ED 411 989 PS 025 843

TITLE Families Get Involved! Learning Partners.

INSTITUTION Office of Educational Research and Improvement (ED),

Washington, DC. Media and Information Services.

REPORT NO MIS-97-6599 PUB DATE 1997-00-00

NOTE 3p.; Information in this paper was taken from "Reaching All Families: Creating Family-Friendly Schools", see ED 400 117; and "Strong Families, Strong Schools", see ED 371 909.

PUB TYPE Guides - Non-Classroom (055)

EDRS PRICE MF01/PC01 Plus Postage.

DESCRIPTORS Elementary Secondary Education; Family Involvement; Family

Role; Family School Relationship; *Parent Participation;
*Parent Role; *Parent School Relationship; *Parent Student

Relationship

ABSTRACT

Noting that families who are involved in their children's education make a difference in their child's performance, this two-page information sheet encourages families to get involved by listing the benefits of family involvement on one side and the ways adult family members can help in the school on the other. As a result of family participation: (1) parents improve communication with their children; (2) children attain higher grades and test scores; (3) children have better school attendance; (4) children are more likely to graduate from high school and attend college; (5) parents gain a sense of accomplishment; (6) parents gain a stronger social network with other parents and the community; (7) parents participate in the life of the school, experiencing first-hand the teaching and learning that occurs; (8) everyone's learning is strengthened as parents share their values and high expectations for their children; (9) children learn good study habits by reading with parents, following a daily homework routine, watching television wisely, and being involved in enrichment activities; and (10) parents may decide to continue their own education. Ways families can be involved in school include: (1) chaperoning field trips or social events; (2) volunteering for special projects; (3) participating in community activities or fundraising through bake sales or book fairs; (4) tutoring other children; (5) making phone calls and contacting other families about special events; (6) serving as a class resource by sharing knowledge of other countries, ethnic groups, or jobs; (7) helping as an office aide or a teacher's aide; and (8) providing leadership by participating in the parent-teacher association, school board, and other meetings and activities. (LPP)

Reproductions supplied by EDRS are the best that can be made

* from the original document.

Learning Partners

Families Get Involved!

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION Office of Educational Research and Improvement EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES INFORMATION CENTER (ERIC)

This document has been reproduced as received from the person or organization

Minor changes have been made to improve reproduction quality.

improve reproduction quality.

 Points of view or opinions stated in this document do not necessarily represent official OERI position or policy.

Families who get involved in their children's education do make a difference and everyone benefits from this partnership—children, families, and schools. Students achieve, schools improve, and families feel good because they know they've increased their children's chances for success.

When you involve your family

- Your communication with your children will improve as you talk to them about school.
- Your children may achieve higher grades and better test scores.
- Your children will have better school attendance.
- Your children will be more likely to graduate from high school and go on to college.
- You can gain a sense of accomplishment.
- You can gain a stronger social network with other parents and the community.
- You will participate in the life of the school, experiencing teaching and learning first hand.
- Everyone's learning will be strengthened as you share your values and high expectations for your children.
- Your children will learn good study habits by reading with you, following a daily homework routine, using television wisely, and being involved in other enrichment activities.
- You may desire to continue your own education.

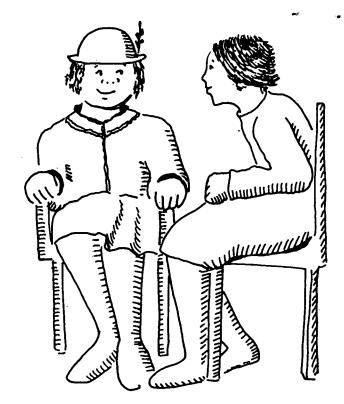

Your children's school wants your support and encourages you to be a partner in your children's education. So, watch for notices about open houses, Parent Teacher Association (PTA) and school board meetings, mailings and newsletters, school handbooks, parent-school compacts, parent-teacher conferences, report cards, home visits, and phone calls. Also, do not hesitate to call the school with questions or suggestions. Communicating with each other will help connect your family and the school.

Schools involve families in many other ways.

You can help by

- Going on field trips or chaperoning social events.
- Volunteering for special projects such as counting receipts for computer donation programs, or cutting out name tags and materials for bulletin boards.
- Participating in community activities or fundraising through bake sales, book fairs, and sporting events to raise money for school equipment, and social events.
- Tutoring other children.
- Making phone calls and contacting other families about special events, activities, or concerns.

- Serving as a class resource by sharing your knowledge of other countries, languages, ethnic groups, jobs, or other unique experiences and special skills.
- Helping as an office or teacher's aide by answering phones, photocopying, stuffing envelopes, correcting papers, or helping children with special assignments such as art projects.
- Providing leadership by participating in the PTA, school board and other meetings and activities.

Resources: Information was taken from Reaching All Families: Creating Family-Friendly Schools and Strong Families, Strong Schools. For more information on family involvement initiatives and related publications, contact 1–800–USA–LEARN, or the National Library of Education at 1–800–424–1616, or visit us via the Internet at http://www.ed.gov.

U.S. Department of Education Richard W. Riley Secretary

Office of Educational Research and Improvement Ramon C. Cortines Acting Assistant Secretary

Media and Information Services Cynthia Hearn Dorfman Director

ERIC ease feel free to reproduce this information.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Office of Educational Research and Improvement (OERI) Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC)

NOTICE

REPRODUCTION BASIS

This document is covered by a signed "Reproduction Release (Blanket)" form (on file within the ERIC system), encompassing all or classes of documents from its source organization and, therefore, does not require a "Specific Document" Release form.
This document is Federally-funded, or carries its own permission to reproduce, or is otherwise in the public domain and, therefore, may be reproduced by ERIC without a signed Reproduction Release form (either "Specific Document" or "Blanket").

ERIC*

PS025843