ABSTRACT

This reference document lists national organizations that serve as information clearinghouses, referral agencies, or legislative advocates for children, youths, and adults with physical disabilities. Many provide services directly to the individual and include peer and family support, education, and counseling. Some also support research on the cause of specific disorders and their prevention; train professionals; and publish pamphlets, catalogs, monographs, and journals relating to specific disabilities. The resource list is divided into three parts: (1) a list of 59 national organizations and resources, with addresses, telephone numbers, principal publications, and descriptions of the organizations' activities; (2) a list of 16 federal agencies, with similar information; and (3) a select bibliography of 36 items, listing special subject periodicals and directories on advocacy, adaptive equipment, services, and related topics.
