INTRODUCTION

PROJECT HISTORY

The Bureau of Applied Technology and Adult Learning initiated a curriculum development project in 1988 in collaboration with vocational directors, teachers, industry professionals, and staff from the University of Southern Maine to develop a competency-based, industry-validated curriculum in each of the program areas offered at vocational centers and regions throughout Maine. This project has provided an opportunity for directors and teachers to expand their knowledge and skills related to the process of job task analysis and curriculum development.

The bureau and vocational directors selected the Developing A Curriculum (DACUM) model process to initiate curriculum development in vocational education in Maine. DACUM is an innovative approach to occupational analysis, which has proven to be an effective method of identifying the duties and tasks which must be performed by individuals employed within a specific occupational area.

The curriculum for each program area was written in competency-based terms by a team of teachers within the program area and provides a model for adaptation by the classroom instructor, which can be updated or personalized. The bureau and the vocational directors view curriculum development as an ongoing and essential component in the development of comprehensive, industry-validated, competency-based curricula.

VALIDATION PROCESS

The Job Analysis (DACUM chart) was developed by professionals from throughout the State of Maine. These professionals identified essential duties and tasks performed at the entry-level. (See attached DACUM chart.)

Once developed, the duty and task listing was distributed to secondary vocational education program advisory boards throughout Maine for validation. The purpose of this review was to correct any omissions or to delete unnecessary material.

OCCUPATIONAL OUTLOOK

In an effort to provide staff and students with current information concerning employment opportunities, the Maine Occupational Information Coordinating Committee developed specific occupational outlook units for inclusion in each competency-based curriculum. These units provide job descriptions, work environment descriptions, education and training requirements, skills and aptitude requirements, salary information and local, state, and national employment opportunities.

COMPUTER-ASSISTED INSTRUCTION

Utilization of computers is encouraged in all vocational curriculums. Numerous software packages are available to make computer-assisted instruction as easy as possible for the instructor and the student as well as relevant to their professional field.

-7-

USE OF THIS PUBLICATION

This publication contains instructional units for each task listed on the job analysis (DACUM Chart). These units include:

- * Introduction
- * Conditions
- * Task Performance
- * Safety Requirements * Reference Materials
- * Evaluation Standards
- * Other

The instructor should study each unit carefully to determine the following:

- Amount of material to be covered in each class period.
 Skills to be demonstrated.

- Supplemental materials that must be gathered or ordered (supplies, equipment, etc.)
 Additional resources that could be brought in for presentation (guest speakers, resources, etc.)

The instructor may, and is encouraged to, add to this curriculum to better fit the needs of the student and the community.

GENERAL OFFICE WORKERS: THE MAINE SCENE

Information specific to Maine was gathered by MOICC staff and taken from data developed by the Division of Economic Research and Analysis of the Maine Department of Labor, the Division of Research and Statistics of the Bureau of Labor Standards, the Maine Department of Education, and the Maine Technical Colleges.

Earnings--1990

Average earnings for office workers in Maine vary considerably due to the large number of specific occupations which make up the general category. This category does not include secretaries, since they are in a specific category by themselves. Accordingly, in 1990, average wages for office workers in Maine ranged from a low of $5.97 per hour for file clerks to a high of $7.92 for typists operating word processing equipment. Some sample earnings data for office workers by specific occupational title are as follows:

File Clerks	$ 5.97
General Office Clerks	$ 7.01
Typists	$ 6.33
Typists, Word Processing Egpt.	$ 7.92

Related Occupations

Other office worker-related occupational titles for which there exist employment opportunities in Maine include accounting clerks, adjustment clerks, hotel/motel desk clerks, loan clerks, mortgage processing clerks, order clerks, order fillers, and others.

Employment Projections

For all occupations included in this broad category, employment in 1988 in Maine totaled just over 25,000, and this number was expected to increase to nearly 30,000 by the year 2000. This represents a 20 percent increase over the projections period, which is about as fast as the average for all occupations. Average annual job openings to the year 2000 are projected to be about 1,200. The majority of these openings, about 80 percent, will be due to the need to replace workers who are expected to leave these occupations for a variety of reasons. The remaining 20 percent will arise as a result of new or expanding businesses needing to hire more workers.

Training Opportunities

General office workers can learn basic skills for this broad occupational group in Maine's secondary vocational-technical schools. In addition, many of Maine's high schools continue to offer Business courses. In addition, more advanced office clerical programs are offered in selected Technical Colleges and private proprietary schools such as Westbrook, Beal, Mid-State, and Andover Colleges.

The increasing use of office and/or desktop personal computers makes it necessary that students become proficient in basic theories of computer applications, especially the application of commercially available computer software to accomplish office clerical functions.

Job Outlook

Employment opportunities for general office workers should be quite favorable, especially for workers who are familiar with desktop computer applications for an office environment. Although the supply of trained people graduating from formal educational programs falls short of matching the annual demand, competition for jobs is still quite strong since many jobs related to general office work do not require advanced training at the entry level.

In 1990, there were fewer than 200 individuals graduating from the various schools offering clerical skills training, compared with an annual demand of nearly 1,200. Statistically, this translates into 6 job openings for each graduate. However, many of the occupations in this broad occupational area can be accessed successfully by persons who seek to re-enter the labor market after having been away for some time. Accordingly, the competition for jobs is much stronger than the numbers would indicate. It is extremely important that persons seeking to enter this occupational area become proficient at utilization of relevant office computer software.
