ABSTRACT

This study examined satisfaction of approximately 2,200 institutions of higher education that participated in the Federal Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) programs during the 1995-96 academic year. Among major findings were: (1) both Direct Loan and FFEL institutions were satisfied with their programs, although Direct Loan institutions, especially those participating for the second year, indicated a significantly higher level of satisfaction; (2) however, overall satisfaction of all institutional participants in the Direct Loan program declined from the previous year; (3) institutions in the Direct Loan program were also more likely than institutions in the FFEL program to indicate improved administrative experiences; and (4) Direct Loan institutions were substantially more likely to report satisfaction with the Department of Education's communication and services than FFEL participants. The report first presents survey highlights and an introduction and then details findings in sections on: overall institutional satisfaction with the federal student loan programs; program administration; communications and support from the Department of Education (ED), lenders, and guarantee agencies; and level of interaction with ED's regional offices. Technical appendices include detailed tables, data on distribution of responses and response rates, item response frequencies, specifics of the survey methodology, and the two surveys. (DB)

The cooperation of more than 2,200 institutions participating in the Federal Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Programs enabled a thorough description of their experiences with the loan programs. This report would not have been possible without the time and effort contributed by financial aid administrators at the selected institutions.

Highlights

Annual customer satisfaction surveys of institutions and borrowers are one component of an overall evaluation of the Federal Direct Loan Program conducted by Macro International Inc. under contract to the U.S. Department of Education (ED). The surveys are designed to determine the level of customer satisfaction with the Federal Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) Programs.

This report is based on nationally representative samples of FFEL schools and schools that began participating in Direct Lending in the second year of the program, and on responses from 95 of the 110 schools that began participating in the Direct Loan Program in 1994-95 (the first year of the program). Approximately 2,200 institutions completed surveys between March and November of 1996. This same sample responded to the survey in 1995, and selected comparative findings are presented in this report.

This is the second annual report of customer satisfaction with the Federal Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) Programs.

Objective

The objective of the survey is to provide comparisons of institutional satisfaction and experiences with each program, including:

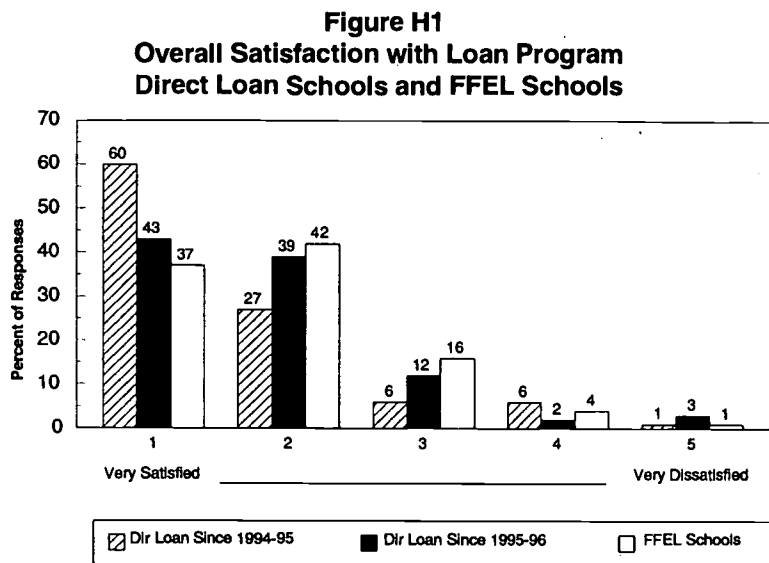

- Overall quality and perceived ease of loan program administration; and
- Satisfaction with communications and support from the Department of Education and other service providers (i.e., lenders and guarantee agencies).

Differences in institutional experiences were also examined over time, and by several key institutional characteristics.

Findings

In the 1995-96 academic year, both Direct Loan and FFEL institutions were satisfied with their loan programs. However, Direct Loan institutions indicated a statistically significantly higher level of overall satisfaction with their loan program than did FFEL institutions (83% for Direct Loan schools versus 79% for FFEL schools). The statistically significant difference in satisfaction between the two loan programs was influenced by the high level of satisfaction reported by schools in their second year of Direct Loan participation. As shown in Figure H1 on the next page, 87 percent of Direct Loan schools with 2 years of participation were satisfied, compared to 82 percent of first year Direct Loan schools, and 79 percent of FFEL schools.

Direct Loan institutions indicated a statistically significantly higher level of overall satisfaction with their loan program than did FFEL institutions.

Between the 1995 and 1996 surveys, the proportion of Direct Loan schools reporting high levels of satisfaction declined 7 percentage points (from 90% to 83%), while the proportion of FFEL schools reporting high levels of satisfaction increased 11 percentage points (from 68% to 79%). This finding may be due to three factors. First, the schools with the highest level of commitment to and enthusiasm for Direct Loan were the first participants in that program; subsequent Direct Loan participants, although enthusiastic, were not as positive as the first year's participants. Second, it is likely that the less satisfied FFEL schools chose to leave FFEL and become Direct Loan schools. The remaining FFEL schools therefore would be those that are more satisfied with FFEL. Third, the FFEL Program may have improved from the competition provided by the Direct Loan Program. Consistent with the findings of the 1995 institutional survey, few schools indicated that they were dissatisfied with either of the loan programs (pages 6-7).

When asked to compare this year's overall level of satisfaction to last year's, 59 percent of schools participating in the Direct Loan Program for 2 years reported an increase. Only 36 percent of the FFEL respondents reported an increase in overall satisfaction compared to the prior year (see figure H2 on the next page).

The increase in satisfaction reported by 59 percent of schools participating in the Direct Loan program for 2 years may appear inconsistent with the fact that overall satisfaction for these same schools declined slightly from 90 percent in the 1995 survey to 87 percent in the 1996 survey. This seeming inconsistency is explained by a further analysis of the reported data and is presented on pages 6-7.

Between 1995 and 1996, the proportion of satisfied schools declined by 7 percentage points (from 90% to 83%) for Direct Loan schools, and increased 11 percentage points (from 68% to 79%) for FFEL institutions.

Significantly more Direct Loan schools reported a greater increase in overall satisfaction in 1995-96 compared to the prior academic year than did FFEL institutions.

Figure H2
Current and Prior Loan Program Satisfaction
Direct Loan Schools and FFEL Schools

Institutions that began participating in the Direct Loan Program in 1994-95 were also significantly more likely than institutions in the FFEL Program to indicate that their administrative experiences in the 1995-96 academic year had improved from the 1994-95 academic year. Among institutions offering the same loan program for 2 years, more than 7 of every 10 Direct Loan schools (73%) said their experiences in the program were more positive in the current year than in the prior year. In contrast, only 4 of every 10 institutions in FFEL (40%) responded that their experiences were more positive.

Just 4 percent of schools with at least 2 years of participation in either loan program reported that their experiences in the current school year were less positive than in the previous year. The remainder—23 percent of Direct Loan schools and 56 percent of FFEL schools—considered their current experiences with loan administration to be the same as the prior year (page 16).

Institutions in the Direct Loan Program were significantly more likely than those in the FFEL Program to characterize the level of work or staff effort needed to administer the loan program on a daily basis as very easy or relatively easy. As shown in Figure H3 on the next page, while 60 percent of those in the Direct Loan Program said their loan program was easy to administer, only 37 percent of those in the FFEL Program reached the same conclusion regarding their program. Likewise, only 15 percent of Direct Loan schools indicated that their program was relatively or very labor intensive, compared to 33 percent of FFEL schools that reported difficulty in administration.

Direct Loan institutions that began participating in the Program in 1994-95 were also significantly more likely than FFEL institutions to indicate that their administrative experiences in the 1995-96 academic year had improved from the 1994-95 academic year.

Direct Loan schools were significantly more likely than those in the FFEL Program to characterize administration on a daily basis as very easy or relatively easy.

Figure H3
Level of Effort Needed to Administer Loan Program
Direct Loan Schools and FFEL Schools

Examinations by institutional characteristics showed that a greater proportion of 2-year private institutions and proprietary institutions, compared to other types of institutions, found the level of work needed to administer the program on a day-to-day basis to be easy (pages 20-21).

Direct Loan schools were generally satisfied with the Department of Education's responsiveness to problems or difficulties experienced in implementing the Direct Loan Program. Roughly 80 percent of all Direct Loan institutions were satisfied with the Department's responsiveness to implementation problems. There were no significant differences among Direct Loan schools participating 1 year vs. 2 years (page 28).

The differences between the satisfaction levels for Direct Loan and FFEL institutions were most pronounced in the Department's communications and services. The percentages of Direct Loan respondents indicating that they were satisfied with ED's communications and services ranged from 80 percent to over 90 percent, while the percentages of FFEL respondents indicating that they were satisfied ranged from 50 to slightly over 70 percent (pages 28-31).

Approximately 40 percent of the Direct Loan respondents indicated that the overall level of communication and support currently provided by the Department was better than that provided during the 1994-95 academic year. This compares to roughly 38 percent of FFEL respondents who indicated that the overall level of communication and support currently provided by their servicer is better than that provided during the 1994-95 academic year (pages 37-38).

Direct Loan schools were more satisfied with Department of Education performance in services and communications than FFEL schools.

Survey of Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Institutions

FFEL institutions were generally satisfied with services provided by the Department of Education, lenders, and guarantors. However, these schools indicated lower levels of satisfaction with services provided by ED than those provided by other sources. Direct Loan institutions gave higher satisfaction ratings to ED for all of the administrative activities where comparisons could be made between Direct Loan and FFEL. It is possible that the variation in satisfaction level is due in part to the difference in the role that ED plays with respect to administration of the two loan programs (pages 30-31).

FFEL schools were more satisfied with performance of lenders and guarantors than with the performance of the Department of Education.

Survey of Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Institutions

Introduction

Institutional and borrower surveys are one component of an overall evaluation of the Federal Direct Loan Program conducted by Macro International Inc. under contract to the U.S. Department of Education. The overall purpose of the project is to evaluate the effectiveness of Direct Lending in terms of simplified administration, customer satisfaction, and reduced cost to the Federal Government. The purpose of the 1996 institutional survey was to analyze differences in various aspects of customer satisfaction with loan program administration between the Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Programs. Macro conducted a similar survey of Title IV Loan Program institutions in spring 1995.

The primary research objectives of the institutional surveys are:

- to assess the overall quality and perceived ease of loan program administration at the institutional level; and
- to determine the level of satisfaction with communications and support from the Department of Education and other service providers (i.e., lenders and guarantee agencies).

In addition to the above areas of investigation, changes in institutional experiences with the various aspects of loan program administration were reviewed over time for both Direct Loan and FFEL. This was accomplished by comparing the responses of institutions participating in our 1995 institutional survey with their responses to our 1996 institutional survey. Differences were also examined by several key institutional characteristics to determine if they were related to satisfaction level and/or perceived quality of loan program administration. The institutional characteristics examined included:

- Institutional type and control;
- Loan volume;<sup>1</sup>
- Financial Aid Office structure;
- Type of computer system used;
- Number of lenders (FFEL institutions only);
- Number of guarantee agencies (FFEL institutions only);
- Decisions regarding the Direct Loan Program (FFEL institutions only);
- Current use of EFT (FFEL institutions only); and
- Participation level (Direct Loan institutions only).

---

The 1996 institutional survey was conducted using a mail survey methodology, with an option of completing the questionnaire on the Worldwide Web. Data collection for the survey began on March 18, 1996, and continued through November 14, 1996. Extensive telephone and mail follow-up procedures were implemented in an effort to achieve the highest possible response rate.

Crosstabulations and significance tests for the survey data were produced through the Statistical Analysis System (SAS). A complete description of the data processing and analysis is included in the Survey Methodology section of the report (Volume Two—Technical Appendices).

The overall survey response rate was 79 percent, based on 2,209 respondents from 2,801 eligible institutions. The response rate was 86 percent for First-Year Direct Loan schools, 75 percent for Second-Year Direct Loan schools, and 79 percent for FFEL schools. Throughout both volumes of the report, the expression “First-Year Direct Loan schools” refers to those schools that entered the Direct Loan Program during academic year 1994-95 (i.e., schools that have been in the Program since 1994-95), while the expression “Second-Year Direct Loan schools” refers to those schools that entered the Direct Loan Program during academic year 1995-96 (i.e., schools that have been in the program since 1995-96). Detailed tables illustrating the number and percent of responses (found in Appendix C), sample representation, and response rates by institutional type and control and loan volume (for each of the three loan program types) are included in the Technical Appendices.

The appendices also present:

- The weighted data tables;
- Weighted and unweighted frequencies for the three respondent groups (First-Year Direct Loan institutions, Second-Year Direct Loan institutions, and FFEL institutions);
- A detailed description of the data collection methodology; and
- The survey instruments.

This volume of the report summarizes the findings of the 1996 institutional survey.

Overall Institutional Satisfaction with the Federal Student Loan Programs

Current Satisfaction

Question #D2 (Year 1 DL), Question #F1 (Year 2 DL), Question #C3 (FFEL)

Please rate your general satisfaction with the Direct Loan Program up to this point. On a scale of 1 to 5, circle your level of satisfaction.

Currently how satisfied are you with the FFEL Program? On a scale of 1 to 5, please circle your level of satisfaction.

Both Direct Loan and FFEL institutions were generally satisfied with their loan programs, with more than three-fourths of the schools in both groups indicating that they were satisfied. However, as shown in Figure 1 (and in Table 1-1), Direct Loan institutions indicated a significantly higher level of overall satisfaction with their loan program in academic year 1995-96 than did FFEL institutions.

Figure 1
Overall Satisfaction with Loan Program
Direct Loan Schools and FFEL Schools

This statistically significant difference in satisfaction between the two loan programs appears to have been influenced by the First-Year Direct Loan institutions, of which 60 percent were very satisfied compared to only 43 percent of Second-Year Direct Loan institutions. The percentage of institutions indicating that they were satisfied was 87 for First-Year Direct Loan schools, 82 for Second-Year Direct Loan schools, and 79 for FFEL schools (see Figure 2).

Current Satisfaction by Institutional Characteristics

In addition to overall satisfaction by loan program, responses were studied relative to the institutional characteristics listed in the Introduction. The characteristics that were significantly related to overall institutional satisfaction included:

- Institutional type and control—2-year public and proprietary institutions displayed the lowest levels of overall satisfaction (76% and 74%, respectively). The percent of respondents in the remaining institutional type/control categories who indicated that they were satisfied with their loan program ranged from 82 to 86 percent (Table 2-1).

As shown in Exhibit 1, the percentage of respondents very satisfied with the Direct Loan Program ranged from 40 percent for proprietary schools to 55 percent for 2-year private schools, while the percentage very satisfied with the FFEL Program ranged from 33 percent for 2-year public schools to 39 percent for 2-year and 4-year private schools.

Exhibit 1
Overall Level of Satisfaction by Institutional Type and Control
Direct Loan Institutions	Institutional Type and Control
	4-Year Public (%)		2-Year Public (%)		4-Year Private (%)		2-Year Private (%)		Proprietary (%)
	DL	FFEL	DL	FFEL	DL	FFEL	DL	FFEL	DL	FFEL
Very Satisfied	54	38	51	33	44	39	55	39	40	37

4	1	4	3	5	3	3	10	3	2	5
Very Dissatisfied	2	2	10	0	3	1	0	0	4	2

- Plans concerning Direct Loan participation—as expected, current satisfaction with the FFEL Program varied according to whether the respondents were planning to participate in the Direct Loan Program (Table 3-7). Over 80 percent of the responding institutions that had no plans to apply for Direct Lending indicated that they were satisfied with the FFEL Program, while only two-thirds of the Direct Loan applicants (or potential applicants) indicated that they were satisfied with FFEL.

Current Satisfaction Compared to Previous Satisfaction with Loan Programs

Question #D3 (Year 1 DL), Question #C4 (FFEL)

Compared to the 1994-95 school year, has your overall level of satisfaction with the Direct Loan/FFEL Program increased, decreased or remained the same?

When First-Year Direct Loan and FFEL respondents were asked to compare their current level of overall loan program satisfaction with their 1994-95 satisfaction level, 59 percent of First-Year Direct Loan respondents indicated that their overall level of satisfaction had increased, while 36 percent of FFEL respondents indicated an increase in their overall level of satisfaction (Figure 3, Table 1-2). This difference was statistically significant.

Current and Prior Loan Program Satisfaction
First-Year Direct Loan Schools and FFEL Schools

The increase in satisfaction reported by 59 percent of schools participating in the Direct Loan program for 2 years may appear inconsistent with the fact that overall satisfaction for these same schools declined slightly from 90 percent in the 1995 survey (see Exhibit 2) to 87 percent in the 1996 survey (see Figure 2). This seeming inconsistency is explained by a further analysis of the reported data.

Eighty-four (84) percent of schools participating in the Direct Loan program for 2 years reported they were satisfied with the program in both the 1995 and 1996 surveys. Of these schools, 62 percent also reported that their satisfaction had improved between last year and this year. The overall satisfaction level dropped (between the 1995 and 1996 surveys) because 6 percent of responding institutions reported in 1996 they were neutral or dissatisfied with the Direct Loan program after they indicated in the 1995 survey they were satisfied. This decrease in total satisfaction was partially offset by the 4 percent of institutions that reported they were satisfied in 1996 after reporting in the 1995 survey that they were neutral or dissatisfied.

In addition, there may be at least three other factors responsible for this seeming inconsistency. First, the characteristics and experiences of the initial Direct Loan participants may not be representative of subsequent cohorts in full operation of the program. The schools with the highest level of enthusiasm for Direct Lending were most likely the initial participants in the program. Second, it is likely that the less satisfied FFEL schools choose to leave the FFEL Program and become Direct Loan schools. Therefore, the remaining schools would be those that are more satisfied with FFEL. Third, the FFEL Program may have improved following implementation of the Direct Loan Program.

Consistent with the findings of the 1995 institutional survey, few schools indicated that they were dissatisfied with either of the loan programs.

Exhibit 2 Overall Satisfaction with the Direct Loan Program Academic Years 1994-95 and 1995-96
Level of Satisfaction	Academic Year 1994-95		Academic Year 1995-96
	DL (%)	FFEL (%)	DL (%)	FFEL (%)
Very Satisfied	61	27	45	37
2	29	41	38	42
3	7	24	12	16
4	3	7	2	4
Very Dissatisfied	1	2	3	1

These findings may appear to be inconsistent with the previous finding of a decline in the proportion of Direct Loan schools showing high levels of satisfaction and an increase for FFEL. Many Direct Loan schools were even more satisfied than last year, even though they were restricted by categorical survey response options (e.g., to state "very satisfied" both years). This can be seen by examining the distribution of responses from the 1995 and 1996 surveys, where the percent of First-Year Direct loan institutions that reported that they were "very satisfied" was essentially unchanged between the years. Furthermore, of the 48 institutions that indicated that their relative experience in administering the Direct Loan Program was more positive in 1995-96 than in 1994-95, only three of these institutions displayed inconsistent responses. For these few cases, something as simple as different individuals completing the survey, or the natural ratcheting up of expectations that may occur as a program matures may help explain the apparent inconsistency between the underlying longitudinal data and their retrospective responses.

Current Satisfaction Compared to Previous Satisfaction by Institutional Characteristics

Significant relationships were found between several of the selected institutional characteristics and current vs. prior loan program satisfaction. The characteristics that were significantly related to changes in overall institutional satisfaction included:

- Institutional type and control—When the results were examined by type and control, Four-Year institutions were more likely than 2-Year or proprietary schools to have reported an increase in overall satisfaction with their loan program compared to the 1994-95 academic year. Further, among the Four-Year public schools, there was a significant difference between the percent of Direct Loan and FFEL respondents who indicated an increase in satisfaction (85% for Direct Loan vs. 58% for FFEL) (Exhibit 3, Tables 2-4, 2-5, and 2-6).

Survey of Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Institutions

- Type of computer system used—Institutions that use all manual processing to administer their loan program were less likely to report an increase in overall satisfaction than schools with a mainframe system, a PC-based system, or a contracted servicer (Table 3-4).
- Use of EFT (Electronic Funds Transfer)—FFEL institutions that use EFT processing to administer their loan program were more likely to report an increase in overall satisfaction than schools that did not use EFT (52% for EFT schools vs. 30% for schools that did not use EFT) (Table 3-9).

Exhibit 3

Remained the same	13	39	60	67	28	48	33	72	60	73

Question #G1 (Second-Year Direct Loan)

Now that you are administering both programs, how satisfied are you with the FFEL Program as it is currently operating? On a scale of 1 to 5, please circle your level of satisfaction.

Roughly one-half of the Second-Year Direct Loan schools phasing in the Direct Loan Program indicated that they are satisfied with the FFEL Program as it is currently operating. The average rating of the current satisfaction with the FFEL Program for Second-Year Direct Loan schools offering both loan programs (2.5) was just slightly higher than the FFEL rating provided by First-Year Direct Loan schools that were operating both loan programs during the 1995 survey (2.6) (Table 1-3).<sup>2</sup> This small increase in FFEL satisfaction among Direct Loan schools offering both programs is lower than the increase in satisfaction found among all FFEL institutions, where satisfaction increased from 2.2 in 1995 to 1.8 in 1996.

Perceived Attributes and Limitations of the Federal Student Loan Programs

In addition to the direct measures of program satisfaction between Direct Loan and FFEL institutions, respondents were asked to indicate their perceptions of the most important attributes of their loan program relative to other potential attributes. Responding institutions that entered the Direct Loan Program during the First Year of operation, and institutions participating in the FFEL Program were also asked to indicate the areas of the loan programs where their expectations had not been met.<sup>3</sup>

Question #B1 (Second-Year DL)

Please check below the most important factors (up to three) in your institution's overall decision to apply for the Direct Loan Program.

- Able to serve borrowers better
- Simpler to administer than FFEL
- Cost savings to taxpayers and the Federal Government
- Funds availability more predictable
- Flexible repayment options for borrowers
- Loan application process under institutional control
- Administrative allowance for originating loans

Question #B1 (Second-Year DL)

Please review the potential attributes of the Direct Loan Program listed below. Then, in the appropriate column:

- a) Indicate your perceptions of the most important benefits (up to three) of the Direct Loan Program.
  - b) Indicate the areas of the Direct Loan Program where your expectations have not been achieved. (Check all that apply.)
- Able to serve borrowers better
  - Simpler to administer than FFEL
  - Cost savings to taxpayers and the Federal Government
  - Funds availability more predictable
  - Flexible repayment options for borrowers
  - Loan application process under institutional control
  - Administrative allowance for originating loans

<sup>3</sup> Note that these results were not tested for significant differences by loan program or between First- and Second-Year Direct Loan institutions, since the potential attributes and limitations included for selection differed between the loan programs.

Question #C2 (FFEL)

Please review the potential attributes of the FFEL Program listed below. Then, in the appropriate column:

- a) Indicate your perceptions of the most important benefits (up to three) of the FFEL Program.
- b) Indicate the areas of the Federal Family Education Loan Program where your expectations have not been achieved. (Check all that apply.)
  - Able to serve borrowers well through FFEL
  - Familiarity with the administration of FFEL
  - FFEL appears simpler to administer than Direct Loan
  - Ability to continue to offer students a choice of loan sources
  - Confident of the viability of the FFEL Program
  - Not required to originate loans
  - FFEL loan application processing is not responsibility of institution
  - Ability to maintain relationships with lenders and guarantee agencies

Perceived Attributes of the Loan Programs

Consistent with the results of the 1995 institutional surveys, the ability to serve borrowers better was most frequently mentioned as one of the most important benefits of both loan programs. Approximately 90 percent of First-Year Direct Loan respondents, and 70 percent of Second-Year Direct Loan and FFEL respondents, specified service to borrowers as an important loan program benefit (Tables 1-4 and 1-5).

When the results were examined by institutional type and control for each loan program, a significant relationship was found among First-Year Direct Loan schools. Two-year public schools were most likely to specify simplicity of loan program administration as an important attribute (85%) (Table 2-7).

Among Second-Year Direct Loan schools, a significant relationship was found between institutional type and control and the tendency to rank service to borrowers as one of the three most important attributes. Four-year public schools that entered the Direct Loan Program in the Second Year were most likely to rank service to borrowers as important (92%), and Second-Year Direct Loan proprietary schools were least likely to cite the ability to serve borrowers better as an important loan program attribute (57%) (Table 2-8).

Simplicity of loan program administration was perceived as an important attribute, mainly among Direct Loan institutions. More than half (53%) of First-Year Direct Loan schools, and 42 percent of Second-Year Direct Loan schools (compared to 23% of FFEL schools), cited this factor as an important attribute. In addition, First-Year Direct Loan institutions in the current survey were more likely to report simplicity of loan program administration as an attribute than were First-Year Direct Loan institutions in the 1995 survey (53% for the current survey vs. 47% for the 1995 survey). This finding, coupled with notable changes in resources and staff resulting since implementation of Direct Lending (discussed in later sections), suggests that the Direct Loan Program has become easier to administer since its implementation in academic year 1994-95.

Other frequently mentioned attributes of the Title IV Loan programs included:

- Institutional control over the loan process (Direct Loan Program)—69 percent of First-Year Direct Loan schools and 50 percent of Second-Year Direct Loan schools cited this factor, with no significant differences found by type and control.
- Predictability of funds (Direct Loan Program)—43 percent of First-Year Direct Loan schools and 39 percent of Second-Year Direct Loan schools indicated this factor. Again, there were no significant differences found by type and control.
- Choice of loan sources (FFEL Program)—48 percent of FFEL institutions indicated this factor, with a significant relationship found by type and control. Four-year public schools cited the ability to continue to offer students a choice of loan sources more frequently than did those in 4-year private, 2-year public and private, and proprietary schools (Table 2-9).
- Familiarity with administration of FFEL—45 percent of FFEL schools perceived loan program familiarity as important, with a significant relationship found by type and control. Proprietary schools indicated this factor most frequently. This finding may have been related to the fact that proprietary schools are less likely to have an advanced loan processing system, and are more concerned about the transition to Direct Lending.
- Confidence in FFEL viability—41 percent of FFEL institutions indicated this factor as important. A significant relationship was found between confidence in FFEL and institutional type and control. Four-year institutions (both public and private) cited confidence in the viability of FFEL more frequently than those in 2-year or proprietary institutions.

For First-Year Direct Loan schools, the percentage of responses in the remaining categories ranged from 35 percent indicating that flexible repayment options were an important benefit, to 15 percent indicating that administrative allowances was important. Among the Second-Year Direct Loan schools, the percentage of responses in the remaining categories ranged from 32 percent indicating flexible repayment options as an important benefit, to 2 percent indicating that the opinions of external supporters was important. The percentage of responses in the remaining categories for FFEL schools ranged from 37 percent for the ability to maintain relationships with lenders and guarantee agencies, to 24 percent for simpler to administer FFEL.

Perceived Limitations of the Loan Programs

At least three-fourths of respondents in the Direct Loan schools that entered the Program in academic year 1994-95 (First-Year Direct Loan Schools) indicated that their expectations of the Program had been met in terms of the factors discussed above. Of those indicating unmet expectations, institutions most often mentioned simplicity of administration (23%). The remaining responses ranged from 19 percent for ability to serve borrowers better to 10 percent for flexibility of repayment options (Table 1-6). No significant relationships were found by institutional type and control.

Almost three-fifths of respondents in FFEL schools indicated that their expectations of the Program had been met in terms of the factors discussed above. For schools with unmet expectations, the perceived limitations of the FFEL Program ranged from 41 percent for confidence in the viability of the FFEL Program, to 14 percent for the fact that loan application processing is not the responsibility of the institution (Table 1-7). Significant differences were found by type and control of institutions for two factors: simplicity of administration and the ability to maintain relationships with lenders and guarantee agencies. In both cases, proprietary schools were more likely to indicate perceived limitations than public or private schools.

Factors Influencing the Decision to Phase in or Switch Exclusively to the Direct Loan Program

In addition to the major factors contributing to the decision to apply for the Direct Loan Program, respondents in institutions entering the Direct Loan Program in academic year 1995-96 (Second-Year Direct Loan Schools) were asked about factors that influenced their decision to phase in or switch totally to Direct Loans. A majority of Second-Year institutions switched totally to Direct Loans (59%), while a smaller percentage (41%) offered both programs. Last year, 72 percent of First-Year institutions offered only Direct Loans, and 28 percent offered both programs. One possible reason for the difference is the political uncertainty that recently surrounded the continuation of the Direct Loan Program.

Institutional type and control appears to have impacted the decision to phase-in or switch exclusively to Direct Loans. Proprietary institutions were least likely (39%), and 2- and 4-year public institutions were most likely (84% and 83%, respectively) to switch totally to the Direct Loan Program.

Phase In

The major reason for offering both types of loans cited by Second-Year institutions was the fact that they did not want to confuse borrowers (63%) (Table 1-8). Other frequently indicated reasons were:

---

- Wanted to maintain relationships with lenders and guarantee agencies (54%);
- Wanted to learn how to implement Direct Lending on a small group (53%); and
- Wanted to delay full commitment until ED has gained experience with the Program (41%).

This trend in responses is fairly consistent with that for the 1995 survey. The greatest difference from this year to last year is the change in rank of the ability to maintain relationships with lenders and guarantee agencies, which increased from fourth last year to second this year.

Statistically significant differences were found by type and control of Second-Year institutions for the following responses (Table 2-11):

- Proprietary schools were more likely to mention maintaining relationships with lenders and guarantee agencies as well as delaying full commitment until ED has gained experience with the Program than were public or private schools.
- Private schools were more likely to mention learning how to implement Direct Lending on a small group than were public or proprietary schools.

Switch Exclusively

The major reasons cited by Second-Year institutions for switching totally to Direct Loans were did not want the complexity of two programs (81%) and did not want to confuse borrowers (73%) (Table 1-9). A large minority (over 30%) ranked the remaining factors as influential in their decision to switch.

Last year, First-Year institutions ranked these items in the same relative order. The percentages for responses were also similar to those for the current survey.

A statistically significant difference was found by institutional type and control of Second-Year institutions for the reason, did not want complexity of two programs. Consistent with the above findings, proprietary schools were less likely to mention this reason as very important than were public or private schools (Table 2-12).

Implementing the Direct Loan Program

The following items describe various activities and processes necessary for the administration of the Direct Loan Program. This question refers to start-up activities only. It does not cover ongoing administration. This may be a question for which you want to consult other staff (such as the Business or Bursar's Office) involved in setting up the process. Please rate the ease of setting up these processes at your institution using the following scale—1= easy to set up process, 2= moderate level of effort required to set up process, and 3= difficult to set up process.

- Installing government-provided software
- Developing and conducting internal staff training
- Developing procedures to counsel borrowers
- Developing procedures to process loan applications
- Developing loan disbursement procedures
- Developing promissory note review procedures
- Developing internal record keeping
- Developing cash management procedures
- Developing reconciliation procedures

The activities most frequently judged easiest to implement (rating of 1) by Second-Year institutions were developing procedures and materials to counsel borrowers (70%), developing promissory note review procedures (52%), and developing loan disbursement procedures (50%). Those activities most frequently judged more difficult to implement (rating of 3) were developing reconciliation procedures (23%), and developing internal recordkeeping and procedures for reporting to the Direct Loan system (13%); although, even in these cases, the rating of 3 was not the most common response (Table 1-10).

Most of the other activities were judged to require a moderate level of effort to set up by the majority of institutions:

- Developing and conducting staff training (62%)
- Developing internal recordkeeping systems (59%)
- Developing procedures to process loan applications (54%)
- Developing cash management procedures (53%)
- Developing reconciliation procedures (53%).

A majority of institutions (91%) rated installing government-provided software as either easy to set up or requiring moderate effort. Thus, all nine start-up activities were judged by the majority of institutions to require a small to moderate level of effort. Last year, First-Year institutions reported similar results with respect to ease of implementing all nine startup activities.

Significant differences were found by institutional type and control for the following responses (Table 2-13):

---

- Developing loan disbursement procedures—2-year private and proprietary schools were most likely to indicate this process as easy, while 4-year public schools were least likely to indicate this process as easy.
- Developing cash management procedures—2-year public and proprietary schools were most likely to indicate this process as easy.
- Developing reconciliation procedures—Four-year public and 2-year private schools were least likely to indicate this process as easy.

Administering the Direct Loan and FFEL Programs

Institutional Satisfaction with Loan Program Administration

Question #B11 (First-Year DL), #B10 (FFEL)

Would you consider your current experiences in administering the Direct Loan [FFEL] Program more positive than, less positive than, or about the same as those for the 1994-95 school year?

First-Year institutions in the Direct Loan Program were much more likely than institutions in the FFEL Program to indicate that their loan administration experiences in the 1995-96 school year had improved from the 1994-95 school year. Among institutions participating in the same program for 2 years, more than 7 of every 10 First-Year institutions in the Direct Loan Program (73%) said their experiences in the Direct Loan Program were more positive in the current school year compared to their experience with FFEL in the previous school year (Figure 4). In contrast, 4 of every 10 institutions in the FFEL Program (40%) responded similarly (Table 1-12).

Just 4 percent of institutions in either loan program reported that their experiences in the current school year were less positive than in the previous year. The remainder—23 percent of First-Year institutions in the Direct Loan Program and 56 percent of institutions in the FFEL Program—considered their current experiences with loan administration to be comparable to the prior year.

Four-year institutions—both public and private—were significantly more likely than 2-year institutions and proprietary institutions to consider their 1995-96 experiences in administering the Direct Loan Program to be more positive than their 1994-95 experiences. Over half of the 4-year public institutions (60%) and 4-year private institutions (55%) noted an improvement, compared to about one-third of 2-year public institutions (35%), 2-year private institutions (28%) and proprietary institutions (27%) (Table 2-4).

Survey of Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Institutions

Question #B1 (First-Year DL), #D11 (Second-Year DL), #B1 (FFEL)

How would you rate your overall level of satisfaction with each of the following activities involved in administering the Direct Loan [Federal Family Education Loan] Program? (Circle only one code for each activity. NA should be circled for activities that you have not yet had experience with in the Direct Loan [Federal Family Education Loan] Program.) [Ratings: very satisfied (1), somewhat satisfied (2), somewhat dissatisfied (3), very dissatisfied (4)]

- Keeping up with regulations
- Answering general questions about loans and financial aid
- Counseling borrowers while in school
- Helping students with loans after they have left school
- Processing origination records [For FFEL: loan applications]
- Printing promissory notes [For FFEL: N/A]
- Securing signatures of promissory notes [For FFEL: N/A]
- Requesting and receipt of loan funds
- Disbursement of loan funds
- Refunding excess loan funds to borrowers [students]
- Financial monitoring and reporting
- Record keeping and reporting of student information
- Other

In general, institutions in both the Direct Loan and the FFEL Programs indicated they were pleased with most of the above activities involved in administering loan programs. At least 9 of every 10 institutions said they were very satisfied or somewhat satisfied with the following administrative activities (Table 1-11):

- Answering general questions about loans and financial aid (99% of Direct Loan schools and 96% of FFEL schools)
- Counseling borrowers while in schools (97% of Direct Loan schools and 93% of FFEL schools)
- Securing signatures on promissory notes (96% of Direct Loan schools)
- Requesting and receipt of loan funds (95% of both Direct Loan schools and FFEL schools)
- Printing promissory notes (95% of Direct Loan schools)

Survey of Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Institutions

More than 8 of every 10 institutions in both the Direct Loan and FFEL Programs reported being very satisfied or somewhat satisfied with the following administrative activities:

- Disbursement of loan funds (94% of Direct Loan schools and 89% of FFEL schools)
- Refunding excess loan funds to borrowers (93% of Direct Loan schools and 86% of FFEL schools)
- Keeping up with regulations (93% of Direct Loan schools and 82% of FFEL schools)
- Financial monitoring and reporting (87% of Direct Loan schools and 86% of FFEL schools)
- Processing origination records (94% of Direct Loan schools) and loan applications (93% of FFEL schools)

The extent of satisfaction was somewhat lower for two administrative activities, though more than 7 of every 10 institutions in both the Direct Loan and the FFEL Programs still responded positively:

- Helping students with loans after they have left school (90% of Direct Loan schools and 76% of FFEL schools)
- Record keeping and reporting of student information (72% of Direct Loan schools and 76% of FFEL schools)

The only category for which less than 7 out of every 10 institutions in both the Direct Loan and FFEL Programs responded positively was the “other” category, which was composed of a myriad of responses.

Although similar proportions of institutions in the Direct Loan Program and in the FFEL Program indicated they were very or somewhat satisfied with the various administrative activities, the proportions differed greatly for those reporting they were very satisfied (Exhibit 4). Institutions in the Direct Loan Program were more likely than those in the FFEL Program to be very satisfied in 8 of the 10 activities rated by institutions in both types of loan programs. For only two activities—both involving reporting—there were no significant differences in the satisfaction ratings by institutions in the Direct Loan or FFEL Programs. Similar proportions of institutions in the Direct Loan Program (36%) and in the FFEL Program (32%) were very satisfied with financial monitoring and reporting, as well as with record keeping and reporting of student information (25% and 28%, respectively).

Survey of Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Institutions

Exhibit 4 Percentage of Institutions "Very Satisfied" with the Following Activities
Activity	Academic Year 1995-96		Academic Year 1994-95
	Direct Loan (%)	FFEL (%)	Direct Loan (%)	FFEL (%)
Printing promissory notes	76	N/A	71	N/A
Counseling borrowers while in school	69	50	67	44
Requesting and receipt of loan funds	68	55	77	45
Processing origination records [loan applications]	68	51	68	45
Answering general questions about loans and financial aid	66	50	65	42
Securing signatures on promissory notes	66	N/A	64	N/A
Disbursement of loan funds	65	44	69	36
Refunding excess loan funds to borrowers	54	40	49	29
Helping students with loans after they have left school	52	25	22	23
Keeping up with regulations	42	26	41	17
Financial monitoring and reporting	36	32	38	24
Record keeping and reporting of student information	25	28	16	26

For 6 of the 12 administrative activities, satisfaction ratings varied by institutional type and control (though no consistent pattern emerged). Compared to public and private institutions, proprietary institutions were significantly more likely to report being very satisfied with counseling out-of-school borrowers and disbursement of funds, and were less likely to report being very satisfied with in-school borrower counseling. Both proprietary and 2-year private institutions were more satisfied than other institutions with record keeping and reporting of student information. Four-year public institutions were the most satisfied with answering general questions about loans and financial aid, and 4-year private institutions were the least satisfied with securing signatures on promissory notes.

Comparing survey results from the 1995 survey with those from the 1996 survey revealed that the level of satisfaction for institutions in the Direct Loan Program changed little, even as the number of responding institutions increased greatly (from First-Year schools in the 1995 survey to First- and Second-Year schools in the 1996 survey). For 8 of the 12 activities, the differences ranged from increases of 1 to 8 percentage points; for another three activities, the differences decreased from 2 to 9 percentage points. There was one exception. The 1995 institutional survey showed that just over one-fifth of the institutions in the Direct Loan Program (22%) reported being very satisfied with helping students with loans after they had left school (one of the lowest levels of satisfaction reported for any administrative activity that year). In contrast, more than half of the institutions (52%) in the Direct Loan Program reported in the 1996 survey that they were very satisfied with this activity.

Results for institutions in the FFEL Program showed that a larger proportion of survey respondents gave ratings of very satisfied with the various administrative activities than in the 1995 study. The upward trend in satisfaction levels may reflect the transfer from the FFEL Program to the Direct Loan Program of institutions who were less pleased with administering loan activities in FFEL. It may also be a response to actual changes that could have occurred in the administration of FFEL loans in the wake of competition from the Direct Loan Program. The increases ranged from 2 to 11 percentage points. For example, the proportion of institutions satisfied with refunding excess loan funds to borrowers grew from 29 percent in the 1995 institutional survey to 40 percent in the current survey.

Question #B2 (First-Year DL), #D2 (Second-Year DL), and #B2 (FFEL)

How would you characterize the level of work or staff effort needed to administer this program on a day-to-day basis? (Check only one.)

- Very easy to administer
- Relatively easy to administer, with a few areas that require a high level of effort
- A moderate amount of effort is required overall
- Relatively labor intensive to administer, with many areas that require a high level of effort
- Very labor intensive to administer

Institutions in the Direct Loan Program were significantly more likely than those in the FFEL Program to characterize the level of work or staff effort needed to administer the loan program on a daily basis as very easy or relative easy. As shown in Figure 5, while 60 percent of those in the Direct Loan Program said it was very easy or relatively easy to administer, 37 percent of those in the FFEL Program indicated similarly (Table 1-13).

Figure 5
Level of Effort Needed to Administer Loan Programs
Direct Loan Schools and FFEL Schools

A greater proportion of 2-year private institutions and proprietary institutions, compared to other types of institutions, found the level of work needed to administer the program on a day-to-day basis to be easy.

For the Direct Loan, the proportion of First- and Second-Year institutions in academic year 1995-96 classifying the level of work needed for administration as very easy or relatively easy (60%) remained the same as the proportion of First-Year institutions in academic year 1994-95. The proportion of institutions in the FFEL Program who found loan administration easy in academic year 1995-96 (37%) was not greater to a significant degree than the proportion from academic year 1994-95 (30%).

Question #G2 (Second-Year DL)

For the following aspects of FFEL Program administration, please rate any changes since the introduction of the Direct Loan Program, using the following scale: 1=improved the situation or aspect; 2=the same, no changes; 3=worsened the situation or aspect; NA=not applicable.

- Student access to loans
- Ease of administration of FFEL
- Service from banks/guarantee agencies
- Service from loan servicers/collection agencies
- Service from your third party or privately contracted servicers

Since implementing the Direct Loan Program, the majority of Second-Year institutions phasing in the Direct Loan Program have found administering the FFEL Program to be unchanged (see Figure 6). However, among those reporting a change in the level of efforts required to administer the FFEL Program, more institutions felt that the FFEL Program had improved, rather than worsened. Eight of every 10 institutions noted no change in student access to loans (80%) (Table 1-15). Approximately seven of every 10 said service from third party or privately contracted servicers (70%) or from loan servicers/collection agencies (67%) and ease of administration of FFEL (66%) were substantially the same. Service from banks/guarantee agencies remained the same for about 6 of every 10 institutions (58%). Those institutions noting change tended to find that administering FFEL had improved. Almost 4 of every 10 institutions (38%) said service from banks/guarantee agencies was better, and 3 of every 10 reported improvement in the ease of administering FFEL. About one of every four indicated a positive change in service from third party or privately contracted servicers (25%) and from loan servicers/collection agencies (27%). Less than 2 of every 10 institutions (18%) rated student access to loans as better.

Second-Year Direct Loan Institutions Reporting Change
in Level of Effort Involved in Administering FFEL

In the case of student access to loans, institutional type and control was related to whether the institution noted improvement in the FFEL Program. Both 2-year and 4-year public institutions were more likely than private and proprietary institutions to report a positive change in student access to loans.

Level of Change in Resources Required to Administer the Loan Programs

Question #B3 (First-Year DL), #D3 (Second-Year DL), #B3 (FFEL)

Listed below are resources needed for the delivery of financial aid that may have changed at your institution. Please indicate if increases or decreases have occurred or will occur during the 95/96 school year. This question refers only to changes that are a direct result of implementation of the Direct Loan Program (changes in the FFEL Program). Please use the following scale: 1=significant decrease occurred; 2=small decrease occurred; 3=no significant change/did not occur; 4=small increase occurred; 5=significant increase occurred.

- Number of staff positions related to financial aid (temporary or permanent)
- Number of staff positions in Accounting or Business Office
- Number of staff used for technical support
- Number of hours current staff work
- Equipment/computers
- Supplies (postage, copying, etc.)
- Funds for training
- Funds for staff travel
- Development/modification of computer programs/procedures
- Other (specify)

In seven of the nine resource areas rated, the majority of institutions in both the Direct Loan Program and the FFEL Program noted no significant change in resource levels for the delivery of financial aid.

At least 7 of every 10 institutions said a change in resource levels did not occur in the number of staff needed (Table 1-14):

- Number of staff positions in Accounting or Business Office (86% of Direct Loan schools and 85% of FFEL schools)
- Number of staff positions related to financial aid (77% of Direct Loan schools and 78% of FFEL schools)
- Number of staff used for technical support (70% of Direct Loan schools and 82% of FFEL schools)

At least half of the institutions required no change in resources related to staff hours, funds, and general supplies:

- Number of hours of current staff work (61% of Direct Loan schools and 63% of FFEL schools)
- Funds for training (61% of Direct Loan schools and 74% of FFEL schools)

Survey of Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Institutions

---

- Funds for staff travel (55% of Direct Loan schools and 72% of FFEL schools)
- Supplies such as postage and copying (49% of Direct Loan schools and 63% of FFEL schools)

On the other hand, more than one-half of the institutions reported a significant increase or a small increase in computer-related resources:

- Development/modification of computer programs/procedures (65% of Direct Loan schools and 54% of FFEL schools)
- Equipment/computers (65% of Direct Loan schools and 51% of FFEL schools)

In all resource areas, less than 10 percent of institutions in either program noted a decrease in the resources required for financial aid delivery as a direct result of loan program implementation or changes.

However, among those institutions noting an overall increase in resource usage, institutions in the Direct Loan Program were significantly more likely than those in the FFEL Program to have increased their level of resources for delivery of financial aid in six of the nine areas: technical support staff, computers equipment, computer program modification, supplies, and funds for training and staff travel. For example, although 70 percent of Direct Loan institutions and 82 percent of FFEL institutions reported no change in the number of staff used for technical support, 26 percent of Direct Loan institutions reported an increase, compared to only 13 percent of FFEL institutions.

For four of the nine areas, responses varied by institutional type and control. In general, 4-year public institutions were more likely than others to have needed an increase in resources for the development of computer programs and for computer equipment, for supplies, and for staff travel funds.

In comparing the results from academic year 1994-95 with academic year 1995-96, a declining trend was noted in the proportion of institutions in the Direct Loan Program that indicated they have increased their level of resources for delivering financial aid. For example, there was a drop of more than 10 percentage points in the proportion of institutions reporting an increase in resources for developing computer programs (21%), equipment/computers (20%), and funds for staff travel (17%). For institutions in the FFEL Program, the results from academic year 1995-96 tended to be more similar to the results from academic year 1994-95.

Question #B4 (First-Year DL), #D4 (Second-Year DL)

Please check the statements below that apply to your perceptions of your institution's implementation of the Direct Loan Program. (Check all that apply.)

- Staff have been shifted to work on different financial aid functions.
- Staff have been freed to work on other activities outside of financial aid.
- Staff have been released to other departments or let go.
- Staff are working extra hours to accommodate the added activities.
- Extra staff have been hired at the institution to accommodate the added activities.

In implementing the Direct Loan Program, both First-Year and Second-Year institutions experienced little change in demands on staff time. As shown in Figure 7, less than 20 percent of First-Year institutions and less than 30 percent of Second-Year institutions reported that they had either released staff to other departments (or let them go), hired extra staff, freed staff to work on other activities, or had their staff work extra hours. However, 71 percent of First-Year schools and more than half of the Second-Year schools (53%) said that staff have been shifted to work on different financial aid functions (Table 1-16).

The effect of the additional year in the Direct Loan Program that First-Year schools have over Second-Year schools surfaced in the responses to three items. First-Year schools were significantly more likely than Second-Year schools to have shifted staff to work on different financial aid functions and to have released staff to other departments or to have let staff go, and they were less likely to have staff working extra hours to accommodate the added financial aid activities. There were no significant differences across institutional type and control.

Level of Change in Workload Required to Administer the Direct Loan Program

Question #B5 (First-Year DL), #D5 (Second-Year DL)

For each of the specific administrative functions listed below, please indicate the level of change in workload (if any) resulting from implementation of the Direct Loan Program. Please use the following scale: 1= small decrease; 2=significant decrease; 3=no change; 4= small increase; 5= significant increase.

Advising students on status of loans
Counseling borrowers on Direct Loan Program
Processing loan applications/creating origination records
Requesting and receipt of loan funds by institution
Disbursing loan funds to students
Enrollment verification
Cash management
Reconciliation
Recordkeeping and reporting
Training Financial Aid staff
Other
Overall level of change in workload at your institution

Question #B6 (First-Year DL), #D6 (Second-Year DL)

If you indicated an overall change in workload resulting from implementation of Direct Loans, please specify whether the change is temporary (i.e., will occur only during the initial phase of the process) or permanent (i.e., will continue in the regular operation of the Direct Loan Program).

Over the last year, both First- and Second-Year Direct Lending institutions experienced an increase in their administrative workload. Among the First-Year institutions, 35 percent experienced an increase, 34 percent had no change, and 31 percent experienced a decrease, while for the Second-Year institutions, 53 percent experienced an increase, 27 percent had no change, and 20 percent experienced a decrease. Taken together, the survey results suggest that while First-Year institutions experienced a slight increase in their administrative workload, the increase for Second-Year institutions was more substantial (Table 1-17). This suggests that the longer institutions are in the Direct Lending Program, the smaller the annual increase in administrative workload.

In terms of particular administrative functions, reconciliation and training Financial Aid staff were the two functions most frequently mentioned by Direct Lending institutions as causing increases in their administrative workload (68% for both). Other leading causes of the increased workload were processing loan applications and creating origination records (50%), requesting and receipt of loan funds by the institution (47%), recordkeeping and reporting (45%), and cash management (44%). The least frequently mentioned administrative functions were advising students on the status of their loans (22%), enrollment verification (24%), disbursing loan funds to students (32%), and counseling borrowers (33%).

Although the rankings for the specific administrative functions were similar for First- and Second-Year institutions, significant differences did occur. For example, in terms of training financial aid staff, 72 percent of Second-Year schools indicated an increase in administrative workload, while only 45 percent of First-Year schools indicated an increase. Significant differences also existed between the Direct Loan cohorts for processing loan applications and creating origination records, counseling borrowers, requesting and receipt of loan funds by the institution, and cash management. Significant differences existed by type and control for reconciliation, where the percentage of institutions reporting an increase in administrative workload ranged from 86 percent for the 4-year public schools to 48 percent for proprietary institutions. In addition to reconciliation, differences by type and control also existed for advising students on the status of their loans, requesting and receipt of loan funds by institution, and disbursing loan funds to students.

Of those Direct Loan institutions indicating a change in administrative workload over the last year, 68 percent felt that the change was permanent, while 32 percent felt it was temporary. There were no significant differences among First- and Second-Year Direct Loan institutions, nor were there any significant differences by type and control.

Communications and Support from the Department of Education, Lenders, and Guarantee Agencies

Direct Loan Schools' Satisfaction with ED Interaction During Implementation of the Direct Loan Program

How satisfied are you with the Department of Education's responsiveness to reported problems or difficulties during the implementation of the Direct Loan Program? Using a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 being very satisfied and 5 being very dissatisfied, please circle your level of satisfaction.

In general, Direct Loan institutions appear to be satisfied with the Department of Education's responsiveness to reported problems or difficulties in implementing the Direct Loan Program. Roughly 80 percent of respondents were satisfied with this process.

There was little overall variance between First-Year Direct Loan schools and Second-Year Direct Loan schools. First-Year Direct Loan schools were more likely to be very satisfied (54%) than Second-Year Direct Loan schools (42%); however, when the rating categories "1" and "2" were combined, the satisfaction levels were very similar: 77 percent for First-Year Direct Loan schools and 80 percent for Second-Year Direct Loan schools (Table 1-18). There was also very little variance in this measure of satisfaction between schools by the different institutional characteristics examined.

Institutional Satisfaction with ED/Lender/GA-Provided Materials and Training

Question #C2 (First-Year DL), #E2 (Second-Year DL)

The following table lists Direct Loan Program materials or support that you may have received from the Department of Education or its servicer during the 1995-96 school year. Rate the timeliness of the support using a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 being very timely and 5 being not at all timely. Rate the usefulness of the support on a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 being very useful and 5 being not at all useful.

• Direct Loan Program rules and regulations	• Pre-printed promissory notes
• Telephone support for policy or administrative guidance	• Reconciliation guide
• Direct Loan Users Guide	• Consolidation booklet
• In-person assistance	• Loan origination support
• Borrower counseling materials	• Loan reconciliation support
• Training materials for counselors	• Training and technical support
• Entrance/exit counseling videos	• Videoconferences
	• Other servicing support

Direct Loan institutions were generally satisfied with Department of Education-provided services and materials (Tables 1-19 through 1-21).

- Above-average satisfaction with timeliness ranged from 81 percent to 93 percent for all Department of Education-provided services and materials.
- Above-average satisfaction with usefulness ranged from 75 percent to 95 percent for all Department of Education-provided services and materials.

Emphasis was placed on technical assistance and training by the Department.

- Institutions indicated that they were satisfied with the usefulness of training and technical support provided (82%) and the in-person assistance (88%).

When direct comparisons were made between the 1995 and 1996 surveys, the Direct Loan schools in the 1996 survey (both First- and Second-Year schools) reported slightly higher satisfaction ratings than did the Direct Loan schools in the 1995 survey (First-Year schools only). Both timeliness and usefulness ratings with Department of Education-provided services and materials were higher for most of the activities in the current survey.

- For 1996 Direct Loan survey respondents, the extent of their satisfaction with timeliness was slightly higher than that for 1995 Direct Loan survey respondents in all but two administrative activities. The largest difference, 18 percent, appeared for the reconciliation guide (1996 Direct Loan schools 83% vs. 1995 Direct Loan schools 65%). The 1995 Direct Loan survey respondents were slightly more satisfied in only one activity, loan reconciliation support (1995 Direct Loan schools 79% vs. 1996 Direct Loan schools 74%).
- 1996 Direct Loan survey respondents' extent of satisfaction with usefulness was also higher than that for the 1995 Direct Loan respondents in 10 administrative activities, while the reverse was true for only 3 administrative activities. However, there was very little variance in this measure of satisfaction. Only one item, the reconciliation guide, had its rating change by more than 10 percent.

Survey of Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Institutions

The following three questions ask about services received from the Department of Education, guarantee agencies, and lenders during the 1995-96 school year. Rate the timeliness of this support using a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 being very timely and 5 being not at all timely. Rate the usefulness of this support on a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 being very useful and 5 being not at all useful.

- Software for administration or reporting functions
- Telephone support for policy or administrative guidance
- Information of FFEL Program rules/regulations
- Training sessions
- Materials for counseling borrowers

FFEL respondents were generally satisfied with services provided by the Department of Education, guarantors, and lenders. However, FFEL schools were more satisfied with services from their guarantee agencies and lenders than they were with the same services provided by the Department of Education (see Exhibit 5 and Tables 1-22 through 1-24).

- FFEL schools were more satisfied with the usefulness of software from their lenders (80%) than from their guarantors (54%) or ED (61%).
- FFEL schools were more satisfied with the timeliness of software from their guarantors (85%) and their lenders (82%) than from ED (54%).
- For training, FFEL schools preferred their lenders and guarantors over ED, both in terms of timeliness (84% and 86% vs. 61%) and usefulness (83% and 83% vs. 66%).

Survey of Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Institutions

When compared with the results from the 1995 Institutional Survey, the results are strikingly similar, including the continued preference of FFEL institutions for lender- and guarantor-provided services and materials over ED-provided services and materials.

Of the four administrative activities in which direct comparisons with FFEL respondents can be made for ED-provided materials (rules and regulations, telephone support for policy or administrative guidance, borrower counseling material, and training and technical support), Direct Loan respondents gave higher marks in each of the four administrative activities for both timeliness and usefulness (see Exhibit 6).

Institutional Satisfaction with Interactions with ED or the Servicer Relating to Loan Repayment and Consolidation

How would you describe the level of interaction between your institution and the Department of Education (or its servicer) regarding loan repayment and consolidation? For each, please indicate whether you have had extensive interaction, some interaction, very little interaction, or no interaction.

Both First- and Second-Year Direct Loan institutions had little interaction with ED or the Direct Loan Servicer for loan repayment or consolidation issues (see Exhibit 7).

Exhibit 7
Levels of Interaction Between Schools and ED/Serviceers Regarding Loan Repayment and Consolidation
	Loan Repayment			Consolidation
	DL1 (%)	DL2 (%)	FFEL (%)	DL1 (%)	DL2 (%)	FFEL (%)
Extensive Interaction	3	2	16	3	1	5
Some Interaction	28	24	41	20	17	25
Very Little Interaction	57	37	36	55	39	47
No Interaction	12	37	8	23	43	24

The most notable difference between the two Direct Loan cohorts was found in the no interaction response for both administrative activities, which reflects the lag time between the introduction of the program and the time that it takes borrowers to enter repayment:

- 12 percent of First-Year Direct Loan institutions reported no interaction for loan repayment; 37 percent of Second-Year Direct Loan institutions reported no interaction for loan repayment.
- 23 percent of First-Year Direct Loan schools reported no interaction for consolidation; 43 percent of Second-Year Direct Loan institutions reported no interaction for consolidation.

FFEL respondents had more frequent interaction for both loan repayment and consolidation issues than Direct Loan respondents with the Department of Education or its servicer. This is hardly surprising, since FFEL schools have substantially more loans in repayment than the Direct Loan schools. These differences were apparent at both ends of the scale:

- 57 percent of FFEL schools reported either extensive or some interaction for loan repayment, compared to 27 percent of all Direct Loan schools.
- 24 percent of FFEL institutions had no interaction for consolidation, while 41 percent of all Direct Loan institutions reported having no interaction.

What types of interaction does your institution have with the Department of Education (or its servicer) pertaining to loan repayment and consolidation? (Check all that apply.)

- Refer borrowers to ED/servicer for information/materials
- Contact ED/servicer directly to obtain forms /information
- Intervene with ED/servicer at the request of borrowers

Direct Loan institutions were more likely to refer borrowers to ED for information (73%) than to contact ED directly to obtain forms/information (56%) or to intervene at the borrowers' request (42%) concerning loan repayment. Similarly, for consolidation issues, Direct Loan schools refer borrowers to ED for information (76%) more frequently than contact ED directly to obtain forms/information (48%) or to intervene at the borrowers' request (33%) (see Appendix C, pages C-7 and E-7). There was little variation in responses among Direct Loan schools in different cohorts, or among schools with different institutional characteristics.

Following the trend found in the last section, similar results were found when asking Direct Loan and FFEL schools about interaction with ED regarding specific types of communication. FFEL Program respondents intervened with ED at a higher rate than Direct Loan schools in each of the three administrative activities for loan repayment. The differences for both repayment and consolidation were most pronounced in intervening with ED/servicer at the borrowers' request. For loan repayment, FFEL respondents interacted with ED at least once 74 percent of the time, while Direct Loan respondents interacted with ED at least once only 42 percent of the time. For consolidation, FFEL respondents interacted with ED 48 percent of the time, while Direct Loan respondents interacted with ED 33 percent of the time. Although there may be many reasons for these differences, the small number of Direct Loans in repayment are certainly one reason why FFEL schools seem to be interact more with ED than do the Direct Loan schools.

How satisfied are you with the communications that you have had with the Department of Education/your FFEL Servicer(s) concerning loan repayment and consolidation? Rate the level of satisfaction using a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 being very timely and 5 being not at all timely. Rate the usefulness of this support on a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 being very useful and 5 being not at all useful.

- Loan Repayment
- In-school Direct Loan Consolidation
- Out-of-school Direct Loan Consolidation
- Consolidation (FFEL schools)

Direct Loan institutions were generally satisfied with their communications with the Department of Education with respect to loan repayment—76 percent of Direct Loan schools expressed above-average levels of satisfaction in this area. Direct Loan schools were also generally satisfied with in-school and out-of-school consolidation—54 percent expressed above-average levels of satisfaction. Similarly, FFEL institutions were generally satisfied with their communications with lenders and guarantors—67 percent expressed above-average satisfaction with loan repayment, and 57 percent reported above-average satisfaction with loan consolidation.

Thinking in terms of your institution's implementation of the Department of Education's guidelines regarding loan repayment and consolidation, please rate your level of satisfaction with the timeliness and clarity of the regulations. Using a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 being very satisfied and 5 being very dissatisfied, please indicate your level of satisfaction with the guidelines provided for each of the following repayment options.

- Standard Repayment Plan
- Income Contingent Repayment Plan
- Extended Repayment Plan
- Graduated Repayment Plan
- In-school Direct Loan Consolidation
- Out-of-school Direct Loan Consolidation
- In-school FFEL Consolidation
- Out-of-school FFEL Consolidation

Overall, Direct Loan institutions were very satisfied with the timeliness and clarity of the Department of Education's guidelines for the four types of repayment plans (standard, income-contingent, extended, and graduated), and slightly less satisfied with the timeliness and clarity of the regulations associated with loan consolidation.

Among the four types of repayment plans, the percent of institutions giving above-average satisfaction ratings ranged from 87 to 89 percent for timeliness of the Department's guidelines, and between 78 and 89 percent for clarity. However, for the timeliness and clarity of the regulations associated with loan consolidation, satisfaction ratings ranged from 63 to 71 percent for timeliness, and between 64 and 70 percent for clarity (Table 1-25 and 1-26). Furthermore, there were no significant differences between Direct Loan institutions of different cohorts or by different institutional characteristics.

Level of Interaction with ED's Regional Offices Among Direct Loan Institutions

Were the contacts with the account managers in the Regional Office initiated by your institution, the Regional Office, or both?

To address the increased number of Direct Loan schools that entered the program in 1995-96, ED developed the Regional Office Account Manager system. Account Managers provide technical assistance and training to the schools, while on-site or over the telephone, as their principal activity. They often serve as a liaison among the school, Servicer, and Software Contractor in solving technical problems.

The majority of Direct Lending respondents indicated that contact with the Regional Office was initiated by both the institution and the Regional Office (72%).

- First-Year Direct Loan institutions were slightly more likely to have initiated contact with Regional Offices (15%) than Second-Year Direct Loan institutions were (8%).
- Conversely, First-Year Direct Loan schools were slightly less likely to have received contact from the Regional Office (15%) than Second-Year Direct Loan institutions (20%).
- Proprietary schools were much more likely to have had the Regional Office contact them (32%) than any other type/control reported (range from 0% to 13%).

Most Direct Loan schools indicated that they had some interaction with their Regional Offices (64%). The rest of the schools were split between having extensive interaction and very little interaction (both 18%). No significant differences in the level of interaction were found between First- and Second-Year Direct Loan institutions or by institutional type and control.

Survey of Direct Loan and Federal Family Education Loan Institutions

The following table lists possible reasons for contact with the Department of Education's Regional Office. Please indicate whether you have had any contact with the Regional Office for the specified reasons by writing Y (yes) or N (no). Rate the timeliness and usefulness of the support/training you received in meeting your needs on a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 being very useful and 5 being not at all useful.

- Training received at the Regional Office
- On-site training/guidance delivered by account managers
- Questions/issues regarding computer systems design or implementation
- Questions/issues regarding loan origination
- Computer-related reconciliation issues
- Accounting-related reconciliation issues
- Questions regarding Direct Loan policy
- Questions/issues regarding disbursement and/or refunding of excess funds to borrowers
- Entrance/exit counseling issues
- Requests for ED-provided materials
- Questions regarding sources of contact for specific questions
- Other

Direct Loan institutions contacted the Regional Offices most often for:

- Questions regarding Direct Loan policy (66%);
- Questions regarding sources of contact for specific questions (64%);
- Requests for ED-provided material (63%); and
- Training received at the Regional Office (58%).

Schools contacted the Regional Office least for:

- Entrance/Exit counseling issues (21%); and
- Accounting-related reconciliation issues (42%).

The response rates for all other administrative activities were between 50 and 60 percent.

There were significant differences between First-Year Direct Loan respondents and Second-Year Direct Loan respondents' communication with the Regional Office for two activities:

- Computer-related reconciliation issues (First-Year Direct Loan institutions—69%, Second-Year Direct Loan institutions—50%); and
- Accounting-related reconciliation issues (First-Year Direct Loan institutions—64%, Second-Year Direct Loan institutions—38%).

Second-Year Direct Loan institutions had substantially more contact in one activity: request for ED-provided materials (Second-Year Direct Loan institutions, 66%; First-Year Direct Loan institutions, 47%).

Overall, proprietary schools were somewhat less likely to contact the Regional Office than public and private schools, particularly for training received at the Regional Office, questions/issues regarding loan origination, and computer-related reconciliation issues.

The majority of respondents were satisfied with the services provided by the Regional Offices (Table 1-28). The above-average satisfaction ratings for timeliness ranged from 94 percent to 83 percent. The above-average satisfaction ratings for usefulness ranged from 96 percent to 78 percent. The following above-average satisfaction ratings with timeliness were reported:

- 93 percent for on-site training/guidance delivered by account managers;
- 92 percent for questions/issues regarding loan origination;
- 85 percent for computer-related reconciliation issues;
- 86 percent for accounting-related reconciliation issues; and
- 92 percent for questions/issues regarding disbursement and/or refunding of excess funds to borrowers.

The following above average satisfaction ratings with usefulness were reported:

- 80 percent for On-site training/guidance delivered by account managers;
- 93 percent for Questions/issues regarding loan origination;
- 81 percent for Computer-related reconciliation issues; and
- 79 percent for Accounting-related reconciliation issues.

There were no significant differences by type and control of institution.

Current vs. Prior Satisfaction with the Level of Communication and Support Provided by ED and FFEL Program Loan Servicers

First-Year Direct Loan respondents were asked to compare their current level of satisfaction with the overall level of communication and support provided by the Department of Education with that provided during the 1994-95 academic year. Likewise, FFEL respondents were asked to compare their current level of satisfaction with the communication provided by their servicer(s) with that provided during the 1994-95 academic year. In both programs, there was a substantial increase in satisfaction from the 1994-95 academic year to the 1995-96 academic year. Approximately 40 percent of Direct Loan respondents indicated that the overall level of communication and support currently provided by the Department of Education is better than that provided during the 1994-95 academic year. This compares to roughly 38 percent of FFEL respondents who indicated that the overall level of communication and support currently provided by their servicer(s) is better than that provided last year (Table 1-29).

Appendix C

Questionnaire and Item Response Frequencies

Guide to Interpreting Survey Responses

Appendix C contains the survey questionnaires with the item responses. The percentage of respondents who answered each possible response category is listed after each survey question. For example, if the response choices were “Yes” and “No”, the percentage of respondents who answered “Yes” to this item and the percentage of respondents who answered “No” to this item would be displayed after each response choice respectively.

Each item contains four response percentages. The letters “UW” correspond to unweighted responses and the letter “W” corresponds to weighted responses. The unweighted data displays exactly how this sample responded to the survey question. The weighted data was computed to make the sample more representative of the general population.

The first set of unweighted and weighted percentage scores refer to the total responses. The total responses include all of the respondents who answered each possible response category including respondents who answered “Don’t Know” or “Refused” ( by “Don’t Know” we mean the respondent failed to choose a given response choice and stated that they didn’t know the answer, and by “Refused” we mean the respondent refused to answer the question at all). These figures provide a gross response rate for each question. The following set of unweighted and weighted percentage scores are based on valid responses only. These valid percentages are comprised of the respondents who chose one of the possible response choices excluding “Don’t Know” or “Refused.” These figures provide a valid response rate that incorporates only those respondents who chose an answer from the given response choices.

Survey Methodology

Sample Design

The sample for the 1996 institutional survey was derived from two sources:

- 1) The 112 First Year Direct Loan institutional campuses, selected by the Department of Education to achieve the mandated criteria for the first year of the program; and
- 2) The original sample of 3,059 FFELP institutions, randomly selected from a population of 5,720 schools in the FFELP sampling frame. This sample was stratified by school type and control, and by school size (small or large, as indicated by loan volume). The starting sample size included 395 institutions that were added to the originally estimated sample to allow separate estimates for two-year public and two-year private schools; and to include all HBCUs in the sample. A complete description of the sample design for the institutional survey is presented in the Sample Design Report for the Institutional Survey (January 18, 1995).

Data Collection Methodology/Response Rate

The 1996 institutional survey was conducted using a mail survey methodology, with an option of completing the questionnaire via the Worldwide Web. Data collection for the survey began on March 18, 1996, and continued through November 14, 1996. Extensive telephone and mail follow-up procedures were implemented in an effort to achieve the highest possible response rate.

The overall survey response rate was 79 percent, based on 2,209 respondents from 2,801 eligible institutions. The response rate was 86 percent for first-year Direct Loan schools, 75 percent for second-year Direct Loan schools, and 79 percent for FFEL schools. Detailed tables illustrating the number and percent of responses, the sample distribution and representation, and the response rate by institutional type and control and loan volume (for each of the three loan program types) are included Appendix B.

Data Analysis

In order to obtain weights the institutions were classified by size, Type/Control, and first year program status. In addition HBCU status was added to the classification for first year FFEL institutions where some HBCU had responded. This resulted in a total of twenty-seven strata. In each stratum the institutions in the frame were classified into five categories:

- 1) Not in the initial sample
- 2) Respondent
- 3) Not in population

- 4) Non-respondent, known to be in population
- 5) Non-respondent, population status unknown.

With a stratum  $r = (n(2) + n(4)) / (n(2) + n(3) + n(4))$ , where  $n(i)$  is the number of institutions in the stratum in category  $i$ , was used to estimate the proportion of the  $N$  institutions in the stratum that were actually in the population (i.e. active in one of the programs). Then  $(rN)/n(2)$  (or the estimated population of the stratum divided by the number of respondents from the stratum) became the weight for each institution in that stratum.

All the statistical analyses conducted in this report made use of the Cochran-Mantel-Haenszel (CMH) statistic. This procedure has the following advantages:

- It treats variables as interval, ordinal, or categorical.
- It allows the ability to control for other variables in the analysis.
- Adjustments for small cells are part of the procedure, which alleviates concerns about singularities.

For each respondent variable, a table was created with program type as the row variable and the respondent variable in question as the column variable. CMH then produced two results which were potentially relevant. The first result assumes that the variable is an ordinal variable, and tests for differences between the rows on this ordinal variable. The second result assumes that the variable is merely categorical, and tests for a significant association between the two categorical variables.

In order to conduct the first of these analyses it was necessary to assign a score to each category. It is possible to use the actual scale values (e.g. 1 for very satisfied, 2 for somewhat satisfied and so forth) but this assumes an interval scale. The approach used is known as a modified ridit score. This ranks the cases on the categorical variable (one can think of it as randomly sorting them within a category, but keeping the categories in the proper order). If  $r$  is the average rank within a category, the score  $s = r/(n+1)$  is used and an Analysis of Variance is conducted. Hence the actual value of the categories is empirically determined.

In addition to the straight tables, we also controlled for Type/Control and size of school. These were the main variables on which the sample was based, and the possibility of an artifactual result exists if one does not control for them. This was done by either considering each cell of the variable combination for which one controls separately in calculating the scores (for the ordinal analysis), or by calculating chi-squares within a cell (for the general association one) in order to obtain the CMH statistic.

If the main result was significant, we repeated the analysis comparing the two Direct Loan cells combined with the FFEL, and the two Direct Loan years with each other. That way we could determine where the significant differences came from. We also carried out the same analysis relating Type/Control to each respondent variable, with and without controlling for size and loan program.

The above analyses were conducted with unweighted data, since the sampling strata were controlled for in the analyses.

Survey of Institutions Participating in the Federal Direct Loan Program

Introduction

The Federal Direct Loan Program began disbursing loans on July 1, 1994. The U.S. Department of Education (ED) has contracted Macro International Inc. to conduct an annual evaluation of this effort. The purpose of this survey, which is one component of the overall evaluation, is to gather information about schools' experiences with the administration of the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) Program as well as their implementation and experiences with the Direct Loan Program. This information will be used to help ED better understand the Direct Loan Program from the viewpoint of the institutions, as well as improve the program for future years.

Instructions

For this survey, we would like the Financial Aid Director to be the key contact. However, there may be some questions that will require input from the Business Office or other offices involved with the loan programs.

This survey has been sent to your institution, based on your Department of Education ID Number. Some institutions may have multiple campuses, branches, or schools within an institution that are served by separate Financial Aid Offices. If your institution is decentralized in this manner and these divisions operate under a single Department of Education ID Number, you may need to consult with other Financial Aid Offices to provide your answers or to determine who should fill out the survey.

Some of the questionnaire items may not be applicable to your institution or may not address your specific situation. Please answer these questions to the best of your ability and feel free to comment in the space provided regarding your particular situation.

If you have general questions regarding the survey, please contact Ms. Sadie Bennett at Macro International Inc., 1-800-294-0990, or Mr. Steven Zwillinger, U.S. Department of Education, OUS/Planning and Evaluation Service, 600 Independence Avenue, S.W., Washington, DC 20202, (202) 401-1678. If you have specific questions regarding the electronic survey process, please contact Mr. Gary McQuown or Ms. Katherine Hoffman at Macro International, 1-800-294-1141.

Our Thanks

We know how busy Financial Aid staff are, especially during this period of transition to the Federal Direct Loan Program. We are grateful for your cooperation and hope you view this as an opportunity to provide input regarding the initial Federal Direct Loan Program activities and areas for improvement as this program progresses.

To ensure that your questionnaire is received in time to be included in the survey results, please return it in the enclosed postage-paid envelope or respond via the World Wide Web by April 1, 1996.

About this Survey

As part of its commitment to continual improvement of the Direct Loan Program and to customer service, the Department of Education has asked Macro to conduct a survey of institutions on a periodic basis to determine strengths and areas for improvement. A large sample of institutions (both Direct Loan and FFEL institutions) is being surveyed regarding experiences in administering the respective programs as part of this effort. This survey covers both your experiences during the start-up of Direct Loan as well as the actual administration of the program. We welcome any thoughts or suggestions you might have regarding this survey (please see the items in Section E). Again, thank you for your time and cooperation.

Survey of Institutions Entering the Federal Direct Loan Program

Introduction

The Federal Direct Loan Program began disbursing loans on July 1, 1994. The U.S. Department of Education (ED) has contracted Macro International Inc. to conduct an annual evaluation of this effort. The purpose of this survey, which is one component of the overall evaluation, is to gather information about schools' experiences with the administration of the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) Program as well as their initial implementation and experiences with the Direct Loan Program. This information will be used to help ED better understand the Direct Loan Program from the viewpoint of the institutions, as well as improve the program for future years.

Instructions

For this survey, we would like the Financial Aid Director to be the key contact. However, there may be some questions that will require input from the Business Office or other offices involved with the loan programs.

This survey has been sent to your institution, based on your Department of Education ID Number. Some institutions may have multiple campuses, branches, or schools within an institution that are served by separate Financial Aid Offices. If your institution is decentralized in this manner and these divisions operate under a single Department of Education ID Number, you may need to consult with other Financial Aid Offices to provide your answers or to determine who should fill out the survey.

Some of the questionnaire items may not be applicable to your institution or may not address your specific situation. Please answer these questions to the best of your ability and feel free to comment in the space provided regarding your particular situation.

If you have general questions regarding the survey, please contact Ms. Sadie Bennett at Macro International Inc., 1-800-294-0990, or Mr. Steven Zwillinger, U.S. Department of Education, OUS/Planning and Evaluation Service, 600 Independence Avenue, S.W., Washington, DC 20202, (202) 401-1678. If you have specific questions regarding the electronic survey process, please contact Mr. Gary McQuown or Ms. Katherine Hoffman at Macro International, 1-800-294-1141.

Our Thanks

We know how busy Financial Aid staff are, especially during this period of transition to the Federal Direct Loan Program. We are grateful for your cooperation and hope you view this as an opportunity to provide input regarding the initial Federal Direct Loan Program activities and areas for improvement as this program progresses.

To ensure that your questionnaire is received in time to be included in the survey results, please return it in the enclosed postage-paid envelope or respond via the World Wide Web by April 1, 1996.

About this Survey

As part of its commitment to continual improvement of the Direct Loan Program and to customer service, the Department of Education has asked Macro to conduct a survey of institutions on a periodic basis to determine strengths and areas for improvement. A large sample of institutions (both Direct Loan and FFEL institutions) is being surveyed regarding experiences in administering the respective programs as part of this effort. This survey covers both your experiences during the start-up of Direct Loan as well as the actual administration of the program. We welcome any thoughts or suggestions you might have regarding this survey (please see the items in Section H). Again, thank you for your time and cooperation.

Survey of Institutions Offering the Federal Family Education Loan Program

Introduction

The U.S. Department of Education (ED) is currently administering two postsecondary loan programs for students—the Federal Family Education Loan Program (FFELP) and the Federal Direct Loan Program. ED has contracted Macro International Inc. to conduct an annual evaluation of these loan programs. The purpose of this survey, which is one component of the overall evaluation, is to gather information about schools' experiences with the administration of the FFEL Program. This information will be used to help ED better understand the two programs from the viewpoint of the institutions as well as improve them in future years.

Instructions

For this survey, we would like the Financial Aid Director to be the key contact. However, there may be some questions that will require input from the Business Office or other offices involved with the loan programs.

This survey has been sent to your institution based on your Department of Education ID Number. Some institutions may have multiple campuses, branches, or schools within an institution that are served by separate Financial Aid Offices. If your institution is decentralized in this manner and these divisions operate under a single Department of Education ID Number, you may need to consult with other Financial Aid Offices in providing your answers or to determine who should fill out the survey.

Some of the survey questions may not be applicable to your institution or may not address your specific situation. Please answer these questions to the best of your ability and feel free to comment in the space provided regarding your particular situation.

If your institution is a Year 3 Direct Loan school, you may be selected as part of our sample for next year's Direct Loan survey. For this survey, however, we request that you provide us with information on your experiences with the Federal Family Education Loan Program.

If you have general questions regarding the survey, please contact Ms. Sadie Bennett at Macro International Inc., 1-800-294-0990, or Mr. Steven Zwillinger, U.S. Department of Education, OUS/Planning and Evaluation Service, 600 Independence Avenue, S.W., Washington, DC 20202, (202) 401-1678. If you have specific questions regarding the electronic survey process, please contact Mr. Gary McQuown or Ms. Katherine Hoffman at Macro International Inc., 1-800-294-1141.

Our Thanks

We know how busy Financial Aid staff are and we are grateful for your cooperation. Again, please do not hesitate to contact us with any questions or comments you may have.

To ensure that your questionnaire is received in time to be included in the survey results, please return it in the enclosed postage-paid envelope or respond via the World Wide Web by April 1, 1996.

This survey covers your experiences with the FFEL Program and your perceptions of the services received. We welcome any thoughts or suggestions you might have regarding this survey (please see the items in Section D). Again, thank you for your time and cooperation.
