The President
The White House
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

In accordance with Section 401(a)(7) of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, we are pleased to provide you with the Annual Report of the National Council on Disability for Fiscal Year 1992.

This past fiscal year has been very productive for the National Council. We conducted hearings, forums and conferences on such essential issues as protecting the rights of people with disabilities in this country and throughout the world, meeting the needs of minority members with disabilities, improving the nation's capacity for disability research, and enhancing access for people with disabilities to federal parks and recreation areas. The Council also completed four major studies regarding access to health insurance, financing of assistive technology, education for students with disabilities, and access to federal parks.

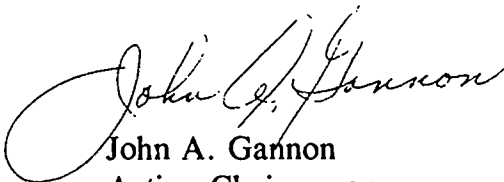

As the federal agency that initially proposed the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA), the National Council feels a particular obligation to ensure that the ADA is fully and successfully implemented. We, therefore, initiated the first year of our ADA Watch project to monitor implementation of the ADA. It is our intention to eliminate discrimination against people with disabilities from our society, and thereby to enhance the prospects for self-determination and dignity for all of our citizens with disabilities.

The National Council on Disability appreciates that you share these goals and takes great pride in presenting you with the enclosed report. The Council will continue to focus on important current and emerging public policy issues affecting people with disabilities, their families, and their communities. We will continue to recommend public policy changes that will significantly increase the independence and community participation of people with disabilities. The National Council looks forward to working with you in the days ahead to create a better nation for our citizens with disabilities and for all Americans.

Sincerely,

John A. Gannon

MISSION OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL ON DISABILITY

The National Council on Disability is an independent federal agency composed of 15 members appointed by the President of the United States and confirmed by the U.S. Senate. It was established in 1978 as an advisory board within the Department of Education. The Rehabilitation Act Amendments of 1984 transformed the Council into an independent agency. The mission of the National Council on Disability is to provide leadership in the identification of emerging issues affecting people with disabilities and in the development and recommendation of disability policy to the President and the Congress. The statutory mandate of the National Council in Fiscal Year 1992 included the following:

- Reviewing and evaluating on an ongoing basis the effectiveness of all policies, programs, and activities concerning individuals with disabilities conducted or assisted by federal departments or agencies;
- Assessing the extent to which federal policies, programs, and activities provide incentives for community-based services, promote full integration of individuals with disabilities, and contribute to the independence and dignity of individuals with disabilities;
- Providing to the Congress, on an ongoing basis, advice, recommendations, and any additional information that the National Council or the Congress considers appropriate;
- Providing ongoing advice to the President, the Congress, the Commissioner of the Rehabilitation Services Administration (RSA), the Assistant Secretary of the Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services (OSERS), and the Director of the National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research (NIDRR) on programs authorized in the Rehabilitation Act;
- Establishing general policies for reviewing the operation of NIDRR;
- Submitting an annual report with appropriate recommendations to the President and the Congress regarding the status of research affecting persons with disabilities and the activities of RSA and NIDRR;

- Providing advice to the RSA Commissioner on policies and conduct;
- Making recommendations on ways to improve research; the collection, dissemination, and implementation of research findings; and the administration of services affecting persons with disabilities;
- Reviewing and approving standards for independent living programs;
- Reviewing and approving standards for Projects with Industry programs;
- Providing guidance to the President's Committee on Employment of People with Disabilities; and
- Issuing an annual report to the President and the Congress on the progress that has been made in implementing the recommendations contained in the National Council's January 30, 1986 report, Toward Independence.

While many government agencies address issues and programs affecting people with disabilities, the National Council is the only federal agency charged with addressing, analyzing, and making recommendations on issues of public policy that affect people with disabilities regardless of age, disability type, perceived employment potential, economic need, specific functional ability, status as a veteran, or other individual circumstance. The National Council recognizes its unique opportunity to facilitate independent living, community integration, and employment opportunities for people with disabilities by ensuring an informed and coordinated approach to addressing their concerns and eliminating barriers to their active participation in community and family life.

YEAR IN REVIEW: FY 1992

In its effort to provide leadership in the identification, development, and evaluation of disability policy, the National Council on Disability undertook a wide variety of activities in Fiscal Year 1992. It did so with the added leadership of three new National Council members who received confirmation from the U.S. Senate: Ellis B. Bodron of Vicksburg, Mississippi; Shirley W. Ryan of Glenview, Illinois; and Anne C. Seggerman of Fairfield, Connecticut.

The National Council's FY 1992 activities included continued support of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA), Public Law 101-336, which was initially proposed by the National Council. The Council was able to achieve this goal by developing and implementing the first year of ADA Watch, a project designed to monitor the implementation of the ADA. The Council also identified the overall needs and concerns of individuals with disabilities by conducting hearings, forums and conferences throughout the country, and by responding to thousands of telephone and written inquiries on the ADA and other issues.

Among the highlights of FY 1992, the Council completed studies on financing assistive technology; ensuring access to health insurance and health-related services; assessing the impact of elementary and secondary education programs and special education for children with disabilities; and federal park accessibility (as mandated by Section 507 of the ADA). It held hearings on personal assistance services; health insurance; assistive technology; and ADA implementation.

At the request of the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic's Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, the National Council also conducted The Eastern European Conference on Disabilities, in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

HEARINGS, FORUMS AND CONFERENCES

During FY 1992, the National Council conducted several hearings, forums and conferences to elicit public response on a number of issues affecting people with disabilities and to inform the public of its activities. The following is a summary of those activities:

Financing of Assistive Technology

October 17-18, 1991; Minneapolis, Minnesota

Synopsis

A hearing was held by the National Council on Disability to gather information from a broad array of users, producers and payers of assistive technology. Attendees were updated on the activities and initiatives of the National Council concerning assistive technology. The hearing contributed significantly to the attainment of information that would later be used in developing findings and recommendations for a National Council report to Congress and the Administration on financing assistive technology.

ADA Research

October 24-25, 1991; New Orleans, Louisiana

Synopsis

A hearing on research issues relating to the implementation of the ADA was conducted to identify research questions that should be addressed, including what data are needed to assist covered entities in complying fully with the Act and to assist policymakers in evaluating the effects of the Act. A wide variety of consumers and producers of disability research were assembled to address these important issues, which had not been previously explored. Essential information was obtained that would be used in planning and implementing one of the first major disability research conferences ever held.

Rural and Native American Issues

November 4-5, 1991; Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Synopsis

A two-day hearing on Rural and Native American Issues in Oklahoma was conducted by the National Council to address a set of issues that are often overlooked by disability policymakers. Witnesses testified on numerous disability and health-related concerns affecting people living in rural areas, particularly Native Americans. This hearing was one component of the National Council's effort to reach out to populations that traditionally have been underserved by disability programs and disability policy generally. The information obtained through this hearing will be used to develop better approaches to meeting the needs of rural and Native American populations.

Health Insurance

November 20, 1991; Des Moines, Iowa

February 20-21, 1992; San Francisco, California

Synopsis

As part of a two-year study commissioned by the National Council, hearings on access to health insurance and health-related services for individuals with disabilities were held in Iowa and California. The purpose of these hearings was to gather information on problems encountered by the disability community in gaining access to health care coverage and approaches to enhancing the access of people with disabilities. Consumers, providers and payers of health care services were brought together to offer the Council insights into this essential set of issues, which are now among the highest priorities for national policy. The information obtained from these hearings would later be used in developing findings and recommendations for a National Council report to the President and Congress.

Personal Assistance Services

February 25, 1992; Las Vegas, Nevada

September 10, 1992; Boston, Massachusetts

Synopsis

The National Council recognizes the overwhelming need of many persons with disabilities and their families for affordable and dependable personal assistance services. These include attendant services, interpreter services and reader services. Hearings on personal assistance services were conducted to discuss how to eliminate the financial barriers to obtaining these services and whether improved access to personal assistance services could be achieved through the reauthorization of the Rehabilitation Act. The National Council will continue to hold hearings on this subject and will develop comprehensive recommendations to develop and implement policies that will enable persons with disabilities to live and work in their communities.

Eastern European Conference on Disabilities

April 13-15, 1992; Prague, Czechoslovakia

Synopsis

At the request of the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic's Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, the National Council conducted The Eastern European Conference on Disabilities in Prague, Czechoslovakia. This conference offered an outstanding opportunity to spread the word internationally about our country's landmark historic achievement in developing and passing the ADA. The conference was designed to consider the many aspects of bringing people with disabilities into the mainstream of society in the various participating countries. The topics focused on the day-to-day barriers faced by people with disabilities in Eastern Europe and how to eliminate them cost-effectively.

Minorities with Disabilities Conference

May 6-7, 1992; Jackson, Mississippi

Synopsis

In conjunction with Jackson State University, the National Council conducted a conference entitled Addressing the Unique Needs of Minorities with Disabilities: Setting an Agenda for the Future. Minorities constitute a disproportionate share of the population of people with disabilities. This conference was the first ever to address the essential issues affecting minority members with disabilities. The conference focused on the following issues as they relate to different racial and ethnic populations: rehabilitation; prevention; employment; research; physical and mental health; violence; substance abuse; empowerment; and education. The National Council has identified the concerns of minority members with disabilities as a key priority, and will be publishing a summary of the proceedings of this national conference in FY 1993.

ADA Watch Hearing

June 15-16, 1992; Washington, DC

Synopsis

The ADA Watch, an initiative to monitor and evaluate the implementation of the ADA, was initiated by the National Council to ensure that the promises of the ADA would become reality in the lives of Americans with disabilities. This project is discussed below in the section on research studies. As part of the project, the Council sponsored three Capitol Hill briefings involving non-profit associations, private sector business groups, and federal officials to provide information on ADA Watch activities and facilitate voluntary compliance with the ADA through enhancing communication among covered entities.

RESEARCH STUDIES

The National Council has a long history of conducting research in areas of critical interest to persons with disabilities. To this end, the National Council, in response to its Congressional mandate, continued to act as liaison to the National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research (NIDRR), as discussed further in the section on liaison with NIDRR below. For example, in FY 1992, the National Council developed a cooperative agreement with NIDRR to conduct a national disability policy research conference in FY 1993.

In addition, the National Council itself commissioned five research studies that will impact on the successful implementation of the ADA, the ability of people with disabilities to live productively and independently in their communities, and the quality of life for people with disabilities. The studies address issues concerning education, health insurance, financing assistive technology, ADA implementation, and federal park accessibility. Reports on the findings and recommendations of the National Council based on these studies are being released in the current fiscal year, FY 1993. The following is a brief description of these studies:

Education

The National Council's education study, Serving the Nation's Students with Disabilities: Progress and Prospects, examines the outcomes of elementary and secondary education programs and special education for children and youth with disabilities. The study examines outcomes such as academic achievement, work preparation and quality of life. This is the second education study conducted by the National Council. It tracks progress in improving our education system for students with disabilities since the first study, entitled The Education of Students with Disabilities: Where Do We Stand?, was issued in September 1989.

Health Insurance

The health insurance study, Sharing the Risk and Ensuring Independence: A Disability Perspective on Health Insurance provides valuable information to policymakers concerned with issues of health care reform. The purpose of this study was to identify barriers to and supports for health insurance and health-related services in the public and private sectors. A report with Council recommendations addressing the problems faced by individuals with disabilities in obtaining adequate coverage was published after the study in FY 1993.

Technology

The Council's technology study, Financing Assistive Technology Devices and Services for Individuals with Disabilities, was mandated by Congress in the Technology-Related Assistance for Individuals with Disabilities Act of 1988. This study examined federal laws, regulations, procedures and practices that facilitate or impede the ability of States to develop consumer-responsive statewide systems of technology-related assistance for individuals with disabilities. It considers financing mechanisms in the public and private sectors and their impact on the lives of people with disabilities. A report containing a set of detailed recommendations that will assist policymakers in creating increased opportunities for people with disabilities to obtain appropriate assistive technologies was published after the study in FY 1993.

ADA Watch

The National Council's ADA Watch project monitors and evaluates the implementation of the ADA. The first year of this project included the following activities: evaluating the progress of federal agencies in issuing regulations, providing technical assistance, and establishing and utilizing enforcement mechanisms; examining efforts by covered entities in voluntarily complying with the ADA; assessing efforts of the non-profit sector in furthering the goals of the ADA; tracking ADA litigation and complaints; and identifying exemplary programs that enhance access, improve employment opportunities, and otherwise guarantee the civil rights of people with disabilities.

Federal Park Accessibility

Mandated by Section 507 of the Americans with Disabilities Act, the National Council completed a study of the accessibility of federal parks and recreation areas. It analyzed the effects that wilderness designations and wilderness land management practices have on the ability of individuals with disabilities to use and enjoy the National Wilderness Preservation System (NWPS). It focused particularly on the National Park Service, the U.S. Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management, and the Fish and Wildlife Service. Its report entitled Wilderness Accessibility for People with Disabilities: A Report to the President and the Congress of the United States on Section 507(a) of the Americans with Disabilities Act was issued in early FY 1993.

TESTIMONY BEFORE CONGRESS

During FY 1992, the National Council on Disability provided formal testimony before the Congress on four occasions. These were as follows:

February 20, 1992, before the U.S. House of Representatives

Sandra Swift Parrino, Chairperson, and Larry Brown, Jr., Member, testified before the U.S. House of Representatives, Committee on Education and Labor, Subcommittee on Select Education, on Enhancing the Leadership Capacity of the National Council on Disability in the Post-ADA Environment.

LIAISON WITH THE NATIONAL INSTITUTE ON DISABILITY AND REHABILITATION RESEARCH

The National Council held regular meetings with the Director and the staff of NIDRR to discuss the continued development of the NIDRR five-year plan and to coordinate the efforts of the Council and NIDRR in other research areas of mutual concern. In addition, the National Council made recommendations to NIDRR on issues of public policy that affect the wide range of people with disabilities, including individuals of different ages, conditions, perceived employment potentials, economic needs, specific functional abilities, or other individual circumstances.

LIAISON WITH THE PRESIDENT'S COMMITTEE ON EMPLOYMENT OF PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

In accordance with its authorizing statute, the National Council continued to provide guidance to the President's Committee on Employment of People with Disabilities. During the fiscal year, the National Council and the President's Committee worked cooperatively to identify key employment issues that deserve the attention and resources of the President's Committee. Members of the National Council and the President's Committee attend each others' quarterly/annual meetings.

INFORMATION DISSEMINATION

Throughout the fiscal year, the National Council received thousands of telephone calls and letters from concerned individuals and organizations about disability issues. The Council also continued to increase its communication of important information to persons with disabilities and their families, the Administration, the Congress, and the public through its FOCUS newsletter, special reports, annual reports, and ongoing interaction with the news media.

QUARTERLY MEETINGS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

As required by Section 400(c) of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, the full Council met on four occasions during the fiscal year. The following are the dates and locations of these meetings:
