ABSTRACT

This directory lists 593 organizations located in Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, and Washington, as well as national organizations, whose objectives relate to the provision or improvement of educational services to Native Americans and Alaska Natives. Additionally, many of the organizations are involved in the social and economic betterment of Native Americans and the preservation of Native culture. The first section lists national associations, organizations, clearinghouses, and centers based in the five-state region. The remainder of the directory lists organizations by state. Listings include state-government and private organizations; post-secondary institutions and related organizations; federally recognized villages; elementary and secondary schools (public, Bureau of Indian Affairs, tribal, and parochial); media and publishers; libraries, museums, monuments and parks; federally recognized tribes; and non-federally recognized tribes. Many entries include address, contact person, and a brief description of the organization's objectives and services. (LP)

This directory is a companion volume to the 1993 Native Education Directory: Organizations and Resources for Educators of Native Peoples of the United States and Territories. It is intended to be used as a first-line source of information; i.e., the brief descriptions are meant only to suggest the content and scope of each organization's objectives and services. The organizations listed in this Directory reflect the Northwest region and inclusion does not suggest endorsement of any organization by Northwest Laboratory. We wish to thank all the people who responded generously with their time and correspondence in providing information for this directory. This directory is subject to periodic revision.

Northwest Regional Educational Laboratory (NWREL) is one of the original laboratories created by Congress in 1966. Today, the 10 laboratories' enduring mission is to improve the quality of education by helping policy makers and practitioners apply the best available knowledge from research, development, and practice. The Indian Education Program was established in 1972 as the Pacific Northwest Indian Reading and Language Development Program. With the change in programs focus from reading and language development to research and development in 1983, the name of the program was changed to Research and Development Program for Indian Education (RDPIE). NWREL serves the five Northwest Regional states: Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington. As a non-profit agency, NWREL is guided by a board of directors made up of leaders from public and private education, business, and communities throughout our region. This publication is based on work sponsored wholly or in part by the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Educational Research and Improvement (OERI), under Contract Number RP91002001. The content of this publication does not necessarily reflect the views of the department or any other agency of the U.S. government. NWREL also receives support from other government and state contracts, private and federal grants. NWREL, 101 S.W. Main Street, Suite 500, Portland, Oregon 97204, (503) 275-9500 or 1-800-547-6339.

Research and Development Program for Indian Education of the The Northwest Regional Educational Laboratory

The Northwest Regional Educational Laboratory is the only laboratory which has an Indian Education Program. The Research and Development Program for Indian Education (RDPIE) offers School Improvement in Indian Education training (on a cost share basis) which assists teachers and administrators at schools serving Indian students as they implement practices that have proven effective in Indian education. By applying the results of over a decade of effective schooling research, schools can use this process to set high standards, implement quality schooling practices, increase student achievement, and improve student social behavior.

An external review of impact, conducted in 1993, which included a sampling of all schools trained since 1986 revealed:

- Has the training caused a difference in providing services to Native American children?
Yes: 80%
- Since receiving the training, have you trained others in the content of the program?
Yes: 70%
- Did the training change your school organization? Yes: 30%
- Did the training make a difference in how school staff members relate to each other?
Yes: 70%
- Since participating, have you had an opportunity to influence practice or policy for Native American children? Yes: 90%

The RDPIE offers in-depth culturally relevant training in parent involvement for schools and communities. Training includes materials, dialogue, presentations, and practices designed to effect purposeful involvement of parents in the schooling process of their children. Teachers in particular gain valuable insights that enable them to implement classroom strategies that work, provide a more enjoyable environment for student learning, and secure confidence of parents in educating their children.

The RDPIE also offers inservice training on group dynamics, as Indian societies tend to be highly egalitarian. We offer a three-month inservice whereby teachers learn to use group processes which change negative attitudes to positive. Teachers learn by participation, then apply techniques in classrooms. This process is much more structured than our school improvement training.

The RDPIE is guided by a Policy Board comprised of Native American educators throughout the Northwest. They are (see back of this page):

*Some or all the information contained in these sections was taken from the Native American Information Directory, First Edition.

Preface

The Directory of Native Education Resources in the Northwest Region, 1994, is a first attempt at providing regional information on educational resources for native peoples of the Northwest. Containing entries on 593 organizations within the five-state region of Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, and Washington, this directory is a companion volume to the 1993 Native Education Directory: Organizations of Native Peoples of the United States and Territories, published by ERIC/CRESS in Charleston, West Virginia. Listed in the regional directory are organizations that provide educational services to Native Americans and Alaska Natives at the tribal, state, and regional levels. Many of the entries contain a brief description of the organization and its scope of services. Certain local programs and organizations are not included here because they are included in other state and tribal directories. (For example, information on Title V grantees, Head Start programs, or Chapter I programs can be obtained from state or tribal program personnel and regional assistance centers that serve these programs).

Despite our best efforts, we may have missed some educational organizations or native services. If your organization was not included, please fill out the form at the back of the directory and send it to us for inclusion in future directories.

Please note that this directory is a product of a national collaboration among eight of the 10 federally funded regional educational laboratories under the Native Education Initiative, and each has produced a directory for its region. The Native Education Initiative will publish other products aimed at achieving its common goal of improving educational services to native students. A list of participating regional educational laboratories can be found on page v of this directory.

The following NWREL staff contributed greatly to this product: Kim Wilgus, executive secretary, R&D Program for Indian Education, for layout and data entry; Mary Girouard, desktop publishing specialist, for typesetting and cover layout; Helen Davis, word processing specialist, for layout of the introductory pages; and Jerry Kirkpatrick, director of Institutional Development and Communications, and Michelle Driscoll, purchasing agent, for assistance in production and printing.

NISBA is a professional membership association, established in 1982 as a nonprofit education and service organization. Its major purpose is to facilitate the implementation of the BIA policy of Indian control in all matters relating to Indian education. Membership is open to BIA-funded schools, public schools, Indian parent committees, and tribal education committees. Congressional oversight and advocacy, training, and information sharing are the primary activities. An annual conference and regional workshops are conducted each year. Provides support to BIA's Office of Indian Education Programs in facilitating the school improvement initiatives.

Montana Public Television produces 'Native Voices,' where independent Native American producers are given the support to create cultural affairs documentaries that are relevant to both the Native American communities from which they emerge and the nation as a whole. These award-winning, educational programs have been screened in numerous festivals throughout the United States and Europe. They have been broadcast over Public Television and have earned many awards. Programs are appropriate for courses in American history, U.S. Western history, Native American studies, sociology, anthropology, religious studies, and language studies.

To continue the desegregation efforts that have brought us into the 1990's, the Center for National Origin, Race, and Sex Equity (CNORSE) is committed to assist public school personnel to embrace the key concepts of equity and help them eliminate bias and discrimination--whether overt or subtle, unconscious or intentional, personal or institutional--in the context of day-to-day activities. Despite legislation, court rulings, and specially funded programs, it is individuals who determine whether our children receive equal access to an equitable, high-quality education.

The Alaska Federation of Natives (AFN) is a statewide Native advocacy organization representing over 80,000 Alaska Natives. We are interested, concerned and involved in education issues impacting Alaska Natives from pre-school to post-secondary, vocational and academic programs, quality of education, language and culturally relevant curriculum, teacher training, Native hires at educational institutions, to name just a few of the issues.

AFN has aggressively sought involvement of the state and/or federal agencies that deliver educational programs to Alaska Natives because education is so important to the Native community. Staff and or AFN Board of Directors participate on a local, state and national level in making recommendations on education issues, i.e., testified at Indian Nations At Risk and the White House Conference on Indian Education. Of the 11 Alaska delegates to the White House Conference on Indian Education, the majority were members of the Joint Education Committee of the Alaska Federation of Natives and the Alaska Native Education Council. AFN was instrumental in the formation of the Alaska Natives Commission which will be completing its recommendations on policies and programs impacting Alaska Natives which, of course, will include education issues and the recent formation of the Joint BIA Education Task Force which will be making recommendations on Native education within the next 6 months.

In most cases, the Education Line Offices will be the best contact for parents, teachers, principals, school district personnel, tribal administrators, and state departments of education. Contacting the BIA headquarters will probably be most helpful to people involved in research, federal-level decision making, and higher education.

The primary responsibility of this part-time position is to coordinate the Johnson O'Malley Grant for the State of Idaho. The Coordinator has also participated in the formation of the Idaho Committee on Indian Education which produced Goals & Recommendations for Improving American Indian Education. This publication, which has had a limited printing, reflects the consensus of representatives of all Idaho tribes in presenting goals and recommendations for improving American Indian Education in Idaho and it relates these to both the Indian Nations at Risk and the State's Goals for 2,000 and Beyond. This office prepares the annual Johnson O'Malley Report

The Billings American Indian Council was set up in the early 1970's to assist the Urban Native Americans find jobs and assist with higher educational goals which the larger cities offer. To this day we still have the same goals and have added other programs to assist the urban community. We now have a JTPA program which helps with training cost for the students in adult education, Vo-Tech and colleges here in the community. With the JTPA program we can also allow funds for supportive services which will help the worker with gas and lunch supplies until the first pay check. We have a Help and Recovery office here to help those who are dealing with drugs and alcohol. Also we have AA meetings 7 nights a week. We need to keep programs like this in the urban communities, as well as reservation communities, but it is hard at times because of the funding and lack of funding.

The Montana United Indian Association is a statewide, non-profit consortium dedicated to the improvement of the social and economic welfare of the off-reservation Indian people in Montana. At the present time there are seven service centers located in Anaconda, Billings, Butte, Helena, Great Falls, Miles City and Missoula.

Montana, the third largest of the lower forty eight states, contains seven Indian reservations within its boundaries. The 1980 census reports 37,000 Indians in the State. The 1980 census report also indicates that one out of every four Indians reside in an off-reservation location. However, MUIA records indicate an off-reservation Indian population in excess of 14,500.

During the years that the Association has existed, a variety of service programs have been successfully administered, some of which are the following: Family Planning, Employment and Training, Mental Health, Child Abuse, Elderly Programs, Education, Comprehensive Health Services and a Crisis Intervention Program.

In October of 1974, the Blackfeet Tribal Business Council chartered the Blackfeet community college (BCC) by Executive action to "...provide post-secondary and higher educational services..." to the Blackfeet Indian Reservation community. The impetus for this action grew from early tribal efforts to provide an educational opportunity to its residents in a physically, climatically and culturally isolated area.

In December of 1976 the Blackfeet Board of Regents, under the auspices of the Blackfeet Tribe, entered into an agreement with Flathead Valley Community College (FVCC) of Kalispell, Montana, to offer extension courses on the reservation. After the formalization of the BCC Charter and By-Laws in 1976, the Extension Center courses of FVCC continued to grow at Browning, with Department of Education Title III funds as the primary resource. The College grew rapidly in student population, and course offerings ranged from 65 students in 1976 to a current enrollment of 491 for the 1992-93 year. The Vocational/Technical Education Program offers seven curricula of terminal degrees: Construction Technology, Secretarial-Administration, Legal and Medical, Small Business Management, Chemical Dependency, Hospitality, Fire Suppression and Apprenticeship Training. BCC offers the following degrees: Associate of Arts, Associate of Science and Associate of Applied Science.

Dull Knife Memorial College (DKMC) is located in Lame Deer. The original DKMC curriculum was aimed at training students for jobs in the developing mining enterprises in communities near the reservation. But, due to a recognition of the need for continued expansion of the vocational program and incorporation of academic classes, DKMC evolved. The first academic courses were offered at DKMC during Winter Quarter of 1978. Since that time the College has expanded its curricular offerings to provide an Associate of Arts Degree in the academic disciplines, an Associate of Applied Science in the vocational areas, and Vocational Certificates in various skill areas.

Fort Belknap College (FBC) was chartered by the Fort Belknap Community Council on November 8, 1984. In June 1987 FBC received candidacy status through the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges. This status enabled transferability of credits to other two- and four-year colleges and institutions. Before candidacy status was granted, the courses offered and degrees earned from 1980 through 1987 were awarded by fully accredited institutions.

The College operated as the Fort Belknap Resident Center of the College of Great Falls from 1980 to 1982. From 1982 to 1984 the College was a satellite campus of Dull Knife Memorial College, located in Lame Deer, Montana. In 1984 FBC became a branch of Salish Kootenai College out of Pablo, Montana. Salish Kootenai College was the College's "Mother" institution until December 1987. Under the careful guidance of SKC, Fort Belknap applied for and was granted status as a candidate for full accreditation. FBC received full accreditation by the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges in July 1993. FBC offers an Associate of Arts Degree in General Studies with an emphasis in business, human services, data processing, building trades, and liberal arts.

Fort Peck Community College (FPCC) was chartered by the government of the Fort Peck Assiniboine and Sioux Tribes. Courses in higher education were first introduced to the reservation by two state funded Montana community colleges: Dawson Community College in Glendive and Miles City Community College in Miles City.

In 1986, the Fort Peck Tribes established the Fort Peck Education Department. This department engaged in the development work beginning FPCC, which was officially chartered by the Tribal Executive Board. FPCC offers both Associate of Arts and Associate of Science Degrees.

Little Big Horn College (LBHC) is located in Crow Agency, Montana, the capital of the Crow Indian Reservation. The Crow Tribe chartered LBHC in the Crow Tribal Council of January 1980. The college gained its foundation through extensive adult and higher education programming by the Crow Central Education Commission. Association and affiliation with units of the Montana University System demonstrated the Crow tribal ability to design and instruct college level coursework.

The LBHC Catalog of 1981 offered five programs of study, four of which were vocational in nature. The 1983-85 Catalog offered nine Associate of Arts degree programs and three certificate programs. Associate of Arts graduates were recognized in the first graduation ceremony in 1984. By the spring of 1989, the total Associate Degree graduates numbered 52, 50 of whom were Crow Indian people. LBHC was granted full accreditation by the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges in June of 1990. LBHC offers Associate of Arts Degrees in the following: Business Administration, Crow Studies, Data Processing, General Studies, Home Economics, Mathematics, Office Systems, Psychology, and Science.

Salish Kootenai College (SKC) was established by official tribal action in November 1977 after it had operated as a satellite center of Flathead Valley Community College in Kalispell, Montana for three years. Tribal elders felt that the establishment of a college was necessary for the preservation of the Salish and Kootenai cultures and for the educational training of its membership.

SKC is a tribal college offering Bachelor of Arts Degrees, Associate of Arts Degrees, Associate of Applied Science Degrees, Associate of Science Degrees, Certification and Apprenticeship programs. Central administration offices are in Pablo, but programs and classes are offered throughout the reservation. SKC received full accreditation status from the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges in June of 1989.

Stone Child College (SCC) was chartered by the Chippewa-Cree Business Committee on May 17, 1984. It was the feeling of tribal leaders that the establishment of a college was necessary for the preservation and maintenance of the Chippewa-Cree culture and for the educational training of its tribal membership. The off-reservation vocational training programs and general college studies programs were not adequately meeting the needs of the Rocky Boy community. Post-secondary education programs designed to meet the specific needs of the Chippewa-Cree tribe is of paramount necessity.

SCC is a tribally controlled community college of the Chippewa-Cree Tribe, offering programs of study that lead to Associate of Arts and Associate of Science Degrees and Certificates as authorized by the Commission of the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges. SCC received full accreditation in July of 1993.

The IEPD Program is funded by the Office of Indian Education, Department of Education. The Primary objectives are 1) to recruit, support, and train Indian elementary or secondary school teachers with resultant Bachelor's degrees and required certification; 2) to recruit, support and train Indian guidance counselors, and, 3) to recruit, support, and train Indian school administrators.

The Program offers academic guidance and assistance, special course work, payment of tuition, and a limited amount for stipends and books. Financial assistance is available only to full-time students. Full-time is on a per term basis so graduate students may attend summers only. Stipends and book allowance may be paid only to Program participants who have unmet financial need as determined by appropriate financial aid office.

(503) 378-5481
LaVonne Lobert Edmo, Chair
Doug Hutchinson, Executive Director

The Commission on Indian Services was created by statute in 1975 to improve the services to American Indians in Oregon. To carry out its statutory duties, the Commission compiles and disseminates information about services for Indians and sponsors programs to make the needs of Indians known to the public and private agencies which serve them. In addition, the Commission measures the effectiveness of state programs serving Indians and recommends new or improved methods of meeting these needs. The Commission acknowledges that it will not be able to solve all problems Indians encounter, but with the support of Indians and state government, legislative and administrative solutions can be developed to meet many of these needs.

Mother Earth's Children is a non-profit Oregon corporation that seeks federal and state funding to promote positive Indian education, economic and social benefits through the development of innovative programs. The Ann C. Thornton Memorial Fund Scholarship annual awards of $500 each are awarded to four American Indian/Alaskan Native students who live in Oregon and who are enrolled (or will be enrolled) in a college or university in the fall. An American Indian Repertory Theater, is a drama component that presents traditional Indian stories in a visual manner. The theater is available primarily to the south coast area schools; however, performances can be arranged outside the local area. In addition, the theater will share information with other groups who wish to develop an interpretive theater of their own.

The Native American Program's primary goal is to recruit, retain and graduate American Indian and Alaskan Native students at Eastern Oregon

State College. The Native American students are a diverse group and represent tribes from Oregon, Washington, Alaska, California, Idaho, Montana and Canada.

The program staff includes a full time director, half time secretary and student employees. The staff work to help students so they may achieve their educational goals. Services include financial aid planning, scholarship information, academic advising and tracking, peer counseling and referral. The Native American Program maintains a resource library and the materials are available to all Eastern enrolled students.

The program director serves as club advisor to Speel-Ya-Indian Student club. Speel-Ya provides cultural and social support to American Indian and Alaskan Native students. The club is the host to an annual Spring Pow Wow and organizes other programs designed to promote cultural awareness for the general student population and the community of La Grande, Oregon.

In a cooperative effort the Oregon Indian Communities, Native American Program and Eastern Oregon State College faculty and staff host activities to recruit and retain Native American students, as well as to work together to promote cultural awareness and academic success.

The College of Oceanic & Atmospheric Sciences operates a research participation program for Oregon State University American Indian and Alaskan Native undergraduates interested in exploring science as a career. A National Science Foundation grant provides funding for the program. The objective of this program is to increase the number of native students in the scientific professions by giving students direct research experience. Student participants are paid hourly wages to work as student research assistants with faculty involved in scientific research projects. The program provides mentoring and part-time employment during the academic year, increasing to full-time during the summer.

United Indian Students of Higher Education (UISHE)
503/725-5671 FAX: 503/4882

The primary function of UISHE is educational. UISHE members are both contributors to and recipients of the educational process.

While working toward our own individual degrees, UISHE students have the opportunity to participate in university activities and local Native American community events. UISHE keeps students and the community informed about current Native American activities and concerns. Involvement with the Native American community enables UISHE members to come together and help meet the needs of our Indian people UISHE members represent many different tribes all throughout North America. Our club is vital in supporting students with various tribal identities, ages, and backgrounds. We seek positive recognition on the PSU campus. The following are UISHE's goals and are foundations to our club: Foster organizational cohesiveness among UISHE and other Indian students; Recruit new UISHE members; Recruit new students for PSU from among Native American resources; Prevent withdrawal from the educational environment by providing social and educational activities which will give students an opportunity to share common problems, solutions and support; Insure that the Indian students receive adequate counseling as the need arises; Present cultural activities of interest to the Portland State community; Act as a liaison between UISHE members and the Portland Indian community and participate in projects to benefit the community and it's members; Work in conjunction with other Student Development groups to bring outstanding programs of cultural and educational interest to the attention of the students, administration, and faculty and staff of PSU. UISHE's traditional and annual events include: Fall orientation; Christmas Powwow Canned Food and Toy Drive; Observation of Native American Heritage proclamations; Native American speakers series; Prose and Poetry series; Local and regional conferences on Native American affairs; Salmon Bake; Native American Cultural Awareness Week; UISHE Newsletter. UISHE is very much supported by the Portland Indian community and also by Portland State University. We will continue to make UISHE better and bigger each year, helping more students to understand what it means to be Indian in America today and all that can mean tomorrow.

The American Indian Community Center believes Education is the primary means by which American Indians and other citizens can improve their lifestyle situation. The American Indian Community Center provides an assortment of educational classes that are suitable for most any age: Adult Basic Education, Tutorial Services, GED Preparation Services, High School Completion Classes (13-19 years old), Education Clinic Classes, and Family Affair. Another aspect of our education programs in the Parenting As Prevention classes. The goals of Parenting As Prevention is to create a more positive quality of life, teach traditional values, and break dysfunctional behavior cycles for future generations of Indian people.

Native American Women's Society is an advocate for leadership in support group building for Native women and children. The group incorporates Native spirituality with education to form a solid base for women to grow out of dysfunctional situations. The programs' support groups form and run three months at a time. The group provides a safe place for women and children. Success has been at a high rate, which provides for a better future for our Native children.

They are a resource and liaison office between the state and all the Indian populations in Washington State. They provide training for state employees called, "State-Tribal Relations Training." The course provides a basic understanding of tribal governments, sovereignty, and Indian Culture. The two-day training is very appropriate for those who work directly with Washington tribes or urban populations, and those with an interest in better understanding Native Americans and state-tribal relations. It includes a personalized introduction to "Indian Country" by Michelle Aguilar, Executive Director and Jennifer Scott, Assistant Director, both of whom are Native American.

Lower Columbia College Student Support Services program has seven services to help Native American college students succeed. The services are Academic Advisement, Personal Counseling, Native American Financial Aid Advisement, Career Planning, Study Tables Tutoring, Transfer Advisement and Special Academic and Cultural Events. Small class size and a friendly campus also help Native American students to feel that they are in a positive and caring environment. There are general education classes that have diverse curriculums that include Native American history, art, literature, political science, cultural anthropology and humanities. There are several campus-wide cultural programs throughout the year, that highlight Native Americans. And there are top rated male and female community college basketball teams which have had several first string Native American players.

The Chemistry Department at the University of Washington, working with tribal leaders and educators, developed the Native American Science Outreach network (NASON). NASON will increase the participation of Native Americans in undergraduate and graduate science, engineering, and math programs at the University level and subsequently in science related professions. Students and secondary science teachers spend one summer month at the University learning science, computers, and communication skills and infusing Native American resources into science curriculum. Teachers and students form teams which spearhead science-based community service projects during the school year. Projects involve other students, parents, community members and corporate partners.

The Native American Student Center, which is a part of the Division of Multicultural Student Services, is dedicated to meeting the needs of WSU's Native American students. The center serves as a link between the University, the student, and the student's tribal home by providing various support services for Native American students. These services include: academic advising, personal counseling, referral to campus services, peer mentoring, financial aid information, and Native American resource information. The center also provides a chance for students to get involved. There are four Native American student organizations on campus: AISES, Ku-Au-Mah, NAWA, and Native American Alliance. Membership in each of these organizations is open to any interested WSU student regardless of race, religion, sex, color, nationality, ethnic origin, age, marital status, or handicap.

The Muckleshoot Tribal School is a K to 5th grade school, in a 12-21 year old re-entry program. Each year the school expands a grade until it will be a K-12 school. The school is the only Native American school that offers a total immersion Lushootseed (Native American) language program for dance, culture, storytelling, and acts. English is not spoken during the students' sessions. We have found this has greatly increased their understanding and use of their Native language and culture.

The Yakima Tribal School is a private school that is owned and operated by the Yakima Indian Nation. It is approved as a Private School by the Superintendent of Public Instruction's Office, Washington, State. The school provides an option for Indian students in grades 7 through 12, whose academic, cultural, spiritual, and social needs are not being met by other educational systems. The students who are enrolled in the Yakima Tribal School, are here because they and their parents or guardians want the student to be here.

Research has demonstrated that people learn in different ways and at different rates. The Yakima Tribal School promotes learning styles and curriculum content designed to meet our Indian students' needs. Rather than imitate the educational systems in which students have not been successful, the school strives to serve our students in an atmosphere that is conducive to learning so an individual can achieve his or her maximum potential.
