ABSTRACT

This community living assessment tool for parents of children with deaf-blindness was developed to help parents identify the strengths and weaknesses of their child's residential program using a user-friendly instrument. Three areas of assessment are covered: physical attributes of the home, available resources for promoting capabilities, and philosophy of the service agency. Physical attributes of the home involve general appearance, atmosphere, environmental adaptations, and location. The section on resources for promoting capabilities emphasizes evaluation of staff, the planning process, the individualized program, communication strategies, evaluation procedures, and medical/support services. The philosophy of the agency is evaluated through consideration of policies, values, realization of values, residents, and parental involvement. At the beginning of the book, users prioritize each area of the assessment in rank order, and a summary sheet at the end of the book then provides an overall picture of the quality of the program. AN ASSESSMENT INSTRUMENT FOR FAMILIES:
EVALUATING COMMUNITY-BASED RESIDENTIAL PROGRAMS FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH DEAF-BLINDNESS

The development and dissemination of this instrument was supported by cooperative agreement (#H025E90001) from the U.S. Department of Education. The opinions expressed in this instrument are solely those of the authors. No official endorsement by the U.S. Department of Education is intended or should be inferred.

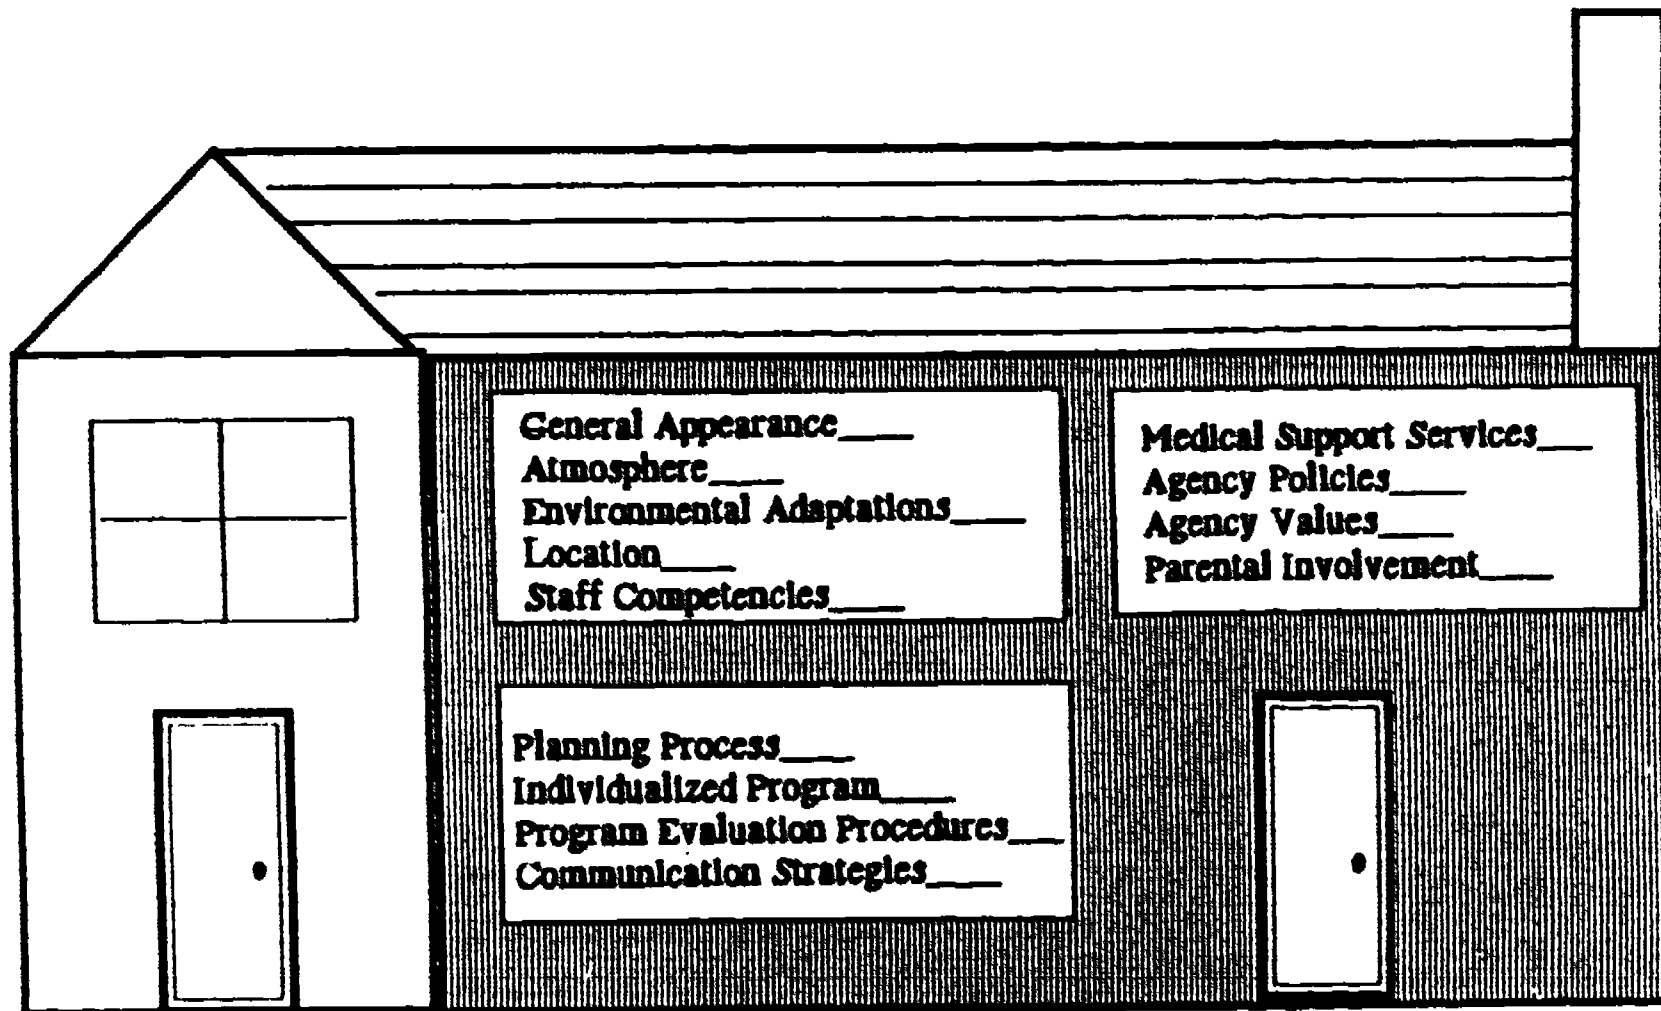

The Helen Keller Nation Center - Technical Assistance Center (HKNC-TAC) is pleased to share this community living assessment tool for parents of children with deaf-blindness. The idea for such an assessment originated with parents from the HKNC National Parent Network Advisory Committee and was pursued in collaboration with the Hilton/Perkins Project. Our goal was twofold: one, to create an instrument that would help parents identify the strengths and weaknesses of their child's residential program; and two, to ensure that the instrument was user friendly for parents.

With these goals in mind, we have created an evaluative list of considerations that parents may wish to keep in mind when selecting or monitoring their child's home. This tool offers three areas of assessment. They are: 1) Physical Attributes of the Home; 2) Available Resources for Promoting Capabilities; and 3) Philosophy of Agency.

This instrument can be used in many different ways. For example, it could be used as a checklist to organize the many questions that must be asked when discussing quality programming, or it may stimulate thought about issues not previously considered. Similarly, the frequency of application may differ; one parent may choose to use it once a year in its entirety, another may target specific sections to address monthly. The instrument is meant to be flexible and thereby capable of meeting a wide variety of needs. Foremost among these would be use of the instrument to assist parents in determining the quality of programming their child enjoys.

Please take a few minutes to think about your child's home and the following areas:

Which one of these areas is most important to you? Which one is least important? They are all areas you will be evaluating as you use this instrument. You may find it useful to rank each of these items in order of priority before proceeding with your assessment. [1 = most important 13 = least important]
