the "core curriculum" each "Marketing Management" program should identify specializations that could be effectively offered based upon the conditions (in terms of instructors, facilities, and occupational need) of a particular institution. Many of these specializations are already offered and would only need to be aligned with the core curriculum.

Conclusion Number Eight: Horizontal articulation agreements between post secondary institutions, for the purpose of allowing students to transfer between institutions, should be established to allow individuals who have completed the "core curriculum" to seek appropriate "specializations."

Recommendation Number Eight: Post secondary institutions who have established "specializations" under the program title of "Marketing Management" should seek to develop articulation agreements between institutions to enable students to transfer or articulate horizontally for the purpose of completing a Marketing Management program with a particular specialization of the student's choice. This type of articulation agreement would eliminate the duplication of academic specializations in Marketing Management, but the availability of a core Marketing Management program would enable students to start at one institution and complete the degree program at another without the loss of academic credit. Refer to Appendix D for a sample Articulation Agreement.

Conclusion Number Nine: The adoption of a "core curriculum" by post secondary "Marketing Management" programs would enable a uniformity of advanced placement articulation with secondary marketing education programs.

Recommendation Number Nine: A core curriculum enables postsecondary programs to have a degree of uniformity which corresponds to the identified core curriculum for secondary marketing education programs. With this degree of uniformity, state-wide articulation agreements which address advanced placement for secondary marketing education students should be developed between secondary and post secondary institutions that specifies the following conditions:

- 1. Numer of semester hours of advanced credit that would be awarded a secondary student for completion of a one or two year curriculum in marketing education.
- 2. Number of semester hours of credit that a secondary student articulating to a post secondary institution must complete before articulation credit hours are applied to the student's program of studies.
 - 3. Title of courses that would be substituted for an articulated student.
- 4, Validation procedure of grade(s) in marketing education at the secondary level.

 Refer to Appendix E for a sample Articulation Agreement.

PRINCIPLES OF MARKETING

Course Credit: 3.0 Semester Hours

Description: Marketing foundations represent the basic skills and understandings of the marketing concept and the business environment and management systems within which it is implemented. Concepts include functions of business, ownership structures, marketing functions and concepts, channels, management functions, budget considerations, business operations, and specialized applications of business operations.

Objectives: The student will be able to:

- 1. Define marketing and provide examples of its use by individuals, business organizations, and nonbusiness organizations.
- 2. Describe the evolution of marketing.
- 3. Identify the major forces in the economic environment that impact marketing.
- 4. Interrelate strategic organizational planning, strategic business unit planning, and marketing planning.
- 5. Describe the basic purpose and nature of a marketing information system and its relationship to marketing research.
- 6. Compare and contrast the mass market strategy, the concentration strategy, and multisegment strategy.
- 7. Distinguish between mass marketing and targeted marketing.
- 8. Distinguish between a product mix and a product line.
- 9. Explain the concept of product positioning.
- 10. Identify and explain the stages in the new product development process.
- 11. Distinguish between manufacturer and dealer brands.
- 12. Identify the key issues in branding strategy.
- 13. Identify and explain the objectives of packaging.
- 14. Distinguish among types of labels and the importance of label design.
- 15. Explain the purposes of marketing channels.
- 16. Identify the major influences on channel development.
- 17. Identify the major types of retailing firms.
- 18. Compare and contrast in-store and nonstore retailing.
- 19. Identify major trends in retailing.

19

- 20. Identify the functions of wholesaling.
- Identify major trends in wholesaling.
- 22. Explain the objectives of physical distribution.
- 23. Describe a promotional mix and the factors that influence its development.
- 24. Distinguish among the major types of advertising.
- 25. Explain how marketing organizations conduct public relations and publicity activities.
- 26. Explain the importance, objectives, and tasks of personal selling.
- 27. Explain the importance of price to marketers
- 28. Identify and describe industrial markets.

PROCEDURES

To implement the project design and to attain the objectives set forth, the following activities were conducted:

- 1. The project staff reviewed previous research consucted on post secondary marketing education programs in regard to program requirements, course descriptions and outlines, course hour and/or credit allocations.
- 2. The project staff analyzed the scope of offerings of current post secondary marketing education programs in Missouri.
- 3. An initial meeting of instructors of post secondary marketing education programs was held during the fall leadership conference of the post secondary vocational student organization. At the meeting, post secondary marketing education instructors reviewed the initial findings of the project staff and provided input into the proposed survey instrument to be used in consensus building. Discussions centered around the following topics: mission statement for post secondary marketing education; program title; common courses; prefix/suffix for course titles; and involvement of post secondary instructors in course development.
- 4. Following the meeting with post secondary marketing education instructors, the survey instrument was finalized and printed. A letter of explanation, the survey instrument, and stamped self addressed envelope were mailed to each post secondary marketing education instructor.
- 5. Follow-up phone calls were made to post secondary instructors who had not returned the survey instrument within two weeks. An eighty-five percent return rate was obtained.

 Additional follow-up to those not responding did not yield any additional survey returns.
- 6. Tabulation of the survey instrument consisted of calculation of number of responses and percentages. In an tabulating the survey results, consensus in principle was achieved if 75 percent of the respondents agreed to a principle statement.
- 7. A second meeting of post secondary marketing education instructors was held at the spring competitive events conference of the post secondary vocational student organization. At this meeting, project staff discussed the results of the survey and sought additional information and clarification of consensus items. Additional input from post secondary marketing education instructors was sought as to the content and application experiences of the courses identified as "core courses."

- 8. Project staff refined the outlines for the "core courses" to include a course description, course outline, application experiences, suggested textbooks, and additional resources as needed.
- 9. Selected post secondary instructors (those who indicated an interest in assisting in the project) reviewed the developed materials for the core courses. Based on suggestions from these individuals, the core courses were refined.
- 10. The final product developed was a model program philosophy and scope of offerings for post secondary marketing education programs. In addition, articulation agreements for both vertical (secondary to post secondary) and horizontal (post secondary to post secondary) articulation were developed.
