ABSTRACT

This document from Pima Community College in Arizona provides an overview of the processes used to evaluate the college's board of governors, chancellor, administrators, faculty, and classified staff. Efforts to streamline and strengthen the processes for faculty and administrator evaluation are also highlighted. Sections focusing on each personnel group indicate that: (1) board members are evaluated every 5 years using a survey mailed to all board members and administrators and to random samplings of faculty, staff, and students; (2) the chancellor is required to submit annual goals and to report progress and results twice each academic year; (3) the administrator evaluation system contains an annual review of progress toward goals and a cumulative and comprehensive review of leadership performance and goals; (4) faculty receiving satisfactory ratings in spring 1992-93 and 1993-94 are evaluated every 3 years, instead of annually; evaluations are conducted in two classes selected from a faculty member's regular teaching load; and (5) the college conducts a formal evaluation of regular, full-time classified staff employees annually. Exhibits provide the 1993 Board of Governors Assessment Questionnaire; lists of "President's Goals of 1990," "Chancellor's Goals for 1991-92," "Chancellor's Goals for 1992-93," and "Chancellor's Goals for 1993-94"; forms for "Goal Planning for Administrators" and "Annual Professional Development Review for Administrators"; a chart showing administrative goals and evaluation due dates; an administrator evaluation form; a student evaluation of instruction form; a cumulative faculty evaluation form; instruction for performance appraisals for employees; an "Employee Self-Appraisal Worksheet"; an employee "Performance Planning and Evaluation" form; and a "Supplemental Factors for Exempt Personnel Who Supervise Others" form. Introduction

The Institutional Effectiveness Program booklet, in describing employee evaluation at the College, calls attention to the indispensable role of College personnel in providing services, planning and implementing change, and setting the tone for the institution. This awareness underscores the importance of evaluating College employees—faculty, administration, and staff—as an important way to measure the effectiveness of the College. For this purpose, formal evaluation of the Board of Governors and the chief executive officer of the College—which did not occur before this decade—is equally important.

This publication seeks to complement the personnel evaluation section of the Institutional Effectiveness Program booklet, primarily through exhibits that provide a more detailed look at the forms and procedures of the various evaluation processes. Efforts to streamline and strengthen the processes for faculty and administrator evaluation, in response to weaknesses identified by accrediting teams and employees, are also featured.

The order of the evaluation processes in this document is not intended to promote a hierarchical view of College personnel nor to imply that particular persons or groups make more important contributions to the College than others; rather, it was selected because the Chancellor's goals, once approved by the board, provide a common thread that is most easily followed through the administration into all segments of the College. All other evaluative criteria can stand alone within each classification and are indifferent to order of appearance.

Board of Governors

The Institutional Effectiveness Program includes a requirement that the Board of Governors be evaluated formally once every five years. Board evaluations mandated by the North Central Association were conducted in 1991, 1992, and 1993. Consequently, the first College-initiated evaluation is scheduled for 1998.

It is expected that future board evaluations will follow procedures similar to those of the earlier surveys. Survey forms were sent to all board members and administrators and to random samplings of faculty, staff, students, and Pima County residents. In 1993, forms were returned by 323 individuals, a 33% response rate. The survey form used in 1992 and 1993—slightly modified from 1991—is reproduced as Exhibit A.

As in past board evaluations, survey responses, both quantitative and qualitative, will be summarized and analyzed by the Office of Institutional Research, and results will be reported to board members to guide them in maintaining board strengths and improving performance. Survey results will also be presented in the Vice Chancellor's annual Report on Institutional Effectiveness.

Summary reports of the earlier Board of Governors evaluation surveys are available in the Office of Institutional Research.

Chancellor

The Board of Governors in 1990 initiated formal evaluation of the College's chief executive officer by requiring the Chancellor to submit annual goals and report progress and results twice during each academic year.

This procedure seeks to provide objective grounds for measuring the Chancellor's effectiveness in providing leadership and implementing institutional policy. It has also served to improve communication between the board and the chief executive officer and to assist in achieving accountability throughout the College.

The Chancellor's goals are produced through dialogue with College personnel followed by consultation with the board and are transmitted throughout the College through the administration. Applications of these goals, consequently, comprise a substantial portion of each administrator's evaluation.

The annual goals of the present Chancellor since 1990—covering a variety of timely subjects—are listed in Exhibit B.

Administrators

A significant change in the method of evaluating administrators occurred in 1990. Before then, the evaluation system was based on a management-by-objective approach called Planning, Management, and Evaluation, which had fallen out of use.

Administrator Evaluation, 1990-93

A revised evaluation system was developed by a committee of administrators, faculty, and staff, joined by administrators from other educational institutions, assisted by an evaluation consultant. It was piloted in the spring of 1990 and implemented the following fall.

The system had four purposes:

1. To determine how well goals and objectives were being met,
2. To recognize excellent performance,
3. To improve performance where necessary, and
4. To provide a basis for personnel decisions.

The evaluation process consisted of two components: 1) a supervisor's written report on the administrator's performance and 2) evaluations provided by the following four groups, using rating scales: a) the administrator being evaluated, b) the administrator's supervisor, c) other administrators at the same level, and d) persons for whom the administrator provided services.

The rating form contained three major evaluation categories: 1) administrative capabilities, 2) communication/interpersonal relations, and 3) leadership. Each category had ten to twelve items for evaluation and up to eight optional items in each category, selected by the administrator being reviewed. Ratings used a four-point scale and invited respondents to comment on the administrator's performance under each item on the form.

A second form was employed to record all of the information used in the evaluation: 1) information about the position being evaluated, 2) the supervisor's narrative evaluation summaries, 3) the ratings summary, and 4) an assessment of the degree to which the goals were attained by the administrator.

Early in 1993, a high-level administrative group met to review the evaluation procedures. They studied the distribution and tracking of the multiple evaluation forms for the forty-two administrators and held interviews with the Chancellor, other administrators, and the Institutional Research Director and staff responsible for program management.

Their findings showed that administrators rated high on the 4.0 scale, suggesting—as many administrators had maintained—that experienced administrators were being evaluated through extensive, complex, and time-consuming procedures that outweighed the value of the predictable results. The institutional research staff spent several months of each year administering the program at the expense of other research needs.

Current Administrator Evaluation

The administrator evaluation system was streamlined to reduce the quantity and frequency of evaluation instruments distributed, collected, and processed for experienced administrators while preserving measurements of quality management and leadership. The streamlined system was approved by the Chancellor's Cabinet in June 1993. It contains the following components and characteristics:

■ Annual: A Review of Progress toward Goals

- 1) The format changed from a series of checklists to goal planning and narration.
- 2) Administrators and their supervisors determine goals at the beginning of the fiscal year and establish benchmarks in accordance with the goals of the Board of Governors and the Chancellor.
- 3) All administrators receive an annual one-page narrative evaluation summary by the supervisor in June.

■ Cumulative: A Comprehensive Review of Leadership Performance and Goals

- 1) The format changed from multiple pages to a brief form focusing on leadership qualities and goals.
- 2) Administrators who are new, reassigned, or have other special circumstances undergo the cumulative evaluation process in February of each year.
- 3) All administrators receive a cumulative review from their supervising administrator every three years which may be supplemented with peer and/or reporting staff review.

The annual and cumulative evaluations become part of the official personnel record of each administrator, kept on file in the Human Resources Department.

Continuing efforts to ensure quality leadership and management by administrators will include 1) collecting feedback from administrators on the face validity of the evaluation instruments and 2) reviewing the usefulness of the forms and procedures.

Forms for Administrator Goal Planning, Annual Review, and Cumulative Review appear as Exhibits C, D, and E.

Faculty

In the fall of 1991, a subcommittee of the Task Force on Effective Faculty Selection and Performance was formed to complete development of a comprehensive faculty evaluation process. The subcommittee of thirteen faculty members and three administrators reviewed evaluation procedures at other colleges, surveyed PCC faculty, obtained feedback from students and administrators, and received advice from an outside consultant.

Faculty Evaluation, 1991-93

Following the task force recommendations, a new faculty evaluation system was adopted. It featured annual evaluations by students and clients, using newly designed instruments, and cumulative evaluations every five years.

After a pilot period, the student component of the faculty evaluation process began in the spring semester of the 1992/93 academic year, and the first five-year cycle began the following fall.

The task force report included recommendations that, except for the instruments for nontraditional instruction, the new evaluation forms remain unchanged until the end of the first five-year cycle, and that the College administration convene an ongoing faculty evaluation advisory committee to review the aggregate data and streamline the process.

The faculty evaluation advisory committee convened at the end of the Spring 1993 semester. The committee read previous reports, reviewed the aggregate data of the first evaluation, and consulted with faculty and academic and service support administrators.

The committee found that on the 15 basic evaluation items, using a rating scale ranging from 1.0 ("unsatisfactory") to 6.0 ("extremely satisfactory"), the mean score for faculty was 5.24, or "very satisfactory." These results were similar to those of 1991 and 1992, when 99 percent of the faculty were rated "satisfactory" or above.

In addition, the committee found that the evaluation system required the annual generation of more than 91,000 forms and that numerous logistical problems in site administration of the evaluation, which was conducted by students, required considerable extra time and work of the computer services staff. In view of the predictable outcome of the evaluations, the committee concluded that the cost factor in time, stress, and money for administering annual evaluations was disproportionate to the amount of useful information gained.

Current Faculty Evaluation

The Chancellor's Cabinet in June 1993 approved several modifications to streamline the faculty evaluation system, including those that are summarized below.

■ Summary of Major Changes in Student/Client Evaluations

- Faculty receiving satisfactory ratings from students/clients in the Spring semesters of 1992/93 and 1993/94 will be evaluated every three years in the Spring, instead of annually.
- Rather than being administered to all classes, evaluations will usually be administered to two classes selected from each full-time faculty member's regular load in the appropriate Spring semester and to one class taught by each adjunct faculty every Spring.

- Client evaluations of counselors, librarians, and other educational support faculty will be conducted within regular time periods approved by the faculty member's immediate administrative supervisor.
- New regular full-time faculty members will be evaluated during the Spring district-wide process.
- District-wide use of the instrument for nontraditional courses will be eliminated. Campuses will be encouraged to develop an evaluation procedure for nontraditional instructional formats.
- Forms for team-taught and short-term courses will be delivered to deans of instruction on schedules that accommodate the special needs of those courses.
- A scanner that will accept pencil or ink will be acquired to reduce the expense and time involved in distributing and collecting special pencils for student use.

■ Summary of Major Changes in Cumulative Faculty Evaluations

- Regular full-time faculty will be scheduled on a six-year (rather than a five-year) cycle during the fall semester for better alignment with the three-year review by students.
- Newly hired faculty will undergo the cumulative process in the first year of employment and usually once every six years thereafter.
- Faculty who change assignment status (e.g., from instructional faculty to educational support faculty) will also undergo cumulative evaluation in the first year.

Other provisions of the cumulative review process will remain the same as described in the Faculty Personnel Policy Statement.

Continuing efforts to ensure quality education through effective teaching will include: 1) collecting feedback from faculty, students, and support service units, then making annual modifications when necessary, and 2) reviewing and implementing a variety of intermittent classroom evaluation techniques that will be most useful to faculty members and academic administrators.

Forms for the Student Evaluation of Instruction and for Cumulative Faculty Evaluation appear as Appendix items F and G. Reports of the Task Force on Effective Faculty Selection and Performance and the first Ad Hoc Committee on Comprehensive Faculty Evaluation are available in the Office of Human Resources.

Classified Staff

The College conducts a formal evaluation of regular, full-time classified staff employees annually. The evaluation process is under review and, like administrator and faculty evaluation, is likely to undergo significant changes in the near future.

The present form of the staff evaluation process is described below.

Near the employee's annual anniversary, the participating staff member completes a self-appraisal form, the supervisor completes a performance planning and evaluation form on the employee, and the two meet to review the completed forms. Progress toward or attainment of goals from the previous year is evaluated as goals are set for the year. Professional development plans are also established to continue building job-related knowledge and skills.

The employee has an opportunity to make comments before the supervisor's evaluation is reviewed by the appropriate administrator and filed in the Human Resources Office. The employee has the option of also including the self-appraisal form as part of his or her personnel file.

Evaluations of exempt personnel who supervise others employ an additional set of forms containing factors suited to their functions. In establishing goals for the subsequent year, these employees, like administrators, are expected to incorporate appropriate College goals consistent with those of their supervisors.

The self-appraisal form and performance planning and evaluation form for the classified staff appears in Exhibit H, and a supplementary form for exempt supervisory staff appears in Exhibit I.

INSTRUCTIONS

STEP 1

- A. You will need the following two forms to complete this step:
 - 1. The "Employee Self-Appraisal Worksheet" (Yellow form);
 - 2. The "Performance Planning and Evaluation" form (Beige form).
- B. Have a short meeting with your employee to discuss the performance appraisal process and to give the "Employee Self-Appraisal Worksheet" to the employee. The employee should complete the form. However, entering a rating number in the box is optional. The employee has the option to include this form as part of his or her personnel file.
- C. Let the employee know that you will be completing the "Performance Planning and Evaluation" form before the next meeting. Explain the form so that the employee will know the factors on which his or her performance rating will be based.
- D. Schedule a time and place to meet again to review the completed forms.

STEP 2

- A. Based on your assessment of the employee's performance, fill out the "Performance Planning and Evaluation" form.
- B. If you are evaluating an exempt employee who supervises others, you must also complete the "Supplemental Factors for Exempt Personnel Who Supervise Others" form. (Gray form)
- C. The rating descriptions on the first page of the "Performance Planning and Evaluation" form are used for each factor. When considering the employee's performance for each factor, be sure to list specific examples of on-the-job behavior to cite strengths and areas for improvement. Each factor is assigned a numerical rating based on overall performance in that specific area. If a factor does not apply to the job, write "not applicable" in the space next to the factor.

STEP 3

- A. Meet with your employee to discuss the "Performance Planning and Evaluation" form and the "Employee Self-Appraisal Worksheet." Be sure to schedule enough time in a private area where there will not be interruptions.
- B. After discussing the ratings, give the form to the employee for his or her comments and signature. It is suggested that the employee have at least one day to make comments.

STEP 4

After discussing the employee's comments, make a copy for your files and forward the original packet to the appropriate level of supervisor(s) and the appropriate administrator for signature.

STEP 5

ADMINISTRATORS: After reviewing and signing, please forward original packet to the Personnel/Human Resources Office.
