ABSTRACT

A Pima County (Arizona) adult workplace education program in English as a Second Language (ESL) is outlined. Salient elements in program design, student recruitment and program marketing, student assessment, instructional methods, and program evaluation are noted, and the topical content of the ESL curriculum is charted. Tasks/competencies and language functions to be taught are specified in each of these job-related areas: giving and getting personal information; socializing at work; tools, supplies, equipment, and materials; learning, doing, and teaching on the job; working in teams; on-the-job health and safety; company policy, pay and benefits; and individual job performance review. WORKPLACE EDUCATION PARTNERSHIPS:
COMPROMISES, PROMISES, AND PRACTICES

PRACTICES

PROGRAM DESIGN

- Include workers as much as possible in all levels of program design
- Meet the needs of both the employer and employees
- Promote incentives (i.e., release time, bonuses, pay for skills, etc.)
- Create advisory committees
- Report to company at the end of each class

RECRUITMENT/MARKETING

- Go out on the floor
  - Talk to workers in groups (or the whole company if it's small) and explain the program
  - Talk to managers and supervisors (all shifts). Get them to buy in
- Ask workers who have been in classes to recruit others
- Use flyers, pictures from classes, and articles in company newsletters
- Schedule convenient days and times

ASSESSMENT

- Administer pre-and post-tests
- Use teacher-made, standardized, and/or alternative assessments
- Be confidential

CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT

- Conduct needs assessment (workers and company) and job task analysis
- Use company materials and functional context
- Design participatory curriculum

INSTRUCTIONAL METHODOLOGIES

- Be worker-centered
- Use cooperative learning techniques which foster team building
- Let materials and curriculum dictate methodologies
- Utilize simulations, role plays, and scenarios

EVALUATION

- Develop an ongoing evaluation process

Not all tasks and functions are taught at every worksite nor for every job category. The ESOL teacher selects from these items to design a curriculum appropriate to each class.

Extensive yet possibly distinct vocabulary is required for each task and each worksite. Tasks may include reading, writing, listening and/or speaking activities.
