ABSTRACT

The goal of this civic education program, written for six through ninth grade students in the form of an instructional guide/student workbook, is to help students develop citizenship skills important for intelligent and effective participation in a self-governing society. Specific educational objectives include helping students learn: (1) how to express their opinions; (2) how to decide which level of government and which agency is most appropriate for dealing with the community problems they identify; and (3) how to influence policy decisions at that level of government. The guide provides students with step-by-step instructions for identifying and studying a public policy problem and for developing a class portfolio, a cumulative organized collection of information (statements, charts, graphs, photographs, and original art work) that makes up the class plan related to the public policy issue studied. This student instructional guide is organized into the following sections: "Step I: Identifying Public Policy Problems in Your Community"; "Step II: Selecting a Problem for Class Study"; "Step III: Gathering Information on the Problem Your Class Will Study"; "Step IV: Developing a Class Portfolio"; "Step V: Presenting Your Portfolio"; and "Step VI: Reflecting on Your Learning Experience." Additional resources provided include a glossary of 50 relevant civics terms and nine appendices consisting of sample lists of libraries, newspapers, professors/scholars, lawyers/ judges/bar associations, businesses, community and interest groups, as well as city, state, and U.S. government offices, all community resources that students can research locally with the appropriate reference materials (telephone books/directories, business directories, and lists of public service organizations) available at most public libraries. Illustrations also are included. (CB)

A Note to Students

Dear students, teachers, and parents:

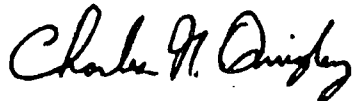

We at the Center for Civic Education welcome your participation in We the People... Project Citizen, a program in civic education. We hope you will find it interesting and worthwhile.

In the words of Abraham Lincoln, we have inherited a government that is "of the people, by the people, and for the people..." Our right to participate in governing ourselves in order to protect our rights and promote our common welfare carries certain responsibilities. Among these responsibilities are the need to develop the knowledge and skills to participate intelligently and the willingness to promote liberty and justice for all people.

We believe this program will add to students' knowledge, enhance their skills, and deepen their understanding of how we can all work together to make our communities better.

We wish you well, and we hope that you find the program a stimulating and valuable experience.

Sincerely,

Charles N. Quigley
Executive Director

Introduction

In the United States a public policy is an agreed upon way that our federal, state, or local government fulfills its responsibilities, such as protecting the rights of individuals and promoting the welfare of all the people. Some public policies are written into laws by legislatures. Other policies are contained in rules and regulations created by executive branches of government, the branches responsible for carrying out and enforcing laws.

The following are examples of public policies and the governmental agencies responsible for carrying them out.

- School districts are responsible for making policies regarding student behavior and discipline. Teachers and school administrators enforce these policies.
- State legislatures are responsible for making laws that place speed limits on drivers. Police officers enforce these laws.
- City governments often adopt policies that prohibit people from operating liquor stores near public schools. City inspectors and zoning departments enforce these policies.

When people become aware of problems in their communities, they often want government to develop and carry out policies to deal with those problems. These may be problems for which there are

- existing policies or laws that do not work well,
- existing policies or laws that are not being enforced,
- no policies or laws.

As a citizen of the United States you have a right to say what you think government should do about problems in your community. You also have a right to say what you think about problems in your state, the nation, and about international problems. You have the right to try to influence the decisions people in your government make about all of those problems.

To be able to participate effectively, however, citizens need to know which levels of government and which governmental agencies are responsible for changing, enforcing, or developing a specific public policy. For example, state legislatures may direct agencies to enact policies resulting from federal legislation. Or, local governments may create policies in order to carry out responsibilities assigned to them through laws enacted at the state or federal level. Additionally, as part of the process of developing and implementing policy, governmental agencies must determine if the new policy conflicts with existing legislation or policy.

This project is intended to help you learn how to express your opinions, how to decide which level of government and which agency is most appropriate for dealing with the problem you identify, and how to influence policy decisions at that level of government. It calls for you to work cooperatively with others in your class and, with the help of your teacher and adult volunteers, to accomplish the following tasks:

1. Identify a problem to study. You will begin by identifying a problem in your community that you think is important and determine which level of government is most directly responsible for dealing with the problem.
2. Gather information. When your class has decided upon the problem you want to study, you will need to gather and evaluate information about the problem from a variety of sources.

3. Examine solutions. Next, you will examine public policies that now are being used by your government. You also will examine policies being suggested by other people.
4. Develop your own public policy. Next, you will develop a public policy that you think your government should adopt.
5. Develop an action plan. Finally, you will develop a plan of action to show how you might influence the appropriate government or governmental agency to adopt your proposed public policy.

Your class will use the materials you have gathered and written as you accomplish these tasks to develop a class portfolio. The portfolio is an organized collection of information which makes up your class plan related to a public policy issue that you and your class have decided to study. The class portfolio will contain such things as written statements, charts, graphs, photographs, and original art work. These materials will portray

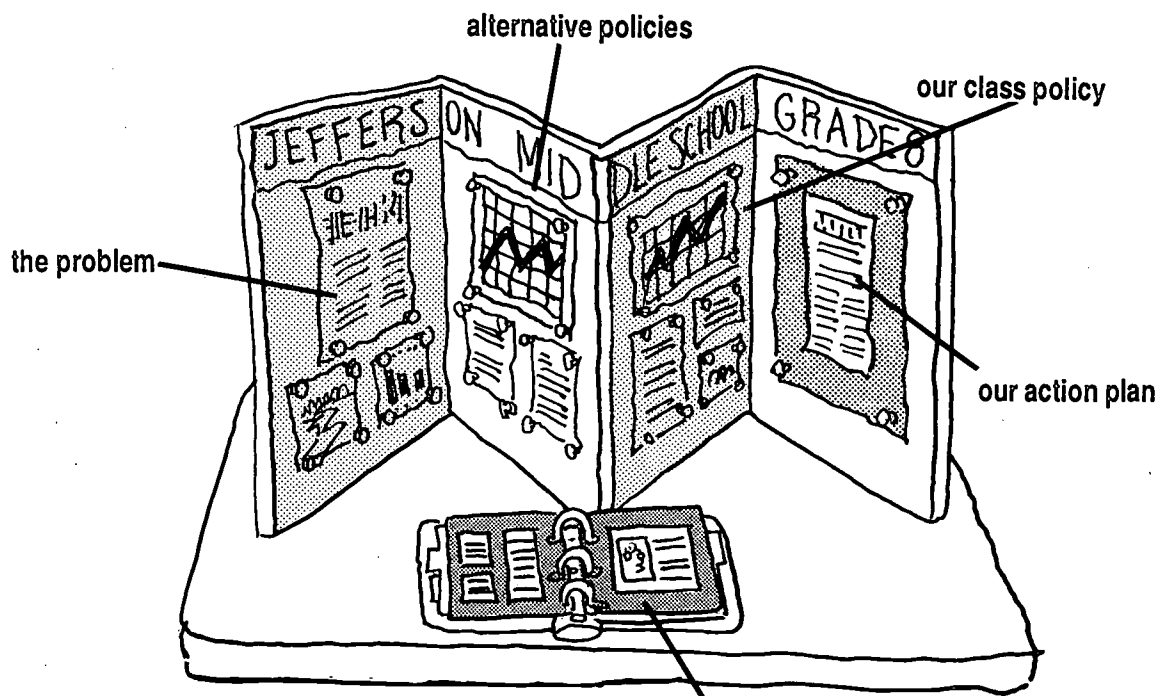

- 1) what you have learned about the problem you have selected;

- 2) what you have learned about alternative solutions to the problem;
- 3) what public policy you have selected or developed to deal with the problem;
- 4) the plan of action you have developed to use in attempting to get your government to adopt your policy.

This instructional guide will provide step-by-step instructions for identifying and studying a public policy problem and for developing your class portfolio.

Your class is encouraged to present its portfolio orally to other classes in your school or to community groups. Your class may enter its portfolio in a competition with other classes who have also developed portfolios.

The knowledge you gain in studying a problem in your community is valuable. It should be shared with others for their benefit. Sharing your knowledge and understanding also will benefit you. It will help you develop skills important for participation in a self-governing society. See Step V: Presenting Your Portfolio, page 33, for more details on making oral presentations.

Step 1: Identifying Public Policy Problems in Your Community

Purpose of Step 1

In this step you will read a short list of problems found in many communities in the United States. These represent problems people often think should be dealt with by their government. After reading the list, you will

- Tell your class what you already know about these problems or what you have heard in discussions about them.
- Interview your parents and others in your community to learn and record what they know about these problems and their attitudes towards them.

The purpose of this step is for you to share what you, your classmates, and others already know about problems in your community. This should help your class gain enough information to make an intelligent choice of one specific problem to study.

A. Class Discussion

Sharing what you know about problems in your community

To complete this activity, your entire class should

1. Read and discuss the problems listed that might be found in your community.
2. Divide into groups of two to three students. Each group should be assigned to discuss one of the problems. Then, the group should write its answers to the questions about the problem that are listed on the Problem Identification and Analysis Form on page 12.

3. Share the answers of each group with the entire class.
4. Keep the completed forms of all groups for later use.

Common problems in communities

Communities across the United States have many problems in common. Some problems may be more serious in some communities than in others. People often think that government should be responsible for adopting policies to help solve these problems.

Problems in schools

1. Many people claim that schools do not teach skills that adequately prepare students to get jobs when they graduate.
2. Some students use language and other forms of expression that are insulting to certain groups.
3. Gang activity both in and out of school makes many students afraid for their personal safety.

Problems regarding young people

1. Young people sometimes work long hours in after-school or weekend jobs. This often makes it difficult for them to do well in school.
2. Some working parents do not have enough money to pay for adequate care for their children during working hours. As a result, young children may be left home alone, sometimes in dangerous circumstances.

Problems involving community standards

1. Some stores advertise and sell tobacco and alcohol near schools. Others sell materials that some people might think obscene, near schools.
2. Some facilities or group homes for elderly persons or persons with disabilities do not meet health or safety standards. Some may treat residents poorly.

Problems involving basic liberties

1. Large numbers of people do not vote in elections. This is especially true in local elections.
2. Many people argue that money plays too great a role in the election of government officials.

Problems concerning the environment

1. Some communities have problems that involve conflicts about the protection of the environment and the protection of jobs.
2. Some communities do not have recycling programs, or those they have do not work well.

B. Small Group Activity

Work with one or two other students to discuss the problem you have been assigned. Then write your answers to the questions on the Problem Identification and Analysis Form on page 12.

If your class wishes to investigate a problem not listed, it may do so.

C. Homework Assignments

Finding out more about problems in your community

The three assignments which follow should help you learn more about problems in your community and the public policies designed to deal with them. Use the forms provided to record the information you gather. Save all the information you collect during these assignments. You may want to include some of it in your class portfolio.

1. Interview Assignment. Select one problem from the suggestions on pages 9 and 10, or a problem your class has identified, to discuss with your family, friends, neighbors, or others. Find out what they know about that problem in your community and how they feel about it. Use the Interview Form on page 13 to record the information you receive.

2. Printed Sources Assignment. Look in newspapers and other printed sources of information for evidence of the problem and policies designed to deal with it in your community. Bring materials you find to your class. Share them with your teacher and your classmates. Use the Printed Sources Form on page 14 to record the printed information you have looked at.

3. Radio and TV Assignment. Look or listen for news reports on television or radio concerning the problem and related policies. Bring the information to class to share with your teacher and other classmates. Use the Radio/Television Observation Form on page 15 to record the information you have gathered.

- What disagreements about this policy, if any, exist in our community? _____

Step II: Selecting a Problem for Class Study

Purpose of Step II

Your entire class should discuss what you have discovered about the problems in your community. Decide if you have enough information to select a problem for class study.

A. Class Discussion

Deciding if you have enough information to select a problem

Use the following steps to select one specific problem for your class to study.

1. If your class thinks it has enough information to make a decision, the class should select a problem by majority vote. Be sure to select a problem that is important to you and your community. Be sure that it is a problem about which you can gather information to develop a good portfolio.
2. If your class decides it needs more information before making a decision on which problem to study, homework assignments may be given to different groups to gather more information on the problems.

Step III: Gathering Information on the Problem Your Class Will Study

Purpose of Step III

Now that your class has selected a problem, you must decide where to get additional information. You will find that some sources of information will be better than others. For example, if you have selected an environmental problem, you will find certain individuals and groups know more about that problem in your community than others.

A. Class Activity

Identifying sources of information

The following is a list of some sources of information you might explore. Read and discuss the list. Decide which sources to contact. Then divide into research teams.

Each research team should gather information from one of the sources listed or others your class identifies. Forms to use in gathering and recording information are included on pages 12–15 and 20–23. Refer to the appendices on pages 39–57 for examples of sources of information and how to contact them.

Adult volunteers may assist your team in gathering information, but they should not do your work for you. Save all the information you gather for use in the development of the class portfolio.

You might wish to invite people to visit your class to share what they know about the problem you are studying.

Examples of sources of information

1. LIBRARIES – School, public, college, and university libraries in your community have newspapers and other publications with information about the problem you are researching. Librarians are there to help you find the information you need. Libraries may have coin operated machines for making photocopies of the information you may wish to use in your portfolio.

2. NEWSPAPER OFFICES – You may wish to contact the offices of newspapers in your community. Newspaper reporters gather information on problems in their communities and what government is doing about them. Newspaper offices and reporters may be able to provide your class with clippings on the problem you are studying. They can also provide photographs for which they may charge a small fee.

3. PROFESSORS AND SCHOLARS – Professors in local colleges or universities may be experts on the problem you are studying. Your phone book will list the public information offices of nearby colleges and universities. You can call those offices for help in locating scholars who might be helpful. You also could contact high school teachers of government in your community.

4. LAWYERS OR JUDGES – Most lawyers and judges belong to bar associations that provide some free services to the public.

Both lawyers and judges are excellent sources of information on many problems in communities. Ask the principal if there are parents of students at your school who are lawyers. Use a telephone directory to find the bar association nearest you.

5. COMMUNITY ORGANIZATIONS AND INTEREST GROUPS – Many groups take an interest in problems found in our communities and the nation. These are called interest groups. Some may be found in your community or area. Use a telephone directory to find their offices.

Your class may have identified some interest groups dealing with the problem you are studying when you did the first homework assignment. Your teacher or an adult volunteer can help you call or write to them for information.

6. LEGISLATIVE OFFICES – Your representatives in the legislative or law-making branches of your local government, state government, and the United States Congress are responsible for identifying problems and suggesting or supporting public policies to deal with them.

Your member of Congress and your representative in your state legislature each has an office in your community, area, or state. You can find the address and phone numbers of these offices in a telephone book. Each office will have one or more people on its staff responsible for helping you and other citizens gain information about problems in your community, state, or the nation.

Members of Congress may be able to obtain briefing papers on the problem you are studying from the Congressional Research Service, a part of the Library of Congress.

7. ADMINISTRATIVE AGENCIES – People working in the administrative agencies of your local, state, and national government may deal with the problem your class has chosen to study. Public information offices can provide information on the problem and what the government is doing about it. For example, your local government may have a health department or a building safety department. Use your phone book to find these or other appropriate offices.
8. ELECTRONIC INFORMATION NETWORKS – Many of the above sources as well as numerous others are available online through the Internet. If your school does not have access to this service, check with libraries in your area.

B. Guidelines for Obtaining and Documenting Information

Most people working in the places where you can find information are very busy people. It is important to follow the suggestions given below to avoid having the class place too much of a burden on the offices and individuals being asked for information.

1. Visiting libraries and other places where information can be found. Individually or in small groups you may visit libraries or offices of various public and private groups that have information on the problem. (Use the Information from Publications–Documentation Form on pages 20 and 21.)

C. Homework Assignment

Researching the problem in your community

After deciding what sources of information to use, your class should be divided into research teams. Each team should be responsible for gathering information from a different source.

If you are the person in your research team who is assigned to contact one of the sources of information described above, begin by introducing yourself. Then inform the person of your purpose or why you are contacting him or her. Use the following guidelines for introducing yourself by letter or in person.

(Use the Information from Letters or Interviews–Documentation Form on pages 22 and 23 to record the answers you receive.)

- 2. Calling sources on the phone. No more than one student should be given the assignment of calling any office for information. It is important, therefore, that the student who calls clearly records the information gained during a phone interview. (Use the Information from Letters or Interviews–Documentation Form on pages 22 and 23 to record the information you receive.)
- 3. Making appointments and interviewing people. One student should call to arrange for an appointment. A small group may visit an office or person to conduct a personal interview. (Use the Information from Letters or Interviews–Documentation Form on pages 22 and 23 to record the information you receive.)
- 4. Writing and requesting information. One or more students may write a letter requesting information from each office or person. Including a self-addressed stamped envelope may help you get a response. (Use appropriate Documentation Forms on pages 20–23 to record the information you receive.)

Introducing Yourself

My name is (your name). I am a student in (teacher's name) (6, 7, 8, or 9th) grade class in (name of school).

We are studying local problems, how they are dealt with by government, and how citizens can participate in their government.

The problem my class is studying is (briefly describe the problem).

I am responsible for finding out information about the problem to share with my class.

May I ask you a few questions now or is there another time that would be better for me to call? Is there another person I should call?

Do you have any printed information on the problem that you can send us? (If you are calling on the phone and the answer is yes, be prepared to give the person the address of your school.)

h. If our class develops a policy to deal with this problem, how might we influence our government to adopt our policy?

Step IV: Developing a Class Portfolio

Purpose of Step IV

You should now have completed enough research to begin to develop your class portfolio. Your class should be divided into four groups. Each group will be responsible for developing one part of the portfolio.

The materials in the portfolios should include the best documentation the class and group have gathered in investigating the problem. It also should include students' original written materials and/or artwork.

A. Specifications for Portfolios

The work of all four groups will be featured in a class portfolio. It will have two sections: a display section and a documentation section.

1. Display section. For this section the work of each of the four groups should be placed on a separate panel of the four-panel display. The display should be composed of four sheets of poster board or foam-core board, or the equivalent, no larger than 32"wide by 40"high. The display should be developed so it can be placed on a table, bulletin board, or an easel.

Materials to be displayed may include written statements, list of sources, charts, graphs, photographs, and original art work, etc. (See illustration on page 8.)

2. Documentation section. Each of the four groups should select from the materials gathered those which best document or give evidence of their research. Materials included in the document section should represent samples of the most important and/or significant research you have completed. Not all research should be included.

Documentation materials should be put in a three ring binder no larger than 2" thick. Use different colored dividers to separate the four sections. Prepare a table of contents for each section.

B. Portfolio Group Tasks

The following are the tasks of each portfolio group. Each group should select from the materials gathered by all the research teams those that help them complete the tasks described below. (More detailed instructions for each group are included on the next page in section D.)

Portfolio Group One: Explaining the problem. This group is responsible for explaining the problem the class has chosen to study. The group also should explain why the problem is important and why that level of government or governmental agency should deal with it.

Portfolio Group Two: Evaluating alternative policies suggested to deal with the problem. This group is responsible for explaining present and/or alternative policies designed to solve the problem.

Portfolio Group Three: Developing a public policy the class will support. This group is responsible for developing and justifying a specific public policy that the majority of the class agrees to support.

Portfolio Group Four: Developing an action plan to get government to accept the class policy. This group is responsible for developing an action plan showing how citizens can influence their government to adopt the policy the class supports.

C. Portfolio Evaluation Criteria

On the following page there is a Portfolio Criteria Checklist which will help you develop the best possible portfolio. Use it as a guide while you are developing your portfolio. In addition to the items described in the Portfolio Criteria Checklist you will want to consider the overall effect of your portfolio. You will want your portfolio to show creative problem solving and originality. Be careful to be selective in the information you present.

If your class enters its portfolio in a competition with other classes, a panel of judges will consider the Portfolio Criteria

Checklist as they evaluate your portfolio. They will give separate ratings to each of your portfolio sections and to the portfolio as a whole.

D. Instructions for Portfolio Groups

The following instructions specify each group's tasks in more detail. Although each group has specific tasks, it is important that they communicate with one another to share ideas and information. Each group should keep the entire class informed of its progress and work cooperatively with the other groups so that the class develops the best portfolio it can.

Groups should collaborate as they decide what specific items should be included in the display and documentation sections of the portfolio. This collaboration will avoid displaying the same information more than once and guarantee the inclusion of the best exhibits or evidence.

PORTFOLIO CRITERIA CHECKLIST

Criteria for each section of the portfolio:

- Completeness.
Does each section include the material described on pages 27–32 for Portfolio Groups 1–4?
Have you included more than you need?
- Clarity.
Is your portfolio well organized?
Is your portfolio clearly written, grammatical, and correctly spelled?
Are major points and arguments easy to understand?
- Information.
Is the information accurate?
Does the information cover major facts and important concepts?
Is the information you included important for understanding your topic?
- Support.
Have you given examples to explain or support your major points?
Have you given thoughtful explanations for your major points?
- Graphics.
Do your graphics relate specifically to your section's content?
Do your graphics provide information? Does each have a caption or title?
Do your graphics help people understand your display?
- Documentation.
Have you documented the major points in your portfolio section?
Have you used reliable, trustworthy, and varied sources?
Does your documentation clearly relate to the display?
Have you selected only the best and most important sources of information?
- Constitutionality.
Have you explained why your proposed policy does not violate the Constitution? (applies to group 3)

Criteria for the overall portfolio:

- Persuasiveness.
Does your portfolio give ample evidence that your selected problem is important?
Does your proposed policy address the problem directly?
Does your portfolio explain how you might gain public support for the proposed policy?
- Practicality.
Is your proposed policy practical and realistic?
Is your plan for gaining support for your proposed policy realistic?
- Coordination.
Does each of the four parts of your display portfolio relate to the others without repeating information?
Does the documentation section of your portfolio provide evidence to support your display portfolio?
- Reflection.
Does the section where you reflect upon and evaluate the development of your portfolio demonstrate that you have thought carefully about your experience?
Do you demonstrate what you have learned from the portfolio development experience?

Portfolio Group One

Explaining the problem

Your group is responsible for explaining the problem in the first display and documentation sections of your class portfolio.

A. Display section of portfolio: Part 1

This part should include the following items:

1. A written summary of the problem. Review material gathered by research teams. Write no more than two double spaced typed pages explaining the problem. Summarize what you have learned in response to the following questions.
 - a. How serious is this problem in your community?
 - b. How widespread is the problem in your state or the nation?
 - c. Why is this a problem that should be handled by government? Should anyone else also take responsibility for solving the problem? Why?
 - d. Which of the following do you think is true?
 - There is no law or policy for dealing with the problem.
 - The law for dealing with the problem is not adequate.
 - The law for dealing with the problem is adequate, but it is not being well enforced.
 - e. What disagreements, if any, exist in your community about this problem?
 - f. Who are the major individuals, groups, or organizations taking sides on the problem?
 - Why are they interested?
 - What positions are they taking?
 - What are the advantages and disadvantages of their positions?

- How are they trying to influence government to adopt their views?

- g. What levels of government or governmental agencies, if any, are responsible for dealing with the problem? What are they doing about the problem?

2. Graphic presentations of the problem. This may include charts, graphs, photos, political cartoons, newspaper headlines, tables of statistics, and other illustrations. Illustrations may be from printed sources or they may be your original creations. Each illustration should have a caption or title.
3. Identification of your sources of information. On one or more typed pages, identify sources the class has used.

B. Documentation section of portfolio: Part 1

In Part 1 of the class binder include copies of the best or most important information your class gathered and used in your examination and explanation of the problem. For example, you may include selected

- newspaper or magazine clippings;
- written reports of interviews with people in the community;
- written reports of radio and television coverage of the problem;
- communications from public and private interest groups; and
- excerpts from government publications.

Lengthy documents and reports should be represented by copies of their title pages, tables of contents, and a one page summary (or abstract) of the document either taken from the document itself or written by the group. Be sure to prepare a table of contents for this section.

Portfolio Group Two

Examining alternative policies to deal with the problem

Your group is responsible for clearly explaining and evaluating present and/or alternative policies designed to deal with the problem. Your findings are presented in the second display and documentation sections of your class portfolio.

A. Display section of portfolio: Part 2

This part should include the following items.

1. A written summary of alternative policies. Select two or three of the policies proposed by different individuals or groups. (You may include an existing policy.) For each policy you select, include no more than one double spaced typed page which summarizes your answers to the following questions:
 - a. What is the policy proposed by the individual or group?
 - b. What are the advantages and disadvantages of the policy?
2. Graphic presentations of the policies. This may include charts, graphs, photos, drawings, political cartoons, newspaper headlines, tables of statistics, and other illustrations related to the policies. These illustrations may come from printed sources or they may be your original creations. Each illustration should have a caption or title.

3. Identification of your sources of information. On one or more typed pages, identify sources the class has used to gather information.

B. Documentation section of portfolio: Part 2

Include in Part 2 of the class binder copies of the best or most important information your class gathered and used in examining and evaluating present and alternative policies to deal with the problem. For example, you may include as documentation selected

- newspaper or magazine clippings;
- written reports or summaries of interviews with people in the community;
- written reports of radio and television coverage of the problem;
- communications from public and private interest groups; and
- excerpts from government publications.

Lengthy documents and reports should be represented by copies of their title pages, tables of contents, and a one-page summary (or abstract) of the document either taken from the document itself or written by the group. Be sure to prepare a table of contents for this section.

Portfolio Group Three

Proposing a public policy to deal with the problem

Your group is responsible for proposing a public policy to deal with the problem. The policy your group chooses must be agreed to by a majority of your class. It must also be a policy that does not violate your federal or state constitution. A Constitutional Opinion Form is included on pages 30–31 to assist you and your class in making sure your policy does not violate the federal constitution or your state constitution. Once this is decided your class may choose to

- support one of the alternative policies identified by Portfolio Group Two,
- modify one of those policies, or
- develop your own policy.

A. Display section of portfolio: Part 3

This part should include the following items:

1. A written explanation and justification for your suggested policy. You should explain the policy your class selects and your reasons for supporting it. In no more than two double spaced typed pages describe
 - a. the policy your class believes will best deal with the problem.
 - b. the advantages and disadvantages of your policy.
 - c. why, in the opinion of your class, your policy does not violate your federal and state constitution. Use the Constitutional Opinion Form on pages 30–31 to record your answer to this question. Complete the form and place it in the documentation section of your portfolio. Remember, you will need to work with your entire class to complete this part of the portfolio.

- d. what branches or agencies and what level of government should be responsible for carrying out your suggested policy? Why?

2. Graphic presentations of your proposed policy. This may include charts, graphs, photos, drawings, political cartoons, newspaper headlines, tables of statistics, and other illustrations related to the policy and the problem it is designed to solve. These illustrations may come from printed sources or they may be your original creations. Each illustration should have a caption or title.
3. Identification of your sources of information. On one or more typed pages, identify sources the class has used to gather information.

B. Documentation section of portfolio: Part 3

Include in Part 3 of the class binder copies of the best or most important information your class gathered and used in developing its proposed policy. For example, you may include as documentation selected

- newspaper or magazine clippings;
- written reports of interviews with people in the community;
- written reports of radio and television coverage of the problem;
- communications from public and private interest groups; and
- excerpts from government publications.

Lengthy documents and reports should be represented by copies of their title pages, tables of contents, and a one page summary (or abstract) of the document either taken from the document itself or written by the group. Be sure to include a table of contents for this section.

Constitutional Opinion Form

The United States Constitution and Bill of Rights place limits on what government can do in order to protect the rights of the people. So do the constitutions of each state.

Whenever we suggest that government adopt a policy or enact a law to deal with a problem, it is important that we do not ask government to do something prohibited by our federal or state constitutions. Each citizen has the right and should take the responsibility to look at present and suggested policies and laws to see if they might be violating constitutional limits on government.

This checklist includes some of the most important limits our federal and state constitutions place upon our governments to protect our rights. Use the checklist when you develop your policy. Be sure that, in your opinion, your proposed policy does not violate the limits placed on government.

This Constitutional Opinion Form should be considered by the entire class. The results of that consideration should be included in Part 3 of the display and documentation sections of your portfolio.

Checklist

1. Government is not allowed to interfere with a person's freedom of belief. Our proposed policy (does/does not) violate this limit on the power of government. Explain why.

2. Government is not allowed to place unreasonable and unfair limits on a person's right to express him or herself in speech, writing, or by other means. Our proposed policy (does/does not) violate this limit on the power of government. Explain why.

Portfolio Group Four

Developing an action plan

Your group is responsible for developing a plan of action. The plan should include steps you might take to get your proposed policy accepted and implemented by government. Your entire class should be involved in developing the plan, but your group will explain the plan in Part 4 of the display section and Part 4 of the documentation section of your class portfolio.

A. Display section of portfolio: Part 4

This part should include the following items:

1. A written explanation of how your class could develop support among individuals and groups in your community for your proposed plan. On one double spaced typed page, describe the main points of your plan. Be sure to
 - a. Identify influential individuals and groups in your community who might be willing to support your proposed policy. Briefly describe how you might gain their support.
 - b. Identify groups in your community which might oppose your policy. Explain how you might convince them to support your proposed policy.
2. A written explanation of how your class could develop support by your government for your proposed policy. On one double spaced typed page, describe the main points of your plan. Be sure to
 - a. Identify influential government officials and agencies which might be willing to support your policy. Briefly describe how you might get them to support the policy your class proposes.
 - b. Identify persons in your government who might oppose your policy.

Explain how you might convince them to support your proposed policy.

3. Graphic presentations of your action plan. This may include charts, graphs, photos, drawings, political cartoons, newspaper headlines, tables of statistics, and other illustrations. These illustrations may come from printed sources or they may be your original creations. Each illustration should have a caption or title.
4. Identification of your sources of information. On one or more typed pages, identify sources the class has used to gather information.

B. Documentation section of portfolio: Part 4

Include in Part 4 of the class binder copies of the best or most important information your class gathered and used in developing your action plan. For example, you may include as documentation selected

- statements by influential individuals and groups;
- statements by influential government officials and agencies;
- newspaper or magazine clippings;
- written reports of interviews with people in the community;
- written reports of radio and television coverage of the problem;
- communications from public and private interest groups; and
- excerpts from government publications.

Lengthy documents and reports should be represented by copies of their title pages, tables of contents, and a one page summary (or abstract) of the document either taken from the document itself or written by the group.

Step V: Presenting Your Portfolio

Purpose of Step V

When your class portfolio is completed, you can present your project before an audience. Your presentation can be made to a three- or four-person panel representing your school and community. These panel members will “judge” your presentation based on the same criteria you used to develop your portfolio. This activity will give you valuable experience in presenting important ideas to others and convincing them of your position.

There are four basic goals of the presentation:

1. To inform an audience of the importance of the problem identified in your community.
2. To explain and evaluate alternative policies so that an audience can understand the advantages and disadvantages of each.
3. To discuss your class’s choice as the “best” policy to deal with the problem and “make the case” for that policy. To make and support your class’s view that the proposed policy does not violate your federal and state constitutions.
4. To demonstrate how your class could develop support for its policy in your community, as well as in the legislative and executive branches of the appropriate level of government.

Each of these goals matches the four groups that had responsibility for your portfolio display. During the portfolio presentation, each group will be responsible for the appropriate goal using the following guidelines.

A. Opening Oral Presentation

The first four minutes will be the opening presentation during which the group will present orally the most significant information from its part of the portfolio.

1. It should be based on the portfolio display and documentation section, but should not be a word for word reading from the display.
2. Use graphics from the portfolio to help you explain or emphasize a point.
3. Only materials included in your portfolio may be used during the oral presentation. You may not introduce additional materials such as videotapes, slides, computer demonstrations, etc.

B. Follow-up Questions

The next six minutes will be the follow-up question period during which a panel of judges will ask the group about its portfolio presentation. During this period the judges might ask you to

1. explain further or clarify points you have made.
2. give examples of specific points you have made.
3. defend some of your statements or positions.
4. answer questions about what you learned from your experience. What problems did you have? What were the most important things you learned as you studied this community problem?

C. Preparation

You might ask parents or other community members experienced in making public presentations to coach your group. People involved in local government or in civic and community organizations can be very helpful.

Practice your oral presentation prior to giving it to an adult audience. Try it out in front of your classmates or students from other classes.

D. Guidelines

As many members of each group as possible should participate in the opening presentation and follow-up question period. The oral presentation should not be dominated by one or two students. It should demonstrate the cooperative learning that went into the portfolio preparation.

Do not read to the judges from your portfolio display. Select the most important information and arguments and present them in a conversational style.

You may use notes during the opening presentation but not during the follow-up question period.

If you do not use the full four minutes allowed for the opening presentation, the unused time will be added to the follow-up question period. Each group is entitled to ten minutes before the judges.

You may use only those materials included in your group's portfolio during your oral presentation.

E. Evaluation Criteria

If your class decides to enter a competition in which there is an oral presentation, your presentation will be scored by a panel of judges. Your teacher will explain the criteria to be used in judging those presentations.

Step VI: Reflecting on Your Learning Experience

Purpose of Step VI

It is always a good idea to think about or reflect upon experiences you have had or projects you have completed. This is one way to learn, to avoid mistakes in the future, and to improve your performance.

Now that your class has completed its portfolio, add a reflection or evaluation part to the Documentation Section binder. This part of your portfolio should describe briefly

- what and how you and your classmates learned.
- what you might do differently, if you were to develop another portfolio.

Reflecting upon your experiences should be a cooperative class effort similar to the way you have worked throughout this project. Reflect as an individual as well as a member of your class. Your teacher and the adults who helped you develop your portfolio can help you reflect on your experiences in this project.

It may be helpful to present your portfolio to an audience before your class develops this final part of your portfolio. Questions from members of an audience and their reactions to your portfolio may help you reflect upon your learning experiences and the portfolio you developed.

Conclusion

It is important that you continue to develop the skills that help you influence the making of public policy. You will use these skills in the future. Remember that public policies often need to be revised. New problems require new public policies.

Guidelines

You may wish to use the following questions to reflect on your experience.

1. What did I personally learn about public policy from working with my classmates?
2. What did we learn as a class about public policy by developing our portfolio?
3. What skills did I learn or improve upon in this project?
4. What skills did we learn or improve upon in this project?
5. What are the advantages of working as a team?
6. What are the disadvantages of working as a team?
7. What did I do well?
8. What did we do well?
9. How can I improve my problem-solving skills?
10. How can we improve our problem-solving skills?
11. What would we want to do differently, if we were to develop another portfolio on another public policy issue?

Helping to develop public policies and taking positions on them are lifelong responsibilities of citizens in a self-governing society.

Glossary

The words in the glossary are defined to clarify their meaning as used in this text. Additional terms have been included because they relate to civics and are commonly used in the study of government and the making of public policy. Refer to your dictionary for more complete definitions.

REPRODUCTION RELEASE

(Specific Document)

I. DOCUMENT IDENTIFICATION:

Title: We the People... Proper Citizen
Author(s):
Corporate Source:	Publication Date:

II. REPRODUCTION RELEASE:

In order to disseminate as widely as possible timely and significant materials of interest to the educational community, documents announced in the monthly abstract journal of the ERIC system, Resources in Education (RIE), are usually made available to users in microfiche, reproduced paper copy, and electronic/optical media, and sold through the ERIC Document Reproduction Service (EDRS) or other ERIC vendors. Credit is given to the source of each document, and, if reproduction release is granted, one of the following notices is affixed to the document.

If permission is granted to reproduce and disseminate the identified document, please CHECK ONE of the following two options and sign at the bottom of the page.

The sample sticker shown below will be affixed to all Level 1 documents

Check here For Level 2 Release: Permitting reproduction in microfiche (4" x 6" film) or other ERIC archival media (e.g., electronic or optical), but not in paper copy.

Check here For Level 1 Release: Permitting reproduction in microfiche (4" x 6" film) or other ERIC archival media (e.g., electronic or optical) and paper copy.

Documents will be processed as indicated provided reproduction quality permits. If permission to reproduce is granted, but neither box is checked, documents will be processed at Level 1.

"I hereby grant to the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC) nonexclusive permission to reproduce and disseminate this document as indicated above. Reproduction from the ERIC microfiche or electronic/optical media by persons other than ERIC employees and its system contractors requires permission from the copyright holder. Exception is made for non-profit reproduction by libraries and other service agencies to satisfy information needs of educators in response to discrete inquiries."
