ABSTRACT

This public awareness package is designed to help crisis nursery and respite care programs for families with special needs children to increase the visibility of the programs' services, increase use of their services by families, enhance collaboration with other agencies, and assist with fund-raising efforts. It describes the advantages and uses of a variety of public awareness strategies, including personal and telephone contacts with key people in the community who are associated with the media or who work at organizations that may want to collaborate, radio and television coverage, newspapers, letters, brochures, posters and billboards, and slide shows and videos. A sample form for obtaining permission to take photographs or recordings of program participants is provided. Samples are also provided of a script for a telephone contact, a follow-up letter, a letter soliciting help, a press release, and scripts for public service announcements. (JDD)

Asking For Help Is A Sign Of Strength

A Public Awareness Guidebook
for
Crisis Nurseries and Respite Care Programs

---

Introduction

The purpose of this public awareness package is to provide additional tools to crisis nursery and respite care programs which will help increase visibility of the programs' services, increase use of their services by families, enhance collaboration with other agencies and assist with fundraising efforts.

Media strategies can be an effective method to promote community awareness and facilitate your outreach efforts. In choosing appropriate media for a public relations campaign, consider the availability of staff time, the costs involved, and the characteristics of your target audience (the people you want to "reach" through your advertising efforts).

There are many public awareness strategies. You might distribute flyers to parents, for example. You might mail letters and brochures to targeted community agencies and follow up by arranging a meeting at which you make a presentation, show slides of children and personnel in your program, and answer questions. You may want to develop a speaker's bureau of volunteers and parents to assist with presentations and other public awareness events. Billboards, newspaper articles, radio or television spots, and bumper stickers are all good ways of reaching the community at large.

Ask staff members and parents to review the materials before they are produced and distributed. This feedback can help you improve the final product.

Introduction

Make sure to obtain permission from a parent or legal guardian before photographing children for public awareness activities. A confidential release should be placed on file which conforms to the program's public awareness policy.

When developing slogans, remember written permission must be obtained to use a slogan developed by a national company (e.g., "How do you spell relief?" or "You deserve a break today.")

The following information describes some of the advantages and uses of a variety of public awareness strategies. Select those which are most suited to the needs and goals of your program. Often, local commercial media (TV, radio, newspapers) will offer free public service advertising to community organizations. Contact media and other organizations in your community such as mass transit companies or billboard organizations. Tell them what you are doing and ask for their help. Remember, you are the crisis nursery or respite care representative in your community. As you establish relationships with the local media staff and other organizations, you will determine their understanding of the importance of crisis nursery and respite care services for families in your community.

Strategies for Increasing Public Awareness

The following strategies for increasing public awareness may be applied to the media and other community organizations.

Personal Contacts

Establish personal relationships with key people in your community who are associated with the media and who work at organizations who may want to collaborate with your program. Personal contacts will often yield the highest return. Parents from your programs can be very effective in helping the media and other organizations understand the importance and need for crisis nursery and/or respite care services. One personal success story goes a long way.

Make sure to give your media or community organization:

- Contact information for your program's spokesperson;
- A description of your program;
- A list of key staff members and family advocates in your program;
- A description of special program activities with dates;
- A wish list of program needs;
- Position statements developed by your board;
- A list of funding/budget needs; and,
- A list of community agencies with whom you collaborate.

When contacting media or community organizations:

- Establish a dependable contact person;
- Identify key staff for particular divisions (e.g., news, advertising, editorial, photographs);
- Determine best times to call;
- Determine the policy for submission of photographs;
- Ask for coverage by a reporter who is assigned to education, human services, health services, or federal programs when you want a newspaper article written; and
- Find out the publication schedule/deadlines for local items.

Phone Contacts

Phone contacts can provide the opportunity to establish a contact person, introduce yourself, briefly explain your program and your reason for calling. The contact sets the stage for working collaboratively with other people and other agencies. It is most advantageous to follow up the phone contact with any or all of the following:

- Mailing a confirmation letter or other printed material;
- A meeting between yourself and the contact person;
- A visit and/or scheduled observation of your program by the contact person; and,
- A meeting with various representatives from potential collaborative agencies.

Radio and TV

Radio and television coverage can reach a large portion of your community. Do not hesitate to utilize these resources. Most radio and TV stations are eager to work with community organizations. It brings them additional visibility as an interested community organization as well as assists you in "getting the word out." Remember...

- A brief radio or TV announcement can attract families with unserved children;
- Stations are often eager to make time available for public service announcements;
- Announcements may be taped or read by station personnel;
- TV and radio stations may send a crew to produce a 20 minute video-tape for your program even though they may only air a few minutes; and,
- Request feature coverage by radio or TV stations during special program events.

Guidelines

Guidelines for submitting announcements to radio or TV stations are listed below.

- Double-spaced and typed;
- White 8 1/2 x 11 inch paper;
- Wide margin on top of page (3-4 inches);
- 1-inch side margins;
- Indent each paragraph;

Radio & TV
Guidelines

- Print on one side only - never on back;
- Include contact information first (contact person, program name, address, business phone, home phone, FAX number);
- Include date;
- One page only;
- Use short sentences and paragraphs;
- Address the person(s), place, date, and reason for article;
- Omit extra words such as unnecessary adjectives and adverbs;
- Always use "people first" language;
- No abbreviations or acronyms;
- Use hyphens to tell readers to spell out a word: (e.g., S-T-R-E-N-G-T-H);
- Slides should be high quality color and horizontally printed;
- Use two slides per 10 seconds;
- Type on slides should be brief;
- Clearly relate announcement content to slide in sequence; and,
- Photos should be in color and have a matte finish.

Newspapers

- Good avenue for general publicity;
- Free public service advertising is often available;
- Human interest stories about children and families who have benefitted from crisis nursery or respite care services and stories about the program can be a powerful tool;
- Make initial contact by sending a news release; be sure to follow up with personal contact by phone (this can make the difference between being published or not); and,
- Letters to the editor can be a way to make a statement about the importance of crisis nursery or respite care services.

Print Guidelines

Guidelines for submitting news articles/releases are listed below.

- Double-spaced and typed;
- White 8 1/2 x 11 inch paper;
- Wide margin on top of page (3-4 inches);
- 1-inch side margins;
- Indent each paragraph;
- Print on one side only - never on back;
- Include contact information first (contact person, program name, address, business phone, home phone, FAX number);
- Include date;
- Label and number additional pages;
- Note end of article (e.g., "*****");
- Contact editor (who usually determines headline) to make sure the "true" meaning of the article is reflected in the headline;
- Always use "people first" language;
- Use short sentences and paragraphs;
- Address the person(s), place, date, and reason for article;
- Omit extra words such as unnecessary adjectives and adverbs;
- Articles/releases should usually be two pages or less;
- Include program contact information;
- Avoid abbreviations and acronyms;
- Spell out all names and titles;
- Submit glossy black and white photos (5 x 7 or 8 x 10 inch); and
- Submit photo caption, double-spaced on 8 1/2 x 11 inch white paper.

Letters

- Can be used to make initial contact and introduce your program to community agencies; and
- Can be used as a follow-up tool to show appreciation for their support and to define your agreement.

---

Brochures,
Flyers, Circulars,
Bumper Stickers,
Door Knob
Hangers,
Buttons

- Can describe the important benefits of your program's services;
- Can be inserted in mailings to community agencies;
- Can be mailed or distributed to parents;
- Can be distributed at presentations;
- Can be posted at bus stops, grocery stores, hospitals, community centers, schools, clinics and public service agencies;
- Can enhance door-to-door campaigns;
- Can be inserted in grocery store bags for free (permission must be obtained and copies of the publication must be submitted ahead of time); and,
- Bumper stickers and buttons can be used as incentives for providers, workers, and volunteers.

Posters
& Billboards

- Can be posted in windows of supportive retailers;
- Are particularly effective where large numbers of people congregate (waiting rooms at local community services agencies, clinics, day care centers, hospitals, doctors' offices, laundromats, etc.);
- Will require staff or volunteer time to post them (posters);
- May require permits;
- Can reach out to specific neighborhoods or targeted sites; and,
- Can be attractive and eye-catching.

Slide Shows
& Videos

- Useful in making presentations for community agencies, religious groups, civic organizations, and other community groups; and,
- Can actually show what your program has to offer through pictures of children in the program.

Respite Care

The following examples promote respite care services for families who have children with disabilities. If your program serves another specific population (children with chronic illnesses, children with HIV-related conditions, etc.), please substitute this terminology as needed. Please modify other content in these examples to fit your local program needs.

Sample Phone Contact

“Hello Mrs. Jones, this is Susan Doe, the Coordinator from the XYZ Respite Care program. I have been referred to you by Peter Green, and I understand that you’re the person who coordinates the services for children with disabilities and their families. I’m calling to let you know that our program serves families who have children with disabilities. We’re currently working with other community agencies to locate children with disabilities who might benefit from our program. I’d like to arrange a time that we can get together and share information about our programs and talk about how we can coordinate our services....”

- “Are you familiar with respite care services?”
- Did you know that our program....?
- In the past we have served....
- Perhaps you and some of your staff might like to observe....”

Dear Friend:

Enclosed is the material we discussed in our telephone conversation on [date]. I hope that this information will further clarify our program for families who have children with disabilities. I appreciate your willingness to help us locate children and families who may benefit from our program. I know that your agency has much to offer in uncovering existing needs in the community. Through interagency collaboration our community can be made aware of the wide range of existing services.

Please post and distribute this material as you see fit. If you have need of additional circulars, or require the clarification of any point, do not hesitate to call me [phone number]. Any further suggestions you may have for enhancing our efforts to reach children and families who need respite care services will be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

Dear Friend:

As a result of the Temporary Child Care for Children with Disabilities and Crisis Nurseries Act of 1986 (as amended) legislation, families of children with disabilities are now receiving respite care (short term relief for caregivers) services across the country.

I would like to ask your help in informing the community of the availability of our respite services. It is our hope that we can reach all families and children who are not being served by existing programs. For those children already involved with specialized programs and agencies, we would like to offer collaborative services.

Because we are committed to the use of existing resources and want to avoid the duplication of services, I am eager to enlist your help in determining how our program may be used in furthering the development of a broad range of services to children and their families.

I am enclosing additional information about our program and would appreciate your sharing this with your staff and anyone who might be interested in our services. We have additional material and information available, and I would welcome the opportunity to talk with you and/or your staff. I can be reached at [telephone number].

Thank you for your help. I hope we will have the opportunity to talk in the near future.

Sincerely,

Say hello to relief!

The [Name of Program] is now offering respite care (short term relief for caregivers) services to families who have children with disabilities.

Our program provides respite care for children ages [age range] years old who have [list specific disabilities or types of health conditions]. Respite care services can be obtained 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Services are provided to all eligible families regardless of income. Costs for respite care services are determined according to family income or a sliding fee scale.

The [name of program] has served families since [date]. To date, over [number] children with disabilities have participated in our program.

"We love our daughter, but the constant care required around the clock is exhausting.

"Every night I have to get up twice to turn Karyn since her cerebral palsy severely limits her ability to move. Respite care provides a chance for me to sleep one night a week without getting up. Karyn likes it too. She and her respite care provider do special activities together like playing computer games or going to the movies," says parent, Mrs. Smith.

Respite care can make a difference for your family. Call [telephone number] for more information.
