ABSTRACT

This report highlights the fall 1999 enrollment figures submitted by Maryland's colleges and universities. Some of the main findings are that total headcount enrollments at Maryland's colleges and universities increased for the third straight year, rising by nearly 3,000 students to 267,653. However, enrollment at Maryland campuses still have not attained the level set in 1992. Nearly all of the increase was due to a sharp jump in the number of full-time undergraduates, to a record high of 119,610. Part-time undergraduate enrollment is at its lowest level since 1980. The number of new full-time freshmen grew by 2.1 percent, to a record high of 29,569. There were sharp increases at the independent institutions and community colleges. Full-time graduate and professional enrollments had a strong year, jumping by 3.8 percent. Total headcount enrollment growth was greatest at the independent colleges and universities, where the number of students rose by 3.8 percent for the second consecutive year. Four-year public campuses experienced an increase of 1.8 percent. The number of students at community colleges fell by almost 1 percent. There were variations within higher education sectors. Women continued to outnumber men, comprising 58 percent of all students. (SM)

These are highlights of fall 1999 enrollment figures submitted by the State's colleges and universities. These numbers may change very slightly due to students enrolling or dropping out by November 15, the last date in which 1999 enrollment figures are reported to the Maryland Higher Education Commission.

- Total headcount enrollments at Maryland's colleges and universities increased for the third straight year, rising by nearly 3,000 students to 267,653. However, enrollments at Maryland campuses still have not regained the level set in 1992.
- Nearly all of the increase was due to a sharp jump in the number of full-time undergraduates to a record high of 119,610. The number of full-time undergraduates increased for the sixth straight year, rising 3 percent from last year and 11 percent since 1993. In contrast, the number of part-time undergraduates fell for the eighth straight year to 98,695, declining 1.2 percent in the past year and 16 percent since 1991. Part-time undergraduate enrollment is at its lowest level since 1980.
- The number of new full-time freshmen grew by 2.1 percent to a record high of 29,569. There were sharp increases at the independent institutions (4.1 percent) and the community colleges (3.7 percent). The number of new full-time freshmen was flat at the public four-year campuses, due partly to tighter admissions standards at several campuses of the University System of Maryland (USM) and St. Mary's College of Maryland. Since 1990, the number of new full-time freshmen in Maryland has steadily increased by 23 percent.
- Full-time graduate and professional enrollments had a strong year, jumping 3.8 percent. The number of part-time graduate/professional students remained virtually the same.

- Total headcount enrollment growth was greatest at the independent colleges and universities, where the number of students rose by 3.8 percent for the second consecutive year. Four-year public campuses experienced an increase of 1.8 percent. However, the number of students at the community colleges fell by almost 1 percent.
- There were variations within higher education sectors. Half of the 16 community colleges gained enrollment, while the others lost. There were noticeably sharp drops in the number of students at Hagerstown Community College (11.3 percent), Community College of Baltimore County (5.5 percent), and Allegany College of Maryland (5.1 percent). Of the USM campuses, University of Maryland University College led in growth, jumping nearly 11 percent in the past year. Two of the three historically black institutions in USM lost enrollment: University of Maryland Eastern Shore fell 6.4 percent from 1998 levels and Bowie, which has adopted a more selective admissions policy, declined 5.1 percent. However, Coppin's enrollment rose by 2.1 percent. The student growth rate at Morgan State University far exceeded the average for public four-year campuses by climbing 7 percent in the past year.
- Women continued to outnumber men, comprising 58 percent of all students.
