ABSTRACT

This guide details the core competencies for early care and education professionals in Kansas and Missouri. The guide's introduction provides background information about what core competencies are, why they are important, and how they can be used by practitioners, directors, trainers, higher education faculty, agencies, and professional development programs. The core competencies in eight content areas are delineated: (1) child growth and development; (2) learning environment and curriculum; (3) child observation and assessment; (4) families and communities; (5) health, safety, and nutrition; (6) interactions with children; (7) program planning and development; and (8) professional development and leadership. Each of the eight content areas contains five levels that range from the skills and knowledge of a beginning professional to the more advanced skills and knowledge possessed by someone with a master's degree. The core competencies are designed as a framework for improving teaching and learning. The guide concludes with a professional development record form for teachers/caregivers to document their professional development activities. (KB)

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Welcome!

This is the first edition of the Core Competencies for Early Care and Education Professionals in Kansas and Missouri. Many professionals from across the two states worked together to write the core competencies. Inside, you will find an introduction that provides background information about what core competencies are and why they are important. Following the introduction are the core competencies themselves. They are divided into eight content areas, colored coded in this document for easy use. Each of the eight areas contains five levels that range from the skills and knowledge that a beginning professional has to the more advanced skills and knowledge possessed by someone with a master's degree.

The core competencies can serve as a guide for improving teaching and learning. You will notice that each competency can be either measured or demonstrated. You may also find that the core competencies contain new ideas or provide a new way of reflecting on your teaching.

The core competencies are a practical, useable and living document. We hope that we have included enough detail so instructors can use it and new professionals and students can understand it. Note the convenient checkbox for self-assessment. A section for recording training and education has been included.

We hope that you find the core competencies meet your needs as an early care and education professional.

Reasons why core competencies are critical to the field

- Core competencies define what professionals need to know and be able to do to provide quality care and education.
- Core competencies serve as the foundation for decisions and practices carried out by professionals in all settings and programs.
- Core competencies establish a set of standards for care and education that support the professionalization of the field.

The Bi-State Core Competencies are organized by content areas and levels

Content areas

The areas of competency correspond with traditional curricular areas in early childhood care and education, and, therefore, address the development and learning of the “whole” professional. Each content area describes the knowledge and skills professionals need in order to work with children birth through age eight and their families. Professionals increase their knowledge and skills in the content areas through ongoing training/education.

Each content area specifies ways in which professionals fully include children from many ethnic, linguistic, and socio-economic backgrounds. The content areas also address children with special needs in the early care and education setting.

Core Content Areas

- I. Child Growth and Development: understand how children acquire language and creative expression and develop physically, cognitively, and socially.
- II. Learning Environment and Curriculum: establish an environment that provides learning experiences that meet each child's needs, capabilities, and interests.
- III. Child Observation and Assessment: observe and assess what children know and can do in order to provide curriculum that meets their developmental and learning needs.
- IV. Families and Communities: work collaboratively with families and agencies/organizations to meet children's needs and to encourage the community's involvement with early care and education.
- V. Health, Safety, and Nutrition: establish and maintain an environment that ensures children's healthy development, safety, and nourishment.
- VI. Interactions with Children: establish supportive relationships with children and guide them as individuals and as a part of a group.
- VII. Program Planning and Development: establish, implement, and evaluate an early care and education program.
- VIII. Professional Development and Leadership: serve children and families in a professional manner and participate in the community as a representative of early childhood care and education.

The core competencies provide a framework of the knowledge and skills for each of the five levels of professional preparation; however, they are not exhaustive. Some competencies reflected in the content areas require professionals to perform specific actions, while others suggest areas for continued growth and knowledge. Moreover, professionals may find that satisfying some competencies requires further training/education.

Levels

The levels of competency establish a continuum from the preliminary skills necessary to enter the field to an advanced level of academic preparation and varied experience. Professionals progress from one level to another through a combination of formal study and reflection on practice. Depending on the professional's role, setting, or experience, she or he may have skills at varying levels in the different areas.

The five levels are intended to be cumulative. For example, a professional working at Level 3 has knowledge and skills to meet the competencies at Levels 1, 2, and 3. At all levels, adults who care for and educate young children continue their participation in professional development activities and increase their knowledge and skills within each of the content areas.

- Level 1 includes the knowledge and skills expected of a professional new to the early care and education field, with minimal specialized training/education.
- Level 2 includes level 1 plus the knowledge and skills commensurate with a Child Development Associate credential, a certificate in child development, or equivalent training/education.
- Level 3 includes levels 1 and 2 plus knowledge and skills commensurate with an associate's degree in early childhood education or child development.
- Level 4 includes levels 1, 2, and 3 plus knowledge and skills commensurate with a bachelor's degree in early childhood education or child development.
- Level 5 includes levels 1, 2, 3, and 4 plus knowledge and skills commensurate with an advanced degree in early childhood education or child development.

Early care and education professionals become increasingly specialized as they achieve higher levels of formal education. Therefore, these professionals are expected to demonstrate a general set of competencies with a specific area of specialization. In addition, these professionals are expected to assume a leadership role in the field, collaborating with other professions to promote awareness about early childhood care and education.

The Bi-State Core Competencies were developed in response to research findings

- There is a direct relationship between professionals' level of training and quality of work with children, especially in terms of the effect on children's language development, social skills, and learning (Whitebrook, 1989).
- Research suggests that over 90% of brain development occurs before age three. Early care and education professionals, along with families, have a significant opportunity to enhance young children's social and emotional development, attention, processing, memory, and retention (Shore, 1997).
- A recent study showed that 86% of Missouri's early care and education workforce agrees that training and education are necessary before a person starts to care for children (Gable, 1998).

The Bi-State Core Competencies are based on these premises

- Children require a supportive and nurturing environment in which to grow and develop.
- Early care and education professionals recognize that children are first educated by the family, so they work to support the family as a whole.
- Cultural diversity impacts all areas of practice in early care and education. Professionals recognize that each family is unique in its structure, values, beliefs, traditions, and interactions. Professionals respect each family's worth and appreciate the richness of diversity that each family brings to the early care and education setting.
- Professionals in early care and education assume many roles (e.g., director, teacher, aide) and work in a variety of settings (e.g., family child care, center, Head Start).

- Professional development requires reflection on practices to identify strengths, recognize areas for future growth, and incorporate new learning experiences. Reflection heightens awareness of one's own performance and leads to personal change and growth.

The Bi-State Core Competencies are the result of collaboration

The core competencies represent the combined efforts of professionals from Kansas, Missouri, and the Kansas City metropolitan area to define standards for the field. The competencies were developed in conjunction with the following initiatives, which are working independently with stakeholder groups to establish plans for career-development systems.

- Professional Development Initiative for Early Care and Education in Kansas
- Opportunities in a Professional Education Network in Missouri
- Greater Kansas City Careers in Early Childhood Care and Education

Recognizing opportunities to pool resources, prevent duplication, and provide consistency, the initiatives collaborated to develop one set of core competencies to serve as the foundation for their career-development systems. Greater Kansas City Careers facilitated the collaboration between the two states by convening a Bi-State Core Competencies Conference Committee on a regular basis.

Members of the Core Competencies Committee represented diverse areas of the early childhood field, including early care and education providers (center, home, religious, Head Start); higher education faculty, administrators, and staff; federal and state agency personnel; early childhood agency/organization personnel; and community-based trainers.

The Core Competencies Committee met multiple times to develop the initial draft of the bi-state competencies; this draft was disseminated for review and feedback to approximately 6,000 professionals across the two states. The committee revised the competencies in response to reviewers' suggestions, producing the Summer 2000 Edition.
